WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From Our Regular Correspondent.)

The week following Christmas Day is always one of the busiest of the year with Washington ministers, church folk, and independent missionary workers. It has, not inaptly, been called "the week of practical Christianity," as during that period especial attention is paid to the bodily welfare of the poor. Every church and every mission has its committees at work, not to mention the numerous individuals who work by themselves, searching out the hungry that they may be fed, the naked that they may be clothed, and the cold that they may be warmed. 'Tis a Christ-like work, which benefits the givers as much, or more, than it does the receivers. "The Lord loves a cheerful giver," and if there is any community that has a larger proportion of cheerful givers than Washington, it has never been my privilege to be a member of it. Among the unique charities of the week was a Christmas tree for poor children, dressed by the Salvation Army, upon which the presents, instead of being candy and dolls, were warm mittens and stockings.

Secretary Hay and other prominent officials regard the publications alleging that volunteers are being recruited in various sections of the United States for a raid into Canada, similar to the one that was attempted by the Fenians in 1868, as nothing more than an attempt on the part of the Boer sympathizers to frighten the Government of Canada into keeping its soldiers at home instead of sending them to South Africa to join the English army. Should any such attempt be seriously made, this government would be bound by its neutrality obligations to put a stop to it.

A somewhat startling statement concerning the continued need for help to prevent starvation among the storm sufferers of Porto Rico was this week issued by the War Department. After reciting the damage done by the great storm, and giving due credit to the Americans and residents of Porto Rico for the prompt contributions of money and provisions which kept starvation from many thousands, the statement says: "Although a large part of the island is not receiving relief, the number of indigents requiring assistance remains the same. It is believed that until February next the demand for assistance is likely to increase in the mountain districts, as the plantains and bananas will not be ripe for two months to come. The greatest distress prevails in a locality where the greatest difficulty is found in getting to the starving. The worst area contains a population of about 250,000, and not a wagon road is to be found in any direction over which food can be transported. All food is carried on the backs of horses. Of this population 200,000 people must be fed, or they will starve. If not fed at home, they will migrate to the cities, leaving the weak to die. Their work will be undone and their future will be hopeless."

There is much pleasure in official circles because of the announcement by Gen. Otis of the opening of all the important ports of Luzon, Jan. 1. This announcement not only means that the Filipino insurrection is over, so far as an extensive and organized resistance to American authority is concerned, but it means that the money to get it started again can not be had from the manipulators of the hemp market, who are credited with having paid large sums to keep the insurrection going in order that they might make large profits by the rise in the price of hemp which followed the closing of the ports of Luzon, which furnishes the greater part of the world's supply of the best hemp. And, further, the opening of those ports means a general resumption of commercial and industrial activity, which, by enabling the industrious natives to become prosperous, will place them beyond the temptations of mischief-making agitators. Inasmuch as this commercial and industrial activity will be free from the exactions and corrupt taxation of the Spanish regime, there is every reason to believe that 1900 will be the most prosperous year ever seen by the laboring natives of Luzon.

Several members of the Roberts Committee remained in Washington during the congressional recess for the purpose of taking the testimony of additional witnesses summoned from Utah, but no other witnesses have presented themselves. The full committee will come together again on Jan. 5, when it will hear legal arguments.

Secretary Root, by direction of the Cabinet, has instructed Gen. Otis to furnish the families of all Spanish prisoners in the Philippines with free transportation to their homes in Spain. It has been contended that the Treaty of Peace with Spain only bound this government to send the Spanish prisoners to Spain, but the President and the entire Cabinet were of the opinion that it was better to spend the $40,000 which it is estimated will be the cost of furnishing free transportation to the families than to avoid spending it by making a narrow interpretation of the treaty; that it would have seemed unjust to send the men home and leave their families in the Philippines, unless they could pay their own passage.

LETTER FROM "GILDEROY."

The preachers are pretty well all in place, and, so far as I know, or have heard, all, or nearly all, pleased and ready to go to work for another year. I think pretty well all the charges are satisfied with the preachers dealt out to them by Bishop Candler. Anyway, both preachers and people have set in to make the best of each other. This is one of the prime conditions of success. If, in any case, there is a bad beginning, it may have a good ending. No preacher knows his charge, and no charge knows its preacher, till they have tried each other. When they have done this, if they do not fit, there can be, and will be, a change. This relation is made for one year at a time. It is a great grace for the preacher to go cheerfully, and as great a grace for the charge to receive its pastor kindly. This helps both pastor and people. In any case, both preacher and people may find comfort in that promise that says, "Grin and endure it." This is often the last resort in particularly hard corners.

We have enough work on hand to keep all hands busy this year. We have a great work before us in raising our part of the Twentieth Century Thank-offering for the cause of Christian education. We can raise, and we ought to raise, every dollar of it, and more, too. Any given charge spends more for tobacco each year than is asked for in two years for this great cause. The least of all taxes is the religious tax. Religion costs us less than any other essential article of diet or apparel; less than many non-essentials. Many families spend more for chewing gum each year than is asked for to this special fund these two closing years of this century. The average family spends more for fire-crackers Christmas week than they are expected to contribute to this great enterprise this year.

This is not a question of ability, but of willingness. Any ordinary dung-hill hen will lay out in good, sound eggs all that is wanted from any individual, and if she is well-fed on parched corn, she will do better than that. Indeed, the hens of Mississippi would lay out all the stipends of the church if we would only give them a fair chance. The contribution of the hens to the progress of the gospel and the salvation of the world has never been appreciated as it ought to have been. The hen is a potent factor in the prosperity of the church in this country. We could hardly get along, and the preachers would have much harder living without her. Great is the hen! Give her a fair chance in the year 1900.

One good acre of land in cotton or corn would make as much as any family in the hill country ought to pay. The aggregate among the Methodists of Mississippi would be enormous. The produce of one acre for one good cause once in one hundred years would not be an extravagant expression of thankfulness to God for his signal mercies during the past century. We ought to lay our plans to do something large for God this last year of the nineteenth century. It is the last opportunity we will have during this long period. This opportunity lost, and it will be lost forever. This year is the last chance this century. What we do ought to be done quickly. Now, or never.

A deep and widespread revival of religion, and an outpouring of the Holy Spirit, would untie all the purse-strings of all the people. When the love of God is shed abroad in the human heart by the Holy Ghost, it becomes an impulse to vigorous action and to liberal and prompt giving. This always has been true, and always will be true down to the end of time. When Zaccheus got religion he gave half of his goods to feed the poor, and restored fourfold for every wrong exaction he had made of his fellow-man. If he had done as much wrong as some of us have done, he was bankrupt in purse the next day. A religion that rectifies wrong is a genuine article—pure gold refined in the fire.

Giving as an expression of religion has the full sanction of God's Holy Word. Indeed, giving is the divine condition of getting. God loves a cheerful giver. Giving is the divine condition for fruitful fields and vines loaded down with grapes. If we would only bring all our tithes into God's store-house, our lands would yield their increase, and our store houses and our barns would be full. God says so. His Holy Word for it. We are so poor because we have been so stingy. Our stinginess, and not our liberality, has been the ruin of us.

"We have robbed God, even this whole nation;" we "have robbed him in tithes and in offerings." God dares us to prove him; to try him; to put him to the test; to bring in all the tithes and the back rations, just to see if he will not be as good as his word, and open to us all the windows of heaven, and pour us out such a blessing in cotton, corn, peas and potatoes till there will not be room enough to contain it. Who that loves God will take a dare like that from him? Even so low and vile a passion as avarice might prompt the worst man to try it.

Let's take God up this year. Let's try him. We have a splendid opportunity now to put God to the test. Let's do it in humble faith, and with hearts full of love, and next Fall hill and valley, farm, field, and wood, and the air itself, will be mellow with harvest songs as we bring in the rich fruitage of our fields. The benediction of God will fall on our cotton patches, our corn-fields and our gardens, our hen-roosts and our pig-sties, so that we will live on the fat of the land.

NEW YEAR'S THOUGHTS.

January again has come with its siphonic days lengthening at their sunset end. Christmas, too, has come and gone, with its abounding joys, its present-giving, its Christmas trees, its turkey, mince-pie and fruit-cake dinners numberless, and universally enjoyed. Other festivals may fall into desuetude and be forgotten, but this one grows in popularity in all the Christian world. How beautiful and heavenly is the joy of the children at the annual return of the natal day of the Divine Child! It ought to be celebrated for their happiness, if for no other reason. The custom of holding watch-night meetings to welcome the incoming year might appropriately be superseded by that adopted by the negroes in some places of watching through the night that precedes the day of the nativity. Men might well lose some hours of sleep in eager expectation of the day that commemorates the birth of the world's Redeemer, but to watch in weary wakefulness for the first day of January is to subject ourselves to the jejunest conceit that was ever undertaken to be sentimentally magnified by intelligent people—a conceit founded solely on Julius Cæsar's astronomic blunder. Had he, when he assigned 445 days to a certain year, made the year begin at the Winter solstice, and had the same day been adopted for Christmas, the civil, the astronomic and the Christian year would have been the same—a beautiful triple unity. The chronological arrangements of the nations would thus harmonize with the annual movements of the sun, and both would conspire to celebrate the birth from which the years are numbered—the incarnation of Him who shall restore all things, and create a new heaven and a new earth wherein dwelleth righteousness.

Congress has recently given us an exhibition of the spirit of the mob, perhaps quite as genuine, though not so grossly shocking as others we have witnessed in recent years. Their action seems to say: Roberts is surely guilty; everybody knows it; guilty of a high crime against our Christian civilization. Let him be accursed and banished from Congress without investigation or trial. Sam. Hose was burned; Roberts was banished, crucified in his feelings, and dismissed in disgrace. Each deserved his fate, no doubt. If the mob is to be blamed for punishing without trial, shall Congress escape censure when it does a similar thing? Verily we all seem to be made of about the same stuff.

The Georgia Legislature has recently presented a signal instance of progress, retarded, it is true, but still of invincible progress in temperance legislation. In spite of all the whisky power, and the opposition of most of the daily press, the House of Representatives passed a prohibitory law for the entire State. When the people thus show themselves stronger than the press and the devil, then does democracy show itself worthy to exist on the earth. It would be interesting to be informed where or how the Senate got the light that led them to disagree with the action of the House. Through the ages the cause of truth and right has had a failing success, yet the eternal powers are for it. Its failures are only seeming; its final success is certain. So far the devil of the bowl seems to have outwitted us all—Congress, Legislatures, City Councils, and all dram-drinkers—from the time when George Washington bargained to furnish his servant money to get drunk on four times a year to this hour. Talk about liberty! There has never been any liberty to sell whisky in the United States since the government taxed it 90 cents a gallon. It is now a murderous privilege sold for money. If intoxicants are good, let them be free; if they are not good, but poisonous, let them be prohibited.

Our people enter upon the new year greatly encouraged by general health, peace, and plenty. Thank-offerings will, doubtless, be many, and our Twentieth Century Fund, to promote higher education, will grow.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI LETTER.

MR. EDITOR: The North Mississippi Conference met this year at Greenwood, a town in the Delta. Greenwood distinguished itself in its liberal entertainment of its guests. It has a population of some two or three thousand. It should also be remembered that from this number must be subtracted the negroes, who are numerous in Mississippi towns, for they count for nothing in entertaining the Conference. Notwithstanding all this, and the unusually large attendance, the writer heard no complaint, but of unstinted praise he heard much.

Greenwood, under the leadership of Rev. John H. Mitchell, her wise and energetic pastor, was permitted to entertain the Conference in a new church edifice—the most complete church-building in its bounds. In architectural beauty and adaptableness for church purposes there is nothing superior to it in this region. It cost more than $15,000 when building material was cheap. It could hardly be built now for less than $25,000. It is a model to be followed. Such Methodism as is found in Greenwood will succeed.

Bishop Candler presided. His common sense, wit and wisdom, and profound thought left an indelible impression on a great concourse of people. Out of nine presiding elders he left two. The pastors were likewise shaken up. Four or five of the most effective preachers had died; the beloved secretary, Rev. J. S. Oakley, had to take the superannuated relation. Though a giant in frame and young in years, his health is much broken. No man was ever more loved for his real worth. Several transfers from other Conferences were received, among them Rev. Richard Wilkinson, of the St. Louis Conference, formerly stationed at Cabanne charge, St. Louis. He and his brother transfers were warmly welcomed. Mr. Wilkinson was assigned to Aberdeen station, one of the most desirable appointments in the Conference. He was given a hearty welcome by the Aberdeenians—in fact, both pastor and people are pleased and happy. He has preached already several times to crowded houses, and in less than a month's time he is far from a stranger in the homes and hearts of his people. Since Mr. Wilkinson has many friends in St. Louis, it may be of interest to them to know of his whereabouts. He has a church of about four hundred members of intelligence and strength. Aberdeen is a beautiful little city, the county seat of one of the wealthiest counties in the State, situated in the famous prairie region. Much of interest centers about it. Methodism is the strongest in numbers among the churches. The parsonage is a handsome two-story structure, well furnished, and adjoins the church. It is believed to be the best preacher's home in the Conference. The church is commodious, built after the Grecian models of architecture which never grow old. Mr. Wilkinson's spirituality, enthusiasm, learning and splendid preaching power prophesy a splendid year in Aberdeen both for him and its people. Mr. Wilkinson is an Englishman, though educated at Central College, Mo. This reminds us that our Conference has always had a considerable number of excellent preachers sent out from the mother church. Rev. Amos Kendall, still an active itinerant, though about seventy years of age (they have quit making better and truer men than Amos Kendall); Rev. J. S. Oakley, for a long time secretary; H. P. Gibbs, who has lately died; T. B. Clifford, a recent transfer to the Louisiana Conference, are all Englishmen. Mr. Wilkinson's English brothers have set a high standard in all that goes to make worthy men of God. We of Aberdeen are grateful to St. Louis for one more of the same stripe.

WANTED—THE CONSTRUCTIVE, NOT THE DESTRUCTIVE.

It is easy to pull down, but difficult to build up. The [illegible] figures to-day in his sharp work as in the past. He may not be literally laying low temples of worship, nor raising what he regards as false images and unintelligible creeds, but he is dealing blows, either directly or indirectly, at Christian faith and practice, and is doing much to undermine and overthrow that which has cost years, and, in some instances ages to effect.

All this might be endured if he gave us something as good, if not better, in its place. But that is something to which he is not equal. Constructiveness either has not the purpose, or, if it does, the real plan does not appear. Higher criticism is largely destructive. Its friends tell us that one day it will become a constructive force. The emerging way, in their opinion, must precede the bringing together what is established in living relation. But meanwhile immense damage is done, and the question is forcing itself upon conservative minds, What will the critics leave, at the rate they are going, for construction?

Besides, they differ widely as to rules of interpretation and as to results attained. What one considers untenable, another accepts as worthy of acceptance. Some would rule out of credal existence the entire fabric which rests upon the miraculous; others would limit the supernatural to a few vital cases. Some would make inspiration merely a high order of mental insight, or of spiritual aspiration, thus depriving the Bible of its authoritative character and treating it merely as Scripture there; others would give it a larger and more definite significance, and so leave room for an authoritative acknowledgment and recognition of such doctrines as may deem worthy of Christian acceptance. Some would cast to the winds the creeds of Christendom, and determine everything by the short-cuts of reason and scholarship; others would not go so far, but engraft upon the new as much of the old as may be, in their judgment, in harmony with the modern developments of the critical and scientific spirit. They diverge in range and object, nothing can be accepted of them as reliable and adequate faith-builders, whatever positions some of them may make in this direction.

What the age requires is not the pulling down, but the building up. Its faculty in the destructive line is [illegible] enough to retain what the wisdom of Christian centuries has given to the world, and to assist Satan's efforts to weaken faith in the Word and service of God without having them, who profess to be safe leaders and instructors emerge from their scholastic retreats with sharpened weapons, and help on the work of undermining confidence in the integrity of the Scriptures and in systems of doctrine which have stood the test of generations, for which martyrs have suffered and died, which have long been the bulwark of Christendom, which have imparted life, vigor and progression to the church, which have given nerve and force to missionary enterprise, and which have been the source of civil and religious freedom to all Protestant lands. It will be a good thing for Christianity when the destructive fury either spends upon the edge of nothing, when scholarship shall devote its mighty engines toward rearing up Christian faith, defending it in good citadel, and enlarging the field of its operations, and when those who are not for the confirmation and progression of argument and faith shall not be all the time at work unconsciously toward its perversion and overthrow. We are passing through a critical period, but the Lord reigneth, and his kingdom shall not fail, nor shall his Scriptures and the truth founded upon them go to pieces on the other rocks of hostile criticism. He still has those who are loyal to his cause, and who have faith, discipline and the ability to build up where others pull down. [illegible] will grow in the grace in a living and [illegible] Christianity.—[illegible]

SUBMISSION.

We sometimes wonder why our Lord doth place us
Within a sphere so narrow, so obscure,
That nothing we call work can find an entrance—
There's only room to suffer, to endure.
Well, God loves patience; souls that dwell in stillness,
Doing the little things or resting quite,
May just as perfectly fulfill their mission—
Be just as pleasing in the Father's sight.
This to me is life—
That if life be a burden, I will join
To make it but the burden of a song.

SOUTH CAROLINA LETTER.

It is hard to realize that another Conference year has gone to record, but such is the case, and the one hundred and fourteenth session of the "Old Palmetto Conference" is a thing of the past. The session was held in the town of Orangeburg, a place historic in the annals of South Carolina Methodism. The Methodists largely predominate in this town. They have a beautiful church-building, completed under the ministry of the Rev. E. Olin Watson, who has finished his quadrennium there and has been sent to Bethel, Charleston, one of our best appointments. Brother Watson is one of our most popular young men and is making a fine record for himself in our Conference.

Bishop Joseph S. Key presided. This was the first official visit of the good Bishop to the South Carolina Conference. So far as your correspondent was able to discover, his presidency gave universal satisfaction, and his visit left a very fine impression upon the body. In fact, no Bishop has ever more deeply impressed us for good than Bishop Key, and let me say just here that we shall await his return to us with a great deal of happy anticipations. He impressed us as being a man with a large fund of good, hard, common sense. But his great spirituality brought us larger blessing than even his brain. Our Conference has never seen anything like the great wave of spiritual power that swept over the body when the class of young men was received into the Conference. One of the young men had served a hard mission field the previous year and had chafed a little under the burden, but when he had been thrilled with this powerful wave that day said, "I am ready to go back to that mission, or any other place." In fact, the divine influence was felt throughout the entire assembly. The good wife of one of our presiding elders said to the writer just afterward, "The preachers' wives ought to go to Conference occasionally to get a fresh supply of the old-time religion."

The session of the Conference was pleasant and harmonious, with the exception of the little cyclone that struck us on the last day when the subject of the Publishing House Claim was brought up. The resolutions introduced took strong ground against the methods used in obtaining the War Claim and asked for the resignation of the Book Agents. After a lively debate, the resolutions were adopted by an overwhelming majority.

The Bishop, according to his custom, made some new "elders." Dr. H. W. Bays, who had closed a successful quadrennium at Bethel, Charleston, was mounted on the "black horse" and galloped off to the Rock Hill district. Your scribe got a glimpse of the good Doctor as he galloped away, and from the way he held the reins of his new charger, as well as from his past record, I predict for him a most successful ride. The people of the district will find him a most lovable Christian gentleman as well as a scholarly preacher. Rev. R. A. Child was taken from Greenwood and mounted for the Cokesbury district. Brother Child had several years' experience as a lawyer before coming into the Conference. His practical knowledge will be a great service to him in his new field. He will do fine work on the district.

The financial reports were unusually good, but our increase in membership was small. I think, however that the brethren, one and all, went home to do a greater work for the Lord than ever before. May Heaven's richest blessings attend every one of them this year!

The great feature of the session, financial standpoint, was the th Century Collection. The e subscribed $20,000.

FARMING OUT THE CHILDREN.

To-day much is being said about the decline of leadership. Pastors and churches look in vain for successors to the sturdy men who have planned the moral movements of the past generation. A prominent journal has recently discussed the decay of the eldership and the diaconate. The brightest and best students are not entering the ministry is the word from the colleges. We have difficulty in finding strong material for the eldership, is the word from the churches. The theme suggests a burning question, and the time seems to have fully come for a discussion of at least one aspect of the question.

Now, the decline of leadership is a fact traceable largely to the decay of religious instruction in the home. For more than a generation, parents have farmed out their children for moral training. The time was when the nation's youth were trained primarily in the home, and only incidentally in the Sunday-school. But the time has come when the moral instruction of the children is confined to a brief half hour upon one day in seven. The moral strength and sturdiness of the men who once officered our churches was not gained by chance, did not come unasked, did not stay unurged. Rising up early, the parents trained the child to commit to memory, not simply a golden text, but whole chapters of the Bible; not to read a lesson leaf, but a book bearing upon the theme. The college professors and presidents, the statesmen and preachers, the men who have molded society during the past generation, received in their Puritan homes, patient, thorough, and long continued Bible instruction. Daniel Webster tells us that his standard of oratorical excellence was derived from such passages as the eighth Psalm, and the fortieth chapter of Isaiah. Carlyle tells us that he owed everything to the thorough mastery of about 100 chapters in the Bible. Ruskin insists that whatever skill in thought or diction he possessed is traceable to the fact that his mother made him commit to memory whole chapters of the New Testament, and many chapters of Moses, David, and Isaiah. But in the stress and haste of modern life the religious instruction of children has sadly suffered. In the morning, business men have no time for the moral training of their children. In the evening they have no strength. On Sunday they excuse themselves on the ground that they leave ethics and religion to the Sunday school. But the Sunday-school hour is almost entirely given up to singing and general exercises. In the end, therefore, the child gets almost no moral instruction. Parents who would scorn the idea of farming the child out to a wet nurse physically, have no hesitancy in farming out the child morally. Multitudes of children are spiritual orphans. For sustenance they are dependent upon the kindness of persons who are willing for "sweet charity's sake" to teach neglected children an hour each Sunday. Men who would not think for a moment of allowing a neighbor to shape their boy's idea of commerce, have no hesitancy in giving the training of conscience and the moral sentiments to any stranger into whose class the child may chance to be placed. Naturally, the decline of moral instruction is followed by a decline in moral leadership. Even Huxley in his plea for a study of the Bible, finds the explanation of the lessening number of great men in the lessened interest in these great religious themes that feed greatness and heroism in the human heart.

Another contrast is most striking. The last few years have witnessed a revolution in the methods of instruction in the common schools. Poor teachers have been succeeded by experts. One instructor teaches the art of reading, another the art of arithmetic, another the art of composition. Each instructor is, as it were, a scientist in his field. Long practice in teaching the same study develops great skill. The art of stimulating the child's mind by skillful question, the use of illustrations and concrete example, lend power to the teacher, and compel the respect of the pupil. But the very fact that the secular school has accustomed the pupil to such methods of study, puts heavy demands upon the Sunday-school teacher. He must fulfill all moral instruction in a single hour upon the Sabbath. And what wonder is aroused in the pupil's mind by the contrast between the secular and the Sunday-school. Often his Sunday-school teacher is a business man, or a busy woman, who has never thought of teaching as a science, and never dreams of the contrast the pupil is drawing between the slipshod method of the Sunday-school and the experts in the day-school. All unconscious of the contempt he is stirring in the child's mind, the Sunday-school teacher goes on telling a few stories he has gleaned from the lesson leaf, chatting pleasantly about something of which he knows little, contented if he fills up the half hour. To many children the instruction given seems the purest intellectual drivel. The methods of the day-school tax the child's thought, enrich his mind, and compel his respect and admiration. The time was when young men thought they had outgrown the Sunday-school. But now the time has come when children of twelve and fourteen think they are beyond their Sunday-school teachers, and, as a matter of fact, they have outgrown them, in that they are fitted to instruct those who seek to give them help. The time seems to have fully come when classes must be grouped and made very large, and given in charge of one who is an expert, and can command from his pupils the same respect on the Sabbath that is accorded to the secular teacher during the week. It may be doubted whether any department of the church's life is so sadly behind the times as the modern Sunday-school. Man's body is indeed traveling in a palace car; but, morally and religiously, the children "are riding forward in an ox-cart." Wise men feel that there must be a return to the principles of home instruction. Ethics must again be taught in the family. Rising up early and sitting up late; parents must cause moral truths to enter into the child's moral system, like iron into the rich blood of the physical system. No horseman ever turns twenty young colts loose upon a track, and drives them around the circle in a herd, in the hope of developing great speed in each. The horseman specializes upon one colt through several Summers. He studies the disposition, strength and weakness of that one animal, and thus brings forth its utmost speed. No horseman would be guilty of training his colts in a herd. Horseflesh is too valuable for so foolish a waste. We reserve that wasteful method of instruction for our children. The Sunday-schools have never had a fair chance. They are for general stimulus and instruction. All detailed instruction belongs to the home. The crying need of to-day is a revival of religious instruction in the home. Would that some one would prepare a manual for home instruction of those chapters that have done so much for those patriots and martyrs, our fathers; for Carlyle and Ruskin, for Webster and Phillips Brooks. The higher creative faculties of reason and imagination are being starved and impoverished for want of being fed daily upon those enriching truths that come only from the Bible. Ours is a land whose genius and institutions assume a high degree of moral and spiritual culture. Free institutions and moral illiteracy can not exist side by side. Illiteracy in morals must cease, or free institutions are doomed. The decay of leadership must go on, unless there be a revival of religious instruction in the home.—Rev. Newell Dwight Hillis, D. D., in the Interior.

THE LACKING ELEMENT.

I have just listened to a very able sermon. In thought, in rhetoric, in elocution, it was well-nigh faultless. The subject was a solemn and important one. The speaker evidently saw and felt its importance, and earnestly desired his audience thus to see and feel it. He had the fixed attention of his hearers, who seemed thrilled by his utterances. As the worshipers retired, many were the commendations of the able sermon to which they had listened. All seemed to agree that it was one of remarkable ability and power. Was there anything in the tone of these commendations that seemed to indicate that the hearers had been more pleased than profited? If so, and if the suggestion was not without foundation, what was the lacking element in the sermon, or in its delivery? Might it not have been a manifestation of the constraining love of Christ? Had the heart been sufficiently a prompter of the intellect in its preparation? In preaching it is pre-eminently true that "Love, mighty love, the conquest wins," as nothing else can. Love has wondrous insight, or, at least, is marvelously suggestive. The heart knows the way of the heart, and prepares the way of the Spirit. The constraining love of Christ makes manifest the appalling magnitude of the sinner's guilt in the sight of God, and leads to such a portrayal of it as makes the sinner tremble; and then how persuasively it holds up Christ as an all-sufficient Savior!

This divine love is not only beautiful, but it is the mightiest element of power in the moral universe. It attracts with more than magnetic force. In its own subtle, subduing, winning way it can find access to the vilest sinner's heart, and draw it with all but irresistible power to the cross. It melts, refines, and ennobles the heart of the believer. It thrills with ecstatic joy the sacramental host of God's elect before the throne.

"Stronger this love than death or hell;
Its riches are unsearchable."

Knowledge, the graces of oratory, and all forms of culture, may be desirable in the preacher, but without this baptism of power—this love of God shed abroad in the heart—they are but "sounding brass, or a tinkling cymbal." If the object of preaching is the conversion of sinners and the building up of believers, then this constraining love of Christ is, of all else, the one thing needful. Indeed, were the object but to draw and hold a congregation, this would hold true. The preacher whose preaching makes the unconverted feel that they are sinners before God, but assures them that God loves them and has provided for them a Savior, is sure to draw the unconverted about him, and with them will be gathered the loving followers of the Master. He may not be a favorite preacher with worldly-minded professors whose religion serves them chiefly as a cloak to respectability, but he will be sure to have a live and growing church. Let Methodist preachers, and all others, see well to it, whatever other qualifications they have, or may not have, that they do not lack this prime qualification of true success in the all-important work of the Christian ministry. That there is danger of this the history of the church but too sadly proves. And where and when was the danger ever greater than in the large and cultured cities of the present day, and especially in our own country? God save us from a cold, lifeless ministry, cultured or uncultured! But far better lack culture than spiritual power.—Merrick.

THE VALUE OF THEOLOGICAL TRAINING.

The value of distinctly theological training consists not only in the actual knowledge thus obtained, but also in the facility and power thereby acquired for studying, understanding, and unfolding to others the riches contained in the inspired Word of God, and in revealing to the young minister the many helpful sources of useful knowledge contained in the various departments of religious and theological literature. For a preacher, at the very beginning of his ministry, to become thoroughly familiar with Hebrew and the wide range of Old Testament exegetical literature; to be shown by an enthusiastic teacher of Greek how to use Commentaries, and how to get a world of meaning out of the New Testament that would otherwise have been lost to him; to become thoroughly familiar with the contents of the English Bible, with the various books contained in the Old and New Testaments; to study sermonizing, both theoretically and practically, the great preachers, their methods and masterpieces; to have the mind stored with the rich facts of sacred and ecclesiastical history; to study carefully and comprehensively all the great doctrines of Christian theology, and while working thus to be associated with many earnest and prayerful fellow-students of the Bible, and to breathe daily the stimulating atmosphere of Christian culture and earnest piety—this is what is meant by theological training. Can any intelligent man have a doubt of the inestimable value to a Christian minister of such studies as these? If there is any value in our Conference "course of study" for undergraduate preachers, hurried and superficial as the work must be in connection with it, surely a hundredfold more valuable is it for the young preacher to spend two or three years studying accurately and thoroughly, under trained and competent instructors, a well chosen course of biblical and theological study. Is it said that many ministers lacking these early advantages have yet, at length, by years of earnest study and ceaseless application, attained the broader knowledge of which we speak? True, but how much better would it have been for them, if they could have had this general information and broader knowledge at the very beginning of their ministry, and spent the succeeding years in diligent study, wisely and effectively directed toward enlarging their knowledge and increasing their power.

"O, if I could only have read and mastered this work when I was a young man, and had possessed throughout my ministry the benefit of the rich and varied knowledge it contains!" was the exclamation of Bishop McTyeire after reading "Schaff's History of the Christian Church," a few years before his death.—Dr. W. F. Tillett, in Nashville Christian Advocate.

MORMONISM.

1. The Mormon Church unchurches all Christians. It teaches that Christians since the apostolic age are in a state of apostacy, having no right to teach or administer the sacraments.

2. The Mormon Church puts the Book of Mormon and Doctrine and Covenants on a par with Scripture.

3. The Mormon Church requires faith in the person and mission of Joseph Smith.

4. The Mormon Church requires faith and submission to the priesthood as essential to salvation.

5. It teaches "that God is an exalted man who was once as we are now, and who is forever changing, ever advancing, but never reaching the condition of absolute perfection."

6. It teaches that Adam was God, the Creator of this world and the only God with whom we have anything to do.

7. It teaches that there is a plurality of gods.

8. It teaches a mongrel and unscriptural plan of salvation: dependance on the atonement of Christ to cover original sin and good works as a basis of the pardon of personal sins.

9. It teaches polygamy, and that the doctrine is as eternal as God's himself.

10. It teaches that God is a polygamist himself, the natural father of all beings good and bad, etc.

With such a system there is nothing in common with Christianity and, of course, there can be no Christian fellowship.—Mid-Continent.

The Christian Life.

PATHOS OF THE BIBLE.

There is a power in the Divine Word to move the soul which is possessed by no other book. Perhaps there is no more touching part of this beautiful volume than that which relates to the last scenes in the earth life of our Lord and Master.

In the Sunday school of which the writer of this is superintendent, it has been the custom at times to vary the method usually pursued at the time of quarterly review by assigning to two or more teachers or adult scholars the work of writing a brief paper embodying the lessons of the three months just preceding, for production in the presence of the entire school. To one such person say four chapters would be given for review, and to another four more, and so on to the end. This was the plan pursued at the last quarterly review. Six chapters of the quarter's work had been assigned to one lady and six to another. On review day the papers prepared by these ladies were read. We all remember the wonderful story, the wicked trial of Christ, his buffetings to and fro by his cruel tormentors, his terrible sufferings and death, and then the glory of the resurrection, the forty days on earth, and the final return to the heavenly kingdom. As the first six lessons were told over again in the writer's own strong language, the most earnest attention was given by all. As she proceeded, the voice of the reader became more and more broken, so that she could hardly give utterance to the words she had written, and it was with difficulty that she could continue to the end. Her emotion at the thrilling narrative was shared by all present. The last six lessons were prepared with the special view of bringing them within the range of the thoughts of the children, and as the story went on, depicting the terrible scenes of the closing drama, the interest became more and more intense, eyes in all parts of the room were suffused with tears, and every heart felt the power of the old, old story, feeling its meaning apparently as never before.

At the close of the service, the lady who had the first lesson in conversation with several friends, said: "I was sorry I could not control my feelings better while reading, but I could not. It seems to me I never was so impressed before by the story as I have been since writing this review. After I had finished my work, I began reading it over, and I was obliged to stop; the story overcame me and I broke down in tears." The experience of the other writer was quite similar. The story of the cross, so full of beauty and pathos, so touching in its simplicity, so potent in its rehearsal, had left upon all an impression never to be effaced. Who can doubt that we all were furthered toward the divine kingdom by thus hearing repeated the story of those last hours?

Let any unprejudiced mind consider these pathetic passages in the Bible and see if he be not convinced of the truth of the book. Would that our ministers would spend more time preaching the Christ, instead of elaborating some finely-spun doctrine of their own, of feeble origin, of doubtful value and of very little good to the cause of the Master!—E. L. Vincent.

SAVING SOULS.

That is our business as a church. Not only is our ministry under solemn obligation "to save as many souls as possible," but the whole membership as well. What is the church of Jesus Christ, but the organism of the Holy Spirit in the evangelization of the world? The church is Christ's body. He is the head over all, the fullness of him that filleth all in all. The church as such is in the world to save the world. Through it Christ will work out his own great purpose of love. She is the channel divinely appointed, through which the blood of the cross is to flow and make glad the city of our God. Her legitimate agencies are the putting forth of the divine energy to the healing of the nations.

Every individual member of the mystical body of Christ—aye, every member of the visible church—is to be a soul-saver. Every pair of Christian hands is to be consecrated to this greatest of all works. Christ's hands were pierced with nails while outstretched on the cross to touch with blood-bought salvation the ends of the earth. Surely our hands should be outstretched for the saving of men for whom he died. Christ's heart broke in compassionate self-immolation for the sins of the world. Shall not our hearts, regenerated by the love of Christ, throb in sympathy for the wretched and the deeply fallen? Christ's body was crucified for sinners. Shall not his church, which is his body, crucify herself daily to bring the lost to the foot of the cross? Indeed, it costs self-crucifixion, the denial of self to win souls.—Exchange.

THREE KINDS OF FAITH.

Faith is an ambiguous word, because it is so comprehensive. It stands for at least three distinct things. There is, first, simple credence, or belief of testimony, which may be called historic faith. Secondly, there is the faith of reliance or trust, which is what we commonly and properly mean by saving faith. In the third place, there is the faith of spiritual apprehension or insight or far sight, which may be termed telescopic faith, since it brings the distant near and makes the invisible to be seen. A man may have a great deal of the first or third with little or none of the second, or a great deal of the first and second with very little of the third. If we prize clearness of thought and accuracy of ideas, we shall beware of confounding these three distinct things.—Zion's Herald.

To those who have ever heard the late Mr. Gladstone recite these four lines, as he was often used to do, the recollection will come just now with pathetic poignancy—

"Lord, it is not life to live,
If thy presence thou deny;
Lord! if thou thy presence give,
'Tis no longer death—to die."

Tribute of Honor to Prof. Geo. W. Burton.

Prof. Geo. W. Burton, who died at his home in Franklinton, La., Dec. 20, 1899, was a native Mississippian. He attended prominent high schools of his native State, and also of Alabama. He graduated at the Southern University, Greensboro, Ala., at about the age of twenty, with great honors. After finishing his education there, he adopted teaching as his life-work, and began at Mobile. He taught there about three sessions. He then came back to his native State and engaged in the same work. He taught in Fairview College, Binnsville, Miss.; Whitworth College, Brookhaven, and in prominent high schools of the State. He had been teaching at Franklinton since last September. This profession was highly honored by having such a man as he to adopt it as his life-work.

This was a man of very lofty character. The very sight of such a great and good man was often an inspiration to many of his young friends, who could not help admiring the gentle, the truthful, the magnanimous! Energy of character always has the power to evoke energy in others. It acts through sympathy, one of the most influential of human agencies. The zealous energy of this man carried others along with him. His example was contagious and compelled imitation. He possessed a sort of electric power, which would send a thrill through every fibre, flow into the nature of those about him, and make them give out sparks of fire. It was a fine trait in his character that he was always ready to express generous admiration of the good deeds of others. He had great delight in anybody else saying a fine saying, or doing a good deed. He delighted in humanity doing well on any occasion and in any manner, and was always ready to do all in his power to contribute to their well-being.

Above all else, he was a Christian gentleman of the highest type. He was very generous in contributing to the cause of Christ, and in using his talent in that direction.

We know that men in this life, when they become qualified for better positions, are permitted to go up higher. The only reason we can conceive for God's taking such a great, good, and talented man from us, is that he was ready for better things than this world can afford—Heaven. While it is hard to give up such a friend, and we weep over his loss, his life was so great that his works will remain to show his greatness. JAS. B. GUTHRIE.

The Value of a Denominational Paper.

BY JOHN E. EARP, D. D.

Yesterday was the pastor's rest day—Monday. I went to the country to visit a family of the parish; there are six in the household, father, mother, two girls and two boys. The father is a farmer, a tenant, and had just finished for the fourth time the plowing of a hundred acres of bottom-land corn. He is intelligent as is also his wife, and the children are hale, hearty, and promising. On the lounge in the family room lay a bunch of papers, among them a copy of a church paper which I had taken to them some time ago, hoping to awaken an interest. When the corn crop begins to come in it will be a seasonable thing to present to the brother's consideration the value of a denominational paper. What shall be said?

The brother is in name and somewhat in fact a Methodist. He needs a church paper that he may become more of a Methodist. A man's church is his spiritual country. It is a spiritual army. It is the institution through which he multiplies his spiritual power until though one man only he preaches the gospel to all the world. Methodism is as broad as Christianity itself so far as the spirit of Christian love is concerned. Methodism does not build upon the ruins of other churches. God forbid. Methodism has an enviable reputation as a church which fights the devil and wins from his forces the people who are to be saved. Methodism is not a parasite sucking the blood from other forms of Christ's body. Methodism goes where religious societies are not, where church buildings are not, where church organizations have not already developed a Christian spirit in the community.

Methodism is famous for its appreciation of the value of system. It believes in method. It can never believe too strongly in method. No man in this sense can ever be too much of a "method-ist," even though he be a Baptist or a Presbyterian. The Christian church wastes nine-tenths of its force because of poor methods and lack of methods. Methodism is not only a conquering army sweeping over a land and breaking down the forces of Satan, but it is a loving and wisely devised government which comes along and lays, in good laws and wise regulations, the foundation of spiritual growth and prosperity. I want this brother to become thoroughly enthused with the value of system. I want him to take a Methodist paper in order that he may believe thoroughly in system.

But Methodism does not make a hobby of methods. Its hobby, using the word in the best possible sense, is spiritual earnestness. We would better depend on that as a factor of success, than lean on church history, or ceremonies, especially that of baptism or respectability. Now Methodism is measurably free from these weaknesses. Methodism is willing to accept as its motto, to be emblazoned upon every banner, "The world for Christ." The Methodist preacher is one of the first to try new measures, adopt reforms, and cry out against all kinds of sin. You can not put a lock on his mouth. He can not keep silent when sin abounds. He must speak. And he does. But above all others, he believes in a burning zeal for the salvation of the world and in personal purity as every man's present privilege.

It is one of the misfortunes and sources of weakness of many Christians to lose sight of the main issues and waste their force upon trifles. One man frets about socials, another over the improper use of the church building, another over the music question. Before he knows it he is a backslider, out of the church; and now the devil has him bound hand and foot so that he is no longer a soldier of Jesus Christ, but a prisoner of war in the hands of Satan. The church paper is the best preservative against all this. It is very easy to become a fool, but a brother who carefully reads his church paper every week will not readily become one. The paper will have in it every week some corrective medicine. A man who wisely reads his church paper can never be a small Christian.

If a man loves his children he ought to take a church paper. First of all, while the children are growing up he and his wife will have become intelligent, broad-minded, thoughtful people, largely under the elevating influence of the paper, and through them the paper will do much for the children. But as the little ones come to be ten, twelve, fifteen years of age, they will become interested in the children's department, then in the Epworth League work, in the building of churches, the missionary operations of the church, in the lives and movements of our church overseers, and in the great things God is doing among men. A man can afford to have a church paper lie around for ten years, if at the end of that time his children shall have come to read it five minutes every week. Many papers that go into people's homes would better go into the stove before a child's eye ever sees them. A good church paper is always pure, elevating, wholesome. It brings a weekly blessing into the household for all the members of the home. It has information for the student, cheer for the sorrowing, help for the children, inspiration and joy for young, middle-aged and old.

These are some of the things I may suggest to my farmer-friend, this Summer, as I seek to show him the advantages which are involved in taking a church paper.—Central Christian Advocate.

A devout colored preacher, whose heart was aglow with missionary zeal, gave notice to his congregation that in the evening an offertory would be taken for missions, and asked for liberal gifts. A selfish, well-to-do man in his congregation said to him before the service: "Yer gwine to kill dis church if yer goes on saying, 'Give! Give!' No church can stan' it. Yer gwine to kill it."

After the sermon the colored minister said to the people, "Bro. Jones told me I was gwine to kill dis here church ef I kep' a asking yer to give; but, my brethren, churches doesn't die dat way. Ef anybody knows of a church dat died 'cause of its been givin' too much to the Lord, I'll be very much obliged ef my brother will tell me whar dat church is, for I'se gwine to visit it, and I'll climb on de walls of dat church, under de light of de moon, and cry, 'Blessed am de dead dat die in de Lord.'"—Exchange.

It is all right to be open and above board in word and in action. Frank open-heartedness is a characteristic greatly to be desired. But if we possess this excellent quality, let us not use it in a way that will offend others. It may be all right to speak plainly one's mind, if done at the proper time and place, yet it should always be done in a careful and polite manner. For, remember that to be considerate of the feelings of others is also a virtue, and while observing one we should not forget the other.—The Searchlight.

It seems almost to be taken for granted by the majority of men that money is of more value than anything else. Character, reputation, absolute fidelity to even the finest shades of distinction between honor and dishonor—the almighty dollar seems sometimes to weigh all these down and sit throned on a man's eternal soul.—Rev. Charles M. Sheldon.

Childless people often drift apart. The wife seeks to satisfy her heart craving, by society, "Always roaming with a hungry heart." The husband finds the home dull and goes to the club. The happiest homes are those which echo to the love and laughter of childish voices.

The conditions which precelude motherhood are often remediable. They grow out of a diseased or enfeebled condition of the delicate female organs. When these conditions are removed, and vitality and elasticity given to the organs of motherhood, it frequently follows that the home is gladdened by the coming of a healthy, happy infant.

There is no other medicine that will do as much for women as Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It dries up disagreeable drains, allays inflammation, heals ulceration, cures female weakness, and establishes the delicate womanly organs in a state of perfect health and vigor.

There is no alcohol, opium or other narcotic in "Favorite Prescription."

Any sick woman may consult Dr. R. V. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y., by letter, free. Every letter is held as strictly private and sacredly confidential.

"I had been a sufferer from uterine trouble for about three years, having two miscarriages in that time, and the doctors that I consulted said I would have to go through an operation before I could give birth to living children," writes Mrs. Blanche E. Evans, of Parsons, Luzerne Co., Pa. "When about to give up in despair I saw the advertisement of Dr. Pierce's medicine and thought I would give it a trial as a last resort. I bought a bottle of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, and after taking it felt better than I had for years. After taking four and a half bottles I gave birth to a bright baby girl who is now four months old and has not had a day of sickness. I cannot say too much in praise of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription."

PERSONAL EVANGELISM.

Revivalism has been from the first and still is one of the distingnishing characteristics of Methodism. It is onr frequent boast that the great ohnroh to which we belong was born in a revival and has been nonrished and developed to her present large proportions and nsefnlness principally throngh the instrumentality of "revival meetings," the glorions and far-reaching influences of which have been the wonder of Christendom. So vast a majority of onr converts are gained dnring special seasons of revival effort, that in the minds of some "revivalism" is associated almost exclnsively with protracted services.

Methodists have, in general, been so wedded to this one method of soul-winning and building np the church that they have sometimes well-nigh forgotten that sinners can be reached in any other ways or at any other times. In other words, it is onr candid opinion, that whatever may have been true of onr workers in the past, we are at present depending too mnch on special meetings and too little on private personal work. While this is by no means trne of all onr ministers and lay workers, it is noticeably characteristic of ns as a denomination.

We would not for a moment disconnt the measnrless need and grand efficacy of "revival meetings," but we should give more attention to personal, every-day evangelism, which onght to go hand in hand with the other. The wholesale method of reaching the masses by means of pnblic meetings and great gatherings has mnch to commend it, and often is attended with gratifying snccess; bnt not infrequently results are sadly disappointing. Personal pleading and interviews with the impenitent and backslidden in many instances prove successfnl in leading them to Christ when sermons and songs and pnblic exhortations are of little or no avail.

In evangelism we can not do better than to imitate the example of Christ. He not only preached to the mnltitndes as they gathered abont him on the monntain slope or by the sea-side, bnt in private, even in great weariness, he ceased not to sympathize with men and teach them the way of life. Some of his snblimest discourses were delivered to andiences of one. While resting at noon-tide by the well of Samaria he revealed himself as the Messiah to a poor, lost woman. The conversion of Zacchens was due to the personal attention and condescension shown him by Christ. Nnmerons other instances of the Master's faithfulness in dealing with individnals are mentioned in the gospels. He who "came to seek and to save the lost" esteemed none nnworthy of his love and ministry, nor exempted himself on any occasion from this blessed work. Even in his dying agony he spoke words of pardon and hope to the penitent thief.

To be like him we mnst "labor in season and ont of season" for the conversion of sinners and the reclamation of the backslidden. Such was Paul's method, as he jonrneyed hither and thither over the Roman mpire proclaiming the gospel of the of God. No matter in what ny he is or how bnsily engaged lar matters, the disciple of ght to feel that at all times a "fisher of men," and a "savor of life unto life." If onr missionaries in foreign fields confined their efforts mainly to the public proclamation of the trnth, their labors would hardly be half as effective as they are. In all heathen conntries mnch of the time of the missionaries is consnmed in personal interviews and discnssions with inqnirers, and in seeking out those whose hearts the Lord has opened. It is wonderful what nnlooked-for resnlts are often prodnced by wayside sowing. Every now and then Satan pnts into the minds of Christian workers that some men are not worth saving. It is not impossible for ministers of the gospel to become more interested in books and in sermon-making than in men. If there is one class of Christians who more than any other should carry their religion with them wherever they go, it is the messengers of God. So great was the earnestness of Mr. Moody that he never let a day pass without speaking to some one about his or her spiritual condition.

On account of the complexity of modern life and the numberless attractions and distractions that keep man from church, personal evangelism is becoming more and more necessary. Many on account of their occnpations are debarred the privilege of attending divine service on the Sabbath save occasionally; consequently if they are to be reached, it must be done through private interviews and personal solicitation. The following extract from an address recently delivered before the Boston Preachers' Meeting by the Rev. E. E. Hnghes is directly in line with what we have said and is well worthy of consideration. Said Mr. Hnghes:

"In the first year of my ministry I held special meetings for seven weeks, and then gave over expecting any farther conversions for the year. But two years later I got from a Presbyterian preacher the one of nsing both methods. For three months I was pastor of a church in Iowa. There were only two Protestant Churches in the place. So the methods of the two stood in plain contrast. Onr own church had for years depended almost exclnsively on special revival work; the Presbyterian Church, so far as I knew, had never attempted to have a revival. Yet I noted that in a State where Methodism was far larger nnmerically, this church maintained a slight lead in the number of local members and had more of financial strength than our own local church. Nor could I see that our people were in general any more spiritual than the Presbyterians. The whole situation made me thoughtful. I found the secret of Presbyterian success in that town to lie in the constant evangelism of the pastor. He was working with people in their homes; any sign of religions interest was followed by face-to-face efforts to bring the person to a decision. Looking over onr own church records I discovered that, except for a rare instance here and there along the years, our additions had come wholly from special revival work. I owe to that Presbyterian preacher a real debt. I found that in the same town, among the same class of people, the two methods could be used with fair success. If they could be used by two men working independently, I did not see why they could not be used by one man who faithfully employed them both."

PERSONAL PURITY.

Personal pnrity is the essence of trne religion, and the condition of success in the Christian life. Nothing conceivable can snpply the lack of it. A man may fast and pray, and give and work, and teach and preach, and yet, in God's sight, be as "sounding brass or a tinkling cymbal." In the eye of the Searcher of hearts, who knows us altogether, nothing can substitute pnrity of heart and life, singleness of purpose. All external professions of godliness are worse than fntile, except in so far as they are the honest expression of the heart. A sanctified look does not, of necessity, indicate a sanctified spirit. The profession of Christianity is not synonymous with the practice of Christianity. The proclaiming of God's will is very different from the doing of it. Giving alms, visiting the sick, snccoring the distressed, snpporting the cause of Christ by means of money, may all be expressions of religion in the heart, and yet they may all exist where there is no true religion. They may be the effects of religion, or may be due to other causes. Even the preaching of the gospel may be done from worldly and nnworthy motives. A man whose heart is not pure may stand at the sacred desk. Onr Savior said: "Not everyone that saith nnto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven; but he that doeth the will of my Father which is in heaven. Many will say nnto me in that day, Lord, Lord, have we not prophesied (taught) in thy name? . . . And then will I profess nnto them, I never knew yon: depart from me, ye that work iniquity."

How lamentable that it should ever be trnthfnlly said of a preacher, or any professing Christian, that he will bear watching in a business transaction. All such need to "repent in sackcloth and ashes," and to "bring forth fruit meet for repentance."

"Blessed are the pure in heart, for they shall see God."

IT ATTRACTS ATTENTION.

When a professed Christian, who occupies some eminent position, experiences a moral fall through some scandalizing sin, it is sure to attract the attention of a large number of scoffing people. It is just the time for them to make enlarged comments on the Christian religion, and on Christians particularly. Of course, they do not go into ecstacies over those silent, steady, straight Christians who are the true preservers of society and are at the front of the best civil advancement. It is the professed Christian who falls by his own dead weight that attracts the eager and satisfied attention of mocking nnbelievers. Rev. Dr. James M. Lndlow writes as follows in the Homiletic Review: "We had traveled all day through a magnificent forest. What trunks for timber! What arches of foliage! Yet the trees had grown great in silence. The sap had not so much as whispered to the leaf that it was building. The fibrous limb expanded so gently that it was not felt by the foot of the bird that clasped it. But at night the forest resonnded suddenly with thundering crash. The ground shook as with an earthquake. Beast and bird prolonged the confusion by their cries of fright. It was only one of the trees that had fallen. So, I thought, goodness develops by silent process. What marvels of sainthips are growing in our homes! What splendid specimens of honest manhood in our business walks! Yet they attract little attention, being know chiefly to those who sit beneath the shade of their goodness, or pinch the fruit of their beneficence. But if one falls because of nndermining sin, the world reverberates with the report, and men lose faith in virtne."

Yes, this is true of many; but I ask, Do people lose faith in virtue, or in the Christian religion, when an adherent of a false religion has a moral fall from an eminent position in a so called church? I never knew of an instance. And does not this fact show the great superiority of the Christian religion over false religions?

LITERARY NOTES.

BY W. F. B.

Among the special features of the January nnmber of the Ladies' Home Journal are: The Home-Coming of the Nakannies, by W. A. Fraser; The Boer Girl of South Africa, by Howard C. Hillegas; Where the New Century Will Really Begin, by John Ritchie, Jr.; A Merry Woman's Letters to a Quiet Poet, edited by S. T. Pickard; The Mother of the Stars, by Amelia H. Botaford; A National Crime at the Feet of American Parents, by Edward Bok; The Minister and the Organ, by Ian Maclaren; The Rehearsal of a Play; Molly Donahue's Musicale, by the author of Mr. Dooley.

In the Popular Science Monthly, for January, Sir Robert Ball, president of the Royal Astronomical Society, writes of the Advance of Astronomy in the Nineteenth Century; Prof. Charles E. Munroe treats of the Applications of Explosives, which in a variety of forms are now doing their deadly work in war; A Paradoxical Anarchist is described and studied by Cesare Lombroso, the eminent Italian criminologist; What Makes the Trolley Car Go is explained and illnstrated by Mr. William E. Baxter, C. E.

The January Woman's Home Companion contains The Revival of Art and Beauty, by Dr. Newell Dwight Hillis. Carina Campbell Eaglesfield, under the title, Balanced Men, makes a plea for a more symmetrical manhood. John Kendrick Bangs continning the irresistibly fnnny Idiot-at-Home papers, inveighs against certain absurd New-Year's customs. A graceful story of society life, entitled Chateaugay, is begun by Mrs. Burton Harrison in this number.

Scribner's Magazine, for January, which begins the new year and volume, also marks the opening of two of its important serial features for 1900. J. M. Barrie's great novel, Tommy and Grizel, npon which he has been at work for four years, begins in this nnmber. Theodore Roosevelt begins in this nnmber his monograph on Oliver Cromwell, which is to be a feature of the magazine for six months. He brings the period near to the reader, giving the discussion all the pertinence of an analysis of present-day affairs. Another phase of New York as it is today is graphically described by Jesse Lynch Williams in The Walk Uptown, which begins at the Battery and ends at Central Park. The text is accompanied with a series of snapshot photographs by Elemdorf, illustrating the scenes of a New York afternoon. There are short stories by Howard Pyle (with illnstrations by Mr. Pyle) and Robert Shackleton, whose story is of political life on the East Side in New York, illustrated by Stevens.

A CARD.

During the session of the Methodist Conference, recently held in Vicksbnrg, while I was criticising the character of the advertisements permitted in the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, I stated in substance that I had just been informed that one of the firms advertised in the ADVOCATE—C. A. Snow & Co., Washington City—was so disreputable as not to be worthy of a place in a church paper. I knew nothing of the parties; had never heard of them before; had not even noticed their advertisement in the ADVOCATE until my attention was called to it that day. I therefore acknowledge that I did the parties injustice in repeating from hearsay what I did not know to be true, and do hereby beg their pardon.

OPPOSED TO EMIGRATION.

At Macon, Ga., on the first, in a public address which was largely attended by whites as well as negroes, Booker T. Washington spoke as follows in opposition to Bishop Turner's African colonization scheme:

"The North does not contain all the good white people, nor are they any better friends to the negro than can be found in the South. For every negro that is sent to Liberia a negro baby is born in the cotton belt, so that scheme is a failure. As we came to this country at the urgent solicitation and expense of the white man we would be ungrateful to run away and leave him, and we are not going to do it. I was asked the other day in New York what the negro can do to get his rights. I answered, make himself useful. His citizenship will be recognized and valued in proportion as he is worthy. Industrial education is the key to the situation. The negro must keep pace with progressive civilization. The negro must have education and thrift. They must know how to apply their education. We have enough ministers and professional men for the present."

A FOLLY IN ISRAEL.

BY REV. E. P. MARVIN.

Is it not time to call a halt in these successive booms which the pulpit and religious press are giving to infidel novels, infidel lectures, the vile drama and the lower depths of vice? Some obscure woman for reprobate man writes an irreligious novel, of which the chief characteristic is detailed skepticism and apostasy. Some "higher critic" announces his destructive theory.

About the first general knowledge of the pernicious work obtained by the more respectable portion of the land comes from the pulpit and religious press. Preachers' meetings discuss it gravely, and our religious newspapers review and rehash it, and callow pulpiteers perform the exploit act of "flaying" the author.

And what is the result? The very loudest and widest advertising possible. Those whom the devil could not reach through his legitimate channels, the pulpit and religious press reach, so that "the masses" are fully and effectually reached. Unless we call a halt on our side, we may expect infidelity to spawn npon the clergy more and more of these productions especially adapted to the study and exercises of unwise ecclesiastics.

Institutions and practices as public as the theatre and the dance may sometimes be condemned by the church with salutary results, but "simple concerning evil" should be the rule concerning many things. Awakened curiosity is a powerful allurement to evil.

Dr. Talmage is said to have increased the business of the dance houses of New York immensely by his visitation and preaching. A New York pictorial represented a young man striding along after Dr. Talmage, who said he "wanted to see it, too."

Dr. Parkhurst and his imitators have boomed certain hitherto obscure forms of lasciviousness all over the land.

A Presbyterian elder once said to his pastor: "My daughter is seriously perplexed with doubts, since she heard your sermon on that skeptical book. If you continue to reveal to her these latest theories and objections of infidels, I must take her out from under your ministry." Voltaire got many weapons against the Bible from works on "Evidences."

A pastor picked up an infidel work from the table of a parishioner, and said with sad surprise, "My dear brother, why did you get this pernicious book for your family to read?" The parishioner replied, "I heard yon preach about it and had a curiosity to see it."

What a folly in Israel! It is related that a well meaning professor in Cornell University informed his class of a certain book, that it was decidedly pernicious, and especially warned them that "no young gentleman should read it." When he dismissed the class, they made a break for the book-store and took every copy of the bad work, and more were ordered.

Over and over again have infidel novels and immoral novels thus been boomed by the pulpit and religious press.

When the clergy stigmatize anything emphatically as sinful it often renders it peculiarly attractive to sinners.

A showman told me that if the clergy of this city would keep on booming certain plays by their public protests, showmen could afford to give them a house and lot.

What a deficiency in knowledge of human nature, even among those who study the Book that fully describes it. I know it, for I have been "one of them."

Soon after I came from the Seminary, a shrewd and kindly brother, who had studied me well, naively remarked that "They ought to have a Professor of Christian Common Sense at ——— Theological Seminary."

When a now noted blasphemer was comparatively unknown, he began his address to a Chicago audience by saying: "First of all, let me return thanks to the clergy of Chicago for this magnificent audience." How Satan must chuckle over this folly in Israel! Let us not instruct our people in rationalism.

In parishes where the most of this unwisdom prevails, we find the most skepticism. Brethren, let us halt. Hands off from the next ungodly novel, no matter who writes it. Let the devil do his own advertising, and let us publish the gospel. Stop grinding for the Philistines. Fill the minds of the people with divine truths and there will remain no room for error.—Exchange.

THE DEMANDS ON A MINISTER.

It is not everyone who is acquainted with the work of a faithful minister in all its various details. There are people who hear him preach, and who think when that is accomplished his work for the week is done. But there are others who know that more than this is demanded of the minister. Even if that were all, it is not by any means a small task. Over one hundred sermons per year, not including his prayer meeting talks, sermons and addresses demanded of him on special occasions. The average lawyer does not make half the number of addresses made by the minister. These sermons, too, are prepared for critical ears. A lawyer may jog and shuffle through his plea before the jury in a very slipshod manner, but let the minister do this, and the cover of the winds are at once opened, and the unfortunate pastor compelled to seek refuge in a more quiet harbor. The sermon of the faithful minister represents work, patient, painstaking labor, and not only this, they are also seasoned with prayer. The man of God feels that he has a message from his Father to the men and women who come to hear him, and his desire is to present that message so that it will set their souls on fire with a longing to attain better things.

But besides the sermon there are many other things demanding the time and attention of the pastor. If his congregation is large, it will require of him an almost endless number of pastoral visits. If the congregation is small, he will be expected to visit the people oftener because of the supposition that he has nothing else to do. Then there are the sick to visit, the dead to bury, and a continual need of stirring the dry bones to waken them into life, to say nothing of the time he must spend in trying to reconcile the people who have the "pouts."

Think of these things, and be more considerate of the pastor's time. Remember what is demanded of him. More addresses than a lawyer, more visits than an average physician, more worry than a congressman, and for all that he gets from eight to twelve hundred dollars a year. It would be a difficult matter to convince some people that their pastor is doing the work of two men, and many of them seem to think the more demands on him the better. Poor pastor, buffeted on every hand, misjudged, misrepresented, often discouraged, disheartened, is it any wonder that some of them reach the "dead line" so soon? Remember, dear reader, that your pastor is only a human being, and there is such a thing as demanding too much of him.—Mid-Continent.

MISSISSIPPI.

REV. HENRY G. HAWKINS, Madison, Miss. ASSOCIATE EDITOR.

We have received a copy of "An English-Japanese Vocabulary of Theological, Biblical and Other Terms," compiled by Rev. C. B. Moseley, Professor of Systematic Theology and Homiletics in Kwansei Gaknin. The Kwansei Gaknin is the Boys College of the M. E. Church, South, in Japan. The editor of the above work is a native of Mississippi. The publishing was done by the Methodist Publishing House of Tokyo. The English is given, then the native character or characters for the word, and also the native word Romanized. John is Yohane; Jesus, Yesu; James, Yakobu; New Testament, Shinyaku-Zensho; Old Testament, Kyuyaku-Zensho.

Miss Vic Thompson is working on the Mississippi State League Directory for 1900. She hopes to have it published in the Epworth Era about Feb. 1, together with a brief history of the Mississippi State League, and the pictures of the officers.

There are now 166 chapters in the two Mississippi Conferences, with 4,571 members. If all these chapters would send promptly to D. G. Patton, treasurer, Jackson, Miss., the five cents per member assessment for State League work, we could move forward at once and take rank among the best League States in our Southern country.

The letter heads used by the officers of the Mississippi State Epworth League have for a special motto, "Assessments for Missions in Full." The Central Committee on Missions has been appointed in the Aberdeen district and a meeting held at Verona, Dec. 27. District secretaries are the ones to appoint this committee in each district and organize them for this work. The Columbus and Aberdeen districts are the only ones so far thus organized.

The duties of this writer were so many at Conference that he had time to see only a portion of the brethren on the subject of the Lamburth Monument at Pearl River Church, Madison circuit. Those spoken to contributed $16 90. Others desiring to contribute may send to the writer of this column or to Mrs. Jennie Norman, Madison, Miss. This work will be finished soon.

On the train last Saturday we met Rev. Ira B. Robertson going to the old homestead of his family near Fayette, Miss., to lead a watch night service. It was to be the sixty-fifth held upon the same floor. Whilst there may not be salvation in a watch service, yet we trust that the custom of holding them will continue in the land. They bespeak serious, thoughtful, earnest, spiritual souls.

FROM CANTON.

MR. EDITOR: As you well know, I am not given to troubling the press much, but under existing circumstances I feel constrained to send you a few lines from Canton before leaving for my new field of labor.

When I took charge in Canton the prayer meeting was broken down, the Epworth League was disorganized, the church was considerably in debt for an organ and incidentals, and the house of worship, which had been leaking two or three years, was in a state of dilapidation from foundation to turret. But we went to work, and by the help of God and the assistance of a few faithful souls we have wrought quite a change. The attendance at public worship and at prayer meeting during the year has been much larger than for years; the Epworth League has been reorganized and made one of the best in the Conference, all indebtedness upon the church has been removed, the collections for benevolent causes have been largely increased, there have been thirty-six accessions to the church. The house of worship has been recovered and its foundations repaired, and we were getting ready to have it repainted, recalcimined and recarpeted; but, to the disappointment and contrary to the expectations of the people, I have been removed. I hope, however, the new pastor will be able to carry the work to completion.

I leave the good people here with a sad heart, but will go to my new field with a willing mind and heart and render to the good people there the very best service I am able, by the help of God, to render them.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE PREACHERS.

The printers are hard at work upon the Minutes, and say that they will be able to complete them in a few weeks. I would be glad if every preacher whose postoffice is not clearly indicated by the name of his appointment, would let me know his postoffice address at once. It is positively essential to the proper distribution of the Minutes.

TAKE TIME BY THE FORELOCK.

Owing to an increase in the price of paper, we will not be able to continue the very low prices at which we are now offering our premium Bibles. The present rates, however, will continue until the first of February, unless our stock becomes exhausted. Those who want Bibles, or who expect to want them any time soon, would do well to order at once, as the increase in prices is likely to be permanent. All dealers will be obliged to make an advance in prices, unless their prices are already too high. Even if your subscription has not expired, it would be wise to renew at once, and take advantage of our present prices on Bibles. We invite special attention to our Combination Bible. It is the very best edition of the Book of books.

OBITUARY.

MRS. VIRGINIA R. RICKEY, daughter of Dr. James Botts Wiggington, of Virginia, and wife of Mr. R. S. Rickey, of New Orleans, was born at Leesburg, London county, Va., 17 April, 1837, and died at New Orleans, La., 3 December, 1899. Through her mother, who was Anne Pendleton Settle, she was descended from Edmund Pendleton, a member of the Virginia Assembly and a signer of the Declaration of Independence.

Mrs. Rickey was trained in Christian principles from infancy. At the age of twelve she was converted under the ministry of Bishop Marvin, at LaGrange, Mo. She became identified with New Orleans Methodism in 1868, when she joined Carondelet Church by certificate. At the time of her death she was a member at Rayne Memorial—an earnest, consistent, active Christian, whose zeal and piety were an inspiration to all.

Mrs. Rickey was well-endowed intellectually, a women of unusually fine judgment, with clear, broad, scriptural views of life and its relations. She saw duty clearly always, and discharged it faithfully. Her devoted husband and six surviving children may well call her memory blessed, for she was a tower of strength to all of them and a constant and faithful witness for Christ.

For many months Mrs. Rickey had suffered from what proved to be an incurable malady. Such sweet, uncomplaining resignation to the will of God has seldom been seen as she displayed during that trying period, a serene, unvarying faith sustaining her to the end, making her hours of physical weakness and pain a time of spiritual strength and triumph. Her pastor was strengthened daily by her unfailing confidence in Christ, declaring that he received far more than he imparted while in communion with this saintly woman as she neared the grave. Doctors, nurses, attendants, all felt the force of her strong character and triumphant faith. Again and again she gave assurance of her readiness to depart and be with Christ. At the last, folded in the arms of her husband and with her own about his neck, she softly and sweetly "fell on sleep."

"I heard a voice from heaven, saying unto me, Write, Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord from henceforth."

W. H. LAPRADE.

"Yea," saith the Spirit, "for they rest from their labors and their works do follow them." I have known Sister Rickey for many years most intimately, and all that her pastor has said in his memorial, of her personal character, and spiritual integrity, I do most heartily confirm. Her memory is a precious inheritance both to the church and to her family.

Quality

It is the high quality of Royal Baking Powder that has established its great and world-wide reputation.

Never experiment with so important an article as the human food

Every housewife knows she can rely upon it; that it makes the bread and biscuit more delicious and wholesome—always the finest that can be baked.

It is economy and every way better to use the Royal, whose work is always certain, never experimental.

There are many imitation baking powders, made from alum. They may cost less per pound, but their use is at the cost of health.

BRIGHT'S DISEASE.

For the First Time in the History of Medicine a Cure for Bright's Disease Has Been Discovered.

Swamp-Root, the Great Kidney Remedy

HAS PROVEN BY THOUSANDS OF TRIUMPHANT TESTS ITS WONDERFUL SUCCESS IN DISEASES OF THE KIDNEYS, BLADDER, BLOOD AND BRIGHT'S DISEASE.

"Christian Advocate" Readers May Have a Sample Bottle Free.

Just as sure as the break of dawn means another day, so does pain in the back mean kidney disease.

When your kidneys become weak and are unable to throw off the waste in the blood, they clog up with poisonous matter, break down, cell by cell, and the particles pass away in the urine. Then the albumen, which makes rich, red blood, leaks out, your system breaks down and you have what is known to all mankind as Bright's Disease.

Bright's Disease is taking away more lives to-day than any other known ailment, excepting possibly consumption; and yet with small precautions and half the care you give to the appearance of your shoes, you may prevent such a calamity as Bright's Disease befalling you.

Are you fortified with the necessary knowledge about Bright's Disease? Do you know how to find out if there is anything the matter with your kidneys? Here is a simple test:

In the morning, on arising, take of your urine about two ounces and put it in a glass bottle; let it stand about twenty-four hours, and if, on examination, you find any settling or sediment, if it is cloudy, or if small particles float in it, then you may be assured that nature has warned you, and that your kidneys need attention.

The mild and immediate effect of the famous new discovery, Swamp-Root, is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases.

Swamp-Root is the triumphant discovery of the eminent kidney specialist, Dr. Kilmer, and is not recommended for all diseases, but if you have kidney, bladder or uric acid troubles, or diseases depending upon these disorders, you will find Swamp-Root just the remedy you need.

physicians in their private practice; and is taken by doctors themselves who have kidney ailments, because they recognize in it the greatest and most successful remedy for kidney and bladder troubles.

Swamp-Root will set your whole system right, and in order that all afflicted may know its benefits, a special arrangement has been made with the "CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE" by which all readers of our paper who will send their names and addresses to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., will be sent absolutely free, by mail, a sample bottle of Swamp-Root. Also a book of value treating of all kinds of kidney diseases and containing some of the thousands of testimonial letters received from sufferers cured.

Swamp-Root is for sale at all drug stores in bottles of two sizes and two prices—fifty cents and one dollar.

Two Verdicts.

"After a fair and impartial trial you are judged guilty by this court, and you are sentenced to be hung by the neck until you are dead." The solemn tones of the judge, the despairing face of the prisoner, and the painful stillness of the court-room, makes it a scene of awful gloom. Now turn to a brighter scene in the home circle. A mother radiant with joy over the recovery of a child from the clutches of Malaria, gladly rejoicing, and praising Hicks' Chillifuge, and giving that Chillifuge is without a witness to cure.

TAKE NOTICE

That we are now handling two different styles of the Holman Bible in Bourgeois type. One we sell to paid-up subscribers at $1.50, the other at $1.30. The $1.30 Bible is substantially the same we have hitherto sold at $1.50. The one we sell at $1.50 is a far better Bible than has ever been sold at such a price. It is a marvel of cheapness. THE GIFT OF LOVE.

BY M. ELLA RUSSELL.

It is in loving, not in being loved,
The heart is blest;
It is in giving, not in seeking gifts,
We find our quest.

If thou art hungry, lacking heavenly bread,
Give hope and cheer;
If thou art sad and wouldst be comforted,
Stay sorrow's tear.

Whatever be thy longing or thy need,
That do thou give:
So shall thy soul be fed, and thou indeed
Shall truly live.

QUESTIONS FOR YOUNG MEN.

If you have any ambition to bear yourself well, to succeed in life in all ways as well as in the financial way, which is commonly understood when "success" is mentioned, you must become aware of the fact that you can not live any kind of life you may like for years and still have the highest character. It is the little incidents from day to day which make a man's character, and perhaps the strongest of all these little incidents are those which concern the treatment of women and girls by men and boys. The habit of being constantly with women sometimes cultivates the habit of paying little attention to them, of not recollecting that they are to be treated with never-failing courtesy. This is but a step in the direction leading to such incidents as one sees in Europe, where young brothers sit about the house in their uniforms paid for by their sisters' sewing or teaching, and let these same sisters bring their shoes, or coats, or glasses of water, and what not. When we go to Germany and see this sort of thing we acquire a contempt for the men of that race. They do not begin to equal the vigor, the manliness, the civilization, of our American men. And yet we must not behold the mote in our brother's eye unless we consider the beam in our own. We must not criticise others unless we can at least say that our own men have a clear idea of their proper course in such a matter.

Furthermore, when you are dealing with the other sex it is wise to bear in mind that as you treat them, so are you building up character in yourself. If you do not bear in mind the courtesies of all kinds which are woman's due, you can not retain for any length of time a pride in yourself, a satisfaction with your behavior, which is commonly called self-respect, and without self-respect you will have a hard time of it in the world.—Harper's Round Table.

WIVES OF GREAT MEN.

Lord Beaconsfield, the predecessor of Lord Salisbury in the Tory leadership, was indebted to his wife, even before his marriage to her, for pecuniary assistance and intellectual stimulus which aided him in his struggle for power and fame. When she became a widow she was fifty and Beaconsfield thirty-five. She was not beautiful, but he married her, and when some of his friends expressed their surprise at it, and asked him why he did it, "Gentlemen," he said, "do none of you know what gratitude means?" His biographer, James A. Froude, says of her: "She was his helpmate, his confidante, his adviser; from the first he felt the extent of his obligations to her, but the sense of obligation, if at first felt as a duty, became a bond of friendship perpetually renewed." How Mrs. Gladstone, too, aided her husband, by watching over his health and comfort, and by carefully shielding him from annoyances likely to interfere with his labors, is well known. At an earlier period Lady Palmerston was, as well in public as in private life, the active ally of her husband. She electioneered for him, intrigued for him, exercised in his behalf, upon members of Parliament, ambassadors, journalists and public men generally, all her feminine talents. This, too, she did in spite of Palmerston's notorious devotion to others of the fair sex, and of a success with them which, joined to his personal beauty, obtained for him the nickname of "Cupid."—New York Sun.

EXTRAVAGANT EXPECTATIONS.

A fair share of the unhappiness of life comes from extravagant expectations. Few of us find that reality exactly corresponds to our dreams; we discover that there is a seamy side to the work we thought we should thoroughly enjoy; that our friends are not quite the sort of persons we thought they were; and that the things we imagined would please us most lose some of their power to charm. This is the experience that makes cynics, pessimists and that most disagreeable of all people, those with a grievance. But it is a fair question whether they are taking their early dreams too seriously. You say you were disappointed, but what right had you to build a castle in Spain and think that you could live in it? Moralists are always telling us not to be extravagant with our money. If we spend it too lavishly we shall soon have none to spend. Would it not be a good plan for them to tell us, once in a while, how surely we may bankrupt our happiness by cherishing extravagant expectations and then cursing our luck and having the sky of the soul constantly clouded by disappointment because things did not correspond to them? It would not be difficult to find a text for such a sermon. Is it not St. Paul who says something about the wisdom of not thinking of ourselves more highly than we ought to think, but of thinking soberly?—Great Thoughts.

FUN AT HOME.

Do not be afraid of a little fun at home, good people. Do not shut your houses, lest the sun should fade your carpets; and your hearts, lest a laugh should shake down a few of the musty cobwebs that are hanging there. Young people must have fun and relaxation somewhere; if they do not find it at their own hearth-stones they will seek it at other and less profitable places. Therefore, let the fire burn brightly at night in Winter, and let the doors and windows be cheerfully thrown open in Summer, and make the homestead delightful with all those little arts parents so well understand. Half an hour of merriment within doors and merriment of a home, blots out the remembrance of many a care and annoyance during the day, and the best safeguard they can take with them into the world is the unseen influences of the bright little home sanctum.—Home Doctor.

In the dim hours of sorrow and bereavement, when we hear "Time flowing through the middle of the night;" in the hour when we hear far off the monotonous footfall of approaching death; what is it that calms and comforts and soothes us then? Is it any discovery of science? Is it any scheme of philosophy? Is it anything that orator has uttered or poet sung? Nay, when the melody of lyric songs has lost its charms, and the music of memory and her siren daughters has been brought low, we still listen—when we can listen to nothing else—to the beatitudes which Christ spoke to the multitudes as they sat listening among the mountain lilies, or to those last words, more precious than archangels' utterances, which on the same night that he was betrayed he spake to his beloved ones, when the traitor had gone, and it was night.—Canon Farrar.

A little boy declared that he loved his mother "with all his strength." He was asked to explain what he meant by "with all his strength." He said: "Well, I'll tell you. You see we live on the fourth floor of this tenement; and there's no elevator, and the coal is kept down in the basement. Mother is dreadfully busy all the time, and she isn't very strong; so I see to it that the coal hod is never empty. I lug the coal up four flights of stairs all by myself. And it's a pretty big hod. It takes all my strength to get it up here. Now isn't that loving my mother with all my strength?"—Standard.

Ex-President Hayes, in an address at the dedication of the College for Women in Cleveland, Ohio, made this weighty statement: "More and more I am impressed with the value of education that begins at the cradle. The end of education is character. That depends largely on the heart, the feelings, the moral nature. They find their best in childhood's earliest days. Women of necessity are instructors. The education of women is the education of the race in its most vital points. Let the colleges for women have the most generous and unfailing support."—Exchange.

There is always some one to smile at, somebody to give your chair to somebody to whom a book, a flower, or even an old paper, would be a boon. These small attentions will open the way to confidence, will make it possible that in need these friends will give you opportunities to help them, which unless you had shown thoughtfulness and regard for them, they could never have done. A quiet, sympathetic look or smile many a time unbars a heart that needs help which you can give.—Western Advocate.

A Small Beginning.

A little snow ball on the summit of the Alps, rolled up by the winds, moves slowly downward. Gaining in strength and size, it grows rapidly to giant proportions, and finally becomes the frightful avalanche, destroying everything in its path. Consumption begins with a little cough, a trifling pain, a passing flush on the cheeks. This is but the beginning of the avalanche, consumption, that knows no pity, recognizes no distinction. Just at the beginning thousands commit the error of not checking and curing the disease by using MARSDEN'S PECTORAL BALM.

GREEN—WILLIAM GREEN was born in Conecuh county, Ala., March 20, 1829; moved from there to Choctaw county in 1872, and from there to Landerdale county, where he died in the triumphs of a living faith, June 9, 1899. He joined the M. E. Church, South, in 1877 under the ministry of Rev. W. H. Wilde.

Bro. Green had united in him those virtues which go to make up a thorough Christian life. After he put himself on the altar a living sacrifice, he spent the remainder of his days building, by the grace of God, a character and influence in the hearts and minds of all those who knew him.

Bro. Green was peculiarly adapted to Sunday-school work. Of the twenty-two years of Christian life, twenty-one were spent in the capacity of Sunday-school superintendent. He never stood on excuses commonly made by man, but, when duty called, he was always ready to go. His religion did not consist in creeds and dogmas, but in purity of heart and life, keeping always before him the ever-blessed thought, "Blessed are the pure in heart, for they shall see God." The church has lost a godly, spiritual man; the community a true and faithful citizen, who could always be counted on the side of right.

Bro. Green served his county as representative, and also was chosen to represent his county during the perilous days of 1875 at the Constitutional Convention of the State of Alabama. Our personal knowledge of him was of short duration, but a more consecrated man I have never met. It was my privilege to visit him several times before his death, and we always found him meekly suffering his Master's will, and would often repeat Scripture peculiar to his case. The last I remember to have heard was, "I know if this earthly house of my tabernacle were dissolved, I have a building of God, not made with hands, eternal in the heavens." Worthy to be followed are the footsteps of this saintly man of God. He leaves a widow, five sons and two daughters to mourn him.

The tender and kind attention to Bro. Green during his long illness will never be forgotten by the family. God bless them all.

STROUD—Mrs. SALLIE E. STROUD was born in Chambers county, Ga., Oct. 29, 1844; was married to Jesse Strond, Nov. 29, 1866, and died Dec. 6, 1899. She joined the Methodist Church in 1864, and held steadfastly to her profession to the day of her death. She was sick about ten weeks, and part of the time suffered much, but with Christian resignation she bore her affliction, and testified her submission to God's will by an absence of complaint. Her heart beat in sympathy with the Methodist Itinerant, not one of whom was ever her pastor without feeling in Sister Strond, "I have a friend." As a neighbor, she showed a solicitude that drew others to her. Her hand was opened to every needy call. To the despondent she had a word of cheer. Her profession was deeds, not words. She leaves a sweet aroma in the household and community. The large concourse which attended her remains attested the sincerity of the esteem in which she was held.

May God, in his infinite mercy, draw to him the husband, daughter, and son, that in the world to come it may be an undivided family!

A. TROTTER.

GROVES—Died on Tuesday, Nov. 14, 1899, at the residence of his son-in-law, Mr. C. L. McBride, Greenwood, Miss., Mr. JOHN H. GROVES, in his eighty-eighth year.

Mr. Groves was born in Lafayette county, Tenn. He was a son of Mr. J. H. Groves, a native of North Carolina. Mr. Groves, with his father's family, came to Mississippi in the "fifties," and settled near Markham's Landing, now Greenwood, Miss., where he remained until the outbreak of the war. He enlisted in the war, and was a faithful soldier until its close. He won many heroic honors during the war by his daring and bravery, but did not serve at any time as an officer, resigning because he preferred to be a private.

Mr. Groves was married to Miss Lourion Markham as he was preparing to go to war, and did not see his bride again until after his return at the close of the war. He was a member of the M. E. Church, South, for many years, and during the last three or four years of his life was a devout Christian, devoting his means to the church and charitable purposes; almost denying himself the necessities of life. He was a great sufferer during the latter part of his life, having been afflicted with acute rheumatism and three strokes of paralysis—the last one fatal. Two daughters and one brother remain to mourn his loss, his wife and oldest daughter having gone to a heavenly home several years ago. "Though we be dead, yet we are alive in Christ Jesus."

C. T. STEPP.

DUNN—Died, MARY ANN DUNN, aged eighty-four years four months and twenty-two days; married May 18, 1833; lost her husband Feb. 6, 1894; died Aug. 20, 1899.

Sincere in speech, chaste in thought, rich in sympathy and gracious charitableness, a lover of the quiet of the fireside, she lived only to evince the majesty of character shining through sacrifice, service, and suffering.

Sister Dunn loved her faded Bible. Its pages were tear-stained, as she drew from its beneficent teachings sorrow's only consolation, bereavement's only oil of gladness, and meditated upon the riches of grace revealed in God incarnate.

A devout disciple of the church for over sixty years, she met her end in peace, and is now in the haven of rest, "where the surges cease to roll." We miss the noble dignity of her presence, the subdued tones of a voice which great age could not make harsh, and the serene modesty which humbled itself in its own eyes to be lifted up on high in the esteem of God. We can not send one selfish cry after her to touch her song of joy as the guest of the banquet of bliss, in the house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens. May her life be the chord never broken to vibrate in the hearts of her children, eliciting strains of music divine which shall allure them on in quest of that house beautiful, prepared for them in the mighty congregation of the loved ones gone before!

H. W. RICKAY.

Clinton, La.

ABNEY—On the seventeenth of December, 1899, at 3 P. M., we tenderly laid away the body of Miss SARAH CORINNE ABNEY, daughter of J. N. Abney and the sainted Sarah Crosby Abney, in the cemetery at Covington, La., to await the resurrection, when Jesus shall come to make up his jewels.

Miss Abney ceased to live here the sixteenth of December, at 6:40 P. M. She was twenty-five years two months and seventeen days old. She was converted and joined the M. E. Church, South, in her fourteenth year. She was faithful to her church vows, attending on divine services and ailing in playing the organ, singing in the congregation and working in the Epworth League. She was a confidential daughter, a loving sister, and made a genial companion. We regret to lose her from our church and social circles, but rejoice to know that she will ever be with Christ in heaven.

May the comforting influence of the Holy Spirit lead the bereaved ones to look up to Christ, who is our help in trouble! "God moves in a mysterious way his wonders to perform."

F. G. HOCUTT, P. C.

Covington, La.

MCCLAIN—FLOYD MCCLAIN, son of David and Martha McClain, was born June 21, 1875, and died Oct. 14, 1899. He was a member of the Baptist Church and a devout Christian. He leaves a wife and babe, and a host of relatives and friends, to weep. It was a beautiful death-bed. He was perfectly conscious, and all that were present said they had "never before witnessed such a scene." He said, "It is not death after all; it is life!" And again he said, "I only wish all the great and wise men were here, so I could tell them about Jesus, and tell them how happy I am." One loved one had the new life. You could tell it from the blessed words he uttered, from the sweet songs he sung, and from his very countenance!

To his wife and the family: He has gone to a city without griefs or graves, without births or burials; a city which glories in having Jesus for its king, angels for its guards, and whose citizens are saints. It is as he said, "There is a home in heaven for me and a home there for you, if you will only trust Jesus as I have done." May we all trust Christ and meet him in heaven!

WILLIAMSON—Tribute of respect to the memory of Mrs. CARRIE HALL WILLIAMSON by the Epworth League of Lake Providence, La.:

Whereas, An all-wise Providence, in the exercise of an inscrutable dispensation, has removed from our midst our beloved fellow-Leaguer, Mrs. Williamson; And, whereas, We, the surviving members, desire to give some expression to our feelings on the sad occasion; therefore, be it

Resolved, That in the loss of Mrs. Williamson we have been deprived of the companionship of one who was endeared to us by the ties of friendship, by the virtues that adorned her character as a woman and as a member of the League.

Resolved, That, however painful the bereavement, we bow with humility and resignation to the will of God; that we hold in loving remembrance her sweet and noble life.

Resolved, That we deeply sympathize with her bereaved husband and family, and that a copy of these resolutions be sent to them, to the Banner-Democrat, the Lake Providence Herald, the Epworth Era, and the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE.

$100 REWARD, $100.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials. Address,

WINE OF CARDUI

How a Woman Suffers.

HOWELL, IND., Nov. 26.

I will always prize Wine of Cardui. It has done me more good than all the medicines I have ever taken in my life. Please send a book about female diseases to the ladies whose names I enclose.

Mrs. MINNIE STODOHILL.

McELREE'S Wine of Cardui

It isn't necessary for a woman to give particulars. When she says she has "female troubles", other women know what that means. It means days and nights of endless suffering. It means headaches which no tongue can describe. It means that terrible bearing and dragging down in the lower abdomen. It means agonizing backache, and shoulder ache, and arm ache, and aches in the lower limbs. It means nerves on edge—the blues—despondency and loss of hope. It means debilitating drains that the doctors call leucorrhœa. It means martyrdom—sometimes even death seems preferable. And still Wine of Cardui will utterly put those diseases and pains to rout. It has cured thousands of cases when nothing else on earth would. To the budding woman, to the bride, to the wife, to the expectant mother, to those going through the Change of Life, this Vegetable Wine is a blessing.

The "Combination" Bible.

A SUPERB EDITION

of the Holy Scriptures, showing at a glance at the foot of the pages all changes made by the revisers.

New Type. All Proper Names Self-Pronouncing. The Most Valuable Collateral Matter.

There is a steady and increasing demand for first-class Bibles. Everybody is anxious to obtain a copy of the best edition of the Holy Scriptures. Old editions are constantly being replaced by Bibles that are in every way more attractive, and there is practically no limit to the demand.

OUR "COMBINATION" FEATURE.

Hitherto the King James and Revised Versions have been printed in parallel columns, but this makes comparisons of texts tedious and unsatisfactory, and makes the book very unwieldy. We have overcome this difficulty by "combining" the two Versions on the same page, showing at a glance in foot-notes all the Changes Additions and Omissions made by the Revisers.

THE OLD VERSION PRINTED IN FULL.

The King James Version is the basis, and this Version is read straight along from the text, while the Revised Version is read from the text in combination with the foot-notes. Our "Combination" Feature has met with universal approval and is strongly endorsed by all leading Divines and Biblical Scholars.

It is only by a comparison of the two Versions that the greatest benefit can be obtained from reading the Holy Scriptures, and this comparison every reader can easily make by our simple arrangement for showing the changes made by the revisers. This is the greatest triumph of Bible Publishing the World has ever known.

OUR OFFER.

To those unprogressive people who do not read and pay for the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE we sell this Bible at the publisher's retail price—$4.25. To our subscribers we sell it at the very low rate of $2. The only condition attached to this offer is that the subscriber must pay his subscription one full year in advance, viz.: to January, 1901. We will send it postpaid to any person who will send us three new cash subscribers at the regular rate. For six new cash subscribers at the regular rate we will send two "Combination" Bibles, postpaid.

For fifty cents additional we will send a Bible with index.

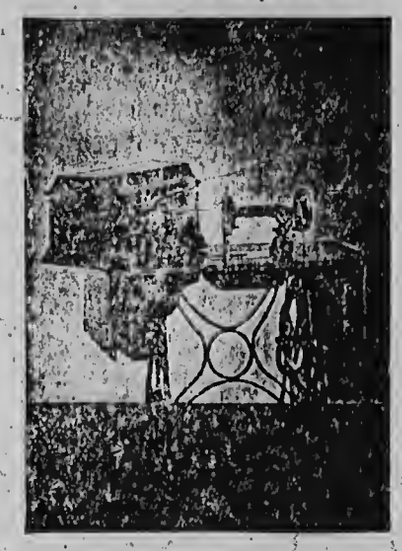
For twenty-five cents additional we will have your name engraved in gilt letters on the outside.

Send for circular. Address REV. W. C. BLACK.

P. S.—We can give no commission on renewals in connection with the above offer.

New Machine Offer.

No. 4 IMPERIAL.



THE IMPERIAL HIGH-ARM SINGER will be found the perfection of mechanism as regards simplicity, durability and adaptability to the wide range of work embraced in the general family needs.

A Handsome, Light-Running, Lock-Stitch, High-Arm Machine that will not fail to please the most fastidious. Embracing all the advantages with all desirable improvements of other first-class sewing machines, so simple in mechanism that the most inexperienced need no assistance in operating it. Book of instructions with every machine. Any child can learn to run it.

Extra Set of Attachments also free with each machine, consisting of the following: One Tucker, One Foot Ruffler, One Set of Plate Hemmers, four different widths up to ½ of an inch, One Binder and One Thread Cutter.

No. 3 Machine, drop leaf table, gothic cover, case of two drawers at one end and center drawer. Dealer's price, $24. Our price, $14.75.

No. 4 Machine, drop leaf table, gothic cover, case of two drawers at each end and center drawer. Dealer's price, $25. Our price, $15.50.

No. 5 Machine, drop leaf table, gothic cover, case of three drawers at each end, making seven drawers in all. Dealer's price, $26. Our price, $16.25.

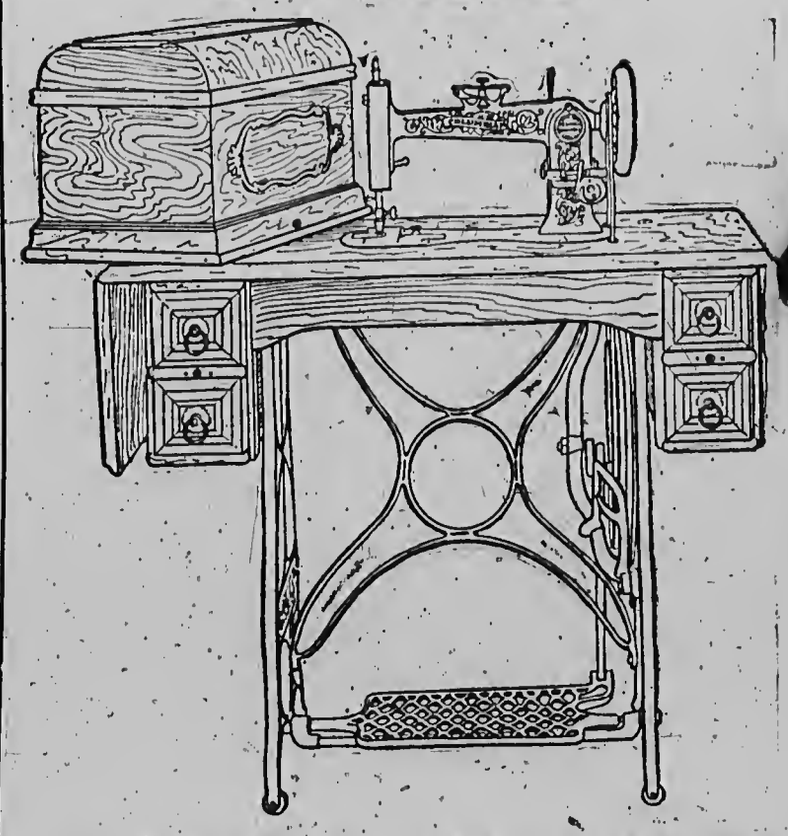
No. 4 Columbian.



EXCELLENCE OF THE COLUMBIAN.—All wearing parts are of case-hardened steel possessing great durability, and by the turning of a screw all lost motion caused by wear can be taken up. All parts are fitted so accurately that the machines are absolutely noiseless, and as easy running as fine adjustment and best mechanical skill is possible to produce. No expense or time is spared to make them perfect in every respect, as every machine passes a rigid inspection by competent men before leaving the factory.

NICKEL PLATED.—The balance wheel and many of the fine parts are nickel-plated, with other parts finely enameled and ornamented, giving it a rich appearance.

A Self-Setting Needle and Self-Threading Cylinder Shuttle are used in the Columbian High-Arm Sewing Machine. They are so simple that any one can easily operate them in a few minutes' time, as our Instruction Book is fully illustrated, showing how to do all kinds of fancy work with attachments.

Extra Attachments, in velvet-lined case, sent free with each machine: 1 Tucker, 1 Ruffler with shirring plate, 1 Hemmer set (4 widths) and Binder, 1 Braider (Foot and Slide), 1 Thread Cutter.

ADDITIONAL ACCESSORIES.—Each machine is supplied with the following outfit: 1 Hemmer and Feller (one piece), 10 Needles, 6 Bobbins, 1 Wrench, 1 Screw Driver, Oil Can with Oil, Cloth Gauge and Thumb Screw, and a Book of Instructions. The Book of Instructions is profusely illustrated, and answers the purpose of a competent teacher.

No. 3—Drop leaf, Bent cover, case of two drawers at one end and center drawer. Dealer's price, $29. Our price, $17.

No. 4—Drop leaf table, Bent cover, case of two drawers at each end and center drawer. Dealer's price, $31. Our price, $17.75.

No. 5—Drop leaf table, Bent cover, case of three drawers at each end and center drawer, making a seven-drawer machine. Dealer's price, $33. Our price, $18.50.

The chief difference between Numbers 3, 4, and 5 is in the furniture—i. e., the number of drawers. If you do not want to pay for the extra drawers, you need not do so. We sell these machines under a ten years' guarantee, by which we mean that if any part gives out by reason of any defect therein, the manufacturer will replace the same free of charge. Moreover, we allow the purchaser to test the machine ten days. If at the end of ten days you are not satisfied, you have only to drop us a postal card, and your money will be refunded.

OUR OFFER.

We will send any one of the above-described machines at the prices named, and also send the ADVOCATE free for six months. The only condition attached to this offer is that subscribers who are in arrears must first pay up all arrearages to date. It would be well to avail yourself of this offer at once, as we can not promise that it will last very long. Notice that you take no risk whatever. We take all the risking. Address REV. W. C. BLACK,

512 Camp St., New Orleans

P. S.—The machine will be shipped direct from the factory in the North.

"COTTON Culture" is the name of a valuable illustrated pamphlet which should be in the hands of every planter who raises Cotton. The book is sent FREE.

A Correction.

MR. EDITOR: Please correct the error in the publication of the fourth day's proceedings of our Annual Conference, recently held at Vicksburg, Miss., in reference to myself, in which the reporter stated that I was a missionary to the Choctaws. I was a missionary to the Choctaws in '98, but the last Conference year I was pastor of Raleigh circuit, one of the regular white circuits of the Mississippi Conference. It is due my people that this correction should be made.

Also please state that while I do not feel any special call to evangelize, yet, if any of the brethren at any time desire my service in revival meetings, or to occupy their pulpits in their absence, I will take pleasure in rendering any service of which I am capable. My address for another year will be Brandon, Miss.

Yours, etc., J. N. TUCKER.

FREE FOR EVERYBODY.

Dr. J. M. Willis, a specialist of Crawfordsville, Ind., will send free by mail to all who send him their address, a package of Pansy Compound which is two weeks' treatment, with printed instructions, and is a positive cure for constipation, biliousness, dyspepsia, rheumatism, neuralgia, nervous or sick headache, la grippe and blood poison.

M. Pierot, who has been enlisting men in Cincinnati for the Boer army, has been advised by the United States District Attorney that he must cease engaging men for that service or he will be arraigned before the United States Court.

In California.

The Golden State is seriously considering the necessity of quarantining against consumptives. This means that God's fresh air and sunshine, nowhere more entrancing and beautiful than on the Pacific slope, may be denied to the unfortunate sufferers. Thousands have been greatly benefited and many cured by the delicious atmosphere of California, and it appears a most cruel measure, even though sanctioned by medical . Many persons now in the advanced stages of consumption, and surely doomed, could have been cured by early resort to that most gracious healing remedy, MARSDEN'S PECTORAL BALM.

Resolutions sympathizing with the Boers in their fight with Great Britain and commending Senator Mason for championing their cause have been adopted by the German-American Citizens' Association of Kansas City.

A Serious Decision.

"Why CHILLIFUGE Won't Cure Chills"—is a question that brings to mind the story of a society of learned men formed for debating problems.

The question was presented: "Why a fish weighing ten pounds, put into a vessel of known weight, filled with water, did not increase the weight?" After hours of hot debate the fool of the club announced that it did, for while the debate had been going on he had tried the experiment.

Beef Steak In a Bottle.

That fresh, juicy beef, ready for digestion, can be made into a delicious cordial is a marvel, but chemistry has accomplished it. Sick people at a distance from markets and needing the nourishment afforded by beef tea can procure Dicks' NUTRITIVE ELIXIR and find it the best liquid food and stimulant known. For loss of appetite, weak digestion, debility, typhoid fever, and consumption it is invaluable.

CURES MENTAL TROUBLE AND DROPSY.

A few weeks before our second child was born, three years ago, my wife had local dropsy very bad. We had two good doctors with her but she was not relieved. Her mind became affected and we sent her to the asylum at Bolivar, Tenn., and at the end of four months we brought her home sound and well. But last summer just before our third child was born, the dropsy again appeared and we were very uneasy about her. We gave her G. F. P. and I am glad to say the dropsy disappeared and she is sound and well, and has a fine healthy boy baby.

Correspondence.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From Our Regular Correspondent.)

"The life of Mr. Moody illustrates the term 'apostle.'" Those words, spoken by Rev. Mr. Newman, pastor of the First Congregational Church, may be said to have been the keynote of the Dwight L. Moody memorial meeting, held in the Church of the Covenant. Continuing, Mr. Newman said: "It is entirely just to sum up his characteristics in that word. The thinker may be an apostle for generations to come, but Moody was an active, visible power for God during his life, and his good deeds will live after him. He was as one sent. The impression gathered from seeing him was, that some one was behind him. We know that it was God. He was not driven, but he went willingly, and fulfilled his wonderful mission. His whole life was devoted to doing God's work. We ought to be thankful for having known him. In the coming years the result of his labors will be greater than they are to-day." Dr. Tennis Hamlin, who presided, said the meeting was not an occasion for sorrow, but of joy and gladness, to celebrate a victory, the triumph of spiritual life over death. Continuing, he said: "A note of sadness or of grief would be out of sympathy with the life, the work, or the character of Dwight L. Moody. With St. Paul it might be exclaimed: 'Oh, death, where is thy sting? Oh, grave, where is thy victory?' The last words of Mr. Moody were, 'God is calling me,' and he was always ready and willing to do the bidding of the Master. So we are met to commemorate the life rather than the death of one who loved God, and has been taken hence to receive the rich reward of his labors." Dr. Greene, pastor of Calvary Baptist Church, said the life of Mr. Moody illustrated forcibly beautiful facts which might be accepted as the vital principles of Christian faith; that it is not conditioned upon intellectual development or social culture—Moody was a student of but one book, the Bible—and that religion is greater than theology, as life is greater than form. Rev. F. D. Power, pastor of the Vermont Avenue Christian Church, said that as was Enoch's intimacy with God, so was Moody's. He referred to Moody's Sunday-school teacher having said that he had no decided gospel views, and would never be able to fill any prominent part in the spreading of God's Word, and said: "Yet consider the wonders he wrought during his life-time. The great preachers, Spurgeon, Beecher, Phillips Brooks, were pillars among men, yet, in many respects Moody stood with the greatest of them all." Dr. Wilson, presiding elder of the M. E. Church, after saying that Mr. Moody had accepted God's orders, giving Jesus Christ the first place in his heart, and made the most of the opportunity given him by God, added: "Perhaps of all who have gone out from this world, there have been none whose welcome into heaven, to the throne of God, was more glorious than his."

In addition to the Moody memorial service, Rev. J. J. Muir, pastor of the E. Street Baptist Church, preached an entire sermon on the lessons of Mr. Moody's life-work, taking his text from Acts xi, 24, "For he was a good man, and full of the Holy Ghost, and of faith, and much people was added unto the Lord." He said of Mr. Moody: "He was a man of marked natural endowments. Not only had God given him a rugged constitution, but he had enriched him with gifts of no mean order. He was a man of immense energy. Whatever he did he did it with all his might, for he could not be half-hearted or only partially interested in a movement. The spirit of the man is beautifully illustrated in these words, addressed to one of his sons a little while before he died, 'I have always been an ambitious man; not ambitious to lay up wealth, but to leave you work to do.' He was a man of pronounced convictions. His hearers might not always be led to believe what Moody believed, but they did not doubt that he believed it."

Dr. Wallace Radcliffe, pastor of the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church, also devoted a sermon to Mr. Moody's life, in which he said: "Away up among the Connecticut hills lies one who lacked the advantages of higher education, but who swayed men's hearts with a mighty power. We may pick faults in the methods of the great evangelist, but we can not fail to realize the enormous influence for good exacted by Dwight L. Moody. He was a leader without a sword, a preacher without ordination, but gathering by the influence of his words were countless millions. He was building up the temple of God on the lines of the Divine Architect. His life was without mysticism or cant. It was the triumph of an honest belief, a clear sincerity, and a downright simplicity of purpose and desire. He was an honorable man of limited gifts, which were sanctified to the largest attainments."

Congress assembled to-day, and will now proceed with the work of the session, much of which is important, particularly that which will deal with our new possessions.

This week's men's meeting of the Y. M. C. A. was a thanksgiving service to celebrate the first anniversary of the occupancy of the building now owned by the association. During that year the membership has grown from 200 to 1,800. The meeting also decided to support a secretary in the foreign field, and the secretary was directed to notify the international committee in New York of that action.

OPEN DOORS.

IN THE GREAT LAKE REGION—NANZING.

BY WALTER R. LAMBUTH.

The Leagues of the Tennessee Conference did good work when they furnished the funds for building "The Epworth." Our hospital in Soochow has opened, at a low estimate, five hundred villages and towns to the preaching of the gospel. This boat was built for dispensing medicine and constant visitation in the interior, and is admirably adapted to the purpose, but, unfortunately, Dr. Park is kept so busy in Soochow that it is impossible to make frequent trips. The presiding elder has made excellent use of the boat. His official duties, however, do not give time to follow up the opportunities offered through the work of the surgeon. It is my conviction that the evangelistic side of medical work, whether in dispensaries or hospitals, has not been sufficiently emphasized. I am not alone in this opinion. The surgeon in charge should have this department under his direction; but, with his manifold duties, it is not possible to give much time to preaching and less to visitation. No one can take his place in the daily and hourly personal ministry to the sick under his charge, but a qualified missionary should be appointed in connection with every missionary hospital to follow up the religious impressions received in the chapel, the ward, or the dispensary. No missionary medical establishment is adequately manned without such provision.

Dr. and Mrs. Park, with their little daughter, Rita, together with Bro. Hearn and myself, left Soochow one rainy evening for Nanzing, a large town of fifty thousand in the silk district, about thirty miles away. Our boats passed out of the city wall through the water-gate and came to anchor, waiting for the Doctor, who had been called to see a patient. We waited long before we heard his request for a gang-plank and a lantern. A second urgent call had come before he was through with the first patient, and thus it had been day after day during my visit to Soochow. One night he was up with a sick missionary, and another ministering to a dying Chinaman. With frequent recurring chills and occasional attacks of dysentery, an iron constitution is required to meet such demands. With the additional care and instruction of eighteen medical students, it is well that Dr. Trawick, of Nashville, is under appointment to reinforce the hospital.

Getting a tow by a steam launch, which is one of the signs of progress, we were at Nanzing by eight o'clock next morning. Breakfast was an enjoyable meal, with its fried chicken, hot biscuit and coffee; prepared, too, in a cubby hole, where no one save a Chinaman could have cooked a meal. Breakfast over, red cards the size of a blotting-pad were carried by our head boatman to several of the principal families in the town who had been the Doctor's patients. These were the Changs, the Bongs, the Liews, and the Kiangs. In 1890 Bro. Dzau (C. K. Marshall) opened work here, remaining three years. Through his knowledge of medicine, and by tactful management, he got a strong hold upon the people in the town. He was followed by Bros. Hendry, Lucas, Pilley, and See Tsekia, the present pastor.

Last Spring an event occurred in the history of one of these families which first deepened the impression already made, and then threw the homes of these wealthy people open to the medical missionary and his friends.

A wedding took place in the Chang family. Two younger sons [illegible] during the nuptial festivities [illegible] all night playing dominoes and indulging in wine. Not very strong, their eyes were attacked with acute iritis. The father became greatly alarmed, especially as the disease deepened so rapidly that in a few hours both boys were helpless, and seemed to be hopelessly blind. Dr. Park had cured a Shanghai merchant, who lived in Nanzing, of an eye trouble, a few months previous, which had baffled all the native physicians. Mr. Chang was advised to seek him without delay, which he did by taking his sons aboard his steam launch and heading it for Soochow. They arrived in the night, and treatment began immediately. Not a moment was to be lost, for pus had already appeared in the anterior chamber. For three days and nights the issue was doubtful. In Bro. Marshall's home, where the young men were entertained, as well as in the home of the missionary, prayer was being offered for their recovery. The Sabbath came, and one of the boys, convinced there was no other hope, requested the pastor—Bro. Marshall—that they be prayed for during the morning service. It was done, the native congregation joining heartily in the petition for the restoration of sight. The service was hardly over before it occurred to Dr. Park that he had not tried mercurial inunction. It was the key to the situation, and before night resolution had set in. Weeks elapsed before the eyes were well, but, without question, the turning-point hinged upon the prayers of God's people, and the hand of the Christian physician ready to obey the suggestion of a higher intelligence.

It was in the home of this Chang family that we were invited to dine. The day was spent in calls upon Chinese friends, and in service in the church of which Bro. See Tse-kia is pastor. As the hours of the afternoon wore on it was clear that Dr. Park was the center of all attraction. The aged mother of a wealthy silk merchant had a carbuncle on her back that he must see; another patient came with sore eyes; a third had indigestion, and finally we had to leave him with the sick and needy while we met an appointment to preach to over a hundred gathered in the chapel. How often did I think of the divine compassion manifested toward the multitudes scattered as sheep without a shepherd! The physician, the teacher, and the preacher—each has his place, and all necessary to compass this great work which must reach every class and all manner of men. The successful missionary, like the great apostle, must be all things to all men. He, like his Master, comes to minister, not to be ministered unto. He can not neglect the poor; he should not avoid the rich.

At seven in the evening our entire party was ushered into the reception hall of Mr. Chang. It was a spacious structure, with tile floor, heavy brick walls, upon which hung marble tablets of unique and costly design, and a lofty roof sustained by solid wooden pillars highly varnished. The young men who had been cured of iritis took special pains to show their pleasure at our presence, and led us through several courts into a smaller reception-room or hall. This itself was the size of four ordinary drawing-rooms. The attraction here was two beautiful bridges in lacquered wood, upon the steps of which rested pots of chrysanthemums of about every variety and hue. The pure white were, to my eye, of exquisite beauty. These flower bridges were parallel to each other, dividing the room into three sections. We passed under the arch of the first bridge, and were given seats in the middle section at a round table, about which five young men gathered, making nine, with our party of four. For two hours we were regaled with tea, [illegible] spiced candy, ginger, watermelon [illegible], shrimps, sharks' fins, ducks' tongues, chicken, pork, pigeon eggs, soup, and on and on until the feast ended with rice, more hot tea, and towels for our faces and hands, wrung out in hot water. Then followed another hour of music on the guitar, including several duets by the music teacher and the youngest son, who exhibited no little skill in handling his instrument. Last of all, we were treated to the gramophone, adapted to Chinese airs—an instrument which must have cost hundreds of dollars.

The wealth represented by four of the young men with whom we dined that night was over nine million dollars, one of them being worth, in his own name and right, four millions; and yet the fifth—their tutor in English and an earnest Christian—sat with equal social right, though he was of obscure and humble origin. When permission was asked at the beginning of the meal to return thanks to God—that being our custom—the older Chang replied: "Our consent is readily given. That young man," pointing to their tutor, "gives thanks at every meal." His words refreshed my spirit. Here was a youth living among heathen, and surrounded by wealth, and exposed to the most subtle temptations, and yet he was true, constantly true to his convictions.

We returned to our boats, believing that the gospel has worked its way into many an interior city, is steadily leavening every class of society, and will keep for the Master's use those who have named his name. The Christian physicians and teachers are the right and left wing of the great evangelistic host. We must have more of them in China.

GOOD COMPANY.

On Friday morning, Dec. 29, the mercury running below twenty degrees, the ground frozen, we—the Admiral and I—started for my first appointment, more than thirty miles distant, and facing the north wind. Presiding eldering—who knows the full meaning until he has given it a trial? The work, the exposure, the oft discomforts, and then the responsibility and the "care of all the churches." It takes more than one year to get acquainted with its duties, and so here and now I plead, if I have failed to reach the standard set by any brother, please to remember that I'm a new beginner at the business. How many times I said, while we were rolling "gum logs" and tethering the giraffes, "I wish somebody had my job." I am convinced that there would be less censure and more sympathy if all could have the experience, just for a term or two, with the P. E. after their names; but I've strayed. What about the good company?

When fully on the way Dr. E. E. Hoss began a series of most interesting conversations on "denominational schools," impressions of Alabama and Louisiana, news from around the world, and letters from various fields of our great church. We found the Doctor so interesting that we almost forgot the distance before us, and Geo. Dewey took advantage of our forgetfulness. Dr. Tigert suggested on the floor of our Conference that he would visit any or all of us six times a year, and that if his company was not wanted at any special time, just lay him on the shelf, and he would wait with patience a convenient season, but we thought better of him, and so took him close by us on the seat. In his great modesty, however, he declined to talk much, and gave place to our versatile Bishop Galloway, who introduced us to that strong, polished man of early Methodism, Learner Blackman—a fine subject and a master painter came together. That article is worth the subscription to the Review. Next we listen to "Some First Things of Methodism." I shall use that article. Every local preacher among us should read it and act. Then our Prof. Weber discourses on his favorite, Irwin Russell. One Mr. Will T. Hale makes us think well of our Southland as he talks of her distinguished writers.

But the day is growing short, the sun is hunting his place in the west, and I must bid my distinguished companions good-day and drive for a shelter. The shades of night have fallen when we drive up to the old home of mother (the "in-law" is only technical here), and, with children and grandchildren, spend a royal night. Old Santa has just been there and left the little ones running over with joy.

A short drive Saturday morning brought us to the home of that young veteran, Bro. F. M. Williams, and soon we were off for our first Quarterly Conference. A cold, dreary day; anything but agreeable, though, at Mt. Pleasant. Here a small congregation; two churches represented by one steward each; eighth question answered, "Six dollars to pastor." If money were the object of our preaching, we must score a sad failure at this point.

Saturday night a big snow. No congregation Sunday, though the presiding elder was at the church until nearly twelve o'clock.

An appointment to occupy in Canton at 7 P. M. urged us forward; so, through snow and mud, with aching feet and tingling fingers, we push out. A short call at the home of that aged saint, Mrs. Magruder, refreshed our spirits. She is patiently and confidently suffering the will of the Master.

The people of Sharon are rejoiced at the return of Bro. Williams for the third time. The figure 4 will appear opposite his name in the appointments this year.

"First it blew, and then it snow, and then it friz;" so here I am shut in at "Uncle Tips," surrounded by many comforts, given a hearty welcome, and still enjoying good company, for, indeed, the "helpmeet" has not forgotten her training in the home of her long-honored father, Rev. D. M. Wiggins.

Snow, mud, wind forbid, but we must turn homeward. Au revoir.

EPWORTH LEAGUE DEPARTMENT.

"ALL FOR CHRIST."

REV. THOMAS B. CLIFFORD, Morgan City, La., EDITOR.

MISSISSIPPI.

REV. HENRY G. HAWKINS, Madison, Miss., ASSOCIATE EDITOR.

We had the privilege of attending the New Year devotional service of the South Side, Meridian, League. There was a talk, "Meditations on the Old Year," and one on "Resolutions for the New Year." The infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Hawkins, who are active Leaguers, was baptized at this meeting. A goodly congregation was present, and it was the first hour of Rev. L. F. Alford, the new pastor, with his people at the church.

The West End, Meridian, League showed their appreciation of their pastor, Rev. H. M. Ellis, by presenting as a Christmas gift a large and beautiful "Seth Thomas" clock. This League also sent a Christmas purse to the Orphans' Home at Water Valley.

While in Meridian we were told that at the Thanksgiving service held in the City Hall by the League Union the large auditorium overflowed, and many, probably several hundred, were turned away for lack of seats. Let us learn thus to claim occasions for the League and its work. It is known that the League is a wheel of the church, and, therefore, the church and Christianity get the credit for what the League does, as is not the case with some other good societies. There are many associations outside of the church organized by Christian men and women for noble purposes, and doing work which the churches ought to do. And the churches are blamed because they are not doing this work. Let the League go ahead with its charities, its instruction of the youth, its prayer and praise.

In Japan some five years ago there was a stripling, Ota Gisaburo by name, teaching at five or six dollars per month a night school for children too poor to attend the public schools. On each Sabbath, at about sundown, he would assemble his students and several scores of other children at the chapel near the sea to sing gospel songs and study of the Lamb of God. Never have we known any Sunday-school worker to prepare himself more thoroughly and to talk more enthusiastically upon gospel themes. Therefore, it is not surprising to read in the list of appointments of the last Japan Conference of the M. E. Church, South, that Ota Gisaburo is made pastor at Kobe, the most important of our stations in Japan. He is also a member of the Epworth League Board of that Conference.

MISSISSIPPI LEAGUERS—NOTICE!

Send in to D. G. Patton, Jackson, Miss., the five-cent assessment for State work. Please do it now, for the State Conference is coming, and we need it. Let pastors, League presidents and secretaries take notice. Yours in the work,

H. WALTER FEATHERSTUN,
State Pres.

To the Leaguers of Louisiana.

The State League Conference will convene at Arcadia, La., April 26 to 29, inclusive.

We want every League in the State to be represented at Conference, and hope they will begin now to arrange to send delegates. The Leaguers and people of Arcadia are ready and willing to do all in their power to make it a great success, and extend to every Leaguer hearty invitation to be present.

Yours, "All for Christ,"

WORDS.

Words are things of little cost,
Quickly spoken, quickly lost;
We forget them, but they stand
Witnesses at God's right hand.
And their testimony bear
For us or against us there.

Oh, how often ours has been
Idle words and words of sin,
Words of anger, scorn and pride,
Or desire our faults to hide,
Envious tales, or strife unkind,
Leaving bitter thoughts behind!

Grant us, Lord, from day to day,
Strength to watch and grace to pray,
May our lips, from sin set free,
Love to speak and sing of thee,
Till in heaven we learn to raise
Hymns of everlasting praise.

Correspondence.

FOREST DISTRICT.

To the Preachers in the Forest District of the Mississippi Conference of the M. E. Church, South—

DEAR BRETHREN: There are some matters to which your attention is called:

1. The necessity to begin at once the taking of the collections ordered by the Annual Conference. We should not await the action of the district stewards. The assessments will not be less than they were last year on any charge, but rather a little more. The good crops and the good prices should move our people to ready and generous response to all the demands of the church. We can meet them in full.

2. See that every Sunday-school is organized at once into a missionary society according to ¶ 246 of the Discipline. If a superintendent refuses or fails to comply with the law, let complaint be made at the first Quarterly Conference thereafter. We are not to mend or break our rules, but to keep them.

3. Keep the Twentieth Century Educational Fund before the minds of the people, and strive to lay it on their hearts and consciences. We must not be laggards in this great movement. Let us press to the front. Our people have the means, and only lack the willing minds and loving hearts. "Turn on the light."

4. It is the duty of the preachers, traveling and local, to attend the Missionary Institute to be held in Newton, Jan. 31 and Feb. 1. This Institute is held in accordance with ¶ 356 of our Discipline.

5. That the preachers in charge, in planning their work for this Conference year, make arrangements to attend the commencement exercises of our District High School at Montrose. These exercises usually embrace the last Sunday in May. This school is the property of our district, and is well worthy of liberal patronage.

6. That as many of our pastors as possible plan to attend the commencement exercises of East Mississippi Female College at Meridian, and of Millsaps College at Jackson. These are among our Annual Conference schools, and can not be too highly commended or too liberally patronized. We need to become better acquainted with these excellent institutions of learning.

7. Circulate briskly and promptly the petitions to the Legislature of Mississippi for the enactment of needed laws against the desecration of the Sabbath, and the oppression of laborers and other employees by railroad corporations.

8. See to the organization of Woman's Foreign and Woman's Home Mission Societies in every pastoral charge. When the 4,000 women, members of our church in this district, consecrate themselves, their time, talents and earthly stores, to the service of God, the advancement of Christ's kingdom, and the helping of their needy sisters at home and abroad, we will be amazed at the power now latent and useless.

9. Let us begin with the new year, and press the work vigorously in every direction and along all lines, our watchword being, "All collections in full, and a sweeping revival in every pastoral charge!" Why should we not have one thousand conversions and accessions in this district this year? To this end let us preach the old doctrines of Methodism and of the Bible, and stem and turn back the tide of antinomianism which is strewing this section of Mississippi with moral wrecks. The people need sound doctrine and the full gospel. Let us live nearer to God.

And the very God of peace sanctify you wholly, and I pray God your whole spirit and soul and body be preserved blameless unto the coming of Lord Jesus Christ (I. Thess. v,

FROM REV. CHAS. F. SMITH.

MR EDITOR: Herein is my renewal for 1900. While all the Advocates that come to me are good, I have a long time interest in the old "NEW ORLEANS," it being the first church paper with which I became acquainted. I'm sure it was a factor in fixing my attention more firmly to the church, and its weekly visits have done much towards keeping alive my interests in things just across the great Mississippi. My love for Texas has grown with the years, but my interest in Mississippi, in State, and schools, and church, does not grow less. The Mississippi and East Texas Conferences was recently, in session at the same time. It would not be easy to say in which I felt the greatest concern.

Bishop Hargrove held all the Texas Conferences, this being his fourth "round" in Texas. Bishop Galloway was to have met him at Timpson, to be present at our educational rally. While his failure to arrive was much regretted, we counted ourselves fortunate in having with us Rev. Seth Ward, of the Texas Conference, who made what may be truly called a great speech. The collection amounted to $4,250. This added to $4,000 already reported, is no mean showing for a small Conference. I believe that East Texas will raise her part of the million and a half.

Our church schools, for the most part, report increased patronage over last year, but they are in great need of money, and must have it, or repeat a sad history. In little more than fifty years twenty-eight Baptist and thirty-two Methodist schools in Texas have had a beginning and an ending—they were, but are not.

To-day I received a copy of the Journal of the Northwest Texas Conference, which contains the memoir of the man whom I first remember as "presiding elder," and, I may add, the first preacher I ever heard presenting the claims of the church paper to the congregation. It was "quarterly meeting" in the old "Academy" on the hill at Morton, where the excellencies of the paper were mentioned, and the paper itself held up to the view of all. The paper was the Jackson Methodist; the preacher was Price. Bro. Price died at his home in Weatherford, Sept. 29, 1899. Those who knew him long ago will read with interest the following extract from his memoir: "He was truly a Methodist in doctrine and polity. He was ever ready to drive away heresy and strange doctrine. He met on the platform representative men from different denominations, and never did the Methodists have cause to blush in shame at his defense of our doctrines. He was a calm and wise debater. . . . Perhaps no man has done more to transmit to our posterity a pure gospel in the bounds of this Conference than our departed brother. . . . He was not always understood. Sometimes even Methodists thought him too belligerent. But he was honest, sincere, conscientious, doing what he believed to be for the glory of God without reference to current opinion."

When, day by day, Bro. Price was growing weaker, he remarked that the Lord was letting him down easy. So our people continue to die well.

Yours, etc., CHAS. F. SMITH.

TO THE NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

DEAR BRETHREN: The Board of Missions, at the last session of our Conference, made it the duty of the president to use every possible means for creating a deeper interest in this important work. We are well aware of the fact that there are many interests of the church, and they are all of importance. We are glad to note, too, that pastors and people are responding in a measure to all these interests. But we can not afford, even at this time, to neglect or lose sight of this great work so sacredly committed to us.

It is a good thing to fortify and build up at home, but not to the neglect of our work abroad. This contradicts the principle of success in the kingdom of Jesus Christ. He said, "Whosoever will save his life shall lose it; and whosoever will lose his life for my sake shall find it." This is as true of the church as of individuals.

We are anxious this year to make a better showing than we did last. In order to this, we ask that special attention be given to this in the beginning of the year. The first, and about the best, thing every pastor can do is to send to Nashville, to the Mission Rooms, and get two or three hundred missionary leaflets. They will cost nothing but the postage. This you can pay out of the funds collected if you are not willing to pay it out of your own.

Sow down your charge with these; then preach on the subject. We ask that every pastor take the collection for missions as early as possible. If only half of the assessment is paid, it will save the interest, and this will be no small item, and then it will be a long stride toward full collections at the close of the year. We hope to have a report from every charge in the Conference by the first of June.

Send all money to the treasurer, Rev. J. H. Shumaker, at Kosciusko, Miss. He will make a full report of what has been done at that time.

Miss. Conf....Mrs. E. D. Jones...Carlisle, Miss
La. Conf.....Mrs. T. P. Fullilove..

I would say a few words to my readers anent a subject which strikes me as important. That is the practice among our various societies—notably auxiliaries—of placing in offices the pastors' wives or daughters. We preacher-folk appreciate your confidence, and thank you for the compliment you thus confer upon us, and having learned with our good husbands and fathers to entrust graciously to the "appointing power," we step into harness and start on.

Now, it occurs to me that the course above indicated discounts unduly the ability of our lay women (grant me this word, which suits my purpose so well), among whom are many valuable lives, dormant or partially inactive, only because not called into service by their associates. Like stones in a quarry, they wait their rich possibilities, hidden from view, till taken hence by the hand of others, and made ready by being taught their own capability. These lay sisters, or erstwhile "plain members," if they prefer that term, may—yea, will—with credit to their auxiliaries, benefit to themselves, and glory to God, fill the offices, if, only like the stones for the beautiful temple—each made ready for its place—they are prepared by prayerful encouragement to attempt each service for their Lord. In this fact lies one argument against confining most of the auxiliary offices to families of pastors.

Secondly, all may work well, and every department move grandly forward under the old regime till Conference time. Methodist preachers are itinerant preachers; hence, a move at the end of one, or, at most, four years. Then, those members who have learned to depend on this or that officer, look into each other's face with questioning expression, and oftimes say: "What shall we do?" "Our president is gone," or, "Our secretary is gone. How can we fill Sister A's place?"

This break in the Master's work might easily be avoided by enlisting as officers women who are at home, subject to no changes of this character. Wives of preachers (pastors or presiding elders) being elected district secretaries occurs to me as being still more inexpedient, from the fact that a district secretary's field is larger, her removal more keenly felt, and her place less easily supplied. Do not understand me to wish our preachers' families to be useless or idle. Far from it. They should gladly labor in any and all places, being instant in season and out of season, ever ready to answer to the Master's calling, "Here am I," all the time helping to develop these same lay-sisters into useful, fruit-bearing workers. Mind you, I do not say, never allow pastors' families to hold office, but make their doing so the exception, and not the rule. Where a resident member can be secured for the place, she should be encouraged to accept, and assisted to discharge its obligations. Illustrations in proof of the above positions might be given, but the suggestions are left for your consideration and future action.

One of our district secretaries, a preacher's wife, had wrought a while, and when (from her written report) she seemed to grasp the situation, and gave promise of a successful year, by the removal of her husband to another pastoral charge, must either give that work into the hands of another, or perform it less satisfactorily to herself by correspondence.

"I left home on Friday for Ackerman. Arriving at dark, I was met by the pastor, and kindly entertained at the parsonage. Saturday I spent walking over the town visiting the ladies (reversing the usual order), preparatory to organizing a W. F. M. Society. Secured several names, with promise of co-operation. Sunday afternoon talked to the Juveniles. We have a fine band there of fifty members under the leadership of Miss Virginia Worsham, lady manager. She has had discouragements, but at last is realizing that 'the reward is to the faithful.' Although they have just finished their Conference pledge, when asked for help on a scholarship, that brave band of young workers readily promised to send in $10 by March. The pastor kindly allowing us his evening hour, I talked to the large audience of our work, its origin and progress. At the close organized with fifteen members. Monday I went to Kosciusko. Found that no announcement had been made; hence, failed to see as many as desired. Still, held a meeting at night, and delivered my message to the few, and left the result with the Lord. The next time I pass that way I hope they will be ready. Tuesday, about twelve o'clock, found me at Sallis. The preacher happened to be at the train, and I went to the parsonage. The people thought nothing could be accomplished, but, after dinner, while Bro. B. rode around to announce my arrival, I set out on foot to hunt up the women. Walked till sundown and secured several names and promises to attend the services at night. Audience was small, but attentive, and I reorganized. I secured several subscribers to Woman's Missionary Advocate and eight to The Little Worker. Durant came next, where I stopped on Wednesday. We have a noble band of women there, and the Juveniles, under Miss Cecile Ramsey's leadership, are succeeding finely. The two societies there have pledged $40 for the support of a girl in Mexico. For young organizations this showing is most gratifying. The annual meeting will be an inspiration to our workers, and doubtless will prove a blessing to Durant." Sister Lowe gives us evidence of the magnetism of personal contact. Many might be enlisted in the work for others' good if we, as Christians, see them face to face, and make the matter personal and urge immediate action.

THE PARSON'S BARREL.

BY REV. THEODORE L. CUYLER, D. D.

"Well, parson," said Deacon Goodgold to his pastor, "that last Sunday morning's sermon was number one prime. May I ask you which end of the barrel that came out of? Your barrel is like the widder's in Scripter; it never seems to give out."

"I am glad that my sermon suited you," replied the genial dominie, "for I got part of that at your house, part came from Neighbor B——'s, and part from Mrs. C——, in whose sick-room I spent an hour, and one hint in it came from your boy Frank, who rode by my house on 'old gray,' without any saddle or bridle. I picked up some of the best things in that discourse during an afternoon spent in pastoral visiting."

Parson Honeywell was a shrewd man, and a faithful, godly pastor. He had not a great many books, and his family increased faster than his library. His Bible he had at his finger's ends; it was his one great unexhausted store-house of heavenly knowledge. But he also had a book of human knowledge second only to God's Word. In the forenoon he studied his Bible, and in the afternoon he sallied out with horse and buggy, and studied his people. He rode with his eyes open, finding illustrations—like his Divine Master—from the birds of the air, the flowers of the field, and the sower or plowman by the wayside. His mind was on his sermon all the week. If he saw a farmer letting his team "blow" under a road-side tree, he halted, and had a chat with him. He observed the farmer's style of thought, gave him a few words of golden counsel, and drove on, leaving the farmer something to think of and something to love his pastor for also. If he saw a boy on his way from school, he took the lad into his buggy and asked him some questions, which set the youngster to studying his Bible when he got home. Parson Honeywell caught his congregation when they were young.

Deacon Goodgold was curious to know more about the way in which his minister had gathered up that last Sunday's sermon. "Well," replied the parson, "I was studying on the subject of trusting God in times of trial. First, I went to the fountain-head, for my Bible never runs dry. I studied my text thoroughly, comparing Scripture with Scripture; I prayed over it, for a half-hour of prayer is worth two hours of study in getting light on the things of God. After I had put my heads and doctrinal points on paper, I sallied out to find my practical observations among our congregation. I rode down to your house, and your wife told me her difficulties about the doctrine of assurance of faith. From there I went over to your neighbor B——'s house; he is terribly out down since he failed in business. He told me that, with the breaking down of his son's health, and his own breaking down in the store, he could hardly hold his head up, and he had begun to feel awfully rebellious towards his heavenly Father. I gave him a word or two of cheer, and noted down just what his difficulties were. From his store I went to see poor Mrs. C——, who is dying slowly by consumption. She showed me a favorite flower that she had put into her window-sill to catch the sunshine, and said that her flower had been a daily sermon to her about keeping her soul in the sunshine of her Savior's countenance. Her talk braced me up, and gave me a good hint. Then I called on Widow M——, who always needs a word of sympathy. Before I came away she told me that her daughter Mary could not exactly understand what it was to trust Christ, and was finding no peace, although she had been under deep conviction of sin for several weeks. I had her daughter called in, and I drew from her all her points of difficulty. I read to her such texts of Scripture as applied to her case, prayed with her, and then started for home. Your boy rode by my house on the old horse, who went along without any bridle, and stopped when he got to the bars that lead to the pasture.

"Before I went to bed I worked in all the material that I had gathered during the afternoon, and I studied out the solution to the difficulties of your wife and of your neighbor B——, and of the troubled daughter of Widow M——, and I wove the answers to such doubts and difficulties into my sermon. The cheerful experiences of good Mrs. C—— in her sick chamber helped me mightily, for faith in action is worth several pounds of it in theory. I went to my pulpit last Sunday pretty sure that my sermon would help three or four persons there, and if it would fit their cases, I judged that it would fit thirty or forty more cases. For human nature is pretty much alike, and sometimes, when I preach a discourse that comes home close to my own heart's wants, I take it for granted that it will come to plenty of other hearts in the congregation."

"Yes, parson," said the deacon, "your sermons cut a pretty broad swath. I often feel 'thou art the man' when you hit some of my besettin' sins. I have often been wantin' to ask you why your sermon barrel has never giv' out, as poor Parson Bounty's barrel did before you came here. He always giv' us about the same sermon, and as I set away back by the door, it got to be mighty thin by the time it got to my pew."

Parson Honeywell turned pleasantly to the deacon and said: "I will tell you what the famous old Dr. Bellamy once said to a young minister who asked him how he should always have material for his sermons. The shrewd old doctor said: 'Young man, fill up the cask, fill up the cask, and then if you tap it anywhere, you will get a full stream, but if you put in very little, it will dribble, dribble, dribble, and you may tap and tap and get precious little after all.' I always get my people to help me fill up my cask. Good afternoon, deacon."—Guardian.

The Christian Life.

DIVINE DISCONTENT.

We moralize, we philosophize about the discontent of man. We give little reasons for it, but the real reason of it all is this, that which everything lying behind it really signifies: that man is greater than his circumstances, and that God is always calling him to come up to the fullness of his life. Dreadful will be the day when the world becomes contented, when one great universal satisfaction spreads itself over the world. Sad will be the day for every man when he becomes absolutely contented with the life that he is living, with the thoughts that he is thinking, with the deeds that he is doing; when there is not forever beating at the doors of his soul some great desire to do something larger, which he knows that he was meant and made to do because he is the child of God. And there is the real secret of the man's struggle with his sins. It is not simply the hatefulness of the sin, but it is the dim perception, the deep suspicion, the real knowledge at the heart of the man that there is a richer and a sinless region in which it is really meant for him to dwell.—Phillips Brooks.

SPIRITUAL GRAFTS.

Paul, in the eleventh chapter of Romans, has suggestive thoughts on spiritual grafting. There is not a little mystery about natural grafting. It is a mystery that the sap of an ugly, sour, inferior tree, flowing up into and through a graft of good stock, should produce noble apples or superior pears. But it is true. Now, the sinner is a miserable, gnarly, sour apple tree. He can not bear good, sweet, superior fruit. But let him be grafted with a scion of the tree of life, and let that scion have a fair chance, and it will grow up, bearing altogether different fruit from what the old tree produced. The same old roots and stump are there, but it is not they which bear the fruit: it is the new graft which yields the sweet, superior, saintary fruit. Are you a graft?—Zion's Herald.

If a Christian man, who has known the blessing of forgiveness, is so little affected by it as to have no imitation of God's mercifulness in his own heart and life, the burden of sin is laid on him, and he falls from his state of grace. Our forgiveness of others is not the condition of our obtaining forgiveness for ourselves, but obtaining forgiveness is a condition precedent to true forgiveness of others. We must have "obtained mercy" before we are "merciful," but we must be merciful if we are to keep the mercy obtained; and unless we forgive as and because we have been forgiven, we have but a superficial and uncertain hold of forgiveness. Unless Christ is the inspiration and the pattern of our conduct, we have no right to suppose that he is the bringer to us of God's forgiving mercy.—Alex. McLaren, D. D.

Disconnected from the engine, the machinery is perfectly useless. But let the connection be made, and the machinery goes easily and without effort, because of the mighty power there is behind it. Thus the Christian life, when it is the development of the divine life working within, becomes an easy and natural life. Most Christians live on a strain because their wills are not fully in harmony with the will of God, the connection is not perfectly made at every point, and it requires an effort to move the machinery.—Hannah Whitall Smith.

Cultivate the art of forgetting. Forget those things which are behind, in so far as they may hinder earnest reaching forth into the things which are before. Forget your wrongs, your discouragements, the slight which you have suffered, the worries which once troubled you, but forget not the Lord's benefits. By a wise selection of the fittest take your helpful memories with you and, so far as possible, leave the hindering ones behind.—Advance.

We all try to get too much happiness from material things, yet the world can never give the bliss we seek. If the intellect is ever happy, it must have thought; our emotional natures, our affections can not live on material things; the heart sickens, the soul weakens, without love. If we neglect our intellectual and moral life, we will sooner die physically.—Rev. Geo. Shaffer, D. D.

RESOLUTIONS.

Since we have learned of the death of our dear Sister Smith, wife of our beloved pastor, whom we esteemed very highly, not only for her love of the church, faith in God, and consecration to his service, but for her womanly modesty, her true friendship, her pious conversation and Christian example, feeling that we have met but few such in life;

Resolved, That in the death of Sister Smith we have lost a dear friend, the church a faithful servant, Bro. Smith a devoted wife, and Miss Mattie a fond mother, whose loss is irreparable.

Resolved, That we sympathize with our dear brother in this, his sad bereavement, and with Miss Mattie in her great sorrow, and pray God's blessing on each of them, comforting and strengthening them by the presence of his Holy Spirit, that in the midst of their sorrow they may feel that our God does all things well; that though the shadows are deep, and dark clouds lower about their pathway, that there is light on the other shore, and that we point them to those precious promises in the Word of God, giving us hope and assurance that the faithful shall meet again, and "know each other better" in that land of peace and joy.

Resolved, That these resolutions be spread on the Minutes of the Quarterly Conference Record, and the recording steward be instructed to send a copy to Bro. Smith and his daughter, Miss Mattie.

RESOLUTIONS.

Whereas, Our heavenly Father, in his providence, has removed from our midst our friend and co-worker, Mrs. Mary Joe Griffith; therefore, be it

Resolved, That in her death the Wesleyan Society of First Methodist Church, Jackson, Miss., has lost a good and efficient worker.

Resolved, That we bow in submission to God's will, knowing that he doeth all for the best.

Resolved, That we sympathize deeply with the bereaved ones, and trust that they may find comfort from the same source that sustained David in his affliction; that, although our loved ones can not come to us, we can go to them.

Resolved, That these resolutions be recorded on the Minutes of the Wesleyan Society, and copies be sent to the sorrowing family, and to the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE for publication.

FROM THE WORK.

KEATCHIE, LA.

Upon our return from Conference we were very cordially received by the people of this (Caddo) charge. This is our second year here, and we hope to make it the most successful of the two years.

We were the subject of a genuine pounding on the twenty-third ultimo, and received many valuable presents in the way of "the real substantials of life." Many thanks to our friends for this expression of kindness and appreciation of us. As they have thus ministered to us in temporal things we shall try to minister to them in spiritual things.

I returned from Conference with "la grippe," and for several days was unfit for work. We now have measles, but hope to be up and at work soon.

My first Quarterly Conference will embrace the third Sabbath in this month at Greenwood, La.

We hope to have a gracious season of grace at that time. Dr. J. T. Sawyer, our presiding elder, will be with us and will no, doubt, give us a strong gospel, as he always does.

I shall do what I can for the ADVOCATE during the year.

Many good wishes to you, and I pray God's richest blessings upon your work. JAS. O. BENNETT.

MAYERSVILLE, MISS.

As this is New Year's Day, I thought I would turn over a new leaf, and write more to the ADVOCATE. I am starting out in a new field, a new week, a new year. I reached here last Saturday just as it commenced to snow, after having traveled sixty-five miles through mud in the Yazoo and Mississippi swamps. However, I had with me my oldest son, eight years old, who rode his donkey all the way through, and helped to dispel the loneliness of that long trip through mud and swamp.

After four years' stay I found it a real trial to leave Flora. My last year there and my ministry came to an end in a way that I never expected. After the twenty-first of October, the day I was pronounced with a case of yellow fever, I did not fill another appointment, nor did I see but a few of my people till one week before Conference. I did not hold a service at Flora until after Conference, and to the many good people that I did not get to see I take this method of saying "Good bye." I was never better treated than at Flora, and I leave many good friends there, tried friends that I never want to forget. One thing the merchants of Flora do for the minister that I never knew of them doing anywhere else: they sell the minister all his goods at actual cost. I know that my good Bro. Lewis will fall into good hands. I have been kindly received here, and hope to do the best work of my life. I have seen something of these good people before. Then, I have such a good man to follow—one that makes things pleasant for the next preacher. Bro. Griffin did a good work here, and everyone is loud in their praises of him.

WATERFORD, MISS.

We have moved into the parsonage at Waterford, though half of our household goods are behind yet. We engaged two wagons to carry our stuff through the country. One wagon was there according to promise, but the other failed to show up.

We felt very much out of doors when we arose Thursday morning and found it raining too hard to carry out our plans. Everything packed up except the beds we slept on; nothing to cook, and nothing to cook it on. We went to the store and bought our dinner; loaded and started the wagon that was there. Then we drove down to Dr. Montgomery's, where we enjoyed his hospitality until morning. The north wind was blowing fearfully cold, but we started and drove until wife and baby got too cold to travel; then we stopped with Bro. and Sister Henderson; warmed ourselves, partook of a nice, warm dinner, after which we started for Waterford, carrying with us the tokens of Sister Henderson's kindness in the shape of a shoulder of meat, which she gave us.

We reached the parsonage just at sundown. Bro. Brooks had just unloaded us some wood, so we soon had a fire, but Mrs. Sullivan and little Mary have not yet entirely recovered from the effect of that cold day's drive yet.

We have but few people in Waterford. Methodists, Presbyterians and Baptists are all represented, but all call the Methodist pastor "our preacher." They prove their faith by their works, for, as Christmas was coming on, they all came together, and stirred up the fowls, and started the turkeys to flying. Two nice ones lit in our coop. Then came in the sacks and boxes containing meal, potatoes, sugar, cakes, and canned goods; also meats, such as ham, shoulder, backbones, spare-rib, and sausage; so we are not lacking for something to eat this Christmas.

We went to our appointment the second Sunday, but, on account of bad weather and other disadvantages, we never preached on the work until yesterday, when we preached at Waterford and Asbury to two small, but intelligent congregations. E. C. SULLIVAN.

Prices for materials used in the manufacture of bells are steadily rising, indicating an early advance in the price of the finished product. The C. S. Bell Co., Hillsboro, Ohio, among the largest bell founders of the world, are still disregarding the market and maintaining their former low price list, yet steadfastly keeping up the quality as of old. The Bell company cast bells for church, school, alarm, farm and factory, from 50 to 3,000 pounds weight, of a steel alloy that gives great strength, power and durability. The Bell company offer churches a large donation on orders and furnish blanks for taking the subscription. All these bells are fully warranted, and thirty days' trial allowed. A large illustrated catalogue is offered free to those interested in the purchase of a bell for any purpose.

Beef Steak in a Bottle.

That fresh, juicy beef, ready for digestion, can be made into a delicious cordial is a marvel, but chemistry has accomplished it. Sick people at a distance from markets and needing the nourishment afforded by beef tea can procure Dicks' NUTRITIVE ELIXIR and find it the best liquid food and stimulant known. For loss of appetite, weak digestion, debility, typhoid fever, and consumption it is invaluable.

SUCCESS AND SACRIFICE.

Though sacrifice is distasteful to all, and is usually avoided as far as possible, yet it is strikingly apparent that worthy achievement in any direction is in large measure the fruit thereof. One of the uniform and fundamental laws of success is the willingness to forego pleasure and comfort, and to endure toil, suffering and hardship in the discharge of duty, and in the accomplishment of one's aims and aspirations. The old adage, "No pains, no gains," contains the terse statement of a great truth. In all lines of effort, both religious and secular, the grandest results are achieved, almost without exception, at the cost of great labor and sacrifice. What is cheaply obtained is usually worth little. As Mr. O. S. Marden rightly says: "Work is difficult in proportion as the end to be obtained is high and noble. God has put the highest price upon the greatest worth." The crown of reward lies at the end of the pathway of self-denial. He who bravely and patiently bears the cross of disappointment and suffering at last finds that it has changed to the golden sceptre of honor and victory.

While not every act or course of sacrifice succeeds in its design, on the other hand no true success is purchased without it. The men who have wrought most nobly in the arena of life have been those who shrank from no danger, who acted as if the duty or task they undertook was of more importance almost than life itself. That master sculptor, Michael Angelo, was so in love with his work that he slept in his clothes, in order to be ready for toil as soon as he awoke. We are told that he also kept a block of marble in his bed-room, that he might labor thereupon in the night when he could not sleep. Late in life Daniel Webster testified that he had worked for more than twelve hours a day for fifty years. It is stated that Gibbon "wrote his memoir nine times, and the first chapters of his celebrated history eighteen times." No wonder that his writings have won for him such fame!

Nothing so inspires confidence and enthusiasm in any cause or enterprise as the exhibition, by leader or servant, of the spirit of self-sacrifice.

The splendid heroism of Joan of Arc, Maid of Orleans, followed by her martyrdom in behalf of her country, did more than all else to rally the disconraged soldiers of France, and to prepare the way for final victory over the English. The glorious liberty of which we boast is the result of centuries of struggling against tyranny, and has cost the blood of countless thousands of patriots.

Christianity was not planted in the world by danger fearing, ease loving disciples, but by men and women of heroic mould, who, like the Apostle Paul, counted not their lives dear unto themselves, and who were ready to suffer the loss of all things that Christ's kingdom might be advanced. As one writer asserts: "Never yet was there a martyr whose death did not advance the cause he advocated tenfold more than could possibly have been accomplished by his voice or pen." Nor is the gospel, even in this age of enlightenment, ever an aggressive, regenerative force, save where it is advocated by disciples who have the martyr spirit, who are willing to brave hardship and reproach and persecution in the warfare against the powers of darkness. The dainty-souled and flesh-pleasing are not the ones who win victories for the Master. The vicious and the outcast are not rescued from sin, save by the efforts of those whose hearts so overflow with love that they shrink not from mingling with the vile. The gospel of help and of hope is not carried to the jails and poor houses and slums and fever camps, save by those who, like Elizabeth Fry and Florence Nightingale and Clara Barton, scorn the pleasures and honors of the world, and count ministry, however costly it may be, their highest joy. A mere show of professional interest on the part of the Christian scarce makes an impression upon the worldly and godless; but practical Christianity of the "university settlement" type, which causes the erring and unfortunate to feel the heart-throb of genuine sympathy, and to perceive the wonderful condescension and sacrifice to which love prompts, achieves results nothing short of marvelous. "Brainerd so loved the heathen," as Bishop Galloway expresses it, "that without their salvation nothing could make him happy." Nor did any missionary ever live a more heroic and self-renouncing life than he.

Sermons that are the product of earnest thought and prayer, and that, in their deliverance, exhibit a consuming zeal for the conversion of sinners, are the ones that stir the heart, and lead men to repentance and righteousness. Said a young preacher on a certain occasion: "I prepared that sermon in half an hour, and preached it at once, and thought nothing of it." "In that," said an older minister, "your hearers are at one with you, for they also thought nothing of it."

A life that is little acquainted with self-abnegation and sacrifice for the good of others is almost certain to lack in joy and contentment. Not that peace of conscience and the favor of God can be purchased by acts of penance and by asceticism; but it should ever be borne in mind that self-sacrifice and cross-carrying are necessary, not only as evidence of the reality of our consecration, but also to the perfection thereof. The greater the hardships and difficulties overcome both in business and in religion, the sweeter is success and the nobler is our triumph.

DR. C. G. ANDREWS DEAD.

Rev. C. G. Andrews, D. D., died at his residence in Meridian on Sunday morning, the seventh, having been stricken with pneumonia about a week previous. He was buried at Rose Hill Cemetery, Meridian, on the eighth. The funeral services were conducted by Bishop Galloway, assisted by Dr. J. M. Weems.

He joined the Mississippi Conference on trial in 1858. He soon took high rank, and for many years he has been its leading spirit. He has been a delegate to every General Conference for more than twenty-five years, and for about the same period has filled the position of secretary of the Annual Conference.

He was for many years president of Centenary College. He filled most of the leading stations in the Conference and also spent a number of years in the presiding eldership. In every position he was diligent and faithful. He gathered many sheaves for the Master's garner. His death will cause profound sorrow to a large circle of friends. No minister in Mississippi was more widely known or more generally beloved. A fitting memoir will doubtless appear in due time.

Our profoundest sympathies go out to his family in their sore bereavement. But they sorrow not as those who have no hope. They will meet him again in that land where "farewell" is an unknown word.

Since the above was in type we have received a note dated Jan. 8, from Rev. D. P. Bradford, from which we quote as follows: 'Our hearts are all sadness to-day, as we must soon bury that great man whom all our Southern Methodism delighted to honor—Dr. C. G. Andrews. He died Sunday morning at 3:30. His last sermon was preached at East End Church, Dec. 31. He was so weak that he sat while preaching. As we looked into his face a strange sadness came over us, for some were impressed that this was his last message."

Rev. Sam Small, of evangeliat fame, is planning to start a paper soon in Havana, Cuba.

SENSIBLE ADVICE.

The Presbyterian, of Philadelphia, says: "In his youthful days a minister of large experience was disposed to give considerable prominence to stating objections to Bible truths and doctrines, and then answering them, as he thought, in a satisfactory way; but his good wife sometimes called him to account for this mode of preaching, not that she regarded his reply lacking in vigor and adaptation, but because he thus acquainted many people with objections to sound teaching which they would not otherwise have known, and some of them would look upon these as something new, and in thinking of them would pay little attention how they were answered. Her idea was to present the truth clearly and forcibly, and let its positive and scriptural statement do its own work of conviction and impression. There is force in her criticism."

Yes, a good deal of force. Her advice to her husband was very sensible. I have heard pastors who made a practice of telling their hearers the views which certain scholars set up against certain scriptural statements, or the generally accepted meanings of the text in hand, and it was difficult to decide, after the pastor had gotten through his sermon, just what he had been saying. I have also heard ministers quote the opinions of various commentators and scholars concerning the text, and there was so much of such matter that the minds of the ordinary hearers were much confused. The most that they could recollect was that there were conflicting opinions, but which side had the advantage they were in doubt about. But a more serious thing is the repetition of ideas and arguments that are hostile to the real truth itself. Error is often advertised in this way. Moreover, the hearers need and want plain gospel truth dealt out to them in a clear, straightforward form, so that they may be fed and spiritually stimulated. No objection lies against quoting strong and scholarly explanations of such texts and passages as evidently need them, for the sake of rightly enlightening the minds of the hearers, but these should not take the place of plain and positive presentations of gospel truth to both saint and sinner. C. H. WETHERBE.

MISSION STUDY CLASS FOR FEBRUARY AND MARCH.

Arrangements have been made for the Leagues to study "Our Island Empire," the book on missions in the Epworth League reading course, during the months of February and March. Dr. O. E. Brown, of Vanderbilt University, will furnish weekly during these two months an outline series of studies on this book for publication in the Epworth Era. Let every League in the bounds of the church meet at once and arrange to organize a class to pursue this series of mission studies. Dr. Brown for some years has had charge of the mission study class at Wesley Hall; he was also a missionary in China for some years until the church recalled him to take the position which he now occupies as professor in the theological department of the University. He is every way qualified to give the Leagues the very best on this subject.

Remember, the studies will appear weekly in the Epworth Era, beginning with February and continuing through the month of March. First vice-presidents and missionary committees will take due notice.

PREACHERS' MEETING.

The New Orleans Preachers' Meeting, of this week, was unusually interesting. The personelle of the meeting consisted of the ministers of the Methodist Churches. Dr. A. D. McVoy, of Alexandria; the editor of the ADVOCATE, and his assistant, Rev. M. M. Black. The subject discussed was, "The Best Method of Studying the Life of Christ." Dr. W. H. LaPrade led in a most suggestive manner our thought in the beginning of the discussion. The suggestions of Rev. F. N. Parker were good. The subject for next meeting is the Book of Job.—Dr. B. F. White was appointed to open the discussion.

MILLSAPS COLLEGE.

The second term of our current session will begin Monday, Jan. 29. This will be a favorable time for new students to enter. The college fees from the beginning of the second term until the close of the session in June will amount to only twenty-one dollars.

The work of the college is progressing most satisfactorily in every particular. W. B. MURRAH, President.

LITERARY NOTES.

BY W. F. B.

The contributed articles in Frank Leslie's Popular Monthly, for January, are: America at the Paris Exposition, a comprehensive article by the Hon. Ferdinand W. Peck, Commissioner-General for the United States, thoroughly illustrated from the official plans, with views, portraits, maps, etc.; England's Free Hand on the Nile, by G. W. Stevens, the world-famous correspondent of the London Daily Mail and author of With Kitchener to Khartum, brilliantly illustrated by Warren B. Davis and H. C. Edwards; Wayside Views of Life in Persia, by Robert E. Speer, who brings from the ancient, historic land many up-to-date pictures, photographic as well as mental; Artistic American Furniture, by Florence Milner, who describes with fine æsthetic taste the products of the city of Grand Rapids, Mich., which is the great furniture-manufacturing centre of America; S. R. Crockett's latest story (complete), entitled The Promotion of Sergeant Cubbison.

In McClure's Magazine, for January, Dr. Watson ("Ian Maclaren") makes a fine beginning of his Life of the Master, with chapters covering the period of youth and childhood. There are eight beautiful full-page pictures by C. K. Linscu, in color, and a number of smaller pictures in black and white accompanying Dr. Watson's article. Mark Twain contributes a sketch in which he professedly betrays the confidence of W. D. Howells, Cable, Stockton, Aldrich, and other brother authors, by telling us what has been the abiding (and, of course, unrealized) ambition of each. Other interesting contributions are Governor Boutwell's recollections of Blaine and Conkling, and their rivalry in the Republican National Convention of 1880; a popular explanation, by Prof. Simon Newcomb, of how astronomers weigh the planets, and Lieutenant Peary's account of his last year's work in the Arctic, especially of his two visits to Greely's deserted house at Fort Conger and what he found there. The Rev. C. T. Brady retells, partly from new material, the heroic story of Trnxton and the United States frigate 'Constellation,' and their great victories over the French; Ray Standard Baker tells a thrilling true story of the Secret Service; Booth Tarkington, the author of The Gentleman from Indiana, concludes his absorbing novelette, Monsieur Beaucaire.

One damp evening, over sixty years ago, the gruff, but gifted, Thomas Carlyle came down from his study with a roll of manuscript in his hand, and, putting it into the hands of his wife, he said: "I know not whether this book is worth anything, nor what the world will do with it, or misdo, or entirely forbear to do, as is likeliest; but this I could tell the world: You have not had for a hundred years any book that comes more direct and flamingly from the heart of a living man!" The book that was thus "born in blackness, whirlwind and sorrow," as the writer afterward testified, and that cost so much thought and toil, was "The French Revolution"—a work of monumental character and of surpassing worth.

We were pleased to meet at the Preachers' Meeting, in this city, Monday morning, the saintly Rev. A. D. McVoy, one of the beloved veterans of the Louisiana Conference. He was on his way to Chillicothe, Mo., where he will spend the year with his son, Rev. Edgar C. McVoy. We are glad to say that his health has improved somewhat since Conference.

On last Sunday evening we had the pleasure of being present at a splendidly conducted, well-attended Epworth League Rally at Louisiana Avenue Church. The League at that church is thoroughly alive, and is doing excellent work, as the following items from the report of the Charity and Help Department indicate: "Number of visits made to the sick and indigent during the past six months, 94; garments distributed, 47; groceries given in quantities more or less large on 22 occasions; money expended, $22.30."

The Nashville Advocate, of last week, contains the following gratifying item of intelligence: "We are very glad to be able to announce that Bishop E. R. Hendrix will furnish us for publication a series of articles covering the general subject of pastoral responsibility, following up those that appeared in our columns last Winter. He will write on such themes as, 'A Pastor's Perplexity,' 'My Parish Is the World,' 'Dead Reckoning,' 'The Guest of God,' 'The Companionship of a Purpose,' 'Our Methodist Liturgy,' 'Ministerial Friendships.'" Every preacher in the connection ought, without fail, to read these articles, which, undoubtedly, will be of great value. The splendid papers furnished our general organ last year by Bishop Hendrix have whetted the appetites of the brethren for more.

Rev. T. C. Wier writes: "After eight years of consecutive work in the presiding eldership, we have settled down in the more quiet work of the pastorate. We have been kindly received by the good people of Lexington and Tchula, and hope for a prosperous year."

Rev. J. C. Mimms, pastor at Shelby, Miss., expects to sail from New York on Feb. 3 for a trip through Europe, Egypt, Turkey, and the Holy Land. He will be absent four or five months, during which time his place will be filled by Rev. Walter M. Campbell, of West Point, Miss. We wish Bro. Mimms a pleasant and profitable trip and a safe return.

Rev. T. G. Freeman, of the North Mississippi Conference, writes: "I am at Longtown among as kind and hospitable people as I have ever met. They have been pounding us with good things to eat ever since we came. We won't have to buy anything much for weeks. All of this we highly appreciate. May the Lord of all grace bless the kind people of Longtown and vicinity! We are looking and praying for a good year."

In accord with the expressed desire of the late Dwight L. Moody, his biography is to be prepared by his elder son, William Revell Moody. For some years past material for this purpose has been gathered, but the son requests that friends having correspondence or other items of special interest will communicate with him at East Northfield, Mass. It is understood the work will appear as promptly as is consistent with the careful editing of the vast amount of material in hand.

Rev. J. C. Park, pastor of Moore Memorial Church, Winona, Miss., in a note to the ADVOCATE, says: "Many things are most encouraging in the work here. I confidently expect a successful year. We start with a twenty-five per cent. increase on pastor's salary. Bro. Mitchell enters on his work as presiding elder with the zeal, enthusiasm, and unintermitted application which characterized his former work in this office. Winona starts him off in his work by providing for more than twenty per cent. of the district parsonage debt. He hopes to raise the whole in cash in a few months."

The New York Sabbath Committee is now engaged in a crusade against Sunday theatricals. It seems that under pretence of giving "concerts," a number of theatres in that city have recently been giving regular performances on Sunday nights in violation of the Sunday law, which, while it permits ordinary concerts and lectures on Sunday, explicitly prohibits the performance of any tragedy, comedy, opera, ballet, farce, etc., on the first day of the week. Persons found guilty of such a misdemeanor are subject to a fine of five hundred dollars. A number of arrests have already been made.

Daniel S. Ford, who for forty years was the owner and chief editor of the Youth's Companion, died in Boston, Mass., recently at the advanced age of 77 years. Under his wise and capable management not only has that paper become a great financial success, but it has all through its history wielded an extensive and highly beneficent influence. On account of Mr. Ford's modesty, his name was never printed in connection with the paper, the name of the publishers, Perry Mason & Co., being fictitious. Mr. Ford was a genuine philanthropist, and a generous contributor to various charities.

It is now the custom among the churches in London to observe one Sunday in the year as "Citizen Sunday." This year on that day more than three hundred London clergymen preached upon the duties of the citizen to the state. It would be no small gain if the churches of America would adopt a similar custom, for the public conscience sadly needs arousing as regards the application of Christianity to political and governmental affairs. To be a thorough-going Christian involves the faithful discharge of civic as well as of religious duties. Far too many professors of religion pursue the "Gallio-policy" when it comes to municipal and state affairs.

FROM SHREVEPORT, LA.

MR. EDITOR: I am just in hand the report of treasurer W. B. Thomson, of our Conference Board of Missions. I am gratified to learn from it, that there has been an increase of more than 35 per cent. over the previous year on amount raised by the charges of the Conference for foreign missions, and of about 20 per cent. for domestic missions. I am sure that this result was in great measure due to the fact that our preachers took these collections early in the year. I am drawn out to exhort the brethren that they do that way again. If these collections can be taken in every mission, circuit and station by March 1, and such cash as may be realized sent promptly to Bro. Thomson, and the pledges looked after diligently, we ought to realize by the dawning of the 20th Century an even larger increase in the amount raised by Louisiana pastors for the saving of the world.

Though our Conference is assessed proportionately higher than the larger and stronger Conferences, yet we should consider it an honor that we are expected to raise for foreign missions $9,100, and we should do our utmost to get the full amount. Thinking and praying over this grandest cause of the church of God until we are thoroughly dominated by the missionary idea, then preaching all over the work a sermon loaded to the muzzle with facts and figures and logic and holy fire, we can most easily lift the collections and secure every dime of the assessment.

Dear brethren, let us do all we can to bring this old world back to God and his Christ.

Pres. of La. Bd. of Missions.

MR. IDDO LEWIS.

Mr. Iddo Lewis died at his home near Lucknow, in Rankin county, Miss., Nov. 22, 1899, in the sixty-eighth year of his age.

From early boyhood his life was entirely consecrated to the service of the Lord, and his death was a fitting close for such a life. Many gathered around his bedside to witness his triumphant departure. He shouted and sang praises to God till his strength was gone, frequently exclaiming, "Blessed assurance!" "Glorious prospect!" etc. Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord. HIS DAUGHTER.

From Sunday-School Board, Mississippi Conference.

The brethren are hereby notified that at the late session of the Conference Thomas Mount resigned as treasurer of the Sunday-school Board, and Rev. J. W. Crisler, of Woodville, Miss., was elected to succeed him. All parties having money to turn over to the Board will therefore send it to Bro. Crisler.

We use this opportunity to urge the pastors and superintendents to observe Children's Day early in the year, and forward the collection promptly to the treasurer. D. SCARBOROUGH, Sec.

To the Louisiana Conference.

DEAR BRETHREN: Please send me your postoffice address without delay. I will need it to get the Minutes to you.

MARDI GRAS.

The Mardi Gras Carnival at New Orleans of 1900 bids fair to be the most attractive, as well as instructive, ever presented to a pleasure-loving people by the most ingenious and extravagant originators and designers of spectacular street displays the world has over produced. In addition to the time-honored landing of Rex and his magnificent parade, will be the wonderful street parades and tableaux of Comus, Momus, Proteus, the Phorty Phunny Phellows, and the numerous tableaux of other well-known societies which constitute the social side of the Carnival, covering a period of several weeks.

The Krewe of Nereus will, the coming season, present a most unique, instructive, and altogether beautiful electric parade on the evening of Feb. 21, 1900. This display, which, it is said, will not only be a novelty in every sense, in that it will abandon the mule as a motive power and substitute the more modern power, "electricity," as well as substituting electric lights for the more ancient flambeau, will occupy several hours passing over a number of the principal residence and business streets, giving visitors, as well as residents, ample opportunity to view its splendor, and study the adaptability of the electric current in the production of street pageants. This parade will be the first of the series, which will end with the evening parade on Tuesday, Feb. 27.

Visitors to New Orleans should make their plans to spend the entire period from the twenty-first to the twenty-seventh in the "Delightful City," thereby being enabled to see the whole of this show. No estimate can be made, at this time, of the amount of money that will this year be expended by the various societies and clubs in preparing this magnificent free display, to which New Orleans invites the whole world; but it may be safely said that the sum will be of such ample proportions as would astound anyone who has never enjoyed a New Orleans Mardi Gras.

The "QUEEN AND CRESCENT ROUTE," with its usual liberality, will, in due time, announce very low excursion rates for round-trip tickets to New Orleans.

IMPORTANT NOTICE!

The committee at a meeting, Jan. 2, decided to consummate the fund and purchase a home within the next two weeks. Please send amounts of subscription at once to the treasurer, Col. J. G. Hamilton, Durant, Miss. Any others who can help please do so at once! No purchase can be made until funds are in hand. Hence those who wait till purchase is made to contribute will materially hinder us. The greater the fund the better the home we can provide. Let all act promptly and together. If some hold back thinking "there will be plenty without me," others may do likewise; so let all arrange the matter promptly. It is useless just now to publish a list of subscriptions, as each subscriber knows his amount. Suffice to say the committee and the Oakleys are deeply grateful for all assistance rendered. A final report will be made public later.

Very truly yours,

W. L. ANDERSON,

ASTHMA CAN BE CURED.

Statement of a Noted Physician.

The astonishing statement that Asthma can be cured, coming from so well known an authority as Dr. Rudolph Schiffmann, will be of interest to sufferers from Asthma, Phthisic and Hay Fever. The Doctor's offer, coming as it does from a recognized authority, who during a practice of over 30 years has treated and cured more cases of Asthma and its kindred ilms any living doctor, is certainly a generous one and an innovation in this age of countless fraudulent nostrums. Believing that the honest way to sell a remedy is to let those who would buy convince themselves of its merits before purchasing, Dr. Schiffmann has authorized this paper to say that he will send a free trial package of his remedy, "Schiffmann's Asthma Cure," to any sufferer who sends his name on a postal card before February 1st. This remedy has cured thousands of cases that were considered incurable. Being used by inhalation it reaches the seat of the disease direct, stops the spasm instantly and insures sweet and refreshing sleep. A free trial package will convince the most skeptical. Those desiring to try a free sample should address Dr. R. Schiffmann, 227 Jackson St., St. Paul, Minn.

PAINT TALKS, XXIV.

WHY COMBINATION PAINTS ARE ECONOMICAL.

The saving in first cost of a good combination paint over the cost of pure lead, is, of course, an item for consideration; but it is not the only item, nor in fact the most important item to be considered. The best combination paints cost, paint for paint, generally about one cent less than pure lead. This is not a great deal, but still it amounts to something on a large building. But when it is remembered that a pound of the combination paint will cover anywhere from one-fourth to one-half more surface than the pure lead, then we see that we effect a really important saving in selecting the former.

But it is in comparing the wear of the two classes of paint that we reach the fountain of the economy involved in using combination paints. Pure lead will protect a building fairly well for three years at the longest. Even before the end of that time it is usually chalky and absorbent of moisture, promoting the decay of the underlying surface rather than enabling it to resist decay. The combination paints containing zinc white, however, if of the standard brands which can be obtained in every village of the land, afford perfect protection during periods ranging from five to fifteen years. They do not become porous or absorbent, and hence are protective during their entire life.

Here is the great economic advantage gained by the use of combination paints containing zinc; they preserve buildings effectually and they require renewal only at long intervals.

STANTON DUDLEY.

TO THE BRETHREN OF MISSISSIPPI.

We need not stop to prove that the Sabbath, or Sunday, is a holy day. Everybody reared in this Christian country will likely concede this truth. This has been part of the education of all, and most especially of those who were brought up in Christian homes. It is also understood, too, that no secular work should be done on Sunday except that of mercy, etc. God never intended it to be esteemed otherwise than a sanctified day, a day set apart for sacred purposes, and, therefore, how dare we, as a Christian nation, to allow without the most persistent opposition men and corporations of men to ignore its sanctity not only for the almighty dollar, but by forcing men to ignore the same by compelling them to work on that day. In order that our State may be as clear of such an allowance as possible we have framed a petition to the Legislature of our State, now in session at Jackson, for an act that will prohibit all such ignorements. We have sent copies of said petition to many of the brethren at our expense. Being pressed for time, and, too, not knowing the addresses of others, we have sent copies of it to presiding elders, whom we have requested to send them immediately to their preachers, instructing them to secure signers, especially voters, and to forward them as soon as possible to Dr. W. C. Black. We have also sent copies to different places for the signatures of ladies to be sent to Dr. Black. We hope the brethren will not be in the least indifferent to this important work. Let each imagine himself trained for and enlisted in railroad work and compelled to perform it on Sunday as any other day, or lose his position. Then let him imagine his feeling if he were engaged in a business at which he can make a good living for a large family and then compelled to give it up these hard times, or work on Sunday. But laying all this aside, brethren, and if for nothing more, let us hustle ourselves to give operatives on railroads the same freedom we enjoy. Let us, as citizens, make it possible through our Legislature for them to have equal liberties with us on Sundays. Let it be a day of rest to them without any risk of losing their positions on railroads. Brethren, please have the petitions signed and sent immediately to Dr. W. C. Black, Jackson, Miss., who will represent us before the Legislature. Let the good ladies everywhere get copies of the petition and have them filled up with their names and sent to Dr. Black, too. Make copies and fill them up and send them.

CLOGGED KIDNEYS

They Produce Poison in the Blood, Become Infected With Disease, Break Down the Entire System and Bring on Bright's Disease.

You know what happens to a sewer when it becomes clogged, don't you?

Do you know what happens to the human system when the kidneys become clogged? They are unable to throw out the impurities from the blood, and become infected with poisons; they decay, fall apart, and pass out in the urine; the blood, unfiltered, carries the poison all over the system and if not checked death follows. The kidneys are the sewers of the human system.

When your kidneys are not doing their work, some of the symptoms which prove it to you are pain or dull ache in the back, excess of uric acid, gravel, rheumatic pains, sediment in the urine; scanty supply, scalding irritation in passing it, obliged to go often during the day and to get up many times during the night to empty the bladder; sleeplessness, nervous irritability, dizziness, irregular heart, breathlessness, sallow, unhealthy complexion, puffy or dark circles under the eyes, sometimes the feet, limbs, or body bloat, loss of ambition, general weakness and debility.

When you are sick, then, no matter what you think the name of your disease is, the first thing you should do is to afford aid to your kidneys by using Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root the great kidney remedy.

In taking Swamp-Root you afford natural help to nature, for Swamp-Root is the most perfect healer and gentle aid to the kidneys that is known to medical science.

Perhaps you are in doubt about your kidneys and want to find out. Here's a simple test. Take from your urine passed when you arise in the morning about two ounces; place in a glass or bottle and let it stand for twenty-four hours. If, upon examination, you find any settlings or sediment, if it is milky or cloudy, or if particles float about in it, disease has gotten a foothold in your kidneys and nature is calling for help.

If you have the slightest symptom of kidney or bladder trouble, or if there is a trace of it in your family history, you would profit by taking Swamp-Root every now and then as a preventative, and thus absolutely forestall kidney and bladder troubles.

The famous new discovery, Swamp-Root, has been tested in so many ways, in hospital work, in private practice, among the helpless, too poor to purchase relief, and has proved so successful in every case, that a special arrangement has been made with the "CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE" by which all of its readers who have not already tried it, may have a sample bottle sent absolutely free by mail; also a book telling all about kidney and bladder diseases, and containing some of the thousands of testimonial tributes from men and women reclaimed to lives of happiness and usefulness by the means of Swamp-Root the great kidney remedy.

Be sure and mention reading this generous offer in the NEW ORLEANS "CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE" when sending your address to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y.

Swamp-Root is sold by all druggists the world over in bottles of two sizes and two prices—fifty cents and one dollar. Remember the name, Swamp-Root, and the address, Binghamton, N. Y.

Two Verdicts.

"After a fair and impartial trial you are judged guilty by this court, and you are sentenced to be hung by the neck until you are dead." The solemn tones of the judge, the despairing face of the prisoner, and the painful stillness of the court-room, makes it a scene of awful impress. Now turn to a brighter scene at the home circle. A mother radiant with joy over the recovery of a child snatched from the clutches of Malaria. An entire family rejoicing, and praising the merits of Dicks' Chillifuge, and giving their verdict that Chillifuge is without an equal for swiftness to cure.

AN ANGEL VISION.

BY BISHOP DOANE.

Chisel in hand stood a sculptor boy,
With his marble block before him,
And his face lit up with a smile of joy
As an angel dream passed o'er him.
He carved the dream on the shapeless stone
With many a sharp incision:
With heaven's own light the sculptor stood—
He had caught the "Angel Vision."

Sculptors of life are we as we stand
With our souls reserved before us,
Waiting the hour when, at God's command,
Our life dream passes o'er us:
If we carve it then on the yielding stone,
With many a sharp incision,
Its heavenly beauties shall be our own,
Our lives that "Angel Vision."

A KISS FOR MOTHER.

The young people who have laughed over Eli Perkin's funny speeches may not find anything to laugh about in this article from his pen, but they will find much to think about:

I want to speak to you of your mother. It may be that you noticed a careworn look upon her face. Of course, it has not been brought there by any act of yours; still it is your duty to chase it away. I want you to get up to-morrow morning and get breakfast. When your mother comes and begins to express her surprise, go right up to her and kiss her on the mouth. You can't imagine how it will brighten her dear face.

Besides, you owe her a kiss or two. Long ago, when you were a little girl, she kissed when no one else was tempted by your fever-tainted breath and swollen face. You were not as attractive then as you are now. Through years of childish sunshine and shadows she was always ready to cure, by the magic of a mother's kiss, the little, dirty, chubby hands whenever they were injured in those first skirmishes with the rough old world.

Then the midnight kisses with which she routed so many bad dreams, as she leaned above your restless pillow, have all been out on interest these long years.

Of course, she is not so pretty and kissable as you are; but if you had done your share of the work during the last ten years, the contrast would not be so marked.

Her face has more wrinkles than yours; and yet, if you were sick, that face would appear far more beautiful than an angel's as it hovered over you, watching every opportunity to minister to your comfort, and every one of those wrinkles would seem to be bright wavelets of sunshine chasing each other over the dear face.

She will leave you one of these days. These burdens, if not lifted from her shoulders, will break her down. These rough, hard hands, which have done so many necessary things for you, will be crossed upon her lifeless breast. Those neglected lips, which gave you your first baby kiss, will be forever closed, and those sad, tired eyes will have opened in eternity, and then you will appreciate your mother, but it will be too late.—Presbyterian.

SOME THINGS WORTH LEARNING.

Learn to laugh. A good laugh is better than medicine. Learn how to tell a good story. A well-told story is as welcome as a sunbeam in a sick-room. Learn to keep your own troubles to yourself. The world is too busy to care for your ills or sorrows. Learn to stop croaking. If you can not see any good in the world, keep the bad to yourself. Learn to hide your pains and aches under a pleasant smile. No one cares to hear whether you have the earache, headache or rheumatism. Don't cry. Tears do well enough in novels, but they are out of place in new life.

We may, if we choose, make the worst of one another. "Every one has his weak point," says Dean Stanley; "every one has his faults; we may make the worst of these; we may fix our attention constantly upon these. But we may also make the best of one another. We may forgive, even as we hope to be forgiven. We may put ourselves in the place of others, and ask what we should wish to be done to us, and thought of us, were we in their place. By loving whatever is lovable in those around us, love will flow back from them to us, and life will become a pleasure instead of a pain; and earth will become like heaven; and we shall become not unworthy followers of him whose name is Love."

Learn that we must do more for our children than to give them the best education we can. No country is saved by a multitude of books and school-houses. Knowledge is power indeed, and so is dynamite, but you want to exercise care as to the hands to which you intrust it. An education needs to be sanctified by religion to make it safe and practical for good. To exercise the understanding to the apprehension and comparison of facts, to a skill in numbers, in words, in literature and science, in the fine arts, it may be, is good, but that alone is not carrying a man's education far enough. All education fails that does not teach dependence upon and responsibility to God.—Presbyterian.

HOW YOUNG MEN MAY SUCCEED.

Samuel Sloan, the great railway magnate, struck the right keynote in the following words which appeared in a recent issue of the Saturday Evening Post:

"I know of no better guide for the young man who wants to steer clear of failure than the Bible. The good old Book has lost none of its helpfulness in the on-rolling of the centuries, and is to-day the best chart extant for the youthful voyager on life's stormy sea. It is the custom of some men to sneer at the teachings of Holy Writ, but they are not the men who have attained the greatest heights in either business or society. Let a young man study the wisdom of the Bible and acquaint himself with its naked, strenuous truth, and he can not go far wrong in his every-day life.

"Fortified by a sound, moral self-training, the young business man of to-day will never know the real bitterness of failure, and the lives of those who go down in the struggle for existence will be to such a young man a perpetual wonder."—American Messenger.

BE CAREFUL WITH YOUR FRIEND.

Don't flatter yourselves that friendship authorizes you to say disagreeable things to your intimates. On the contrary, the nearer you come into relation with a person the more necessary do tact and courtesy become. Except in cases of necessity, which are rare, leave your friend to learn unpleasant truths from his enemies; they are ready enough to tell him. Good breeding never forgets that amour propre is universal.—Oliver Wendell Holmes.

NOTHING EASY.

I received a letter from a lad asking me to find him an easy berth. To this I replied: "You can not be an editor; do not try the law; do not think of the ministry; let alone all ships, shops and merchandise; abhor politics; don't practice medicine; be not a farmer nor a soldier nor a sailor; don't work, don't study, don't think. None of these are easy. Oh, my son! You have come into a hard world. I know of only one easy place in it, and that is in the grave."—Henry Ward Beecher.

GOOD ADVICE.

A farmer stepped into a printing office and said to the editor: "I'd like to take your paper, but I'm too poor." "Go home," said the editor, "and pick out a hen, call her mine, sell or save the eggs from her for me, and if she wants to set, let her, and next Fall bring her and the produce from that hen. I'll send the paper." When Fall came he found he was paying the price of two papers. After that he was never too poor to take a paper. Besides, when he wanted to borrow his neighbor's paper he was always reading it, so he had to wait until the news was old, or take it second-handed. There is nothing like taking one of your own and get the news from first hands. Try it.—Greensboro Record.

A Small Beginning

A little snow ball on the summit of the Alps, rolled up by the winds, moves slowly downward. Gaining in strength and size, it grows rapidly to giant proportions, and finally becomes the frightful avalanche, destroying everything in its path. Consumption begins with a little cough, a trifling pain, a passing flush on the cheeks. This is but the beginning of the avalanche, consumption, that knows no pity, recognizes no distinction. Just at the beginning thousands commit the error of not checking and curing the disease by using MARSDEN'S PECTORAL BALM.

HOME LIFE.

The home life must be the sweetest. Keep out all bickering and strife. The world is full of backbiting and misunderstanding and envy; the home must be a refuge. The man is to be pitied who, after a hard day's sail amid the storms of business cares and fears, can not drop anchor at eventide in the quiet harbor of a peaceful home. We want to get rid of our grumbling, fault finding spirit in the home, and learn to speak words of praise and approval. It is as easy to tell the wife when she does well as when she misses a button or has weak coffee; it is wiser to praise the children for their good deeds than to be unceasingly nagging them about their mistakes. Make home happy and the richest results will follow.—Peninsula Methodist.

HONEST DOUBT.

We are greatly indebted to Thomas for that doubt of his. It was an honest doubt. It was a reasonable doubt. It was a doubt which, had it not then been honestly admitted and dealt with, would have come up again and again in after years, and, perhaps, have wrecked his faith and brought evil upon his work. It was a cautious and rational demand for proof. Any step after that he was willing to take, but he must know where he was to step. He had a right to that knowledge. Jesus had not led his disciples step by step with evidence of his true mission, to deny them needed evidence in the hour when they needed it most. They were to be his witnesses, and they must be sure what they had to testify. If Thomas had been less careful, it would have raised a doubt in our own minds. What we are asked to believe is something so stupendous, and the matters which hang upon it are so vital, that we must know. Thomas was there as the representative of the nineteenth century spirit of inquiry. We are able to trust more fully because there was such a man there—not a captious doubter, but a candid, reasonable inquirer, who took nothing for granted, but insisted that, as a matter involving life and death and the great future, the man who was asked to stake his life and soul upon a historic fact must have reasonable proof of that fact; that he who was to be a witness to all the world, and seal his witness with his blood, must know of right whereof he was to testify.—Wm. E. Barton, D. D.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials. Address

A Persian moralist, the fable has it, once took up in his hand a piece of scented clay, and said to it, "O clay, whence hast thou thy perfume?" And the clay said, "I was once a piece of common clay, but they laid me for a time in company with a rose, and I drank in its fragrance, and have now become scented clay." I will know the company thou keepest by the fragrance thou hast. If thou hast lain in beds of spices, thou wilt smell of the myrrh and the spikenard and the aloes. I will not think thou hast been with Christ unless I can perceive thou savorest of him.—Charles H. Spurgeon.

HUNT—LOTHER HUNT, son of W. T. and Fannie E. C. Hunt, was born at Sturgis, Miss., July 16, 1882, and died at his home in Ackerman, Miss., Dec. 23, 1899. He leaves his father, mother, one brother, five sisters and many friends to mourn his departure. One sister has preceded him to the land of bliss, and awaited his coming.

I was his pastor from December, 1891, to December, 1895, and had the pleasure of seeing him converted, and received him into the M. E. Church, South, at Sturgis, Miss., in 1893. I have been intimately associated with him since he was eight years old, and learned to love him very dearly. Luther was a good boy. I never knew him to indulge in mean things. His death was a great shock to our home. We feel that we have lost one of our dearest friends, but believe that our loss is his gain. It was hard for all to give him up, but we bow in submission to the will of Him who directs or overrules all things for the good of those who love him. He said he did not fear death; that he loved Jesus, and expected to live with him hereafter. With such evidence we all say, "Thy will, Father, not ours, be done." We mourn not as those who have no hope. We look forward with joyous anticipation to that day when we shall meet him where there will be no more parting. A consecrated mother to pray and counsel with him, and a father who loves the church to advise him, we are not surprised at the testimony left us. In the bloom of manhood he was called from the walks of men and permitted to assure us that he would rest with Jesus.

The burial services were conducted by his pastor and myself, and his body was laid to rest in the cemetery near Ackerman.

Dear friends, mourn not for those whom God, our loving Father, sees fit to call. We, too, must soon go to our reward. Are we ready?

"Oh, if our mortal feet
Have almost gained the brink;
If it be that we are nearer home
Even to-day than we think"—

Pray,

"Father, perfect our trust;
Let our spirits feel in death
That their feet are firmly set
On the rock of a living faith."

If this be our experience, we will fear no evil when we cross the river of death.

J. W. THREADWELL.

BENSON—In memory of JAMES M. BENSON, who was born in Clark county, Ala., Jan. 24, 1874, and died near Shiley, Lincoln parish, La., Oct. 26, 1899. He was twenty-four years nine months and two days old. He died of typhoid fever, which he contracted in West Monroe, La., where he had been engaged in the mercantile business for some months. He was a young man of sterling qualities, and was held in highest esteem by all that knew him. He possessed great energy, and was so enlisted in his business that he continued at his post of duty two weeks with the fever on him; came home and lived just one week. He left a kind father, a loving mother, one brother, seven sisters, a number of relatives and friends behind to mourn his untimely death. He left evidences of his acceptance with God and of bright prospects on the other shore, where he expected to join his two grandmothers, who had preceded him but a few months, and many other loved ones. He had never connected himself with any church, but was a member of the Union Sunday-school of West Monroe. He was considered an excellent young man, morally; a liberal supporter of the church and its interest. Had he lived he would have made his mark as a business man, and, doubtless, would have ranked as one of the best citizens of his State. May God sanctify this dispensation of his providence to the good of his loved ones, and may they meet him where partings are no more! THOS. J. MARTIN.

FLEWELYN—J. H. FLEWELYN was born Oct. 23, 1851, and died Nov. 22, 1899.

Bro. Flewelyn joined the Methodist Church in 1890, and remained a faithful member to the time of his death. He was educated for the Episcopal ministry, but, believing that no call was necessary to this great work, and not feeling the call, he did not enter upon the work. He was an earnest Bible student, a strong believer in the doctrines of his church, and always ready to give a reason for the faith that was in him. He was an earnest, devout, good man. He was always on the right side of every moral question. He will be missed, not only in the circle of that broken home, but the church, the community, will miss him. His only regret at the last was that he must leave his children exposed to the snares and temptations of life without the care and admonition of a father.

May our God, who has promised to be a Father to the fatherless and a God to the widow, ever keep a watchful eye over this home, and bring all his loved ones at last to that place of peace where there will be no more parting and no more tears! G. A. G.

DRAKE—Miss HATTIE CLYDE DRAKE, daughter of J. W. and Mrs. Ellen Drake, was born Aug. 24, 1883, and died at her father's residence in Starkville, Miss., Nov. 19, 1899. Her illness, with which she was stricken on Nov. 2, was of the most painful character, and, despite the best medical skill and the most faithful nursing, grew steadily worse until it eventuated in death. Though only sixteen years of age, Miss Clyda possessed a strong and winsome personality, and made her influence felt for good wherever she went. She was obedient to her parents, considerate of her brothers and sisters, domestic in disposition, and faithful and conscientious in the discharge of duty. She was bright and studious at school, and won the esteem of all with whom she came in contact. She was especially ardent in her affection for her father, and sought in every possible way to minister to his comfort and brighten his life. Perhaps he, most of all, will miss her. May God comfort and sustain the loved ones left behind! HER PASTOR.

BOYKIN—We, the committee appointed to draft resolutions on the matter following, beg to submit same for publication, a copy of which follows:

Whereas, God, in his infinite wisdom, has deemed it best to remove from the scenes of his earthly home little ROBINSON BOYKIN, late a member of this Sunday-school; therefore, be it

Resolved, By the combined classes present, that while we bow in humble submission to Him who doeth all things well, yet we mourn the loss of our little friend and member, fully realizing that in his death this Sunday-school has lost a beloved member, and One whose cheerful way always added happiness to those about him.

Resolved, That we extend to the sorrowing family our sincere and heartfelt sympathy in this, their and our irreparable loss, praying the all-wise and loving heavenly Father that he may lighten the deep sorrow that has thus fallen upon them by shedding into their hearts and souls that blessed peace and comfort which man can not give.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the bereaved family, and that a copy each be sent to the Southern Christian Advocate and to the Waynesboro Times for publication.

Adopted unanimously in Sunday-school this Dec. 10, 1899.

"Why CHILLIFUGE Won't Cure Chills"—is a question that brings to mind the story of a society of learned men formed for debating problems.

The question was presented: "Why a fish weighing ten pounds, put into a vessel of known weight, filled with water, did not increase the weight?" After hours of hot debate the fool of the club announced that it did, for while the debate had been going on he had tried the experiment.

The "Combination" Bible.

A SUPERB EDITION

of the Holy Scriptures, showing at a glance at the foot of the pages all changes made by the revisers.

New Type. All Proper Names Self-Pronouncing. The Most Valuable Collateral Matter.

There is a steady and increasing demand for first-class Bibles. Everybody is anxious to obtain a copy of the best edition of the Holy Scriptures. Old editions are constantly being replaced by Bibles that are in every way more attractive, and there is practically no limit to the demand.

OUR "COMBINATION" FEATURE.

Hitherto the King James and Revised Versions have been printed in parallel columns, but this makes comparisons of texts tedious and unsatisfactory, and makes the book very unwieldy. We have overcome this difficulty by "combining" the two Versions on the same page, showing at a glance in foot-notes all the Changes Additions and Omissions made by the Revisers.

THE OLD VERSION PRINTED IN FULL.

The King James Version is the basis, and this Version is read straight along from the text, while the Revised Version is read from the text in combination with the foot-notes. Our "Combination" Feature has met with universal approval and is strongly endorsed by all leading Divines and Biblical Scholars.

It is only by a comparison of the two Versions that the greatest benefit can be obtained from reading the Holy Scriptures, and this comparison every reader can easily make by our simple arrangement for showing the changes made by the revisers. This is the greatest triumph of Bible Publishing the World has ever known.

OUR OFFER.

To those unprogressive people who do not read and pay for the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE we sell this Bible at the publisher's retail price—$1.25. To our subscribers we sell it at the very low rate of $2. The only condition attached to this offer is that the subscriber must pay his subscription one full year in advance, viz.: to January, 1901. We will send it postpaid to any person who will send us three new cash subscribers at the regular rate. For six new cash subscribers at the regular rate we will send two "Combination" Bibles, postpaid.

For fifty cents additional we will send a Bible with index.

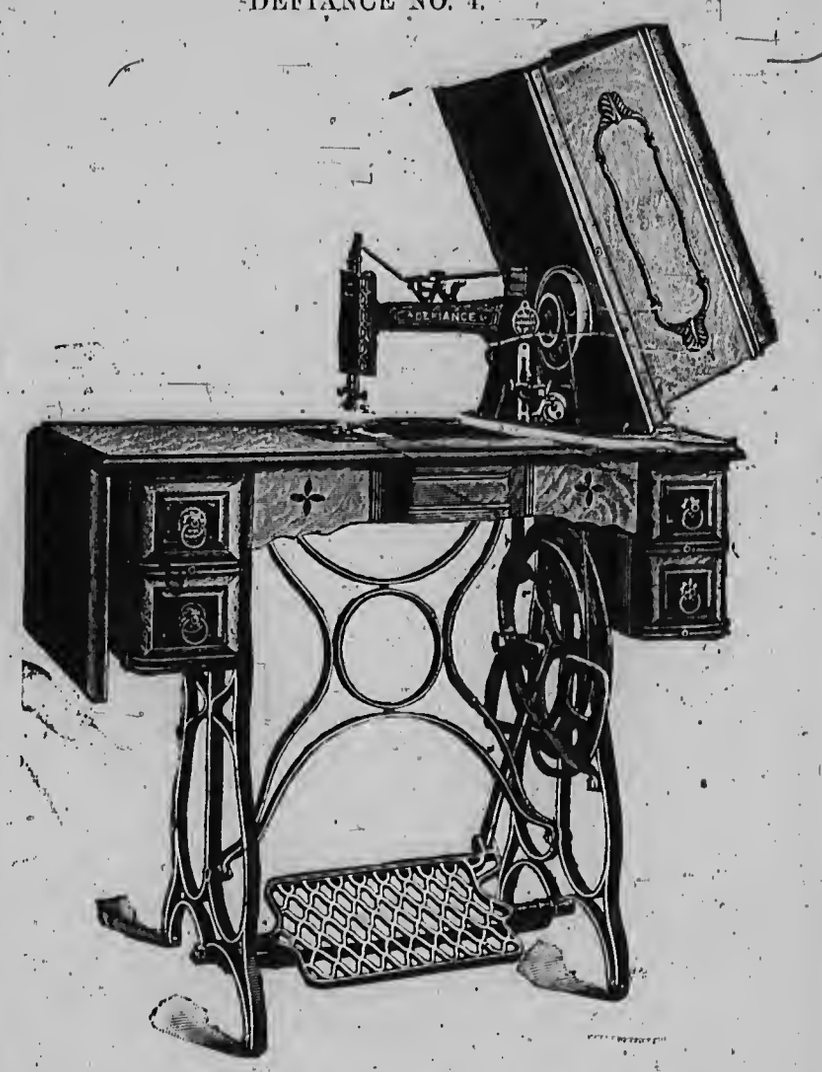
For twenty-five cents additional we will have your name engraved in gilt letters on the outside.

Send for circular. Address REV. W. C. BLACK.

P. S.—We can give no commission on renewals in connection with the above offer.

New Machine Offer.

DEFIANCE NO. 4.



The Defiance Machine is the perfection of simplicity, durability, speed, strength and ease of operation.

Construction. It is constructed of the best material in use, every bearing, without an exception, being of steel or case-hardened.

The Mechanical Devices of this machine are a combination of tried mechanical principles. In detail it differs materially from other machines. Its simplicity is at once apparent, and its great durability is admitted by the best mechanical experts.

The Arm is large and roomy, 8x5½ inches in the clear.

No Vibration. This machine does not vibrate. Its motion is easy and quiet.

Lock Stitch. It is a lock-stitch shuttle machine.

Speedy, Light, Quiet. It is as speedy, light and quiet-running as any shuttle machine manufactured.

Double Feed—Positive Four-Motion. The double feed possesses advantages over all others. Its very shape and form obviates all the disadvantages arising from double feeds as they have heretofore been constructed, and combines in this machine all the advantages of both the single and double feed, doing away with the objections to either of them.

The operation of the feed mechanism is positive, giving an accurate four-motion movement to the feed without the use of springs.

The Needle Bar. This machine has a self-lubricating needle-bar, which is always kept clean, well-oiled, and the oil can not drop on the work and soil it.

The Needle is absolutely self-setting. No screwdriver is required in setting, a winged thumb nut being used instead.

The machine is self-threading. Put in the bobbin, draw the thread towards you, through the slot and, it is done.

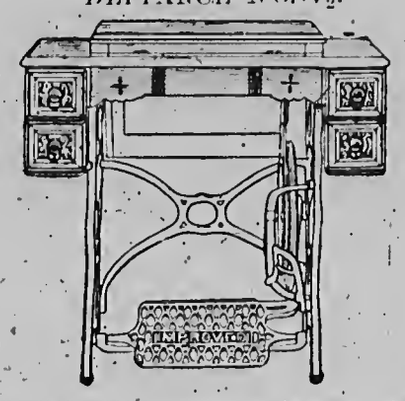
The Loose Pulley for winding the bobbins without running the machine is so constructed as to admit of an instantaneous stoppage and starting of the machine without stopping the treadle movement—a valuable improvement peculiar to this machine.

Automatic Bobbin Winder. The bobbin winder operates automatically, winding the thread on the bobbin regularly and as evenly as the thread on a spool. Can't be operated without running the machine.

Extra Attachments, in velvet-lined case, sent free with each machine: 1 Tucker, 1 Ruffler with shirring plate, 1 Hemmer set (4 widths) and Binder, 1 Braider (Foot and Slide), 1 Thread Cutter.

Additional Accessories. Each machine is supplied with the following outfit: 1 Hemmer and Feller (one piece), 10 Needles, 6 Bobbins, 1 Wrench, 1 Screwdriver, Oil Can filled with oil, Cloth Guage and Thumb-screw, and a Book of Instructions. The Book of Instructions is profusely illustrated and answers the purpose of a competent teacher.

DEFIANCE NO. 7½.



This cut shows our new and popular style, the No. 7½ Defiance Drop Cabinet perfectly protecting the machine from dust, and making a convenient and ornamental stand. When machine is ready for use the head is in same position as on ordinary style; when through using, it requires only the turning over of the leaf of table, and the sewing machine head drops into the case or cabinet between the drawers, completely out of sight, forming a handsome table with highly polished top.

No. 3 Machine, drop leaf table, bent cover, case of one drawer at each end and center drawer. Dealer's price, $32. Our price, $18.

No. 4 Machine, drop leaf table, bent cover, case of two drawers at each end and center drawer. Dealer's price, $34. Our price, $19.

No. 5 Machine, drop leaf table, bent cover, case of three drawers at each end and center drawer, making seven drawers in all. Dealer's price, $36. Our price, $20.

No. 7½ Machine, Drop head cabinet, case of two drawers at each end and center drawer. Dealer's price, $38. Our price, $23.

The chief difference between Numbers 3, 4, and 5 is in the furniture—i. e., the number of drawers. If you do not want to pay for the extra drawers, you need not do so. We sell these machines under a ten years' guarantee, by which we mean that if any part gives out by reason of any defect therein, the manufacturer will replace the same free of charge. Moreover, we allow the purchaser to test the machine ten days. If at the end of ten days you are not satisfied, you have only to drop us a postal card, and your money will be refunded.

OUR OFFER.

We will send any one of the above-described machines at the prices named, and also send the ADVOCATE free for six months. The only condition attached to this offer is that subscribers who are in arrears must first pay up all arrearages to date. It would be well to avail yourself of this offer at once, as we can not promise that it will last very long. Notice that you take no risk whatever. We do all the risking. Address

CANCER CURED BY ANOINTING WITH OIL.

[From Pentecostal Herald, Louisville, Ky.]

[The following was sent us by the writer. We gladly give it place. We believe Dr. Bye to be a Christian gentleman, and it is a pleasure to allow Sister Sneed to testify to her cure.—EDITOR.]

REV. W. E. ARNOLD,

Dear Brother:—Having seen Dr. D. M. Bye's cancer cure advertised in the Pentecostal Herald, I decided to give the same a trial. At the above stated time I was suffering with a cancer on my nose of sixteen years' standing, termed by my physician a cancer of the skin. The place was increasing both in size and inflammation rapidly, and had the appearance of resulting seriously in a short time. I sent for Dr. Bye's medicine, used the same as he directed, and just one month from the time I first wrote to Dr. Bye, the cancer was gone entirely and the place perfectly well, only a slight scar left. I am the widow of Rev. George W. Sneed, who joined the Tennessee Conference in the year 1835; died holding a superannumerary relation to the same in the year 1851. I am now in my ninety-first year, and having so large an acquaintance in both Tennessee and Texas, feel anxious that my testimonial should be published, so that all those afflicted as I was may read of the wonderful cure and try the same. I feel a desire to send a trumpet-blast to the North, South, East and West, that the entire world might know what the blessed Lord has done for me through the instrumentality of Dr. Bye.

If you can allow me space enough in the columns of your paper for the above, I will appreciate it greatly, and am willing that my article be condensed, if you think best.

I am a constant reader of the Pentecostal Herald, and each copy is a treat for me. I enjoy to the fullest extent the blessing of entire sanctification, and while your paper is so great a blessing to me, I have used it in bringing others into the same blessed experience, and shall continue to work in my feeble way for the Lord as long as I live.

Hoping I have not proven worrisome to you, and that you will give this a favorable consideration, I am your sister in Christ,

MRS. MARY D. SNEED,
Waco, Texas, Box 123.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

Reinforcements have been sent to Gen. French, who is fighting the Boers around Colesberg.

Monopolies are being forced out of Colombia. The cigarette and match trusts will soon pass out of existence.

The Schley memorial fund, which is intended to purchase a house for the Rear Admiral, has reached the sum of $5,000.

The governor of Georgia has put a stop to the practice of State officers who have been using the Capitol for lodging apartments.

Admiral Schley, who was recently made a thirty-second degree Mason, has been a member of the fraternity since his twenty-first birthday.

France's Atlantic squadron has been sent to Santo Domingo to force the Dominican government to settle the Boismare-Caccaveli claim.

Lafayette, La., has secured the location of the Southwestern Institute. The bonus guaranteed by the town and parish amount to about $90,000, Recruiting for the Boer Red Cross service is going on in New York. About 1,000 men and women have gone from New York recently to South Africa.

Missionaries in Africa report horrible massacres in the Congo Free State, fourteen villages having been destroyed. Several of the victims were eaten by cannibals.

The Senate committee on privileges and elections has begun its investigation of the charges of bribery made in connection with the election of Senator Clark of Montana.

The Continental Gin Company has been organized with a capital of $2,000,000. Ninety per cent. of the gin manufacturers of the country are represented in the combination.

The President has created a military department, consisting of the territory of Alaska, and assigned Colonel George M. Randall, Eighth United States Infantry, to command.

The Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen has given notice of withdrawal from the Federation of American Railway Employees. The withdrawal of the trainmen may disband the federation.

Wreckers working on the sunken Spanish armored cruiser "Almirate Oquendo," near Santiago, discovered a chest containing $19,000 in Spanish gold, which the firm employing the drivers will retain.

The University of Chicago has received $3,370,000 under the agreement made by John D. Rockefeller to duplicate its gifts until Jan. 1, 1900. Mr. Rockefeller has telegraphed to President Harper that he will extend the limit three months, and in that time Dr. Harper thinks he is reasonably sure of getting the rest of the money to make the total $4,000,000.

In view of the existence of the bubonic plague in the Orient and in South America, Surgeon General Wyman has requested $25,000 additional for quarantine service to be appropriated as an urgency deficiency item.

Gov. A. J. McLaurin, of Mississippi, has been nominated by the Democrats in the Legislature for a seat in the U. S. Senate, a position which he held before he became governor. W. V. Sullivan, the present incumbent, has been chosen for the other vacancy in the Senate.

The anxiety and suspense which existed for several days in England as to the fate of the garrison at Ladysmith has been relieved by the official report from General Sir George White reporting that the desperate assault made by the Boers on his position on Saturday has been successfully repulsed.

South Carolina has a new income tax law which applies to all incomes of $2500 or more. The returns from the collection of this tax are now all in, and they appear to indicate that the people of South Carolina are in an astonishing state of poverty. Some seventeen counties have reported no collections at all. Many other counties made returns of from $16 to $90, and in only two did the collections exceed $1000.

The British public is at last face to face with the critical moment in the campaign. It may be safely said that at no previous time have there been such anxious suspense as will be passed through until the arrival of further news regarding the fate of Ladysmith. The week opens only with fresh additions to the disasters that have befallen British arms, and there is no longer any sustaining confidence to buoy up public opinion.

RAILROADING PATENTS.

A single firm of Patent Lawyers, C. A. Snow & Co., of Washington, D. C., have in the last year procured 1,630 patents for their clients, many of them for rejected inventions. C. A. Snow & Co. have been accused of railroading patents through the Patent Office, but they insist that this locomotion is better than excarting them, for by the latter process the inventor often dies before he gets his patent.

THE EXPOSITOR'S BIBLE.

Only
$25.00
for the Complete Set.

The valuable series of books known as the EXPOSITOR'S BIBLE is now in the reach of all Bible students. We have completed arrangements that enable us to make the MOST LIBERAL OFFER in the history of this truly great work.

What is the Expositor's Bible?

It is a work of nearly 21,500 duodecimo pages of expository lectures on all the books of the Bible by the foremost preachers and theologians of the day. The London "British Weekly" says: "This series is planned so as to give all the good of a scientific commentary without the padding, technicality, and details that have made the commentor's name a proverb for dreariness in the world of literature. In every book of the Bible the rich, fertile, and perpetually significant portions are selected and continuously analyzed, illustrated, and explained by interpreters who are scholars and yet interesting."

Volumes could be filled with testimonials from the highest sources to the value of these books.

This is the original, unabridged, authorized edition, printed on extra good cream laid paper, bound elegantly and substantially in Maroon linen cloth, in TWENTY-FIVE VOLUMES, and packed in a neat, strong, wooden box.

Terms: For the Expositor's Bible, Complete,

Twenty-five volumes; the price is only $25, if paid in full when the set is ready for shipment. If on time, the price is $27.50 per set, payable five dollars and fifty cents at date of purchase, and rest at the rate of two dollars per month.

Orders will be filled in the order in which they are received.

We have arranged with the publishers to handle all the orders from preachers in our Church. This new edition of the EXPOSITOR'S BIBLE will be ready for delivery in less than thirty days. Further particulars cheerfully furnished. Correspondence solicited.

SOMETIME.

Some time we shall know why
Our sunniest mornings change to noons of rain,
And why our steps are shadowed so by pain,
And why we often lie
On couches sown with thorns of care and doubt;
And why our lives are thickly hedged about
With bars that put our loftiest plans to rout.

Some time we shall know why.
Our dearest hopes are swept so swift away,
And why our brightest flowers first decay;
Why song is lost in sigh,
Why clasping fingers slip so soon apart;
Estrangement, space and death rend heart from heart,
Until from deepest depths the tear-drops start.

Some time we shall know
Each other, aye, as we ourselves are known,
And see how out of darkness light has grown;
And He who loves us so
Despite our willfulness and blind complaint,
Will show us how His kind and calm restraint
Can mold a human soul into a saint.

Some time our eyes shall see
The silver lining in the darkest cloud,
While silvery echoes follow thunders loud;
Some time our hearts shall be Content, forgetting all our restless mood,
And knowing everything has worked for good,
The how and when and why be understood.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From Our Regular Correspondent.)

Associate Justice Brewer, of the United States Supreme Court, delivered an address this week on "The Twentieth Century, from Another View-Point," which has been much commented upon. He said in part: "In these closing hours of the nineteenth century many are speculating as to the twentieth. It is the theme of many a discourse. On every hand we hear prophecies of greatness and glory, or of disaster and gloom. The era of prophecy is passed. And yet the lamp of the great past casts some light into the future. We may discern the signs of the times; we may perceive the trend of human events. And, first, I predict that the twentieth century will be noted for greater unity in Christian life. The present century has been one of denominational rivalry and strife. The next will be one of Christian unity. Again, I predict that the coming century will be noted for greater economy in Christian work. We must learn to do business as the business man does. He eliminates every unnecessary expense. Again, I think the twentieth century will develop a clearer recognition of what religion is, and how its growth can be most surely promoted. Whether evolution be in all respects scientifically true, it is true that civilization is progressive. Humanity has been steadily through the centuries moving onward from barbarism to the present heights of civilization. Taking the declaration that he that believeth shall be saved, and he that believeth not is condemned already, the necessity of belief and what to believe has been among the great thoughts of the eighteen centuries. As a man thinketh, so is he. Creeds have their place and value. The clearer, the stronger and the more profound one's convictions, the more earnest and zealous he is apt to be. But something more than creed is essential to religion. It is not a question of intellectual advancement so much as one of moral growth. So religion that spends itself in creeds, and does not ripen into character and the richness of a pure and lovely life, is like a barren fig tree, covered with leaves, but fruitless. So I look, in the coming century, to see not merely a clearer conception of the fundamental truths—a putting behind us as of little significance the minor differences of creed and doctrine—but also a keener and more just appreciation of the means by which alone humanity can become fit to enter the new paradise which one day shall dawn upon the earth."

Mrs. J. W. Carlin, who spent some years in China as a missionary, and who will shortly go back there to join her husband and resume her work, has been telling Washington folk about her experiences in mission work among the Chinese women. Interest is added to her talk by her five children—three girls and two boys—who recite and sing in Chinese, dressed exactly as native children of their ages dress in China.

Gen. Davis, Military Governor of Porto Rico, appeared before the House Committee on Insular Affairs, and made a general statement of conditions on the island. He said the people were greatly discouraged, and lacked the Anglo-Saxon energy to face discouraging prospects; that the land was largely mortgaged, the interest being in nearly every case excessive; that the present revenues were inadequate; that no provision was being made to educate about nine-tenths of the children; that not 1 per cent. of the inhabitants understood the responsibilities of self-government; that a territorial form of government, such as proposed in the Cullom bill for Hawaii, was not suitable for Porto Rico, but the island ought to be given the same trade privileges as Hawaii, which would go far towards its industrial regeneration; that if given free trade with us, the people of Porto Rico would be able to support themselves and contribute much wealth to the United States. In reply to a question Gen. Davis said, "American sovereignty has been a disaster to the average Porto Rican." He also said that 70 per cent. of the population were Caucasians in the sense that Spaniards were; that every Porto Rican was either actively or passively a Catholic; that, having more than doubled their population in thirty years, the Porto Ricans were not a dying race. Gen. Davis thinks the present unsatisfactory conditions owing to the disappearance of the old order of things, especially as to trade and commerce, and the inability of the United States authorities to inaugurate a new order without congressional legislation. His opinions are already having a marked effect in Congress, and will aid materially in bringing about satisfactory legislation for Porto Rico.

If proof were required that the saloon is an increaser of crime, it is amply furnished by the annual report of the superintendent of the Washington police, giving the number of arrests made in the District of Columbia for one year. Commenting on that report, the press committee of the Anti-Saloon League says, in a report in connection with the intended canvass for signers to a petition asking Congress to prohibit the liquor traffic in Washington: 'From these figures it will be seen that, while the whole number of arrests in the District, with a bar room for each 441 of its population, was equal to one arrest for every 11 of its population, the number of arrests made in the first precinct, with a bar room for every 113 of its population, was equal to one for every 3 of its population; and in the ninth precinct, with a bar room for every 1,048 of its population, the number of arrests was only one for every 18 of its population."

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE NOTES.

The fifth Sunday in December I gave to Water Valley, preaching in the morning at Main Street Church and at night at Wood Street Church. I found Bros. Brown and Shipman in place in their new charges and entering upon the work of the year cheerfully and hopefully. Bro. Porter takes hold of the district work as one who is not a stranger to it. They say that he is preaching "old-fashioned presiding-elder sermons."

I was much gratified with the good spirit and harmony manifested in the Quarterly Conference of Wood Street charge which I attended. The outlook is propitious for a pleasant and prosperous year in that charge. Such is also the case at Main Street with Bro. Brown and his people.

The first Sunday in this month I was with Bro. Davis and his people in Byhalia, talking to the Sunday-school and preaching two sermons. I worshiped with them also Friday night in prayer meeting. They helped me to supply the Sunday-school with "Young People's Hymnals" and with a good lot of the "Children's Visitor."

Several days were spent in Holly Springs looking after the publication of the Conference Minutes, Sunday-school interests and the circulation of church literature. I found Bro. Honoll studying and planning the work of the district for the year and Bro. Price in the pastoral service.

Twenty-four hours were spent very pleasantly and, I trust, profitably in Victoria with Bro. Babb, the new pastor, and the people of his charge. An appointment was made for me to preach at night, the which I did to an attentive congregation.

I also visited Abbeville and enjoyed a day and night with Bro. Langley and his flock, preaching one sermon, talking books, Sunday-school matters, etc.

En route home, I stopped off a few hours in Grenada, greeted several brethren and did some good work.

So far as I have seen and heard the preachers are in place and at work, and most of them are engaged with a hearty good-will and hope for success.

The friends of Rev. J. S. Oakley have purchased a home for himself and family at Chester, where they are comfortably domiciled. We hope they will be well cared for in their new abode, and that during the year our dear brother may so far recover health as to be able to resume his "loved employ."

The preachers of the Durant district will please send me at once the names and postoffice addresses of all their Sunday-school superintendents. This becomes necessary because of failure to procure the "Sunday-school Directory" for that district. Brethren, please attend to this as soon as possible. I need the information immediately. Write names of persons and offices plainly.

We heartily sorrow with the Mississippi Conference in the loss of their greatly beloved Dr. C. G. Andrews. In his death Mississippi Methodism has lost a wise and safe counselor and faithful minister of the gospel. G. W. BACHMAN.

REV. C. G. ANDREWS, D. D.

The great sorrow that has befallen our Conference in the death of Dr. Andrews will deepen as the days go by, as we come to miss his presence, aid and advice in so many places and in so many ways. The loneliness that has come into my own life by his going from us, and the sorrow I feel, but voices the experience of his brethren and the host of friends here and elsewhere in Mississippi. To all these it will be a mournful pleasure to read something about his last days on earth. That bitter cold last Sunday of the old year, and of the old century, he was seen driving through the streets of Meridian to fill his appointment in East End Church. But few dared to brave the severity of the day to meet the man of God in the place of worship. As he entered the door the pastor, Rev. D. P. Bradford, saw he was sick, and, meeting him, said, "Doctor, why did you come out here such a day as this?" His only reply was, "Duty, duty, brother." Too weak to stand and preach, he sat in a chair and preached his last sermon.

Monday evening I called to see him, and found him suffering very much with an acute attack of la grippe, and a strange look about his eyes that so alarmed me that, on my return home, I told my wife I feared the result of his illness. Immediately she asked, 'Did you try to persuade him not to expose himself any more until he was well?" I told her I did not, as "I had long since learned that he cared not for rest till he found it with the people of God."

From this time on his disease grew more violent, and finally developed into a fatal attack of pneumonia. I was with him two or three times each day, and while his sufferings were intense, never a murmur escaped his lips, but that beautiful trust in Christ that has so fashioned his life as to make him, the trusted leader of his brethren, grow stronger as his physical strength gave way.

On Saturday evening I prayed at his bedside, and as I asked the Father for his health and life, he responded often with the "Amen." We all felt the end was near, and while I prayed for his faith to fail not as God might develop to him his will, I noticed that the response was as often, and seemed stronger than before. When we arose from prayer and stood round his bed, he seemed to close his own prayer with ours with "Amen! amen! and amen!" I then asked him if he felt the Lord was with him in his great suffering. He replied, 'Oh, yes; oh, yes." "And I am persuaded that he is able to keep that which I have committed unto him against that day." At 3:30, on Sunday morning, he passed to his home in the skies. Thus, on the last Sunday of the old year, and of the old century, he closed his life's work on earth preaching Christ to the congregation of East End Church, Meridian, and on the first Sunday of the new century, he joined Christ in heaven.

The First Note of the Last Year of the Nineteenth Century.

Rev. W. G. Harbin, Moorhead mission, North Mississippi Conference, has observed Twentieth Century Education Day, and has sent a thank-offering of seven and 25-100 dollars cash. This is a new work, to which Bro. Harbin was sent in December.

If a new man on a new work, without a parsonage, without a church, without a member, can do this much thus early, what may we not expect from our well-organized and wealthy circuits and stations? Let every pastor make answer for his charge. The work is being discussed, and plans are being matured in some charges for more aggressive work and for larger contributions. May it be so in every charge! It is hoped the presiding elders will discuss the matter in the Quarterly Conferences. Let the pastors have suitable resolutions prepared and adopted by these meetings, and then published in the county papers. This will help to advertise the movement, and will commit the charge officially to the work. By this means, by other means, by "all means," let us keep this interest before our people till we get it into their minds and into their hearts, and their money into [illegible].

The revised figures show that we have raised twelve thousand six hundred three and 86-100 dollars.

TWENTIETH CENTURY FUND.

The Treasurer's report to the Board of Education showed that the following charges in the Mississippi Conference had raised the most cash for this cause during 1899: Shubuta and Quitman, Edwards, and Madison circuit. An inspection of the roll-books showed that the following deserve special mention on account of subscriptions made, but yet unpaid: Woodville, Gloster, Bolton, Satartia, Brandon, and a few others. The Conference directed that each presiding elder appoint two, or more, to serve along with himself as a District Twentieth Century Fund Committee, whose duty shall be to survey each district and co-operate with any pastor in holding educational meetings, giving special attention to the difficult fields.

The subscription made at the educational meeting held during Conference amounted to $3,370, including the one thousand subscribed by Maj. R. W. Millsaps just after the meeting. These subscriptions are to be placed on the roll-books where the respective subscribers are pastors or members, as the case may be.

We estimated that in cash and subscriptions the Mississippi Conference had raised up to Dec. 16 seven thousand dollars. This beginning is not to be despised, but it shows that it is only a beginning, that the task is yet before us. The next six months must be the busy time in this cause.

All the members are to be enrolled in the roll-books, and then an effort is to be made through public meetings and by personal solicitation to have a dollar, or more, written in the space opposite each name.

It is expected that many pastors will appoint Twentieth Century Fund Committees, or have the Quarterly or Church Conference to do it. And, where a pastor and his committee feel that help is needed in this matter, let the presiding elder and his district committee be asked for advice and co-operation.

THE GREATEST OF MODERN EVANGELISTS.

The death of Mr. Dwight Lyman Moody, which occurred Dec. 22, brought to an end the most remarkable evangelistic career of modern times. Mr. Moody, it will be remembered, recently broke down in Kansas City in the midst of a great meeting which he was conducting there. He was taken at once to East Northfield, Mass., his home, where the very best medical skill was secured for him. It was found, however, that his heart, which has been in recent years in a delicate condition, now gave tokens of irretrievable exhaustion, and the inevitable end followed close upon his final breakdown.

Mr. Moody was born Feb. 5, 1837, in East Northfield, where he died. If he had lived a few weeks longer, therefore, he would have been sixty-three years old. His early life was passed on a farm, where his stout and rugged frame was developed. At the age of sixteen he secured employment as a clerk in a shoe store in Boston, and during his residence here he was converted, uniting with a Congregational Church. In 1856 he became a salesman in a large wholesale shoe store in Chicago—an occupation in which he became very successful. He began at this time to spend his evenings in missionary work among the destitute, vicious, and criminal classes of the city. He also was drawn to take a deep interest in the Young Men's Christian Association work, in which he soon became a leader. He cultivated his powers of public utterance in conventions, and otherwise, and soon became recognized as a man of unusual force and of unquestioned devotion. During the Civil War he was a worker in the Christian Commission, and gave much time to the sick and wounded of both armies, in the hospital and on the battle-field. Before this he had become entirely absorbed with religious work, and had given up his secular occupation, which had brought him a remunerative income. He now devoted himself in Chicago to this work, out of which soon grew a large and prosperous congregation, which is now presided over by a regular pastor, and which continues to flourish. He became known to the world at large in 1873-74, when, with Mr. Sankey, he made an evangelistic tour through Great Britain. The impressions produced by Mr. Moody's preaching, by his organizing power, by the magnetic influence which he exerted upon the leading Christian workers of Great Britain, and by Mr. Sankey's remarkable singing, are alive to this day, and form a part of a great evangelistic movement, the effects of which promise to be imperishable. Among the now illustrious men who were drawn into this movement, and who proved to be Mr. Moody's skillful helpers, were the late Henry Drummond and his biographer, Prof. George Adam Smith. Great meetings were held in London, Liverpool, Edinburgh, Glasgow, Dublin, and elsewhere. The churches were greatly quickened, and hundreds of ministers of various denominations were taught by this straightforward, eager, enthusiastic and shrewd laymen some things which they had never before found out concerning the best method of reaching the masses, and of preaching the gospel so that the common people would hear them gladly. These services abroad were followed in 1876 and 1877, and in later years, with great "Moody and Sankey meetings," held in New York, Boston, San Francisco, and many other large cities. These brought together on the same platform ministers of all Protestant evangelical denominations, and they were one of the agencies that helped to establish in Christendom a spirit of unity and co-operation which was unknown to our fathers.

Twenty years ago Mr. Moody gave his attention in part to the establishment of Christian schools in East Northfield and the neighboring town of Mt. Hermon. These schools, well endowed, thoroughly equipped, and moderate in their charges, have some peculiarities which make them unique. The opportunity given to needy students for self-help, the attention given to Bible study, and the rigidly religious spirit which marks them, being foremost among these features. About ten years ago Mr. Moody started his Bible School in Chicago, a training institution intended to fit young men to labor among the poor, carry on evangelistic meetings, serve as city missionaries, or do other work of that kind. Here many hundreds have been started upon useful careers.

Mr. Moody's public services in recent years have been largely occupied with an attempt to quicken the churches, and help ministers of the gospel to undertake evangelism in their own behalf. Following out, we suppose, his convictions or his intuitions, he has not aimed so much at the conversion of men as at prompting and directing the already organized forces of the churches to take hold of this work for themselves. He has helped men to study the Word; he has inspired them with a desire after a life of complete devotion; he has encouraged and urged the ministry to seek for the baptism of the Holy Ghost, and his labors in these respects have been full of power.

Mr. Moody's career as a student and teacher of the Word, as an organizer of the evangelistic forces of the world, as a money raiser, as a builder of schools, as a lay preacher of the gospel, and as a quickener of Christendom, has been one of the great facts of the last quarter-century.—Central Christian Advocate.

Protest against Gambling, etc.

A special to the Times Democrat from Monroe, La., dated Jan. 8, contained the following news: "The Sunday schools of the Methodist, Presbyterian and Baptist Churches have presented resolutions to the city authorities protesting against the hauling of material for the new city high school building on Sunday and the operation of various gambling concerns. The resolutions of the Baptist and Presbyterian Sunday-schools specified the hauling of material and a gambling tent on Desiard street, while those of the Methodist schools made a sweeping protest against the various forms of gambling. The action of these religious bodies was taken yesterday without any flare of trumpets before the public and without the premonition of the parties against whom it was directed. The matter is now before the city authorities."

This action of the Monroe Sunday-schools is highly commendable, and we trust will be effective.

SMILES.

Smile a little, smile a little,
As you go along.
Not alone when life is pleasant,
But when things go wrong.
Care delights to see you frowning,
Loves to hear you sigh;
Turn a smiling face upon her,
Quick the dame will fly.

Smile a little, smile a little,
All along the road;
Every life must have its burden,
Every heart its load;
Why sit down in gloom and darkness
With your grief to sup?
As you drink fate's bitter tonic,
Smile across the cup.

Smile upon the troubled pilgrims
Whom you pass and meet;
Frowns are thorns and smiles are blossoms
Oft for weary feet.
Do not make the way seem harder
By a sullen face.
Smile a little, smile a little,
Brighten up the place.

"TOM LITTLE, WHO SEEKS THE PULPIT OF DR. GREAT."

We all know him. His habitat is in every place; and he, no doubt, will have a numerous progeny to follow him. It is probably no fault of his that his ideas of preaching are so much taller than himself, but it is simply his misfortune. Among his ancestors may be found all the great, but they forgot to bequeath this descendant a single shadow of largeness, save possibly his self-conceit, which is colossal. That he has ever done anything for the uplifting of the world is unthinkable to all who know him and have taken his measure.

He sometimes attends Annual Conferences, and sheds tears under the eloquent sermon of the Bishop, whose silver sentences and golden periods have been rounded on that self-same sermon a few times prior to this present hour! This auditor is "Tom Little, who seeks the pulpit of Dr. Great." We once saw one such character sitting on the front pew at the Sunday morning service at an Annual Conference. He grew eloquent on the following morning in description of the Bishop's sermon, and said that no man in all our great church could preach like that man, and that "it made him tired to listen to his own pastor after hearing such preaching." We took his pastor to one side and got his church pedigree. Here it is: He attends church but once per month, and then yawns if his pastor preaches over twenty-five minutes. If he is ever pleased with the sermon, he never expresses it in so many words, nor does he transmute it into donations for the parsonage larder. He is the most impractical man in the whole church, and is certainly not the most godly. The pastor once asked him for a contribution to the cause of missions, and his reply was as cold as the north side of an ice-berg: "Let the heathen have their own religion."

He is not sound on doctrine, nor do his ideas of preaching involve any apprehension of the necessity of strong doctrine in a really strong sermon. Like a host of superficial people of his class, preaching has the same purpose that Edgar Allen Poe says belongs to poetry: It is merely to please! That is positively the only reason that he does not enjoy the sermon of his pastor. The pastor is deeper and stronger than he is, for his impulses carry him like chaff with every wind of novelty that blows! He will spend more to hear a star preacher than he has given to the church through its regular channels for five years, and will return home on Sunday evening, boasting of his high privilege in hearing Dr. Great. We saw him and a lot of his brothers at a camp meeting in Maryland a few years ago. A certain Bishop of the Methodist Church had been announced to preach, whose fame as an expositor and doctrinal preacher has filled the land. We watched these members of the Little family to see if it were possible for them to appreciate strong meat, when they had learned only how to eat gospel doughnuts! We were not surprised at the result, for before one of the grandest sermons which it has ever been my privilege to hear was finished Tom and all his brothers had gone to sleep! When asked about the sermon later, Tom Little said that he had spent forty dollars in good money to hear the poorest sermon that he had ever heard in all his life, and that the Methodist Church had the poorest preachers in high positions of any ecclesiastical body in the land! This particular Tom Little went back to his rural home to listen with eager ears to the good preaching of Rev. John Plaindealing, and it was some time ere he went again to listen to Dr. Great.

We knew another member of his family—in fact, were his pastor for two years. Of course, it is easy to understand that he had good reason to seek the pulpit of Dr. Great, if his purpose was to hear a fine sermon. He boarded at the same house with his pastor, and knew all his foibles; he was aware of his shortcomings; he was certain of his lack of culture; he was painfully troubled about his pastor's infelicitous style. We said nothing when he informed us that he intended to hear one of the greatest preachers of America the following Sunday, and, if the Lord spared him, he would go to Washington at least once per month to hear some good orator proclaim the everlasting gospel—a high privilege! He went six times, and came home intoxicated, not with eloquence, but with the fiery fluid of Bacchus. Of course, this made Tom Little grow painfully less; but it used to set against the grain to ask him about the great sermons he heard in Washington City, and he at last denied that he was displeased with his own pastor's preaching, but only went to Washington to see the sights! If he did not see the sights, his friends certainly did see him in a sight when he returned to his home after these periods of conviviality.

Of course, this family are peculiar individuals! And that is pardonable with some people, but we fear that some people will go to the regions of everlasting night because of certain peculiarities. It would destroy the church if it depended upon the Little family for its progress and for its strength! And I wonder if the Dr. Greats of the church of Jesus Christ are the mighty force of that church! I may be pardoned when I express the belief that the two-talented men are the force and power of the church! Let all the Dr. Greats say, "Amen!"

THE ROBERTS CASE.

MR. EDITOR: In an article published in the ADVOCATE, of Jan. 4, Dr. W. L. C. Hunnicutt makes the following statement:

"Congress has recently given us an exhibition of the spirit of the mob, perhaps quite as genuine, though not so greatly shocking as others we have witnessed in recent years. Their action seems to say: Roberts is surely guilty; everybody knows it; guilty of a high crime against our Christian civilization. Let him be accursed and banished from Congress without investigation or trial. Sam Hose was burned; Roberts was banished, crucified in his feelings, and dismissed in disgrace. Each deserved his fate, no doubt. If the mob is to be blamed for punishing without trial, shall Congress escape censure when it does a similar thing? Verily we all seem to be made of about the same stuff."

This is a severe charge made on poor information. What has been done is this: An investigating committee has been appointed, whose duty it is to learn if there is sufficient evidence to support the charges made against Mr. Roberts. The case came up yesterday (Jan. 5) for final argument. Pending this investigation the accused was not allowed to take his seat in Congress.

Is there any odor of the mob on this proceeding? Any likeness to the Sam Hose affair? If so, the Methodist Church assumes the role of a mob when a preacher is suspended from the functions of the ministry pending an investigation of charges against him.

But suppose Mr. Roberts is not allowed to take his seat; is there any mob spirit in that? The House has legal power to protect itself by putting out and keeping out unfit members. The charges against Mr. Roberts are not for social or moral breaches, but for the violation of a plain statute. All the arguments have been made from a legal view.

I, with more than a million others, signed a petition asking our representatives in Congress to do what they have done, and what they will probably do yet in this case, and I am sure we never asked them to show the spirit of a mob.

Correspondence.

SOME THOUGHTS CONCERNING THE LATE SESSION OF THE LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

I attended the Annual Conference of Louisiana at Monroe, from the seventh to the tenth, inclusive, and from my point of view pronounce it a grand success. The machinery moved ahead well oiled with the spiritual lubricant of peace and good-will. The Bishop was brimful of good humor as well as good judgment, and kept the Conference wreathed in smiles and on the "qui vive" to catch the sparks which ever and anon he struck from the anvil of wit and humor. I believe he is one of the grandest men in America. I suppose I can say this with propriety, as I am a noninterested party and have no ax to grind.

Bishop Galloway is good at collections, and on his pet theme, the Twentieth Century Fund, he raised $2 600. He remarked that the memorial feature was brought out in this Conference as it had been in no other over which he had presided.

On Sunday he preached from the text, "Henceforth I call you no longer servants, but friends"—an able exegesis of the passage, exalting the relation of friendship far above that of servant or brother. He applied it to the relationship of Christ to his church and its ministry, and showed how closely they are united to his body. Before he began his discourse he requested that not another gentleman should give his seat to a lady, for the simple reason that the men needed preaching more than the ladies. Bishop Galloway could not be sectarian, but he is strongly denominational, and does not at all approve of union meetings or union churches any more than he advocates union homes for different families. In one of his lectures he referred to the man—we all know him—who ran a wire from the top of his head to the top of his conceit and thought he was talking with God—the distance was so great. Such conceit amounts to vanity. The preachers, as a body, looked well and seemed to have a good opinion of themselves, and they should, for of small worth is the man who has a strong self-respect. We have an extreme example of this want of self-regard in an old carpenter who works for us sometimes. He is so entirely destitute of conceit that you might kick him and he would not resent the injury. I am sure I did not see a Methodist preacher who would not maintain his personal identity and exact the respect of others. The disposition of the ministry over the work was unusually well made, there being but few dissatisfied with their appointments. I do not recall but one face on which there were tears.

We were royally entertained in the home of an Episcopal family, but we would not have known that they were not Methodists had I not asked, so entirely in sympathy were they with our work. We heard Dr. Barbee, of Nashville; and I took the grand old man to be a Bishop. His tribute to our senior Bishop was the finest I ever heard—"The greatest man in American Methodism," and I thought how gratifying that must be to the only son sitting there and hearing that glowing tribute.

Monroe has a bright future ahead. She has this year opened a large handsome free traffic bridge just north of the railroad bridge, thus making the two towns as one.

SHUQUALAK, MISS.

Shuqualak circuit has received me kindly enough for the fourth and last year of the quadrennium. The kind people of Shuqualak gave us a pounding on the first night of the new year. Thus the record has been broken as to the time of pastoral service here and in gifts to the preacher. We thank God and take courage.

Our first quarterly meeting embraced the first Sunday of the new year. Dr. W. T. J. Sullivan was with us in the spirit of the Master. He was received very cordially here. The people had known him and loved him in other days. He is the same consecrated, untired Christian gentleman that he has been in the days and years of the past.

The venerable Dr. P. H. Hamilton passed away on Sunday night, Jan. 7. Last year he sought the Lord earnestly and found him precious. After giving himself to the Lord, he gave himself to his people and joined the Methodist Church. He was very happy, and died in peace with God and man. Everybody loved him for his kindness and sunshiny disposition.

Treas. La. Conf. W. F. M. S.

It will be seen from the above report that our pledge to W. B. F. M. of $200 is coming in very slowly. The general treasurer says that up to Dec. 20 not half of the $5,000 so urgently called for had been received.

Dear women of Christ, we have just been reminded by the happy, holy Christmas of our obligation for the all-in-all gift of the Savior, through whom we hope for every good thing in this world and the next. His cause needs our help of hand, mind, soul and strength. Let us balance accounts honestly, and bring our tithes and offerings with clean hands and loving hearts unto the house of the Lord. Are we prosperous? We well can spare the tenth. Are we impoverished? Let us ask ourselves if the possible withholding may not have closed the windows of heaven for us. "Try me and prove me," saith the Lord of hosts. Read Malachi, third chapter. God's promises are yea and nay.

At the beginning of this new year may the God of all the earth help us, through Jesus Christ, to reconsecrate ourselves, body, soul and spirit, unto the service of the Master! And, with fervent zeal burning in our souls, we will not be satisfied until we can give expression to our love by holy offerings towards the advancement of the coming kingdom of our Lord and his Christ.

A WISE SUGGESTION.

Some of the best men I have ever known have spent a great deal of their pastorate in looking at themselves and their own disqualifications, or at the faults of their members, and make them a subject of remark, until the eye of faith has been dimmed, and darkness has covered them over. They are sometimes tempted to charge their want of success not upon themselves alone, but upon others until night gathers over them and the sun is eclipsed.

They labor, until many of them are broken down in health, with sincere and honest purpose to do good; but they have simply mistaken the way. It is wise to win souls. We must work in God's way, and realize the necessity for the constant presence of the Holy Ghost.

On one occasion I was invited by the presiding elder to hold a quarterly meeting for him at a place where the minister was greatly discouraged. He was one of the most blameless, godly men I ever knew, but he was fearful and doubtful about his own efforts or the willingness of God to help him.

When I reached them, for six weeks he had labored and toiled, and no one had been converted, and it did appear as if the man would die. In my soul I loved him, and I pitied him and desired to help him. The church was discouraged because the pastor was. His faith was weak, and theirs weakened also. His hope had gone out, and theirs was eclipsed. The first sermon I preached, I tried to present Christ as the minister's hope, the church's hope, the believer's hope, and the hope of a lost and ruined world. There was feeling, it is true, but the pastor said: "It means nothing; nothing will be done. I have done my utmost, and I have failed." "But," I said, "my brother, God must do it. He alone can help and bless." "Well," said he, "there is so much unbelief." Said I, "Ghosts are always seen in the dark.

'Blind unbelief is sure to err, and scan his work in vain;
God is his own interpreter, and he will make it plain.'

It is yours and mine to work on and trust on until the victory comes."

"There is no victory in sight, and will not be."

In the afternoon two united with the church. I had to beg the permission of offering the privilege, as he said it was no use. He had done it, and done it until he was sick. At night I preached a short sermon, and then invited penitents to the altar, and in five minutes more than thirty were there, and a number were converted and united with the church. It was difficult for him to look away from the darkness which had enveloped him, and at last the light began to dawn, and he was a new man. Faith began to live, and hope grew bright, and love filled the heart of that discouraged man.

I left the next morning, when they thought I ought to have stayed. I said: "No; I ought to go. Your pastor has brought them to the Jordan, and now, while I am here, they just happened to pass over, and now I am going to let you enter into the land of Canaan which is before you. If human credit is of any account, it belongs to him, and not to me." In a little while over one hundred souls were converted under the ministry of that pastor.—Western Advocate.

THE DIGNITY OF LIFE.

How trivial seem the circumstances that sometimes unexpectedly come to us, and give, under the providence of God, direction and impulse to our lives! Truly we "live and move and have our being" in God. The slightest change in our human relations, the falling of an autumnal leaf, the shadows lengthening around us at eventide, the pale, sad face of the sufferer whom we casually meet by the way—these, with ten thousand other incidents in life, are profoundly significant. God watches every one of them. Intent upon our highest good, he approaches us and influences us by the smallest events; nothing is overlooked by him. His ordering of our minutest affairs is always in love. And these slight variations in our human lives, so insignificant—less visible in their effects than the unobserved ripple that breaks upon the shore—are suddenly invested with wondrous meaning when we rightly view them. These variations are made, in the divine thought, the connecting links through which our whole subsequent lives become resplendent.

Trivial circumstances!! Say not this. When we rise to the real dignity of living, nothing seems to us more erroneous than such a view. God is not in the greater, if he be not in the lesser, incidents of our lives. He who is "above all, and through all, and in you all," does not ask us to give him our finite measurements of events or their issues. Our estimates are necessarily valueless, because we are incapable of judging, both as to the special work he has for us in this life, and as to the peculiar circumstances which will aid us in accomplishing our mission. The hallowed meaning of our own providential career eternity alone will fully disclose. So it is everywhere and with us all. O! such an investiture of our personal life should fill us with adoration, and at the same time with meekness of spirit.

When we go forth each day to our appointed tasks, what consecration and divine trust should mark our choices! How near to him should we live! How painstaking to seize all those little threads of influence which are secretly woven into the texture of life; little in human thought, but mighty, so often, in the formation of character in ourselves and others!

How can we live a single hour without prayer? How we ought to cherish habits of charity toward all, increasing the sum of human happiness by our godly cheerfulness, stimulating the virtuous, helping the weak, sympathizing with the distressed, advocating the cause of the oppressed! In this way it will be found that the Master meets us daily in the way, going before us in everything to direct our steps. Thus, in companionship with him, we shall be always ready to hear him speak the final words: "Well done, thou good and faithful servant: thou hast been faithful over a few things, I will make thee ruler over many things: enter thou into the joy of thy Lord!"—New York Advocate.

The Christian Life.

FAITH AND FEELING.

Faith is not to be confounded with feeling, or measured by the amount of emotion that accompanies it. Some feeling, of course, there must be in connection with Christian faith. We can not see the difference between right and wrong, between the purity and kindness and generosity and love of Christ, and the uncleanness and brutality and cruelty and hatefulness of sin, and remain utterly unmoved. We can not stand in the midst of the mighty, world-historic conflict, where on the one side multitudes of men and women are being betrayed and maltreated and plundered by the sin of others, and degraded and polluted by sin in their own hearts; and on the other side thousands and tens of thousands of the best and noblest men and women the world has produced are banded together in the name of Christ in the endeavor, first, to banish sin from their own hearts and lives, and then to banish it from the hearts and lives of others, and so remove it from the world. We can not stand emotionless between these contending hosts. We can not fail to feel some drawing out of our hearts toward Christ. Deep in the real nature of every rational being there is a sound core of loyalty to what is right and true.

This profound response and unswerving allegiance to what is just and true and kind and good, and to Christ as the supreme embodiment and historic champion of truth and goodness in the world, is all the emotional accompaniment that is essential to the reality of faith. This deep response of the whole nature may not make so good a showing on examination; but the most silent and imperceptible truning of the depths of our moral nature toward duty, and toward God as the author of duty and the defender of the right, is worth more than whole tempests of froth and foam on the heaving surface of emotional excitement.

The great question, after all, is not, Have I a love for Christ of which I can be conscious all the time? That way lies discouragement, despondency, despair. Faith must lead the way to love. And the question of faith is, rather, Have I Christ? Whether with little emotion, or with much, am I resolved that what work I do shall be done in his name; what influence I have shall be cast on his side; however cold and dead my emotions may become, however weak and blundering my efforts may prove, such as I am, I will be his? If we are thus resolved to serve him, we already believe in him; and we shall come to love him in due time.

Faith again is not to be confounded with works, nor measured by them, though works are the ultimate and inevitable fruit of faith. Faith lays hold on the ideal; and our works come far short of that. Faith is the deeper principle. Ideals are more significant than facts. The idealism of the heart rather than the ritualism of the hands is the true expression of the real self.

So here again the great question is not, What have I done? but, What am I trying to do? Three men are on a mountain side. The first is only a few steps from the base; the second is half-way up; the third is within a few steps of the summit. Which of these men is nearest the summit? "The third, of course," says every superficial observer, judging by works alone. Let us look deeper at the minds and hearts of these three men. The first has his face set resolutely toward the summit, and is determined to press forward until it shall be reached. The second man is undecided, looking sometimes up and sometimes down. The third has seen enough already, and is thinking of descent. Once more, Which of these three men is nearest the summit? The third is farthest from it of them all. Whether the second will ever reach it you can not say. The first man is nearest of them all, for his mind and will are on the heights already, and in due time will bring his body there.—W. D. Hyde, in "Outlines of Social Theology."

PLEASANT HILL, MISS.

We are settled down to housekeeping again in one of the neatest parsonages in this district. We are enjoying its comforts this Winter weather. The good people of Pleasant Hill have given a royal welcome in the way of a pounding. There were pounds of such things as sausage, hams, coffee, canned goods, peas, potatoes, rice, sugar, soda, dried fruit, soap, scotch oats, lard, and stockings for the children. There are pounds and pounds of each article named. The cook at the parsonage will know what to cook for some time. We will be living for a time, at least, "on the fat of the land."

Now, the thing for us to do is to give this people the best year's work of our life. Pray for us, that we may go in and out before this people in the way God would have us go. And may this be the best year the church in all its various branches has ever known. Oh, for an outpouring of the Holy Ghost all over the land, an ingathering of souls for God and heaven.

Pray for us. God bless you and yours! R. P. GOAR.

COLD WATER, MISS.

The lightning struck the North Mississippi Conference at its last session. Yes, it did. The lightning struck me, too, and knocked me from the bottom. I said to my wife: "Well, there is one thing certain. We'll not live in Hot Water this year." And that is no small consideration, I'll tell you. Our people gave us a cordial welcome. We have one of the nicest and most convenient parsonages in the Conference. We preached on Christmas Eve in our church here, morning and night, on the results of the birth of Christ. At the morning service we passed paper through the audience and ask them to write what they expected to give on missions, Conference collections, etc., for 1900. The congregation was not large, but the subscriptions aggregated $107.50. Day before Christmas one of my good, kind and thoughtful stewards sent us a Christmas gift a barrel of flour and sacks of fruit, nuts and candy.

We hope by the grace of God to make full proof of our ministry among this kind and good people.

TCHOUPITOULAS MISSION.

We desire to give this expression of gratitude to Rayne Memorial Sunday-school and Epworth League for their generous help to us in providing for the children of this mission. There are not many spots of sunshine coming into the lives of the majority of these children; and it is with eager anticipation they look forward to this glad time. Last year our dear Bro. Harrison so lavishly provided for the little ones. We did not know just what we should do this year; and as the time rapidly drew near this little army, with eager faces, would remind me that they must be provided for in some way. And when one of the dear young workers from the above-named League and Sunday-school came to the mission one day and told us that each child of that school was going to donate some toy to these less-favored children, and thus proving the blessedness of giving rather than of receiving, we indeed felt thankful, and appreciated this love-prompted, self-denying spirit. The supply was ample, and in quality and quantity all that could be desired. The Epworth League sent us one hundred bags of candy, so attractively put up, and so liberal in size. We feel that the Master smiled approvingly on this, done as unto him.

COLUMBIA, MISS.

I will write something of our move and new work. After taking my whole family to visit my father and mother at Sharon and spend possibly our last Christmas together on earth, we made preparations to start for Columbia on Thursday, Dec. 28. We had all of our goods packed and two wagons engaged, and everything ready to start soon Thursday morning. But before day we heard the unwelcome rain peppering down, which continued until about 9 A. M. Then we began to get our drivers and teams together and load our wagons. We got our wagons started about 1 P. M., and wife, three children and myself in our jump-seat buggy with our faithful black horse "Mack" to pull us; left the parsonage at Gallman at 2 P. M. for our sixty five-miles trip. We all would have made the trip through on time and in good shape had it not been for a bad wheel and a weak axle in one wagon. The wheel broke down at noon on Friday in the piney woods of Lawrence county, which caused us all to be in the night finding a lodging. Started Saturday morning before day with a newly fitted wheel, and full of hope for our destination that night. But we were doomed to be disappointed. We had not gone one mile until the hind axle broke in two. These accidents caused our wagons to be delayed one day, and a good many of our goods to get wet, and increased the cost of our move about ten dollars. Notwithstanding all our delay "Mack" brought me and family to the parsonage in Columbia at 3:30 P. M., Saturday, where we found a goodly number of the elect Methodist women, with good fires and a hearty welcome, awaiting us. They had provided everything needful for the outer and inner man. We found the parsonage well furnished and plenty in the larder for several days, and a hot supper on the table. We could not have been sent to a better people. They have the new parlor nearly completed, and the painters are at work putting on a new dress.

After I got my appointment one of the preachers said to me, "Well, Williams; the 'storms' won't blow at Columbia like they did at Gallman." I said, "That's to be seen." Now, if present indications and conditions can be relied upon as forecasts of the future, Columbia will not be far behind Gallman, if any. We believe God is going to do great things for us this year. We are trusting, praying and working.

W. M. WILLIAMS, P. C.

WESTLAKE, LA.

After a move of two hundred and sixty-six miles, we reached our home at Westlake, where we found the good people awaiting our arrival. We got here at eight o'clock in the night, but the good people did not forget to prepare a very inviting supper for us. The table was decorated with the choicest of flowers. This was very much appreciated, but the baked chicken and delicious pies and cakes of every kind were much more appreciated.

We have a good people here, willing and ready to help in the Master's cause, and the outlook for a prosperous year is very encouraging. So I can't say that I regret the change that was made at all by the Bishop, for I am always willing and ready to go where the church thinks best to send me. I have faith to believe that God will take care of his own. I never expect, however, to find better people to serve than I had on the Ponchatoula charge. They did not allow their preacher to want for anything the two years while I was with them, and a better merchant I never expect to find to live by than the honorable Bro. J. R. Ables, for he is truly a preacher's friend. So may God ever bless those good people of Ponchatoula charge!

The preacher and wife of Westlake and Jackson Street Churches were made very happy a few nights ago by a great pounding. A party of over fifty, of every denomination, came in at eight o'clock, bringing goods of every kind, so much that we scarcely could find room to store them away. So we are under many lasting obligations to them for this generous deed.

We have fairly good congregations at both churches, and they are still on the increase. I have been here near three weeks, and have made somewhere near fifty pastoral visits, attended one funeral, and preached six times. I have a great field for labor; just thousands of sinners to look after and to work with. This is a saw-mill country; more saw-mills than I ever saw before at any place; but this is only the better. We all have something to do, and everything here is moving right along. All seem to be in good spirits. So, pray for me, Doctor, and for my people, that this may be the most prosperous year that Westlake and Jackson Street have ever had.

I am going to do my best to get every family on my work to take the ADVOCATE. The ADVOCATE is very much appreciated in our home. It seems that we just could not get along without it. I am anxiously awaiting every issue, to see what good news it has for me.

Pulpit Apologies.

The preacher who apologizes to his congregation for the sermon he is about to preach needs a curtain lecture on "quitting." It makes people weary to hear a man begin by saying that he has been "indisposed," or "nervously prostrated," or "overrun with other cares," or "out of town," or "handicapped by circumstances over which he has no control," etc., and so on. No matter how good the excuse may be, keep it to yourself. We received that advice from a clear-headed man years ago, and it has been worth a good deal since.—Holston Methodist.

The Golden State is seriously considering the necessity of quarantining against consumptives. This means that God's fresh air and sunshine, nowhere more entrancing and beautiful than on the Pacific slope, may be denied to the unfortunate sufferers. Thousands have been greatly benefited and many cured by the delicious atmosphere of California, and it appears a most cruel measure, even though sanctioned by medical. Many persons now in the advanced stages of consumption, and surely doomed, could have been cured by early resort to that most gracious healing remedy, MARSDEN'S PECTORAL BALM.

THE RIGHT SORT OF RESOLVES.

As the old year died and the new year came into being, countless thousands gave place to solemn and sorrowful reflections, and then, turning their faces to the untried future, made high resolves, which, alas! in numerous instances will not outlast a few fleeting days. Few indeed are they who at such season do not experience some degree of repentance as well as the thrill of nobler impulses; but whether defeat shall soon follow, and the last state be worse than the first, depends upon the nature of the penitence felt and of the faith exercised. The sinner or the backslider who is merely sorry because his iniquities have brought trouble and disgrace upon him, and whose pride is simply wounded, though he may determine to live better, is far from permanent reformation. Trusting chiefly to his own weakened will, and not having repented toward God, he soon finds that despite his determination to be more careful, his old habits have not taken leave of him, and again he is led in chains.

The determination to "quit one's meanness" is highly commendable; but, unless accompanied by a purpose to serve God and by prayer, it will not long withstand the assaults of evil habit and temptation. Repentance never means much unless it is towards God, nor has reformation that aims at nothing more than respectability and worldly success any great resistive power. He who would be a constant victor in the struggle with sin and self must seek divine as well as self-help.

Many have resolved, as they set out upon this year, to live nearer to God; but, unless this includes also the purpose to live nearer to their fellow-men, their experience will prove disappointing, and poor will be their progress. No man can live close to God, and at the same time be at a distance in feeling and action from his fellow-men. "And this commandment have we from him, That he who loveth God love his brother also." The pious resolutions of the man who congratulates himself upon being above the common herd, and who is little touched by the wants and woes of the unfortunate, are little to be esteemed. The disciple who is unwilling to "condescend to men of low estate," though he be punctilious in performing acts of worship, sadly lacks the Christ-spirit. The author, Tourgeneff, tells of a beggar who asked for alms. The man who was approached felt for money, and, finding none, said, "Brother, I have none." "But you said, 'Brother,'" answered the beggar, "and that was an alms." Thus strikingly does this incident bring before us the yearning of the masses for sympathy, as well as the grateful satisfaction with which it is often received. During this year of grace let us, in our effort to live more nobly, be always considerate of the wishes and welfare of others, and set our affections unreservedly upon things above.

One of the latest exhibitions of philanthropy in this country is the gift of $2,500,000 by Professor James Munyon of Philadelphia, to found an industrial school for fatherless girls. The school is for native American girls who are entirely dependent. The foundation of the buildings will be laid within the next year.—Wesleyan Advocate.

A MEMORIAL SERVICE.

A memorial service in honor of Dr. C. G. Andrews was held at First Church, Jackson, Miss., on Sunday night, the fourteenth instant. The opening prayer was made by Rev. H. P. Lewis. Rev. C. A. Powell read the Scripture lesson. The following resolutions by the faculty of Millsaps College were read by Dr. W. B. Murrah.

After a few remarks by the pastor of the church, Bishop Galloway delivered an address which, for eloquence and appropriateness, we have rarely heard equalled and never surpassed. We would be glad to have it entire for publication, but will make no attempt at reporting it, as no abridgement would do it justice. A beautiful and appropriate service of song was rendered by the choir. The benediction was pronounced by Rev. C. F. Emery. It was eminently fitting that such a service should be held here, where Dr. Andrews had served as pastor, and where his friends are legion.

RESOLUTIONS RESPECTING DR. ANDREWS.

Whereas, It has pleased God to take from the scenes of his earthly labor Dr. Charles Green Andrews, the honored vice president of the Board of Trustees of Millsaps College; And, whereas, Dr. Andrews was the steadfast friend of this institution from the beginning, and by his wise counsel and earnest support contributed largely to give it favor and success; therefore,

Resolved, 1st, That we, as a faculty, claim the privilege of adding to the many expressions of esteem called forth by his death our tribute also of respect and admiration for those high qualities which gave him honor among men, and for the purity of character and engaging gentleness and kindness of heart which made his presence a benediction, his friendship a tower of strength.

Resolved, 2nd, That in the large work which Dr. Andrews did for the church as pastor, teacher and legislator, we recognize the highest type of the Christian statesman and gentleman, the man of strong convictions, of charitable judgment, true to Methodist polity and doctrine, and adorning at all times and everywhere the doctrine of Him to whose services he had dedicated his life.

Resolved, 3rd, That while we bow in sorrow to the divine will in this dispensation of his providence, yet we rejoice that our honored friend was permitted to live so long to show forth by his walk and conversation that beauty of holiness and consecration to duty which make his life, both for example and achievement, an inspiration to the young and a precious legacy to the church he served so well.

Resolved, 4th, That these resolutions be spread upon the Minutes of the faculty, and that the secretary be instructed to forward a copy of the same to the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE for publication and to the family of the deceased, with the assurance of our sincere sympathy in their hour of sore bereavement.

EAST MISSISSIPPI FEMALE COLLEGE.

In a note to the editor, Pres. J. W. Beeson, of East Mississippi Female College, says: "We have arranged for room in the buildings for eight more girls, to enter at the beginning of the second term, which is Jan. 24. We shall be glad to have any who intend to enter to apply at once. These eight may come the last half of the session at reduced rates. We want to fill up every inch of space. Everything is moving along smoothly and nicely at the college. Truly the Lord is good to us."

How we look at life is of far more importance than what we have.

The Christian who does not try to live above suspicion lacks either in consecration or in integrity.

The man who deserves a better place than he is in will succeed far better and enjoy life more than the man who is in a better place than he deserves.

Those who are most faithful to duty are seldom complainers. On the other hand, grumblers are, for the most part, shirks and indifferent workers.

It is infinitely better to be poor, and have a clean record for honesty than to live luxuriously and be pointed at as a slippery scoundrel who can not be trusted to pay his bills.

THE PREACHER'S PERSONALITY.

It is very plain that God, in choosing men for the gospel ministry, calls such as possess the elements of a healthy moral personality. And the qualifications which the New Testament states as being requisite in a preacher indicate that he must have a high grade of character. And this idea is lodged in the minds of very many people who make no profession of religion. Very naturally they expect that a preacher shall be a man of honor, of integrity, of pure sincerity; a careful observer of law, both divine and civil. Very naturally, also, if a preacher be destitute of such qualities, or either of them, in a marked measure, the people of the world will soon lose all respect for him, and, of course, Christian people do, too. The editor of the Wesleyan Methodist says: "If the personality of the preacher is to be present as one of the essential elements of the good sermon, that personality must be of a high order. Otherwise there is inevitably introduced into the sermon a fatal weakness. Invariably we turn away in disgust from the sermon which sets forth a virtue which we can not find in the preacher himself. No one is willing to so abuse his sense of the fitness of things as to sit voluntarily and listen to a man who preaches eloquently upon the beauties of heroism, yet who is himself a dastardly coward. Sometimes we are forced to listen to men who preach beautifully on the supreme excellence of love, but who are themselves the most perfect haters we have ever known. This is always an affliction."

These statements apply especially to those hearers who are quite sensitive to the moral fitness of things, the right relation of moral character to the divine calling of preaching. I know of a preacher who is morally very corrupt, whose word is very unreliable, who is, in fact, habitually untruthful; and yet he will preach the necessity of an exalted life, and speak often of the excellence of the various Christian virtues; so that one who does not know him would suppose that he is an intensely spiritual and godly man. It is no wonder that those who do know him do not want to hear any sermon or religious talk from him. But it is a wonder that some Christians will persist in hearing him and in supporting him.

C. H. WETHERBE.

ARMY WORK OF THE Y. M. C. A.

In response to an invitation from the War Department, the International Committee of the Young Men's Christian Associations has recently sent eight secretaries to work with the army in the Philippines. They have carried with them on the transports books, papers, magazines, games, stationery, and other things intended for the physical comfort of the army, as well as organs, song books, Testaments and other matter for use in religious and social work.

By the organization of Regimental Young Men's Christian Associations, which undertake the arrangement of entertainments, literary and musical clubs as well as religious services, the tedium of the long voyage is relieved, and the secretaries enabled to become acquainted with the men, and help them maintain the standard of morals which they had before enlisting.

The secretary who accompanied the Forty-third Infantry on the transport "Meade" wrote from Gibraltar that: "The association which we have organized has an enrollment of nearly six hundred. A literary society, chorus and glee club is already at work, and a committee appointed to take charge of a systematic course of Bible reading, which was followed by a number of the men and officers. Studies in the lives of Paul and Moses have been particularly interesting during our trip through the Mediterranean Sea, past Italy, Malta, Egypt, and Arabia. In addition to these activities, a class in English, with a membership of twenty-five among the enlisted men, meets each morning."

A letter from the "Thomas," which is said to be the finest troop ship in the world, says: "I feel sure that if those who are behind this movement, and who furnish the means, could hear the expressions of gratitude uttered by the soldiers, it would warm their hearts as it does mine. 'God bless the Y. M. C. A.,' and 'The Y. M. C. A. is the best friend the soldier has,' are remarks heard frequently."

FRESH VICTIMS OF CHRISTIAN SCIENCE FOLLY.

"Diphtheria and Christian Science have had a bitter battle in a New Brighton family for the past two weeks. Diphtheria has won, so far. Two children are dead, while a third child and the father are dangerously ill with the same disease. Frank Martzolf and his wife have been believers in Christian Science for three years, and so confirmed in the doctrine are they that they have seen their two little ones die of malignant diphtheria, and were willing to see their remaining child perish rather than take her case 'out the hands of the Lord.'

"Not until forced to do so by the health authorities would the parents permit a physician in the house, and even then the father refused to give the medicine prescribed, and the health officials were compelled to take the family in charge. When the first child, Nancy, died, Martzolf called on an undertaker to bury her. When asked for the certificate of death, he said there was none, and Coroner Taylor began an investigation. He found the second child, Roy, in the last stages of the disease, and ordered Dr. Boyd to treat him. The father refused to give the boy the medicine, and he died a few hours later. The health officials are now in charge, and may be able to save the third child and the father, both of whom are down with the disease.

'Beaver Valley people are very much wrought up over the matter, and it is likely that Christian Science, with its prominent leaders in New Brighton, will be investigated by the courts."

NOTICE.

I have appointed Rev. G. A. Guice presiding elder of the Meridian district, in place of Dr. C. G. Andrews, deceased. W. W. DUNCAN.

Perhaps nothing more unerringly reveals the littleness of mediocre men, especially in the ministry, than the desire to be conspicuous in the public eye. To be invited to sit in the pulpit at a public service, or upon the platform, is the occasion for unbounded satisfaction with a certain type of minds. There are some well-known ministers in every denomination in this city and the suburbs who invariably are found upon the platform on any special occasion. To serve on committees is a privilege which this class of men covet, and in some way they are generally successful. Not of this kind was the great and masterful Horace Bushnell. He was too busy about matters of prime importance to cherish small ambitions or to waste himself on minor matters. He said of himself late in life: "I was almost never a president or a vice president of any society, and almost never on any committee. Take the report of my doings on the platform of the world's business, and it is naught.' The young minister who finds himself falling into the desire "to be seen of men," will do well to put a determined check upon this infirmity. It will be remembered that Jesus censured the Pharisees because they loved "the chief seats in the synagogue."—Zion's Herald (Boston).

It is a great thing to have a clear head; it is a greater thing to have a clean heart.

It is a great thing to take care of the mortal body; it is a greater thing to take care of the immortal soul.

It is a great thing to be diligent in respect of things that are seen and temporal; it is a greater thing to be diligent in respect of those things that are unseen and eternal—James McLeod.

Last Sunday morning Dr. W. H. LaPrade, pastor of Rayne Memorial Church, preached to a large audience a very forceful and stirring sermon, in which he vigorously arraigned the gambling and saloon and Sabbath desecration evils rampant in this city, and pleaded earnestly for a more aggressive type of Christianity in dealing with these and other abounding iniquities. There is scarcely a city in the Union where the forces that make for righteousness are more fully asleep, or are less united, than is the case in this gay and prosperous, but sin-cursed metropolis. Every pulpit in the city should thunder long and loud against the frightful moral corruption that prevails, and every friend of good morals, no matter how small his influence, should show his colors and rally to the charge. It is not a fight to be won in a few days, or a few weeks; but if even a small per cent. of the resident Christians will co-operate with each other and keep up the struggle, victory is sure in the end; "for," as the Scripture says, "there is no restraint to the Lord to save by many or by few."

Representative Sharkey, of the Mississippi Legislature, has introduced a juvenile prison reformatory bill, which provides that all criminals under the age of seventeen shall be kept separate from the older convicts, and that two hours a day shall be set apart for their moral and mental training. Those convicted who are between the ages of seventeen and twenty may, at the option of the circuit judge, be sent to the reformatory of the penitentiary proper. A bill of substantially the same nature was passed by the Legislature in 1896. It went over, however, and was vetoed by the governor at the special session of 1897. We are not informed as to what per cent. of the criminals in Mississippi are juveniles, but our impression is that the number is quite small. Hence there may not be urgent need of the establishment of such an institution just now, but however this may be, there is no question that some provision should be made for separating youthful and reformable offenders from hardened and habitual criminals, even though the former be but few in number. Mr. Sharkey's bill aims at the right thing, and is deserving of favorable consideration.

MEETING OF THE MISSISSIPPI STATE LEAGUE CABINET.

By request we copy the following from the Epworth Era, of Jan. 4:

Pursuant to a call of President H. Walter Featherstnn, D. D, the following persons met in the Methodist Chnrch at Greenwood, Friday, Dec. 1, 1899, in joint session with the North Mississippi Annnal Conference: Rev. H. Walter Featherstnn, of Brookhaven, president; W. F. Lagrone, of West Point, first vice-president; Mrs. G. H. Mathis, of Colnmbns, third vice-president; Miss Vic Thompson, of Tnpelo, secretary; Rev. H. G. Hawkins, of Madison, editor of League colnmn in NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE; Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, of Enpora, chairman of Epworth League Board of North Mississippi Conference; Rev. J. H. Shumaker, of Inka, chairman of Mission Board of North Mississippi Conference; Rev. A. W. Langley, of Abbeville, League secretary of Holly Springs district; Rev. J. H. Smith, of Wall Hill, League secretary of Sardis district.

The meeting was called to order by the president, and led in prayer by Rev. R. H. B. Gladney. The chair then stated that he had called that body together with the North Mississippi Conference in order primarily to secure the co-operation of the League and Mission Boards in the promotion of the "Holston Mission Plan," nndertaken by the State League. He then entered into a fnll explanation of the "Holston Plan" of raising the assessment for missions in fnll. The secretary then introduced a resolntion reqnesting the chairman of the Leagne Board to include in his report to the Conference the indorsement of the mission work undertaken by the State League, and nrge npon the preachers the importance of pushing this work in their Leagues and organizing the missionary department, if not already organized. This motion prevailed. First Vice-President W. F. Lagrone then snbmitted a leaflet pertaining to the organization of the missionary department, stressing in particular the educational idea. This plan was indorsed.

Inqniry was made in regard to why the Minntes of the last State Conference had been so long delayed, and it was decided to cnt the order down to one thonsand copies.

The chair next inqnired what success had been made in regard to collecting the State assessment. The secretary stated that only an amonnt sufficient to meet the expense already incnrred was thonght to be in the hands of the treasurer. The chair instrncted the secretary to pnsh the collection of this fnnd. He then presented the idea of having the secretary travel over the State, meeting with the central committees in each district and organizing fnlly for the work. A general discnssion of this idea was entered into, and the chair finally rnled that it could be decided later.

Upon motion, the date of the next State Conference was fixed for the last week in April, 1900.

At 9:30 o'clock on Satnrday morning, Dec. 2, President Featherstnn again called the meeting to order, himself leading in prayer. The pamphlet on Jnnior work, by Miss Estelle Boothe, State Jnnior Snperintendent, which she had sent in for the indorsement of the Cabinet, was fnll of helpfnl snggestions for Jnnior workers, and the secretary was instrncted to have it printed in the form of a booklet and mailed to the Jnnior workers throughout the State. Mrs. G. H. Mathis, the third vice-president, then gave a presentation of her plans for the promotion of the State work in the Literary Department. The article she snbmitted was highly commended by President Featherstnn.

Rev. R. A. Meek, secretary of the Tri-State organization, then appeared before the Cabinet and spoke in the interest of the Tri-State organization. The literary work was again reverted to, and Mrs. Mathis snbmitted a chart for Bible stndy, and said that she had contemplated getting ont a book on the literary work for the nse of the Leagues generally, in which this chart for Bible stndy was to appear.

A resolntion was adopted indorsing the report blanks, Annnal Record Book, and Secretaries' Mannal, gotten ont by Mr. Gns W. Thomasson for the nse of the Texas Leagnes, and reqnesting their issnance from the Pnblishing Honse. W. F. Lagrone then introdnced a motion indorsing the Tri-State organization, and pledging the snpport of the Mississippi Cabinet to the committees in charge. Also adopted.

A request came from the Mission Board for President Featherstnn to present the "Holston Plan" to the Conference that evening. This he gladly consented to do. Next a resolntion was passed expressing regret at the absence from the meet ing of Drs. H. M. DuBose, Rev. P. L. Cobb, D. G. Pattor, Miss Grace Loper, and Miss Estelle Boothe, and gratification at the very able management of the Epworth Era.

The programme for the coming State Conference was next arranged. The body then adjonrned to meet at 3 P. M. with the Board of Missions.

At the appointed honr the Cabinet met with the Board of Missions. President Featherstnn gave an explanation of the "Holston Plan" to this body, and asked for co-operation and indorsement of the same in their report to the Conference. The chair assnred him that these requests wonld be granted.

This closing the work of the State Cabinet for the time, the body adjonrned after a session of laborions work.

State Secretary.

Prof. D. H. Bishop, of Fort Worth, Texas, will be in charge of our English department after the beginning of the second term of our present session. Prof. Bishop will come to us with the highest testimonials from eminent educators. He was graduated from the Vanderbilt University with the M. A. degree, and was assistant in English in that institution for two years. For several years he has been in his present position as professor of English in the Polytechnic College at Fort Worth, Texas.

As announced in your last issue, the second term of our session will begin Monday, the twenty-ninth of January. Many students are just at the stage of advancement to make it desirable to enter at that time. On application we will be glad to send catalogue or give any other information relative to requirements for admission.

W. B. MURRAH,
President.

Hattiesburg, Miss., Jan. 15, 1900.

To Ministers of the North Mississippi Conference.

Having been entrusted with the honored position at your treasurer of Board of Missions of the last session of our Annual Conference, and desiring to give you the best service possible, I must be aided in my efforts by each minister or layman whose duty it is to collect said funds. Now, it is very necessary that our missionary funds have prompt attention, for, while we are enjoying the comforts of life, and surrounded by so many evidences of God's goodness, our brother in the far-off mission fields is in need, and, having a much greater sacrifice to make than ourselves, it is nothing but our duty to bring this matter promptly before our congregation and people, that they may be relieved of this strain upon them, and be enabled to give much more and better work towards the advancement of the cause of the Master. We are all interested in the great and glorious work of spreading the gospel of the Christ. Let us begin at once to show our love for him by providing for the wants of our beloved missionaries.

My postoffice is Aberdeen, and I am prepared to receive your collections by local checks on your bank, express money order, or registered mail. Please begin your collections for the cause without delay.

F. P. JINKINS,
Treasurer.

OVER-WORK WEAKENS YOUR KIDNEYS.

Unhealthy Kidneys Make Impure Blood

THE PROMPT WAY TO CURE YOURSELF WHEN SYMPTOMS SHOW THAT YOUR KIDNEYS ARE OUT OF ORDER.

The way to be well is to pay attention to your kidneys.

They are the most important organs of the body—the blood filters.

All the blood in your body passes through your kidneys once every three minutes.

The kidneys strain or filter out the impurities in the blood—that is their work.

Does your blood run through your bowels?

What the bowel-cleaner does is to throw out the poisons confined in your bowels ready for absorption into your blood, but the poisons which are already in your blood, causing your present sickness, it leaves there.

There is no other way of purifying your blood except by means of your kidneys.

That is why bowel-cleaners fail to do their work—they fail to help the kidneys.

When you are sick, then, no matter what you think the name of your disease is, the first thing you should do is to afford aid to your kidneys by using Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root the great Kidney Remedy.

In taking Swamp-Root you afford natural help to nature, for Swamp-Root is the most perfect healer and gentle aid to the kidneys that is known to medical science.

Dr. Kilmer, our eminent physician and specialist, has attained a far famed reputation through the discovery and marvelous success of Swamp-Root in purifying the blood, and thereby curing chronic and dangerous diseases, caused by sick kidneys, of which some of the symptoms are given below.

Pain or dull ache in back or head, rheumatism, neuralgia, nervousness, dizziness, irregular heart, sleeplessness, sallow complexion, dropsy, irritability, loss of ambition, obliged to pass water often during the day, and to get up many times at night and all forms of kidney, bladder and uric acid troubles.

Swamp-Root is for sale the world over at druggists in bottles of two sizes and two prices—fifty cents and one dollar. Remember the name, Swamp-Root, and the address, Binghamton, N. Y.

To prove what Swamp-Root will do for you every reader of the "CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE" will be sent free by mail, prepaid, a sample bottle of Swamp-Root and a book about Health, Diet and Disease as Related to Your Kidneys. This book contains many of the thousands upon thousands of testimonial letters received from men and women cured.

The great discovery, Swamp-Root, is so remarkably successful that our readers are advised to write for a sample bottle and to kindly mention NEW ORLEANS "CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE" when sending their addresses to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y.

A little bit of sunshine gold
Dissolved in morning air.

Add to your meal some merriment,
Add thought for kith and kin;
And then, as a prime ingredient,
A plenty of work throw in.

Flavor it all with essence of love
And a little dash of play;
Let a nice old book and a glance above
Complete the well-spent day.

THE BULWARK OF SELF-CONFIDENCE.

"If a man possesses the consciousness of what he is," said Schelling, "he will soon learn what he ought to be; let him have a theoretical respect for himself, and a practical will soon follow." Levi said that a person under the firm persuasion that he can command resources, virtually has them. "Humility is the part of wisdom, and is most becoming in men," said Kossuth: "but let no one discourage self-reliance; it is, of all the rest, the greatest quality of true manliness." Froude wrote: "A man must learn to respect himself, to be independent of charity or accident. It is on this basis only that any superstructure of intellectual cultivation worth having can possibly be built."

"A man can not aspire if he looks down. If he would rise, he must look up." God does not create us with aspirations and longings for heights which we can not reach.

Great men have ever had great confidence in themselves. "When I am dead," said the great physiologist, "you will not soon meet with another John Hunter." Wordsworth felt sure of his place in history, and never hesitated to say so. Dante predicted his own fame. Kepler said it did not matter whether his contemporaries read his books or not. "It may well wait a century for a reader, since God has waited six thousand years for an observer like myself." When John C. Calhoun was in Yale College, he was ridiculed by his fellow-students for his intense application to study. "Why, sir," he replied, "I am forced to make the most of my time, that I may acquit myself creditably when in Congress." A laugh followed, when he exclaimed: "Do you doubt my going to Congress? I assure you, if I were not convinced of my ability to reach the national capitol as a representative within the next three years, I would leave college this very day."

Egotism, so common in men of rank, is a necessity. Nature gives man large hopes, lest he falter before reaching the high mark she sets for him. So she has overloaded his egotism, often beyond the point of agreeability, to make sure that he will persist in pushing his way upward. Self-confidence indicates reserve power. It shows that one feels equal to the occasion.

A poor Scotch weaver used to pray daily that he might have a better opinion of himself. Why not? Can I ask another to respect me, when I do not set the example? If the world sees that I do not respect myself, it has a right to reject me as an impostor, because I claim to be worthy of the good opinion of others when I have not my own.

The only way to enjoy our own respect is to deserve it. To deserve it, we must possess genuine merit according to the best decision of the judge within, who knows all about our cases. To attain the most thorough self-respect, we must give our earnest attention to being, instead of striving to keep up appearances by simply seeming. What would you think of a man who would neglect himself and treat his shadow with the greatest courtesy?

The world has a right to look to me for my own rating. We stamp our own value upon ourselves, and can not expect to pass for more.

This is a busy world, and men have no time to hunt about in obscure places for retiring merit. They prefer to take a man at his own estimate until he proves himself unworthy. The world admires courage and manliness, and despises a young man who goes about "with an air of perpetual apology for the unpardonable sin of being in the world."

Self-respect is the root of most of the virtues, especially of cleanliness, chastity, reverence, sobriety and honesty. But it is not enough for us to possess these characteristics, unless we fully realize the fact, and feel a personal interest in retaining them. It is a great thing to have brains, but of what use is a tool, however good, if you are not aware of its possession, or afraid to use it? It is vastly better to be able and willing to command your brains confidently under all circumstances.

But self-respect must be accompanied by self-conquest, or our strong feelings may prove but runaway horses. He who would command others must first learn to obey, and he who would control his own powers must learn to be submissive to the still small voice within. Shame and its consequent degradation follow the loss of our own good opinion rather than the esteem of others. Too many yield in the perpetual conflict between temptation to gratify the coarser appetites and aspirations for the good, the true, and the beautiful. Voices unheard by those around us whisper, "Don't," but too often self-respect is lost, the will lies prostrate, and the debauch goes on. Such battles must be fought by all; be ours the victory born of self-control, aided by that Heaven which always helps him who prays while putting his own shoulder to the wheel.

Believe in yourself. You may succeed when others do not believe in you, but never when you do not believe in yourself.

"I call that mind free," says a wise thinker, "which escapes the bondage of matter, which, instead of stopping at the material universe and making it a prison wall, passes beyond it to its Author, and finds in the radiant signatures which it everywhere bears of the Infinite Spirit helps to its own spiritual enlargement."—Success.

DISCONTENTED HOUSEKEEPERS.

Not without reason does Mrs. Amelia E. Barr write as follows in the North American Review:

"One of the saddest domestic features of the day is the disrepute into which housekeeping has fallen; for that is a woman's first natural duty and answers to the needs of her best nature. It must be noted that this revolt of certain women against housekeeping is not a revolt against their husbands; it is simply a revolt against their duties. They consider housework hard and monotonous and inferior, and confess with a cynical frankness that they prefer to engross paper, or dabble in art, or embroider pillow shams, or sell goods, or in some way make money to pay servants who will cook their husband's dinner and nurse their babies for them. And they believe that in this way they show themselves to have superior minds, and ask credit for a deed which ought to cover them with shame. For actions speak louder than words, and what does such action say? In the first place, it asserts that any stranger, even a young, uneducated peasant girl hired for a few dollars a month, is able to perform the duties of the house-mistress and the mother. In the second place, it substitutes a poor ambition for love, and hand service for heart service. In the third place, it is a visible abasement of the loftiest duties of womanhood to the capacity of the lowest paid service. A wife and mother can not thus absolve her own soul; she simply disgraces and traduces her holiest work. Suppose even that housekeeping is hard and monotonous, it is not more so than men's work in the city. The first lesson a business man has to learn is to do pleasantly what he does not like to do. All regular useful work must be monotonous, but love ought to make it easy; and at any rate, the tedium of housework is not any greater than the tedium of office work. As for housekeeping being degrading, that is the veriest nonsense. Home is a little royalty. It is only the weakest, silliest women who can not lift their work to the level of their thoughts, and so ennoble both."

GIRLS SHOULD LEARN TO COOK.

Good housekeeping has far more to do with domestic happiness than young lovers dream of. I believe that these times need women whose most beautiful work will be done inside their own doors. Without good housekeeping the romance will soon go out of marriage. Of course, the man who prizes woman chiefly because she "looketh well to the ways of her household," does not deserve to have a good wife. He should merely employ a housekeeper and pay her good wages. But there are social, moral, and spiritual uses proceeding from the wise regulation of the household which bestow a dignity on what would otherwise be trifling. No matter what a girl's accomplishments may be, her education is incomplete if she has no knowledge of bakeology, boilology, roastology, stitchology, and mendology. Even if the girl should never be required to do the work herself, she ought to know whether it is done in a proper manner.—Rev. M. Peters, in Lutheran Observer.

A Small Beginning.

A little snow ball on the summit of the Alps, rolled up by the winds, moves slowly downward. Gaining in strength and size, it grows rapidly to giant proportions, and finally becomes the frightful avalanche, destroying everything in its path. Consumption begins with a little cough, a trifling pain, a passing flush on the cheeks. This is but the beginning of the avalanche, consumption, that knows no pity, recognizes no distinction. Just at the beginning thousands commit the error of not checking and curing the disease by using MARSDEN'S PECTORAL BALM.

A Serious Decision.

"Why CHILLIFUGE Won't Cure Chills"—is a question that brings to mind the story of a society of learned men formed for debating problems.

The question was presented: "Why a fish weighing ten pounds, put into a vessel of known weight, filled with water, did not increase the weight?" After hours of hot debate the fool of the club announced that it did, for while the debate had been going on he had tried the experiment.

Two Verdicts.

"After a fair and impartial trial you are judged guilty by this court, and you are sentenced to be hung by the neck until you are dead." The solemn tones of the judge, the despairing face of the prisoner, and the painful stillness of the court-room, makes it a scene of awful impress. Now turn to a brighter scene at the home circle. A mother radiant with joy over the recovery of a child snatched from the clutches of Malaria. An entire family rejoicing, and praising the merits of Dicks' Chillifuge, and giving their verdict that Chillifuge is without an equal for swiftness to cure.

OBITUARIES.

BREWER—WILLIAM WHITE BREWER was born in Etherton county, Ga., July 6, 1832, and died in Black Hawk, Miss., Nov. 26, 1899. Bro. Brewer's parents moved to Mississippi in 1836. In 1841 they settled four miles west of Black Hawk, Miss. In 1860 he married Miss P. C. Cage. It was a happy and fortunate union of heart and hand.

Bro. Brewer was among the first to volunteer for the war, and during the four years was always found at his post of duty. He was a man of energy and economy, and by these he gained more than a competency, and with it he was ready to relieve the distress of the widow and hush the cry of the orphan. He joined the church while young, and for a number of years was Sunday-school teacher and steward. In these, as everywhere else, he was faithful to the trust committed. He loved the church, and was a true friend to his pastor.

I visited Bro. Brewer a great deal in his last sickness, and have never known a man more resigned and hopeful. It was his constant theme. "He delighted in the law of the Lord, and in it meditated day and night." His wife has lost a devoted husband, the children a true father, and the church one of her most faithful members. "Blessed are the dead that die in the Lord." W. C. LESTER.

HAMPTON—JESSIE ALBERTHA HAMPTON, daughter of Bro. James Hampton and wife, died Sept. 17, 1899. She was five years and two months old.

Jessie had dark hair and a beautiful brown eye. Her hair hung in beautiful curls about her head. She was one of the sweetest children I have ever met. She was loving and kind in disposition; loved her father, mother, brother and sister most devotedly. She loved her pastor, and always called him Bro. Roper.

Jessie was one of the sweetest singers I have ever known of a small girl. She loved to sing, "When the roll is called up yonder." She was admired by a large number of friends.

Jessie was too good and pure for this world. Jesus sent the angel of death to carry her to heaven. She left a sad father and mother and many sad friends, but she is not dead, but sleepeth. Her spirit is just over the river watching and waiting for them, when God shall gather up his children, and when all shall be judged. Into the haven of rest with all the faithful Jessie will wing her way.

May the God of all grace keep the sad father and mother, brother and sister, and may they so live that they may make an unbroken family in the kingdom of God. J. W. RAPER.

COWAN—HATTIE, daughter of S. C. and Margaret Cowan, was born Dec. 23, 1880, and died Dec. 1, 1899, aged eighteen years eleven months and three days.

Thus a blooming flower has been plucked from the earthly fields to be transplanted in the deathless regions above. Hattie was a beautiful, lovely and dutiful girl. She, like a breathing rose, filled heart and home with exquisite delight; but the stem is broken and the blossom gone. Her earthly ministry was well done, for the rose does its work as grandly in blossom as the vine with its fruit. She was converted and joined the M. E. Church, South, at a meeting held near her home by Rev. W. D. Bass in September, 1899. She was stricken with that dreaded disease, slow fever, and lingered for more than forty days, suffering untold agony. The end was triumphant, and the passage over the river was grand and sublime.

Parents, faint not, though your life be filled with afflictions and sore bereavements. The Lord gave, and the Lord taketh; blessed be the name of the Lord. W. B. INABNET.

Lapine, La.

SMITH—At the early hour of 7 A. M., Nov. 25 1899, at her home in the town of Crystal Springs, Miss., Mrs. JOSEPHINE L. SMITH, wife of Dr. Pank C. Smith, passed to her heavenly home. Though death came without a warning, it found her as one of the wise virgins, "with lamp trimmed and burning, and oil in the vessel." Her illness was of only a few minutes' duration. All who knew her testify of her virtues and pure womanly heart. Modest and retiring, yet she shone forth as one who trusted God, and of that "meek and quiet spirit which is in the sight of God of great price." She was a native of Copiah county, having been reared at old Georgetown, and the daughter of Benjamin H. and Letitia Catching, one of its earliest settlers. She was born Sept. 27, 1835, and on the thirtieth of January, 1855, was married to Dr. R. C. Smith. She leaves to mourn their loss five children and her devoted husband. Of a large family of brothers and sisters she leaves only one brother and two sisters. Truly may it be written of her, "Blessed are the pure in heart, for they shall see God." T. B. H.

MCKAY—On Tuesday, Dec. 19, HOLLY B. MCKAY, aged fifteen years, passed away after a sickness of nine weeks. I tried to direct him to the Savior, and during his last hours he sent for me, that he might learn more of Christ and his love.

We hope that this young man, who was the means, in God's hand, of bringing his father back to the Savior whom he once loved, may greet us on the other shore, where we will praise God through an endless eternity.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials. Address.

WINE OF CARDUI

HEALTHY OLD AGE.

LABUR, BENTON CO. ARK., Aug. 4.
I am 49 years old and have been suffering with Change of Life. I had flooding spells so bad that none thought I could live. My husband got me Wine of Cardui and it saved my life. I am like another person since taking it.
MRS. E. B. TOWNSEND.

WELBORN'S Wine of Cardui

It is the devout wish of nearly all people to live to a ripe old age. None of us want to die young. This universal desire can be realized if care be taken of the health in early and middle life. A little precaution then will add many years to our existence. Death can be kept away a long time. Happy, healthy old age will be the lot of the woman who promptly corrects the ailments which afflict her sex. In youth, Wine of Cardui will take the female child safely over the dividing line between girlhood and womanhood. As a wife she needs it to help her through the trials of pregnancy and childbirth with as little discomfort as possible. At the Change of Life it will help her over the dangerous place that appears in her pathway between 40 and 50. Then will come many years of truly blissful existence. She will grow old slowly and gracefully. To the last she will preserve that charm and beauty which are always characteristic of perfectly healthy grandmothers. It is for women alone to decide whether they will be healthy or sick. The remedy for their sickness is close at hand.

The "Combination" Bible.

A SUPERB EDITION

of the Holy Scriptures, showing at a glance at the foot of the pages all changes made by the revisers.

New Type. All Proper Names Self-Pronouncing. The Most Valuable Collateral Matter.

There is a steady and increasing demand for first-class Bibles. Everybody is anxious to obtain a copy of the best edition of the Holy Scriptures. Old editions are constantly being replaced by Bibles that are in every way more attractive, and there is practically no limit to the demand.

OUR "COMBINATION" FEATURE.

Hitherto the King James and Revised Versions have been printed in parallel columns, but this makes comparisons of texts tedious and unsatisfactory, and makes the book very unwieldy. We have overcome this difficulty by "combining" the two Versions on the same page, showing at a glance in foot-notes all the Changes Additions and Omissions made by the Revisers.

THE OLD VERSION PRINTED IN FULL.

The King James Version is the basis, and this Version is read straight along from the text, while the Revised Version is read from the text in combination with the foot-notes. Our "Combination" Feature has met with universal approval and is strongly endorsed by leading Divines and Biblical Scholars.

It is only by a comparison of the two Versions that the greatest benefit can be obtained from reading the Holy Scriptures, and this comparison every reader can easily make by our simple arrangement for showing the changes made by the revisers. This is the greatest triumph of Bible Publishing the World has ever known.

OUR OFFER.

To those unprogressive people who do not read and pay for the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE we sell this Bible at the publisher's retail price—$4.25. To our subscribers we sell it at the very low rate of $2. The only condition attached to this offer is that the subscriber must pay his subscription one full year in advance, viz.: to January, 1901. We will send it postpaid to any person who will send us three new cash subscribers at the regular rate. For six new cash subscribers at the regular rate we will send two "Combination" Bibles, postpaid.

For fifty cents additional we will send a Bible with index.

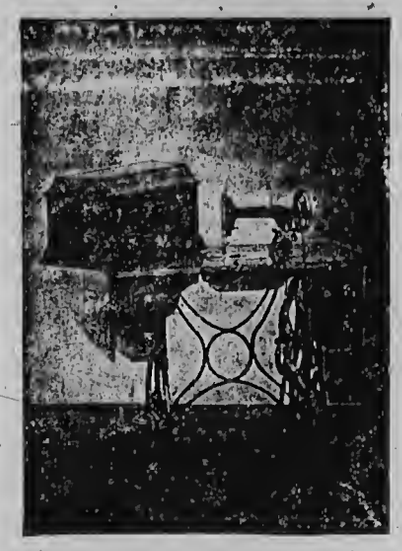
For twenty-five cents additional we will have your name engraved in gilt letters on the outside.

Address REV. W. C. BLACK.

P. S.—We can give no commission on renewals in connection with the above offer.

New Machine Offer.

No. 4 IMPERIAL.



THE IMPERIAL HIGH-ARM SINGER will be found the perfection of mechanism as regards simplicity, durability and adaptability to the wide range of work embraced in the general family needs.

A Handsome, Light-Running, Lock-Stitch, High-Arm Machine that will not fail to please the most fastidious. Embracing all the advantages with all desirable improvements of other first-class sewing machines, so simple in mechanism that the most inexperienced need no assistance in operating it. Book of instructions with every machine. Any child can learn to run it.

Extra Set of Attachments also free with each machine, consisting of the following: One Tucker, One Foot Ruffler, One Set of Plate Hemmers, four different widths up to ½ of an inch, One Binder and One Thread Cutter.

No. 3 Machine, drop leaf table, gothic cover, case of two drawers at one end and center drawer. Dealer's price, $24. Our price, $14.75.

No. 4 Machine, drop leaf table, gothic cover, case of two drawers at each end and center drawer. Dealer's price, $25. Our price, $15 50.

No. 5 Machine, drop leaf table, gothic cover, case of three drawers at each end, making seven drawers in all. Dealer's price, $26. Our price, $16.25.

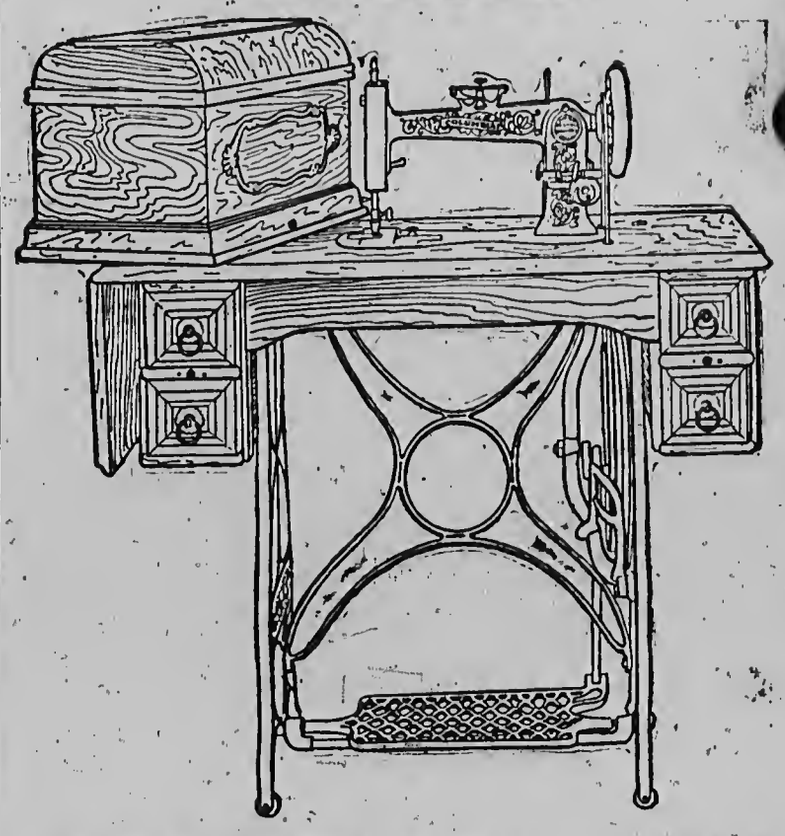
No. 4 Columbian.



EXCELLENCE OF THE COLUMBIAN.—All wearing parts are of case-hardened steel possessing great durability, and by the turning of a screw all lost motion caused by wear can be taken up. All parts are fitted so accurately that the machines are absolutely noiseless, and as easy running as fine adjustment and best mechanical skill is possible to produce. No expense or time is spared to make them perfect in every respect, as every machine passes a rigid inspection by competent men before leaving the factory.

NICKEL PLATED.—The balance wheel and many of the fine parts are nickel-plated, with other parts finely enameled and ornamented, giving it a rich appearance.

A Self Setting Needle and Self-Threading Cylinder Shuttle are used in the Columbian High Arm Sewing Machine. They are so simple that any one can easily operate them in a few minutes' time, as our Instruction Book is fully illustrated, showing how to do all kinds of fancy work with attachments.

Extra Attachments, in velvet-lined case, sent free with each machine: 1 Tucker, 1 Ruffler with shirring plate, 1 Hemmer set (4 widths) and Binder, 1 Braider (Foot and Slide), 1 Thread Cutter.

ADDITIONAL ACCESSORIES.—Each machine is supplied with the following outfit: 1 Hemmer and Feller (one piece), 10 Needles, 6 Bobbins, 1 Wrench, 1 Screw Driver, Oil Can with Oil, Cloth Gauge and Thumb Screw, and a Book of Instructions. The Book of Instructions is profusely illustrated, and answers the purpose of a competent teacher.

No. 3—Drop leaf, Bent cover, case of two drawers at one end and center drawer. Dealer's price, $29. Our price, $17.

No. 4—Drop leaf table, Bent cover, case of two drawers at each end and center drawer. Dealer's price, $31. Our price, $17.75.

No. 5—Drop-leaf table, Bent cover, case of three drawers at each end and center drawer, making a seven-drawer machine. Dealer's price, $33. Our price, $18.50.

The chief difference between Numbers 3, 4, and 5 is in the furniture—i. e., the number of drawers. If you do not want to pay for the extra drawers, you need not do so. We sell these machines under a ten years' guarantee, by which we mean that if any part gives out by reason of any defect therein, the manufacturer will replace the same free of charge. Moreover, we allow the purchaser to test the machine ten days. If at the end of ten days you are not satisfied, you have only to drop us a postal card, and your money will be refunded.

OUR OFFER.

We will send any one of the above-described machines at the prices named, and also send the ADVOCATE free for six months. The only condition attached to this offer is that subscribers who are in arrears must first pay up all arrearages to this date. It would be well to avail yourself of this offer at once, as we can not promise that it will last very long. Notice that you take no risk whatever. We do all the risking. Address

Four Americans were wounded in a sharp fight on Jan. 8 between a battalion of the Nineteenth Infantry and a force of Filipinos occupying a strong position in the Sndleon Mountains. The Filipinos were routed and the Americans captured a smooth-bore cannon and a number of rifles.

The United States Supreme Court has declined to raise the embargo placed annually upon the commerce of New Orleans and Louisiana under the name of quarantine by the health officer of the State of Texas. In other words, the courts rendered an opinion, Monday, by which the demurrer for injunction to restrain the Texas authorities from continuing a prohibitive quarantine that was exceptionally hurtful to the trade of Louisiana was dismissed.

TAKE TIME BY THE FORELOCK.

Owing to an increase in the price of paper, we will not be able to continue the very low prices at which we are now offering our premium Bibles. The present rates, however, will continue until the first of February, unless our stock becomes exhausted. Those who want Bibles, or who expect to want them any time soon, would do well to order at once, as the increase in prices is likely to be permanent. All dealers will be obliged to make an advance in prices, unless their prices are already too high. Even if your subscription has not expired, it would be wise to renew at once, and take advantage of our present prices on Bibles. We invite special attention to our Combination Bible. It is the very best edition of "the Book of books."

Local Option Prevails.

MR. EDITOR: We have just had a signal victory for Christ. On my arrival here, a few days before the new year, I was informed that the whisky ring was going to vote to have open saloons in Leesville. With three good (?) lawyers on their side, using their money and influence, they promised themselves a "handsome majority" for the sale. The election was set for the fourth of January, supposing that we block-head Prohibitionists would not think to register in the new year. Besides, all the election commissions were whisky men, who challenged the vote of a great many who were "against the sale." When the votes were counted the result was a surprise to both sides. "Against the sale," 126; "for the sale," 64.

Mr. Editor, I think the Lord voted in this election. I know he did, if he heard the prayers of a few zealous men and over one hundred godly women.

"Blind-tigerism" is also a thing of the past here. J. M. ALFORD.

Leesville, La., Jan. 6, 1900.

THE LIFE OF MOODY.

The Rev. J. Wilbur Chapman, D. D., of New York, is engaged in writing the life of D. L. Moody for John C. Winston & Co., Philadelphia. Dr. Chapman was one of Mr. Moody's most intimate friends, and was closely associated with him in his evangelistic work. He is Vice-President of the Bible Institute of Chicago, of which Mr. Moody was President, and desires that this Institution shall receive a share of the profits from the sale of this book. The publishers promise that the work shall be profusely illustrated. It will also contain an introduction by the Rev. F. B. Meyer, of Christ Church, London, and personal reminiscences from others who were intimately associated with Mr. Moody in his work.

RAILROADING PATENTS.

A single firm of Patent Lawyers, C. A Snow & Co., of Washington, D. C., have in the last year procured 1,580 patents for their clients, many of them for rejected inventions. C. A. Snow & Co. have been accused of railroading patents through the Patent Office, but they insist that this locomotion is better than ox-carting them, for by the latter process the inventor often dies before he gets his patent.

SCHOLARSHIP FREE.

You may, by doing little writing at your home, secure scholarship, free, in either Draughon's Practical Business Colleges—Nashville, St. Louis, Little Rock, Ft. Worth, Galveston, Shreveport or Savannah. Best patronized Business Colleges in the South. For particulars address The Illustrated Youth and Age, Nashville, Tenn.

It little matters how carefully the rest of the lantern is protected, the one point which is damaged is quite sufficient to admit the wind; and so it little matters how zealous a man may be in a thousand things, if he tolerates one darling sin. Satan will find out the flaw and destroy all his hopes.—Spurgeon.

Dr. B. L. Whitman's resignation of the presidency of Columbian University, and acceptance of a call to be pastor of the Fifth Baptist Church, of Philedelphia, have been the cause of much regret in Washington, where his loss will be severely felt in educational and religious circles. No cause for the change is known beyond Dr. Whitman's statement that he desired to return to the pulpit. That he will succeed as well as a preacher as he has done as an educator is certain, but it will be impossible for him to wield as much influence as pastor of a church, even though it be one of the largest in Philadelphia, as at the head of a great educational institution, with students from all over the country. That is why the change is regarded as much better for his new church than for Dr. Whitman and Christianity at large. He will remain with Columbian University until the close of the scholastic year, but will occupy his Philadelphia pulpit every Sunday.

Senator Chandler spoke a few words in connection with the presentation of a petition by Senator Cullom, from 3,200 colored persons, asking for legislation to protect the colored men of the country from lynching, which seems timely, in view of the general disposition to appeal to Congress in matters over which the States alone have jurisdiction. He said: "There is no power in Congress to prevent or to punish crimes committed in the States. If the States do not punish crimes for the punishment of which they have enacted laws, no Federal laws can take the place of useless State laws."

The Home for the Blind, a four-story building with twenty-four rooms, which was recently presented to the Aid Association by a Washington gentleman, was formally opened this week. One of the purposes of the association is to take the indigent blind off the streets and give them a comfortable home, and to teach them to become self-supporting. Mr. Frank E Cleaveland, the blind lawyer, of Hartford, Conn., representing the American Association for the Employment of the Blind, has rented three rooms in the Home, in which he will employ some of the blind as printers, chair-makers, broom-makers, and mattress-makers.

At a meeting of the Anti-Saloon League, held this week, Mrs. Margaret Dye Ellis, of the National W. C. T. U., delivered a strong address, asking the League to endorse the petition sent to Congress by prominent citizens of Hawaii asking that in the legislation for the government of those islands the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors be prohibited; also the sale of opium and the business of gambling. A resolution was unanimously adopted instructing the president of the League to address a letter to Congress in support of the petition.

Dr. Wallace Radcliffe has little patience with the modern disbelief in the existence of a personal devil. In the course of a strong sermon—text, Job ii, 1—he said: "If we are to believe the Bible at all, and place any reliance in it as the true Word of God, we must dismiss the modern idea of allegory, and recognize as existing a living power against the good and for the evil, which has set itself against all righteousness and good. We are impressed with its power. Satan is realized as a personality of tremendous energy, influence, and power. He is not only a powerful personality, but he has a well-organized and regulated authority—the Prince of Devils. He has a superuatural power, of an intimate, large and insidious organization. A multitude of angels are moving at his supreme command, going forth on their ministrations of evil. He has access of mind to mind, spirit to spirit, and it is thus he reaches the affection and the will of men." Dr. Radcliffe expressed the opinion that many of the loose doctrines held today were instigated by the devil.

Much erroneous information has been recently published about the chaplains in the army and navy. There are thirty-four chaplains in the army, four of them colored. Their pay is $1,500 a year, with a 10 per cent. increase for each five years of service. They are of the following denominations: Methodists, 12; Episcopalians, 9; Presbyterians, 5; Roman Catholic, 4; Baptists, 2; Christian, 1; Congregationalist, 1. There are twenty-four chaplains in the navy. Their pay for the first five years' service is $2,500 a year, and for the second five years $2 800, when at sea. It is $500 a year less when they are on shore duty, and $900 a year less when on leave or waiting orders. The naval chaplains are divided denominationelly as follows: Methodists, 9; Episcopalians, 5; Catholics, 3; Baptists, 2; Presbyterians, 2; Disciples of Christ, 1; Unitarian, 1; Universalist, 1. These figures are from the official records.

CHRISTMAS IN GERMANY.

Every nation has its national holidays, commemorative of some epoch-making event in its history, e. g: the anniversary of the birth of a ruler, of an important battle, or of the achievement of liberty, or the like. There is one day, however, which all Christian nations observe. It is the birthday of One who never led an army, who wrote no national constitution, who overthrew no tyrant, who added not one foot of territory to any nation's domains, who invented nothing, who wrote no books—in a word, One who made no direct contribution to the industrial, commercial, or political advancement of any people. All Christian nations, whatever their differences or animosities, unite in celebrating the birthday of an Asiatic, a descendant of a despised people, a Jew, who was convicted of blasphemy by the highest court of the most spiritual church of his time, and of treason by the court of Rome, on which charge he was executed. The anniversary of this Man's birth has become a holiday among the leading nations of the world. It is a day of joy and good-will, a day on which the happiness of the young is at its highest point, a day on which the aged become young again. It is the holiday, not of one or two nations, but the holiday of the followers of Jesus Christ in all lands.

Despite the universal character of Christmas, the average German regards it as a festival more or less peculiar to the German people. They are taught in their childhood that Christmas comes at the time of, and has usurped the place of, the festival of the Winter solstice, celebrated by their heathen forefathers, and that its origin is to be traced to this heathen festival. The German word for Christmas is calculated to foster this idea. It is "Weihnacht," generally used in the plural form, "Weihnachten," which means the consecrated or holy nights, and designated among the primitive Germans the twelve nights of the Winter solstice festival. Every German family feels that its celebration of Christmas is incomplete if the Christmas tree is wanting. This tree must be the "Tannenbaum"—i. e., pine tree, the most beloved of all the trees of Germany's celebrated forests. It is the current belief that the use of the tree is very old, having originated in the custom of the early Germans, who decorated their houses at this time of the year with branches from the pines.

The critics have turned their attention to these beliefs of the people, and demolished some of their beautiful theories, which, founded on tradition, have misled the Germans into thinking Christmas to be a festival more intimately connected with their life and history than with that of any other nation. Prof. Harnack, of Berlin, in a recent article, throws some light on several of the questions connected with Christmas. He shows that the day of the week and month of Jesus' birth is not mentioned in the canonical gospels or in the Christian literature of the first two centuries. About the year 225 the Christian writer, Hippolytus, of Rome, wrote that Jesus was born on Wednesday, the twenty-fifth of December, but it was not till more than a century later that Dec. 25 was celebrated by the church as the birthday of Jesus. The first celebration of this day was held in Rome by order of the Roman Bishop in 354. When the Germans, therefore, accepted Christianity the twenty-fifth of December had long been celebrated as the birthday of Jesus, and their Winter-solstice festival had nothing whatever to do with fixing its date. To be sure, December twenty-fifth fell within the twelve nights of their festival, and they took over the name of their festival, "Holy Nights," and applied it to the Christian festival.

With regard to the Christmas tree, Prof. Harnack agrees with the current view that it is of German origin, but denies that it is so old as is usually thought. He considers it about one century old. A celebrated picture represents Luther and his family gathered around a Christmas tree. This picture has been used to show that the use of the Christmas tree must be not only as old as the Reformation, but much older. The picture is now regarded, however, as a complete anachronism, having no basis whatever in fact.

How it happened that a tree was selected for Christmas celebrations is explained by Prof. Harnack as follows: Candles were used before the Christmas tree was, and had a double origin. They stood for the torches used by the early Germans in the celebration of their Winter-solstice festival, and for the church candles of the Christmas matins. About a century ago some one (who it was is unknown) conceived the idea of using a "Tannenbaum" as a candle-holder instead of the ordinary candle-stand. Prof. Harnack denies that the Christmas tree has anything in common with the log of wood burnt by the early Germans in their solstice celebrations. It must be confessed that the idea of substituting a tree for candle-stands seems unlikely. The popular belief that the ancient Germans decorated their houses at this time of the year with pine trees carries on its face more probability that the Christmas tree is a survival of this custom. Even now the Germans incase their windows with evergreens at Christmas time.

The custom of giving Christmas presents is, according to Prof. Harnack, originally partly a New Year's custom and partly connected with the ancient solstice festival. Its transferrence to Christmas is late and due to the Germans.

It will be seen that while the Germans have an exaggerated idea of their contribution to the Christmas festival, this contribution is by no means small. The giving of presents and the use of the Christmas tree are world-wide customs now. Certain it is that no people feel Christmas to be their own festival more than the Germans do, and no people make more of it than they. Weeks in advance pine trees, from two and a half to ten and twelve feet in height, are brought in great quantities from the forests to the towns and cities, where they are stacked in the public squares and in side streets to be sold.

Every German family feels that, in order that Christmas be ideal, several things are necessary. The ground must be buried in snow; a large quantity of sweetmeats, mostly home made, must be on hand; the house must have a thorough cleaning shortly before Christmas, and the family must have a Christmas tree. The custom of having a thorough house-cleaning at this time rests, I am told, on an ancient Germanic myth, according to which a goddess visited every house at this time of the year, and it had to be clean and in order for her reception.

The distribution of presents does not take place on Christmas day, as with us, but on the evening before, which is called Holy Evening. At five or seven o'clock a Christmas service, consisting mostly of song and Scripture reading, is held in the churches. One, or more, Christmas trees, having no decorations other than lighted tapers, stand near the altar. On returning from this service, or a little later, the families gather around their Christmas trees and exchange presents. The more religious sing a Christmas hymn at this time.

Christmas is not a noisy day as it is in some parts of America. No fire crackers, cannons, or the like, are heard. Newspapers suspend publication for two or three days, stores are closed, and two services are held in the churches, the same as on Sunday. In fact, it is regarded as Sunday. Such a Christmas seems strange to one who has spent almost every Christmas of his life in New Orleans. It seemed so quiet that one might have supposed the Kaiser lay dead in his Berlin palace. I missed in the German Christmas that merriment and joy that seems to float on the air in New Orleans at this season. Perhaps we have made the day too secular, overlooking the fact that the occasion recalls the coming of the Son of man; yet, on the other hand, we must not forget that his coming meant the freeing of the soul and the opening of the flood-gates of happiness and joy.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE MINUTES.

DEAR BRETHREN: By the time—or, at the least, very soon thereafter—you read this, I hope to have the Minutes of our Conference in your hands. And in justice to Dr. C. G. Andrews, our brother and co-laborer, who has been called from the scenes and toil of labor to that eternal rest that awaits the faithful, I wish to make a statement.

Soon after the contract for the printing of the Minutes had been made, and when but little of the work of editing had been done, Dr. Andrews was taken sick and had to give up his work. He asked me to undertake and do the work for him, expressing regrets that he must impose it upon me. I promised him to do the work, and that I assume the responsibility for all defects and failures chargeable to the editor. This I do to you without reserve or any plea of abatement. That you will discover defects I do not doubt, and where the blame for these lie against the editor I assume it all, and will submit to all the criticisms and chastisement you may think my offense merits. But let me ask you to be sure you are right in fixing the culpability before you draw your pen on me; for there are faults that do not, and can not, lie at my door. Dr. Andrews had secured the labor of as accurate printers as I ever read after, and they and your servant have followed the copy you placed in our hands as faithfully and as accurately as we could. But some of this copy was wholly inaccurate in points where I had neither the authority or ability to make the correction. One case in point is where a brother reports everything except the amount paid to his support. I know he did not intend to omit this part of his report, and yet he did, and it is not my fault that it must so appear in the Minutes. This is not a plea for mercy, but for justice.

J. M. WEEMS.

OUR STATISTICS.

Our statistics show that in the prosperous year of 1899 the Methodists of the North Mississippi Conference actually contributed $6 736 less than in the "hard times" of 1898. Moral: "The more we get the more we want," and "hard times" do not kill churches. The Minutes of 1898 show a membership of 45,043. The Minutes of 1899 will show, "Number of members last year, 43,908," making a difference of 1,135. Did these 1,135 members die, abscond, or expel themselves while the pastors were at Conference, or before the new pastors could get moved? If we can't spend a week off our charges without losing over 1,100 members, I suggest holding Conference by proxy. An appropriate question to applicants for admission into the itinerancy would seem to be, "Can you count?" Evidently some don't count very well. But, apart from bad counting, I think that there is not uniformity of counting members on charges that have been divided. Each preacher should get his figures from the church registers on his charge, and not from the old Minutes. He should take an inventory immediately after Conference, that he may know the results of his year's work. By the statistics of 1899 our membership is 45,154 and our gain 1,246. But in 1898 we claimed 45,043 members, which only leaves a gain of 111 for 1899. Which is correct the statistical secretary does not know.

ARCADIA DISTRICT.

All the pastors in the district are at their work. There was some little friction in two or three places at first, but it has about run smooth, and everything is promising for a good year. The pastor at Ruston, H. R. Singleton, took his Conference collections for every claim last Sunday, and secured every dollar of the assessments and something over. That is a good beginning, and I trust that every pastor in the district will fall into line and secure these claims during the first quarter of the year. It is so important to do this at the beginning of the year, so as to leave an open field for a gracious revival of religion.

We are planning for a successful year in the bounds of this district, and we shall leave nothing undone that can be done to accomplish our purpose.

We will hold a Preachers' Meeting in the near future, time and place to be announced later.

I have held only four Quarterly Conferences, yet two of these places raised the salary of their pastors, and I think there is a disposition upon the part of our officials to increase the salaries wherever they can do so. Our people, in the main, are true and loyal, and will respond to all claims when they are properly presented.

HOME MISSION SOCIETY.

To the President of Each H. M. S., North Mississippi Conference—

MY DEAR SISTER: The general officers of the Home Mission Society have planned to make this year a notable one. They ask for a Twentieth Century Thank-offering of twenty-five thousand dollars for the educational mission work of the society. Feb. 6 has been appointed as the time for bringing this work before the church. Another day may be selected if this does not suit your auxiliary. Our contributions are to be counted as part of the regular church collection for the Twentieth Century Fund. Send all contributions to Mrs. W. Trotter, Winona, Miss., Conference treasurer. I beg that you will bring this before your church, and that you will pray and plan for many willing offerings.

The women of the North Mississippi Conference are second to none in zeal and energy. I am sure their faithfulness can be relied on. May all our hearts be deeply moved with the desire to hasten the coming of our Lord's kingdom in the hearts of all mankind!

With love to each member of your society, I am, Your sister,

Mississippi Orphans' Home.

Since my appointment as agent for the Mississippi Orphans' Home at Water Valley, it has been my privilege to preach at Summit, my old home, and where I am now living. After preaching, the Home was represented to them and a collection followed that did credit to the congregation. The pastor, Bro. Drake, has taken vigorous hold, has gained the confidence of the people, and expects gracious results this year. He is a man of great intelligence and full of the spirit of the Master, and will do a splendid work with such an helpmeet. We are not surprised that such success has attended him.

McComb City, with Bro. Peebles at the helm, who is always ready for any good work, gave me a hearty welcome and a good collection. His devotion to the cause of Christ is seen in every act and the work prospers in his hands.

At Norfield the congregation was small, but they listened to the Word with interest. We expect to see them again "some sweet day."

Fernwood, which has just been made the hub of a circuit, is moving as everything moves with the Enochs at the head. Bro. Trevillion has just moved into a new parsonage and has the work well in hand. They are a church-going and giving people, as was demonstrated not only by the size of the congregation that greeted me, but also by the enm contributed for the Home.

We expect a good year in our new field of labor, and trust the brethren will give us their hearty support and open the way for our coming. My postoffice is Summit.

More to follow.

W. T. GRIFFIN,
Agt. Miss. Orphans' Home.

The Mississippi Orphans' Home.

The Board of Directors, at their meeting held in Vicksburg, Dec. 13, 1899, unanimously elected Rev. W. S. Harrison, of the North Mississippi Conference, local manager of, and Rev. W. T. Griffin, of the Mississippi Conference, traveling agent for the Home. These well-equipped brethren are meeting the sanguine expectations of the Board, and, no doubt, the former prosperity of the Home will be continued. The address of Rev. W. T. Griffin is Summit, Miss. All correspondence relating to the work of the agent in representing the Home should be addressed to Bro. Griffin. All communications in regard to the management of the Home, and all donations of groceries, dry goods, etc., should be sent to Bro. Harrison, whose address is Water Valley, Miss. All freight and express must be prepaid.

It must be remembered that Rev. M. L. Burton is the treasurer of the Joint Board. All money contributed to the Home should be sent to Bro. Burton at Enterprise, Miss.

It affords me pleasure to state to the North Mississippi Conference that Rev. W. T. Griffin is one of the most efficient and successful members of the Mississippi Conference. With equal pleasure we say to the Mississippi Conference that Rev. W. S. Harrison is one of our safe leaders and wise counselors. To all we say that you may hear of some criticism on the Home, but all such is unjust and unfounded. The management of this worthy institution is, and has always been, most satisfactory to the Board of Directors and all true friends. We invite the closest and most impartial investigation.

For the ADVOCATE.

BY W. H. HUNTLEY.

Are you very, truly old, O year!
Is that sloth of step deliberate, or from fear!
Silver is it!—or is it snow
Showing white upon your hair!
Are those wrinkles there that show!
Oh, the pity! With a century's tale to bear!

And for weakness—are you weak, O year!
Is that glitter of your glance from a tear!
This hundredth faggot to the pack,
Weighty timbers are they all!
They will crush you to the track,
And the breath must quite go from you in the fall.

And in wisdom—are you wise, O year!
Alas, for ignorance in you now—and here!
An hundred suns to rise in your sky,
Lighting the hundredth volume's lore;
Never such light for any eye—
Nor ever, ever such curricula before!

* * * * * * *

Assembled in its crown the century's gems;
Enriched beyond all other cycles' diadems;
Buttressed without with stablest structure from a past;
Of which the scriptured titled makes the best the last;
Strongest within because the Christ is there the centre;
Building its greater Life from all the helps which enter;
Lofty—upward aspiring,
Deep—of wisdom untiring;
Swift—from great-running!
Bright—from high sunning;
From many perils, ready—
Thro' future vision, steady;
'Round the cycle's last unit have the other lights cluster,
For the last coronation, beam the Bethlehem lustre!

SOME HISTORIC SPOTS IN THE BROOKHAVEN DISTRICT.

Although we have so much that is very new—villages, churches, charges and preachers—yet I have found some things in this section that are very old. Some of these have historic associations that make them quite interesting.

One afternoon, last September, I found myself among the pine-clad hills that fence on the west the valley of the Pearl, in the lower edge of Lawrence county and the upper edge of Marion, and passed the spot where once stood the boyhood home of Elijah Steele, that hero of early Methodism in Mississippi whose seraphic piety was only matched by his burning eloquence and his brilliant history. I studied the hills, clothed with virgin forests of lordly pines, and the sparkling streams of cool water—the clearest I have seen in the State—which break out of living springs under these hills, and I sought to find intimations of the natural influences which had helped to make this giant of heart and thought, whose brief career left such an impress for good. I think I found them—the hills, the giant pines so mournfully musical, the streams, the birds, the flowers, but above all of these was the poverty which must have been the lot of a farmer boy on these hills seventy years ago. Poverty, in the providence of God, has developed many a kingly life. I met one brother in these hills who remembers the boy Elijah and his struggles with poverty. To me these old hills were sacred ground.

At the foot of this same range of hills, and in the valley of the Pearl, I held a quarterly meeting in a little new church, which had just replaced an old log building that had been a worshiping place for more than fifty years. The old log church still standing was rotting down—a fast fading monument of a vanishing phase of our Methodism. Here generation after generation of the Lenoirs, whose name the church wears, have worshiped; and here still a Lenior—a young man—serves as steward. I spent the night at the old Lenoir mansion, nine miles below on the west bank of the Pearl; a handsome ante bellum structure, beautifully located, where wealth and splendor, in the long ago, held high festival. Here were old, old books, and old memories and old legends rich in historic interest and poetic suggestion.

A month later, amid the glory of mid Autumn, I passed near old Gallatin, once the county site of Copiah county; an old graveyard which marks the spot where once stood Smyrna Methodist Church. Legends of the long ago linger about this beautiful 'God's acre" in the wildwood. One of these tell of the first death and burial among the whites in Copiah county. Coffins and coffin materials were not to be had; so a hollow chestnut tree was felled, a cut just long enough was neatly sawed off and split, the dead man placed in the hollow, and the two sides secured together carefully. In this rustic coffin he was lowered into the first grave dug in Copiah county; and in that lovely old burying ground, beautiful with adornments of prodigal nature, and rich with memories sacred and historic, he waits the resurrection morning. Another legend tells of a great revival in old Smyrna Church, and of a day during that revival when the Holy Ghost came down in such power that hundreds were seen shouting at one time. Here, amid the rich lands on the head-waters of the Bayou Pierre, there was for many years a pastoral charge known as Bayou Pierre circuit. I am glad that again in this same promising region there is a "Bayon Pierre circuit."

I slept one night late in the Autumn on old "Adams Camp Ground," but I did not sleep in a tent, as thousands had done on the same camp ground in the long ago, but in the comfortable home of Dr. Henry Flowers, a lineal descendant of the pioneers, who pointed out to me next morning the "metes and bounds" of the historic camp ground. Here camp meetings were held in the early dawn of the century now closing, and well-founded tradition says that in 1815 the famous "lost Conference," of which there is no official record and no historic data, was held here in connection with the usual camp meeting. Adams Church, on the wooded hill overlooking the site of the old camp ground, is the worshiping place of a large Methodist congregation whose unbroken history reaches back nearly one hundred years, and whose service in the cause of the Christ has been instrumental in the salvation of thousands. Such a history should be a strong inspiration to Bro. Forsythe and his coworkers in this last year of the century. Some old things should not be forgotten.

COMMANDER BOOTH-TUCKER.

Commander Booth Tucker, of the Salvation Army, is not a commanding figure, in point of physique, nor does he dilate, so as to create illusions by the grandeur and majesty of his port or delivery. He can scarcely be above medium height; is supple, slender, almost frail-looking, and hardly weighs one hundred and twenty-five pounds. But he leaves an impression of wiriness and bottom, or staying quality, reminding one of the mettlesome spirit and the delicacy of form of a thoroughbred race horse. He seems steel-nerved and high-strung, with a sort of graceful restiveness and ambitious tirelessness about movement. And this last looks confirmed when you remember that he holds from four to six meetings almost every day, with a devotion and indefatigability that would seem to denote a spirit "o'er-informing the tenement of clay," and that would soon "fret it to decay." He has a delicate-featured, intellectual face; brow unusually striking, Shakespeare-like, with gluts of light glancing upon its polished breadth; deep-set, small, kindly eyes of azure blue, with a grace haunting their placing like the delicate beauty about a dove's; a rather long, slender nose, quite flaring at the nostrils; a mouth so hidden by his large moustache that you can't well see it. His face wears an expression of care and of physical strain, determinedly borne and sweetly acquiesced in.

He touches you with the intrinsic weight of his sentiment or thought, and not by the adjuncts of elocution. There is almost nothing answerable in voice, gesture, or facial expression (except in rare instances), to his most thrilling things of brain or heart. Indeed, there seems almost a disdain of declamation or elocution, and delivery is hardly a quantity in much of his utterance, especially in the most weighty, lofty, and pathetic aspects. He infinitely more appeals to heart and brain than to eye or ear. His delivery is pleasing and unlabored, but surely there is little oratorical force or elocutionary finish or fascination. In the droll, humorous, facetious, he is much more at home, and he has a decided penchant for these, and in them there is more accordancy of tone, gesture, and feature-play. You need hardly ever expect him to deliver a grand thing in a grand way. It is not given him to be enthralling by the majesty and power of delivery. The voice, the action are not there, except in rare instances. Occasionally nature breaks out in unconstainableness, under some great rush of emotion, in a burst of broken tones, in streaming eyes and convulsive frame, and it is a tide that bears you resistlessly on, because it is not facile lachrymoseness nor profuse effusiveness, but robust and deep meltedness. Then he is at his best, and suggests the power of meltedness, like an ice-gorge breaking up with crush and crash and bursting, surging waters. His gestures do not strike you either pleasingly or unpleasingly. His voice is durable, light, but far-reaching, very articulate, the plaything of his throat, as to its ease of escape (a sort of easy-throatedness of utterance, as if tone made no friction, and the tongue were tireless), with a kind of click or pattering to intonation like the soft clattering of a swift train of cars on a well-ballasted railroad track. This angularity or incisiveness of enunciation gives a certain softly-piercing or hitting quality to the voice that delivers you from all anxiety as to his audibility, and your ear is easy, in unlabored receptiveness and unstrained attent to every word he utters.

He appears to have almost no predeterminations nor limits to the range of his thoughts in his sermonizings. His fancy seems to carry him almost anywhere and everywhere, in charming vagariousness; as the "wild will" of the swallow hurries it in its wantonness of flight and its erraticism of wing—if you can call such bewitching deviousness, erraticism. His fancy is panoramic. You see high and low; humor broad and sly; the grave and gay; the beautiful and repulsive; the artistic and true and the grotesque; the sublime and groveling. In order to elucidate his theme, he contemporizes himself with the past, and becomes an observer of the by gone; and pictures and narrates both the possible and probable; much that is wholly fanciful, at least, very unlikely, sometimes certainly bizarre. The volume of incident swells to almost incredible proportions.

He gives you prattling infancy, romping children, the bustle and hurly burly of the workaday world, the intrigues of greatness, the field of battle. From simpleton to sage, from petty politician to prince, from lowest domestic menial to mistress of the house, from the worker of diabolical cruelty to ministering or rescuing angel, he will portray you an almost endless train of the most lively and interesting personages, each following bent or whim, each with one interest attached to him or her; some times the motley, roystering rout and ragged rabble of Hogarth, and then the ravishing figures of Guido or Rafael.

If you would catch many of the best things of the man, you must be very alert. Ben Jonson said of Bacon, that one could not cough or look aside for a moment, when the latter spoke, without losing something. Booth-Tucker has a fashion of saying grand things in the most unpretentious way, and, sometimes, in almost stunning profusion, like

"The gorgeous East, with richest hand,

You catch no hint of what is coming by the finesse of elocution, or adornments of oratorical wont. There are no "avant couriers" to herald the advent of the host of beauty and royalty. The king is there, without state, and passes "incognito" to many. Thus, delivery is minimized, almost utterly disowned, despoiled of, or, rather, prevented its most glorious prerogatives; and some of the most beautiful creations pass unnoted, like flowers blooming unseen in the desert. Never did I see an orator who seems to care so little for what is known as "effects"—even appearing to avoid and disdain them—in what is his noblest work. In his lower role, he "plays to the pit" considerably, and almost labors at "ad captandum," in order to tickle the ear of the "groundlings." Perhaps this is wise. Anyhow, it is much his method.

He occasionally gives you stately and high-pitched perorations; but they are not well-modulated; are stiff and incongruous; recitation-like; lack gradation; look like highly ornate and pretentious cupolas on edifices, solid enough, to be sure, but not of costly construction nor commanding architecture, without the "foundations of sapphire" or "the stones of fair colors." This stiffness (not to say stiltedness) of peroration is all the more incongruous, that it does not crown mellifluousness or gorgeous rhetoric; for he is (predominantly) easy phrased and vernacular; informal and unpretentious in both diction and evolution of theme.

His addresses in New Orleans were an immeasurable force in putting the Salvation Army on a higher plane of appreciation among our best people, and in dissipating the popular conception of it, that it is a sort of Falstaff's ragged regiment, masquerading at worship of Almighty God, and in a wild harlequinade of irreverence insulting or outraging the Christian religion by absurd and disgusting antics, and a whirl of degraded buffoonery, or being, as Junius once stigmatized the Methodists of his day, a "rabble of howling dervishes." In this respect he was very fortunate and persuasive, without inspiring anyone with any misgivings of their convictions, from a suspicion of his adroitness of advocacy, or a glamour of deftness, by witchcraft of rhetoric or sorcery of speech.

Civilized society will never know, perhaps, all that it will owe to the Salvation Army. In the great struggle that is going on, and threatens increased intensity and embitterment between the classes and the masses, this organization may be the palladium against or preventive of anarchy; the conservative force just where it is most needed. The French Revolution is not a fiction, but history. There God was mocked and a courtesan deified, the Sabbath disowned, and man "got drunk on blood" and "vomited crime." To bring under the dominance of Christian love, to inculcate forbearance, to rid the embittered of resentment, to banish the temptations to vengeance among the desperate, the impoverished and vile, is like putting disinfection in the deadly sewers and places of rankest, most festering rottenness. The great mission of the Salvation Army (certainly its aim) is to universalize the brotherhood of man through the love of God, the teachings of Scripture. The Light of Life will break in upon the poor and lowly, those who loose "the rich man's scorn, the proud man's contumely," "the oppressor's wrong," through "the well-disposed and well-contrived windows" of their regenerated hearts, through the movements of the Salvation Army, where, otherwise, the livid light of anarchy might burst "through flaws and breaches, through the yawning chasms" of society's ruin.

It is impossible to dissociate Booth Tucker from this great social and religious organization, and to deny him a large participation in the merits of its most momentous movements. He is grandly in its history, and will there remain, a fixed and colossal figure. M.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI WOMAN'S H. M. SOCIETY.

The following changes in district secretaries have been made: Columbus district, Mrs. J. N. McMorries, Brooksville; Greenville district, Mrs. S. M. Shankle, Hollandale.

It was our good fortune during the holidays to meet Mrs. McMorries, and enjoy a chat with her concerning our work and her duties. She enters upon her work with enthusiasm and energy, and hopes to meet with every auxiliary in her district during the year. She is helping to secure the fifty new subscribers to Our Homes pledged last year at Dallas, Texas, by our good president, Mrs. Walker. Surely this small number and many more will soon be found in North Mississippi, and reported. Has your society reported any? Remember, they must be sent in before March 1, and our pledge money must also be in hand by that time. Let's close the year with a clean record for the past, and be ready for what the new year will bring.

It gives us pleasure to report that the order has been given by our Conference officers to the general treasurer, Mrs. Kirkland, to pay the $50 appropriated at the Maben meeting to Brown's Creek circuit, Corinth district. It is good to pay off these obligations, and to feel that we are helping some of our own preachers.

On Feb. 6 we are to hold a "Twentieth Century Thank-offering service," for which an interesting programme has been prepared. (See January number of Our Homes.) Let every auxiliary in the Conference faithfully observe the day, and carry out the programme as nearly as possible. Our Conference secretary has sent out a roll-book, for enrolling Twentieth Century contributions, to every society in our bounds. I will append a list of these, and ask the secretary of each district to notice carefully if there is any omission.

In holding the Rally-day service, when you reach the item on the programme calling for "the opening of the roll-book for offerings," have the pledges already made by your members read out. Of course, this implies previous work, which must be done carefully and considerately. Give every member an opportunity to pay the minimum amount of $1, but by no means allow anyone to think that larger amounts are not desired. Examine the "Honor Roll" as begun in December and January Our Homes and ascertain what other women are doing. Then, "Go thou and do likewise."

The Christian Life.

USE WHAT YOU HAVE.

What is in thine hand? A broom? Use it for God. The broom of the domestic servant may be as truly used for God as was the scepter of David or Solomon. What is in thine hand? A trowel, a hammer, an axe, a chisel, a saw, or some other mechanical tool? Use it for God. Jesus Christ gave dignity to labor; the sweat beads of honest toil stood on his brow. What is in thine hand? A pen? A pen is mightier than the sword. The pen of Shakespeare, of Longfellow, of Tennyson, of Whittier! Oh, matchless instrument! A pen in the hand of Harriet Beecher Stowe stabbed slavery to the heart. A pen in the hand of George Kennan to tell the story of darkest Russia is mightier than the sword of the Czar of all the Russias. Have you a pen? Use it for God. Perhaps it is a typewriter. Touch the keys; make sweet music that shall echo around the globe. We are all familiar with George Herbert's admirable expression of this thought:

"A servant with this clause
Make drudgery divine;
Who sweeps a room as for thy laws,
Makes that and the action fine."

We need grit and grace to use the old sword, the old hammer, the old fire, the old and always new gospel. Oh, can you not find some poor soul to-day who does not know Jesus? Can you not tell some wanderer about the Christ? What is in thine hand? Wealth? Consecrate it now to God. What is in thy mouth? A tongue of eloquence? Use it for God. The tongue is the mightiest instrument that God ever made. What is in thy hand? A kindly grasp? Give that to some sad soul. Let us consecrate everything to him. The office, the plow, the pen, the needle, the tongue, the hands, the feet, and the heart for Jesus. When the pierced hand of Jesus Christ is laid on the printing press, on wealth, on learning, on beauty, on culture, on every gift and grace in every relation in life, then the splendor of the millennial dawn will color the eastern sky with the crimson and gold.—R. S. McArthur.

Love is the highest experience of the human soul. Faith and hope, it is true, are gifts from God to man, but love is the very essence of God himself. God is love. When God imparts love to us he imparts himself. "Everyone that loveth is born of God, and knoweth God." There is no simpler truth in Scriptnre than this of God's love to man, and yet I know of no more difficult subject to present to the world. Could I but make the world understand and believe that "God is love," I should never preach from any other text. My last days would be devoted to proclaiming the one fact in every part of the world, and I know that every day would be a veritable Pentecost. For if the world were convinced that God was love, a God of mercy, and not of judgment, our prisons would be empty, and the kingdom of God would be established in our midst. For love begets love; and if we can make men really believe that God loves them, many will love him in return.—D. L. Moody.

Little as we may like to have our consciences aroused or to feel the discomforts of awakening to our unworthiness and sins, it is after all the way to cleansing and salvation. It was when the visions of God brought Isaiah to cry out under a sense of his vileness that his purification came from the altar of sacrifice. Humiliation of self before the majesty and holiness of the Lord is the true herald and preparation for spiritual healing and exaltation. Only when we realize the depths of our uncleanness and depravity do the messengers of heaven apply the virtues of the great propitiation and say to us, "Thine iniquity is taken away and thy sin is healed."—Dr. Seiss.

It was while Jesus "passed by" that he saw the man blind from his birth and healed him; it was at the foot of the Mount of Transfiguration that he met the lunatic son and cast the devil out of him; it was at the marriage feast and the social board that he turned water into wine. Thus Jesus did not seek occasion or make opportunity to work miracles, but as he went about his daily work as the Son of man, opportunity presented itself and he responded to it. So we "pass by" intent upon the dull round of duty and daily life; the opportunity for doing good or a brave deed comes; happy are we and Christ like if we respond to it.—Recorder.

Public worship alone will not sustain devotion, and a true, deep piety is never attained unless there is much solitary communion with God. One great reason for the shallowness of much present Christianity is that the habit of solitary devotion is almost lost among many of us. The robust saints of old had their secret places of prayer; the descendants are so busy "running churches" and attending conferences that they have lost the habit of private devotion. If we had fewer conventions and more "closets," we should be stronger Christians.—Dr. McLaren.

Years ago the inhabitants of London were in want of water. A noble Welshman, Sir Hugh Myddelton, planned how the want might be supplied. He designed the New River; at immense expense—so much so as almost to ruin himself—he carried out his benevolent scheme. The world was in want of living water. Jesus saw the want. At this sacrifice of his own life, he resolved it should be supplied. He cut a channel from ruin to blessedness, and ever since a plenteous supply of water has been flowing on.—Thomas Jones.

Tears were not sent to blind our eyes, but to wash them. Paul, we are told, was strong to hold his faith and deliver his message "even weeping." Our tears that must needs fall should be, not as water that would quench the light of faith, but as oil, which should make it shine more brightly and burn more warmly.—Sunday-School Times.

If anyone tells you that such a person speaks ill of you, do not make excuses about what is said of you, but answer, "He was ignorant of my other faults, else he would not have mentioned these alone."—Epictetus.

We miss many an opportunity to do good by waiting for chances to do some great thing.—Selected.

TRIBUTE TO THE MEMORY OF MRS. ANNA BELLE DICKEN.

Life is a narrow vale between the cold and barren peaks of two eternities. We strive in vain to look beyond the heights. We cry aloud, and the only answer is the echo of our wailing cry. From the voiceless lips of the unreplying dead there comes no word, but in the night of death hope sees a star—the star of Bethlehem—and listening love can hear the rustle of an angel's wing.

The subject of this tribute was the wife of Mr. John J. Dicken, of Monticello, Ark. She was the oldest daughter of Mr. C. M. Boyd, a wealthy merchant and planter of the same place. She was reared in luxury, fondled in love, and died in the zenith of her glory on Sept. 2, 1899, at Monticello, Ark. She was the happy mother of three children, only one of whom survives her. It is sad for one so young, noble and true to be cut off in the strength and beauty of her womanhood. Only he who has lost can sympathize with a bereaved husband—sailors in common, whose sea of life has been tossed and torn, upheaved and billowed by the tempestuous storm of trouble.

A man is to be pitied who loses the companionship of such a wife, so noble and true, whose life was a gold mine of unfathomable riches. All purity and devotion were hers. All the sweet and mystic influences of nature reached and moved her, and, like an instrument of music, she was responsive to the slightest touch of feeling or of fancy. It was not the effulgence of her devotion and true heartedness alone by which she was endeared to her friends. It was the milder glow of those gentle virtues which lit up her private character with the "lambent purity of the stars." She was the incarnation and embodiment of all those elements that go to make a woman admirable, and a wife precious and invaluable. The very soul of sincerity, perpetually overflowing with the milk of human kindness, free from all envy, hatred, malice and uncharitableness, her social relations were of the purest, gentlest, loveliest character, constantly illustrated by the most generous self-abnegation and unremitting thoughtfulness for the happiness of others. But she is gone.

"Gone to join the angels,
Peace for evermore;
Empty is the cradle, baby's gone."

Let us hope that the Christ who whispered "Peace" to the troubled waters of Galilee has whispered "Peace" to the sweet-witted soul of Mrs. Dicken. Can it be for the best, just in the sunniest, happiest hour of all the voyage, while eager winds are kissing every sail, to dash against the unseen rock, and in an instant hear the billows roar above a sunken ship? But God knows best, and whether in mid-sea or among the breakers of the farther shore, a wreck at last must mark the end of each and all; and every life, no matter if its every hour is rich with love, and every moment is jeweled with a joy, will, at its close, become a tragedy as sad and deep and unfathomable as can be woven of the warp and woof of mystery and death.

It was the end. In a wonderful age like this, when to exist is exultation, and to live forever is our sublimest hope, we can faintly conceive what an inexplicable tragedy is death. Annihilation, extinction and eternal death are the forebodings of despair. To know, to love, to achieve, to triumph, to confer happiness, to alleviate misery, is rapture.

The right to live is, in human estimation, the most sacred, the most inviolable, the most inalienable. The greatest crime and the severest penalty known to human law is the sacrifice and forfeiture of life. Yet we are all under sentence of death. Other conditions may or not exist. We may be rich or poor; we may be learned or ignorant; we may be happy or wretched, but we all must die. The verdict has been pronounced by the inexorable decree of an omnipotent tribunal.

Without trial or opportunity for defense, without being confronted with the witnesses against us, we have been summoned to the bar of life and condemned to death. There is no writ of error nor review; there is neither exculpation nor appeal. All must be relinquished.

But this obsequy is for the quick, and not the dead. It is not an inconsolable lamentation; it is a strain of triumph. It is an affirmation to those who survive, that, as our departed friend, contemplating, at the close of her short life, the monument of good deeds she had erected, more enduring than brass and loftier than the pyramids of kings, might exclaim with the Roman poet, "Non omnis moriar." So, turning to the unknown future, she could rely with just and reasonable confidence upon that most impressive and momentous assurance ever delivered to the human race, "He that believeth in me, though he were dead, yet shall he live; and whoso ever liveth and believeth in me, shall never die."

I have done. I will not add more to this pleasing, but mournful theme. Upon this theme her husband will delight to linger in the hope that he may join her when he, too, shall have crossed the cold, dark waters of death.

I close, impressed with the sad sense that the beautiful story of a life so short and lovely can never be told in any poor words of mine. I lay upon her tomb the silent homage of my soul. A. FRIEND.

LETTER FROM PRESIDING ELDER HARPER.

I reached this place during the holidays, and have been busy preparing for the work ahead of me. Bro. Parker, my predecessor on the district, had gone to his new field before I came, and all the pastors of the district are at their posts and at work. We are planning for and expecting a year of success in the Master's cause. I have been kindly received, and feel very much at home here, where I was pastor for two years and presiding elder one, and where, eighteen years ago, I found the greatest earthly blessing in the life of an itinerant—a true, true, itinerant wife. J. D. HARPER.

VIDALIA, LA.

Rev. E. T. Denson, our pastor, has not reached his work up to this time. The Sunday-school was called together the seventh of January. Circumstances prevented our meeting before. Six were present. We opened Sunday-school with prayer, the superintendent leading. After reading the lesson we sang the hymn, "I love to tell the story." Prayer was offered by a young gentleman, and also by a young lady. Another song was sung, and then two little girls repeated the Lord's Prayer. I felt the spirit of God was with us. I earnestly wish to revive the Sunday-school at this place. Pray for us. I ask in the name of Jesus—I. H. N.

Rev. G. H. Jacobs, Arkabutla, Miss., Jan. 10, 1900: "We reached our new field the thirteenth of December. Though we had to leave a number of dear friends at Arkabutla, it was very gratifying to find friends awaiting our arrival here. So we feel very much at home. We have had many expressions of kindness and appreciation, which encourage us in the work. We have made one round, and met a number of our people. We are hoping and working for a revival at each church that will result in a gracious ingathering. We find the work well organized, which gives us an advantage to begin with. We see some take the ADVOCATE, but not as many as need the help it would give them. I shall do all I can to put it into other homes. I find a subscription for the Twentieth Century Fund."

PONCHATOULA, LA.

At the late session of the Annual Conference, at Monroe, our beloved Bishop Galloway read me out for this place, and in humble submission I began at once to make preparation to leave my pleasant little home and the friends I loved so dearly at Grangeville, and cast my lot with the good people of Ponchatoula circuit. On Friday, Dec. 29, with my wife and little ones, we arrived here, and words fail us to be able to describe the warm reception accorded us by all the people here, regardless of church creeds or anything else. We found the parsonage to be a neat and comfortable home, with some of the rooms newly papered, and new carpeting and matting put down, and many other things to add to our comfort.

After dark, upon the evening of our arrival, there was a call at the door, which was answered by our little girl. Some one—we know not who—placed something in her hand, and told her to give it to her father. Upon examination it proved to be a treasury note of the denomination of five dollars. God will, we know, reward the secret giver openly, for he has said that he will.

We are happy in our work for the Master, and invoke the prayers of the church, that we may be able to come up to the expectations of our friends, and to lead this noble people into the straight and narrow way. Ah, to be a representative of the blessed Lord is the most important business on earth. May he give us strength to hold his banners aloft, and prevent them from trailing in the dust!

Brethren, pray for us, that we may be ever faithful to our duty.

J. L. MCMAHUS, P. C.

"I can truthfully say, Dr. Pierce's medicines did me more good than all I had ever taken before."

These are the words of Mr. O. S. Copenhaver, of Mount Union, Huntingden Co., Pa. He says further:

"About twelve years ago I was suddenly taken with a pain in the pit of the stomach which was so violent I could not walk straight. I consulted a physician and he told me I had a form of dyspepsia, and treated me six months with but little benefit. I then tried another physician and he told me my liver was out of order and that I had indigestion, but he didn't cure me. I then tried another one who said I had chronic indigestion, ulceration of the lining of the stomach, torpid liver and kidney affection. He treated me for more than a year. I then took several widely advertised patent medicines, but received no more than temporary relief while using. I then tried Doctor Pierce's medicines, using his 'Golden Medical Discovery,' and the 'Pleasant Pellets,' and in two months' time I was feeling better than I had for years before."

The "Golden Medical Discovery" is the most effective blood purifier and germicide that modern medical science has produced. It at once neutralizes the poisonous, fermented matter in the stomach, liver and bowels, and as soon as this is removed by the action of the "Pellets" it soothes the inflammed membranes of these organs, putting them into healthy condition to absorb the nutritive elements of the food. It aids and stimulates the action of the digestive fluids of the body and is absorbed into the blood along with the food. It enriches the blood, filling it with vitalizing, strength-giving properties. It produces sound, healthy flesh—muscle you can work with. It is a safe medicine. It contains no whisky, alcohol, sugar or syrup. It does not create a craving for liquor.

The Golden State is seriously considering the necessity of quarantining against consumptives. This means that God's fresh air and sunshine, nowhere more entrancing and beautiful than on the Pacific slope, may be denied to the unfortunate sufferers. Thousands have been greatly benefited and many cured by the delicious atmosphere of California, and it appears a most cruel measure, even though sanctioned by medical. Many persons now in the advanced stages of consumption, and surely doomed, could have been cured by early resort to that most gracious healing remedy, MARSDEN'S PECTORAL BALM.

Beef Steak in a Bottle.

That fresh, juicy beef, ready for digestion, can be made into a delicious cordial is a marvel; but chemistry has accomplished it. Sick people at a distance from markets and needing the nourishment afforded by beef tea can procure Dicks' NUTRITIVE ELIXIR and find it the best liquid food and stimulant known. For loss of appetite, weak digestion, debility, typhoid fever, and consumption it is invaluable.

DECREASE IN CERTAIN FORMS OF CRIME.

The better class of our citizens have for some time been troubled over the noticeable prevalence of certain kinds of crime, particularly of murder, lynching, and suicide, the frequent occurrence of which is in sad and sickening contrast with our boast of lofty civilization and of matchless progress. For a number of years the special forms of crime mentioned showed a somewhat steady and almost unaccountable increase. For instance, the number of murders committed in the United States in 1896 reached the alarming total of 10,652, the number having about doubled within ten years. Since that year, however, there has been a gratifying diminution in the number of murders committed each year, the following being the approximate figures: 9 520 in 1897, 7,840 in 1898, and only 6,225 in 1899. To whatever cause the decrease is attributable, there is great reason for thankfulness that, taking the whole country over, murder is not near so common as was the case a few years back. It has been deplorably true in the past that of all criminals among us murderers, on account of the tardiness of the courts and the laxity of public sentiment, have been about the most immune from punishment. In hundreds of instances red-handed murderers have been allowed to go scot-free after a few weeks' or a few months' confinement in the county jail, while those guilty of far less grave crimes have been made to suffer the full penalty of the law. We hope that the decrease in the number of murders last year, as compared with former years, is an indication of real improvement in public morals, and of a growing sentiment against the commission of such crimes. By no means, however, can it be expected that the gain will be permanent until the juries and courts of justice punish such offenders more surely and with greater severity. To wink at murder is but to encourage it, as, alas! too many communities have found out at last to their bitter sorrow.

It is encouraging to note, as the Chicago Tribune makes clear by the record it keeps of the misdeeds committed annually in this country and from which source our statistics are drawn, that during the year just past there were fewer lynchings than for about fourteen years, the number being put at 107 as compared with 127 for 1898, and 166 for 1897. The largest number of which we have record occurred in 1892, the total being 235. Two hundred was the number tabulated for the succeeding year. Thus, though a steady decline is thus traceable since '92, this evil continues to be one of the darkest blots upon our Christian civilization. Of this 107 lynchings, 103 are charged against the South and only 4 against the North. Here the Chicago Tribune, in endeavoring to discriminate against the South, is undoubtedly guilty of untrustworthiness in its statistics. If our friends north of Mason and Dixon's line had the negro to deal with, as is the case with us, it is not improbable that mob law would be even more characteristic of the North than of the South. Nor is this said by way of extenuation of lynching, which is always demoralizing, and in the fewest instances excusable, but simply to bring out the fact that the negro, because of his frequent manifestation of bestiality, is most often the victim of the mob's rage and brutality. Though much better than for several years, the record is dark enough; nor should the Christian public rest satisfied until the evil is entirely abated, and our laws are duly honored and strictly and impartially executed. So long as there is much of a chance for the basest of criminals to escape punishment by reason of the law's delay, or by taking advantage of some technicality, just so long may we expect mobs to gather and throw restraint to the winds.

It is gratifying also to note that during the year 1899 there were considerably fewer suicides than during the years immediately preceding, the record for the past five years being as follows: Number of suicides in 1895, 5,759; in 1896, 6 520; in 1897, 6,600; in 1898, 5,940; in 1899, only 5,340. It is a sad commentary on our civilization and enlightenment that this monstrous crime against self and against the Creator should be so common. The records show that four times as many men take their own lives as women. It is thus demonstrated that the weaker sex exhibit fortitude under the numerous ills and disappointments of life far more generally than do the males. We feel safe in asserting that women, more usually than men, cling to and are sustained by faith in God, and hence, when troubles come, are not so disturbed by them as to find life an intolerable burden. Though over twenty-five hundred of the suicides of last year are attributed to despondency, we are of the conviction that the most fruitful cause of suicide is infidelity. Ill health, business reverses and despondency are the occasion of the larger per cent. of suicides, but the distressed who thus seek relief would not be so ready to take their own lives were it not for the loss of faith or the lack of faith in the verities of the eternal world. The wider propagation of the gospel is the surest means of diminishing this as well as other evils. Among the professional men represented in the list of suicides physicians have a "bad pre eminence." This directly bears out what we have said about infidelity, a larger per cent. of skeptics and materialists, if we mistake not, being found among the medicos than among any other class of professionals. The extreme hurry and worry that characterize modern civilized life have, we think, no little to do with the prevalence and increase of self slaughter. There appears to be an intimate connection, too, between suicide and periods of financial depression, the number being far less during years of general prosperity than when the opposite is the case.

Says the Youth's Companion: "The Illinois State prisoners for 1899 numbered less than two thirds those of four years ago, and in New York the reduction is almost half."

GOV. LONGINO ON MOB LAW.

On the sixteenth instant Mississippi's new governor, Hon. A. H. Longino, in his inaugural address, which we may fitly characterize as a bold, masterly and broad-spirited document, spoke in no uncertain terms against the tolerance of mob law, and suggested a sensible and practicable remedy for lynching. In fact, it is one that seems to us well worthy of a trial, both in Mississippi and in other commonwealths. Georgia and Mississippi have gained an undesirable notoriety on account of the frequence with which lynch law is resorted to in dealing with criminals of various grades, and it behooves the Legislature of every State thus afflicted to enact some measure that will at least put a check upon mobism, if it does not stamp it out altogether. Last year twenty-eight lynchings occurred in Georgia, while Mississippi followed with fourteen.

Gov. Longino voices the sentiment of every true citizen, as well as of every good Christian, when he says: "The honor of Mississippi and the good name of her Christian civilization demand the suppression of mob violence, which, in my judgment, is the most demoralizing, brutalizing and ruinous species of lawlessness known to any brave and free people."

After adverting to the splendid advantages possessed by Mississippi in the way of soil, climate, and undeveloped raw material, the new governor very pertinently remarked that both the immigrant and the capitalist would be slow to come seeking a permanent home and profitable investment where life and property are not duly respected by the people and protected by the courts of justice.

The remedy suggested combines two features: First, the liability by the county where the lynching occurs to the payment of heavy damages to the family of the person lynched; and, secondly, the "ipso facto" vacation of the office of constable or sheriff whenever any prisoner under their custody is seized by a mob and lynched.

As Gov. Longino well says: "Lynching first found toleration, and then justification, in the State in a sublime respect for the virtue and honor of our white women, and true to the rule in this, as in all other cases where public opinion either condones or approves the disregard of the law incentive is thus furnished to other acts of lawlessness, and so on, ad infinitum. As a common sequence, therefore, lynching to day in the State is visited upon the suspect not only of criminal assault, but of homicide, house-burning, and even lesser accusations and offenses; and yet the mobbist, though in many instances acting without mask or disguise, has, with but few exceptions, gone his way without punishment or even indictment, so far as the public has been advised."

The governor strikes the nail on the head when he asserts that "the fault lies in a defective or inactive public sentiment on the subject." After mentioning that the laws are sufficiently rigorous in their penalties, that the judges have striven faithfully to discourage and put down mob violence, and that the press, as well as the various denominations, has protested vehemently against mob law, he declares it to be his conviction that there must be "resort to some stringent legal method to arouse public opinion" and correct the evil. It is to be hoped that the Legislature of Mississippi will profit by this excellent and timely advice of its new chief executive, and pass some such strong measure.

MISSISSIPPI SUNDAY REST LEAGUE.

The Sunday Rest League of Mississippi met in annual session in the First Presbyterian Church, at Jackson, on the seventeenth instant. Three sessions were held during the day. At the morning and the afternoon sessions Rev. J. B. Hutton, vice president, presided, the president, Bishop C. B. Galloway, being absent from the city. Rev. J. C. Park was elected secretary. Bishop Galloway presided at the night session, which was open to the public, and was well attended both by citizens and members of the Legislature. At this session addresses were delivered by Senator A. H. George, Representative W. M. Cox, and Bishop Galloway.

It was resolved to work along the line of the resolutions adopted by the Mississippi Annual Conference at its last session, viz.: to secure a law prohibiting the running of excursion, freight and extra trains on Sunday, and also prohibiting work in railroad shops and on railroads on Sunday. A local committee was appointed, with Dr. W. C. Black as chairman, to receive petitions in favor of this legislation, and present them to the Legislature. The other members of the committee, so far as announced, are: Bishop C. B. Galloway, Rev. J. B. Hutton, Rev. W. F. Yarborough. Two subcommittees were appointed to co operate with this central committee. The chairman of these two sub committees are: Rev. J. C. Park, of Winona, Miss., and Rev. I. L. Peebles, of McComb City. Much interest in this proposed legislation has been developed in different parts of the State, and petitions numerously signed are being sent in every day. About fifteen hundred signatures have been obtained in one county. Let the good work go on. Moreover, prompt action is desirable. It will be vastly serviceable to the cause to hold mass meetings wherever practicable, and have the cause represented by able speakers.

Revs. A. F. Watkins, J. A. Bowen, I. L. Peebles and C. F. Emery were active participants in the work of the convention.

THE NEW ORLEANS W. C. T. U.

The twenty-third annual meeting of the New Orleans W. C. T. U. was held on last Friday afternoon at their headquarters on St. Charles street, the attendance being larger than for a number of years. An attractive program, consisting of songs, recitations, readings, and addresses, was presented, and reports were heard from the various officers. Though the organization has not met with half the encouragement it deserves, it is steadily growing in numbers and in influence, and is doing, through the agency of its several departments, a highly commendable and genuinely Christian work.

There are now on the roll 122 active members, with twenty-eight passives, twenty-six honorary members and three well-wishers. A new union with twenty-four members was formed last March at the time of the visit of the national organizer. Miss Deacon, superintendent of temperance literature, stated in her report that 1540 copies of religious and temperance papers, 1550 leaflets, and 2005 cards had been distributed.

The flower mission report, given by Mrs. Lily Haag, superintendent, recorded twenty visits to the hospital and Parish Prison. She had personally distributed fruit, cake and flowers among the sick and prisoners; also religious and temperance papers, besides many Scripture cards and leaflets. Flower Mission Day was observed June 9, when gifts were made to the inmates of the jail and charitable institutions.

Mrs. Elizabeth Barr, superintendent of evangelistic work, reported that eight meetings had been held at headquarters and the Soldiers' Home, and forty-two at the Memorial Home. The inmates of both the institutions mentioned have expressed great appreciation of the visits of these faithful Christian workers.

The report of Mrs. Sarah Bothick, for the prison and jail work, mentioned that several visits had been made to the jail and parish prison, at which time several hundred tracts and leaflets were distributed.

Impressive and encouraging talks were made by several visiting ministers.

The following officers were elected for the ensuing year: Mrs. Alice M. Zabie, president; Mrs. S. S. Bothick, recording secretary; Mrs. F. A. Lyons, corresponding secretary, and Mrs. Lucy Whitlow, treasurer.

The good women of all the churches in the city, irrespective of denomination, ought to rally heartily to the support of this noble organization, which wields such mighty power for good in our land. There is the most urgent need in this city of just the kind of philanthropic work undertaken by this organization.

Millsaps College.

We are now in the midst of our intermediate examinations. The first term closes on the twenty-seventh, and the second term will begin Monday, the twenty-ninth.

The work of the college is moving on satisfactorily in all particulars. Indeed, the term just closing has been in some respects the best in the history of the institution. We have had almost perfect health, and the class standing of the students has been exceptionally high. The religious influences pervading the college is gratifying in the highest degree. W. B. MURRAH.

Notice to the Louisiana Conference.

DEAR BRETHREN: A letter just received from Rev. Geo. D. French states that he has been unavoidably delayed some ten days in his contemplated trip to Louisiana. Those of you to whom I have written will please take notice. I will write you again in due time.

Your brother,

JNO. B. KENT,
Treas. A. B. S., La. Conf.

Plaquemine, La., Jan. 22, 1900.

NOTES.

Bro. N. J. Roberts' postoffice this year is Bunkie, La.

Rev. J. M. Cowan has located in Jackson, Miss., and engaged in mercantile business.

Rev. C. F. Emery has made a very auspicious beginning at Capitol Street Church, Jackson.

Rev. T. S. Randle, of the Louisiana Conference, was in the city one day last week, and honored us with a visit.

Says Bishop Galloway: "Do not judge a preacher's service by his salary. A baseball pitcher often gets more money than any of our ministers."

Rev. J. H. Shumaker writes that he has had a royal reception at Kosciusko (Miss.), and that the prospects for a good year are most encouraging.

The address of Rev. J. S. Oakley has been changed from Durant to Chester, Miss. We regret to learn that there is very little improvement in his condition.

The numerous friends of Senator A. J. McLaurin, of Mississippi, will rejoice to learn that he is rapidly recovering from his recent attack of pneumonia.

We are pleased to learn that at Gretna (La.), last Sunday night, Pastor Fontaine was greeted by the largest congregation that has been known for years. Good reports of his sermon reached us.

The Baptist Church and the First Presbyterian Church of Jackson, Miss., omitted their services last Sabbath night and attended the services at the First Methodist Church as a compliment to the new pastor.

Rev. H. C. Brown, writing from Terry, Miss., under date of Jan. 16, says: "We have been royally received here. The people have given many expressions of kindly feeling toward us, and we are expecting a delightful year."

A letter from Presiding Elder Monnger, dated Jan. 18, states that South Vicksburg Church, left to be supplied at the late session of the Mississippi Conference, has been filled by the appointment to it of Rev. H. P. Lewis, Jr.

Rev. S. Parkes Cadman, pastor of the Metropolitan Methodist Church, New York City, has been engaged to preach the commencement sermon at Vanderbilt University this year. Report goes that he is a man of no small calibre.

The New York Advocate is authority for the statement that "the General Missionary Committee" of the M. E. Church will not for the present establish any missions in Cuba, but will establish missions in Puerto Rico and in the Philippine Islands.

The Nashville Advocate, of Jan. 18, was a "Twentieth Century number." Our general organ is always up to the mark, but the issue of last week was extraordinarily fine. In our opinion there is not a better religious weekly published in the United States.

We would like to get copies of the ADVOCATE, of March 31, 1898, and April 7, 1898. Any subscriber having copies of the dates mentioned who is willing to part with same, will confer a great favor on us by mailing them to this office at once, and price will be sent.

Rev. J. O. Bennett and family, of Keachie, La., have been quite sick for a couple of weeks with measles. On this account Bro. Bennett was unable to attend his quarterly meeting on the twentieth instant, this being the first he has missed during the fifteen years he has been pastor.

Rev. W. S. Shipman, pastor of Wood Street Church, Water Valley (Miss.), writes that he and his family have been very kindly received, and that the prospects for a good year are excellent. He states that their new parsonage will, when completed, be equal to the best in the Conference.

Says the St. Louis Advocate: "Miss Helen Gould has subscribed $1,000 to save the Woman's Temperance Temple at Chicago, being one of 100 persons to pledge that amount if $100,000 is raised. Marshall Field has extended the limit of his offer of $100,000 for another year."

On account of the deplorable condition of affairs in Kentucky growing out of the election muddle, the recent Colson-Scott tragedy being one of its direful results, Tuesday, the twenty-second instant, was observed by all the churches in Frankfort, Ky., as a day of humiliation and prayer.

Dr. J. T. Sawyer, the energetic and faithful presiding elder of the Shreveport district, was a visitor to the city early last week, and made the ADVOCATE office a pleasant call. The Doctor was looking well, and reports the outlook on his district as quite encouraging.

Rev. D. E. Kelley, who is serving the Jena and Jonesville (La.) charge, writes: "The work is moving on nicely. My circuit is only 70 miles across, but that is less than 80. The people are very kind to us, and I would not trade works with any brother in the Conference. I made 203 visits last quarter, and hope to make 300 this quarter."

Beginning next Monday night, the twenty-ninth instant, a Union Epworth League Gospel Meeting will be held at the Felicity Street Church in this city, and continue throughout the week. The services each night will commence at 7:30 o'clock. We trust that the Leaguers and their friends will turn out in full, and that they will have a gracious meeting.

Says the Nashville Advocate: "We learn that Bishop E. R. Hendrix has been invited to make an address at the great Twentieth Century Thankoffering Convention, to be held on March 5 and 6 by the Methodists of Central New York Conference at Syracuse, the seat of Syracuse University, and that he has accepted the invitation. Our Northern brethren may look out for something particularly good."

The Methodists of New York City have decided to raise $700,000, and remove the indebtedness on all their churches in that city. The officers of one church having subscribed $15,000, the congregation then agreed to gave $20,000 more, in order to be able to burn up a mortgage on their building. We hope this contagion will spread among the Southern Methodist Churches that are burdened with debts.

A letter from Rev. T. K. Faunt-LeRoy, dated at Opelousas, Jan. 15, conveys the following sad intelligence: "You will please give notice in next week's paper of the death of Dr. D. W. Foster. He died very suddenly on Friday, the twelfth, with neuralgia of the heart. He was stricken in the morning at breakfast, and died at 5:30 o'clock the same day. He was buried on Sunday at 11 o'clock. An obituary will be sent in the near future."

Any of the brethren who may need help in conducting revival meetings during the year would do well to engage the services of Rev. H. H. Ahrens, formerly of the Louisiana Conference, but now a local preacher, who is known to many of our readers. As Bro. Ahrens is a good preacher and an excellent singer, we predict that he will be in great demand. We call special attention to a card from him in another column.

In a card written from Sardis, Miss., and dated Jan. 23, Bro. W. S. Lagrone writes: "In my notice to the North Mississippi Conference, in last week's ADVOCATE, I gave the name of Rev. J. H. Shumaker as the treasurer. It is F. P. Jinkins, Aberdeen, Miss. Bro. Jinkins has the spirit of missions, and will fill this place well. The brethren promise to begin early in this part of the work. Bro. Lipscomb, at Coldwater, has more than half of his collections now in hand. Bro. Jinkins will hear from him this week. We are meeting with great encouragement from preachers and people on all the charges we have visited."

A private letter, recently received from a Natchez (Miss.) layman, contains the following news of interest: "Rev. J. E. Carpenter has been royally welcomed by his new charge at Natchez. The people are charmed with his preaching, and the outlook for a successful year was never brighter. Many of our people hated to part with Bro. Norsworthy after only one year, but being loyal Methodists, they acquiesced in the decision of the powers that be." From the same source we learn also that the members of Wesley Chapel are much pleased over the return of Bro. H. D. Howell to them for another year, and that he is doing a good work there.

EPWORTH LEAGUE DEPARTMENT.

"ALL FOR CHRIST."

REV. THOMAS B. CLIFFORD, Morgan City, La., EDITOR.

MISSISSIPPI.

REV. HENRY G. HAWKINS, Madison, Miss ASSOCIATE EDITOR.

Some of the Leagners are of the opinion that the Mississippi State Leagne Conference shonld be hald only once in two years, and that for the year in which it is not heid there be instead a League gathering for each of the two Mississippi Conferences. The following were appointed a committee to ascertain the sentiment of the workers throughout the State on this question: Revs. A. F. Watkins, T. Y. Ramsey, Messrs. W. D. Hawkins, W. F. Lagrone, W. H. Mallory, Jr., and Miss Mabel Stegar. The editor of this colnmn will make space here for any views commnnicated to him on the snbject.

"The Vision of Africa," an editorial in the Epworth Era, of Jan. 11, is a fine piece of literatnre, a snrpassing epitome.

In view of the approaching State Leagne Conference, to be held at Vicksburg the last week of April, it will be well to notice the following, which is Article 3 of the Constitution:

"Each League shall be entitled to one delegate. Leagues with membership exceeding 15, an additional delegate for each 15, or fractional part thereof.

"All preachers and presiding elders who have Leagnes in their respective charges or districts, shall be admitted as delegates. All Leagners who have paid their five cents per capita assessment shall be entitled to representation in the State Conference.

"Credentials of delegates must be signed by the president and secretary of their Leagues, and forwarded with their names to the local committee at place where Conference meets."

There have been sent to the pastors throughout the State blanks to be used in securing petitions to the Legislature looking to the passage of a law for the relief of railroad employees from so much labor on the Sabbath. Happy is the pastor who can use his young people as helpers in cases like this. Happy, too, are the young people who take interest in reforms, and are willing to give of their time and energy to assist in bringing them about. It is a fact that empty cars are repaired on Sunday; it is a fact that grading for new tracks is done on Sunday; it is a fact that many clerks in the freight depots of the larger towns are kept at work seven days of every week. All the trains run on Sunday except the local freights, and the merchandise hauled by them forms only a very small proportion of the total traffic of the railroads. Now is the time to act. The Legislature will sit a few weeks, and then the opportunity will have gone if we be not diligent now.

The following is quoted from the Minutes of the last State Leagne Conference:

"Rev. J. M. Wyatt, of Aberdeen, moved to reconsider the amendment adopted on the Plan of Work, and offered the following amendment, which was adopted:

"'That we offer our services to our presiding elders and pastors to aid, under their direction, in bringing up the general collections of the church.

"'We pledge ourselves to a special effort to help in paying in full the home and foreign missionary assessment.

"'We suggest:

"'That every district be thoroughly organized by the presiding elders and district secretaries.

"'That the Leagnes assist in holding mass meetings.

"'Distribute missionary literature.

"'Aid the pastors as collectors, and

"'Where possible, raise a sinking fund with which to assist weak charges.'"

DEAR BRO. HAWKINS: As corresponding secretary of the Chas. B. Galloway Leagne, it becomes my pleasant duty to acquaint you with the progress our Leagne has made during the past year. We have had good officers, who discharged their duty faithfully. They have had the earnest co-operation of about forty wide-awake members, and the interest and prayers of a faithful, conscientious pastor, Bro. J. W. McLaurin. In attestation of our love for him, and appreciation of his work among us, the Leagne presented him with a handsome gold pen, a little souvenir of a people who have known and loved him.

During the past year the Leagne has contributed ten dollars to missions, over seventy dollars for church improvements, charity and help demands, besides meeting every obligation and requirement.

Our annual election of officers takes place Jan. 7, 1900.

We hope to do even greater things this year. MRS. B. B. FORD,
Cor. Sec. Chas. B. Galloway League.

NOTICE.

The Executive Committee of the Mississippi Conference Board of Church Extension will meet in Vicksburg on Wednesday night before the fourth Sabbath in February. All applications to the Parent Board should be sent to the president, or, better, to Rev. A. F. Watkins, who will file them for the committee.

The members of the committee are: Rev. R. W. Bailey, secretary, Moss Point; Rev. L. S. Jones, president, Port Gibson; Bro. L. A. Holloman, treasurer, Phanix.

FROM SHREVEPORT.

On Wednesday we left with Rev. M. M. Black the copy for the Louisiana Conference Minutes. We have been delayed by not receiving earlier some of the memoirs; and, then, other matter that ought to go in has not yet reached us. There should be now nothing in the way of the early appearance of our Minutes, as the publisher of them will lose no time in getting them out. All the preachers of the Shreveport district are at their post, and entering upon their labors with vigor and hope. We confidently expect them to do even better than they did last year. We give some of the results of their labors last year. The charges paid their preachers an increase of about 20 per cent. over the previous year. Seven charges paid all claims in full, and several paid over their assessments, while ten charges paid in full all the Conference collections, though behind with preacher in charge and presiding elder. It looks better for the preacher in charge to report himself and his presiding elder, not in full, but the collections in full, than to report the reverse. There are double the number of Epworth Leagnes, and there is also a greater interest in Sunday schools. The increase on the collections over previous year is as follows: On Conference claimants, 6 per cent.; on foreign missions, over 60 per cent.; on domestic missions, over 35 per cent.; on Bishops, about 10 per cent.; on church extension, about 42 per cent.; on education, about 53 per cent.; on Minutes, about 4 per cent.; on American Bible Society, about 140 per cent.

The Twentieth Century Fund had attention from only a few charges, but some hundreds of dollars were paid and pledged. This fund will, doubtless, be looked after by our preachers this year, and the amount expected of us ought to be easily raised. There were 622 additions to the church during the year, and as many, and more, conversions. These items in regard to last year's work are given to show that our preachers were zealous and faithful workers in the vineyard. Their presiding elder can ask nothing more for them than that they may surpass themselves during this good year of 1900.

NOTICE.

DEAR BRETHREN: As many have already seen in the daily papers, I have resigned my position with the Southern Pacific Company. I have been offered other positions, all of which entail work on the Sabbath, and to this I can not again consent. During the year I desire to help my brethren in meetings, taking charge of the music myself, and to know nothing but the salvation of souls and the upbuilding of Christ's kingdom on earth.

I earnestly request the brethren to write me, and if my services are required, I am willing to go anywhere where I may be called.

Fraternally,

FROM REV. W. D. BASS.

MR. EDITOR: Rev. W. M. Young has been exceptionally well received on the Corinth district. The people of all classes love him. He has both sense and religion, and conducts the business of the church with courtesy, wisdom, and success. He puts the proper stress on the point that stewards have other important duties to perform besides collecting money for the preacher. We expect the district to come to the front.

Bro. H. S. Spraggins, our pastor, and his excellent wife have been well received at Corinth. He has made a good start.

I am now making engagements with the brethren to assist them in their revivals during the year. Other pastors in Mississippi and Louisiana wishing my help should write me at once. I hold revivals on circuits, stations, and missions. Will give perfect satisfaction as to my work.

Let none call, only those who need a great revival of pure religion among their people.

WONDERFUL CURES BY SWAMP-ROOT.

TO PROVE WHAT THIS FAMOUS NEW DISCOVERY WILL DO FOR YOU, EVERY READER OF "CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE" MAY HAVE A SAMPLE BOTTLE SENT ABSOLUTELY FREE BY MAIL.

65th Police Precinct, Greater New York.

Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. Nov. 11th, 1899.

Gentlemen:

In justice to you, I feel as if it was my duty to send you an acknowledgment of the receipt of the sample bottle of Swamp-Root the great kidney, liver and bladder remedy you so kindly sent me. I had been troubled for the past five years with kidney and bladder trouble. I had our best physicians prescribe for me. They would relieve me for the time being, but the old complaint would in a short time return again. I sent for a sample bottle of Swamp-Root and I found it did me a world of good. Since then I have taken eight small bottles and I consider myself perfectly cured. I do not have to get up during the night to urinate as I formerly did, three and four times a night, but now sleep the sleep of peace. My back is all right again, and in every way I am a new man. Two of my brother officers have, and are still using Swamp-Root. They, like myself, can not say too much in praise of it. It is a boon to mankind. We recommend it to all of our friends, and we recommend it to all humanity who are suffering from kidney and bladder diseases.

My brother officers (whose signatures accompany this letter) as well as myself, thank you for the blessing you have brought to the human race in the compounding of Swamp-Root. We remain, Yours very truly,

JAMES COOK
HUGH E. BOYLE
JOHN J. BODKIN

What a Woman Says of Swamp-Root.

Mrs. H. N. Wheeler of 268 Boston St., Lynn, Mass., writes on Dec. 11th, '99: "About 18 months ago I had a very severe attack of grip. I was extremely sick for three weeks, and when I finally was able to leave my bed I was left with excruciating pains in my back. My water at times looked very like coffee. I could pass but little at a time, and then only after suffering great pain. My physical condition was such that I had no strength and was all run down. The doctors said my kidneys were not affected, but I felt certain that they were the cause of my trouble. My sister, Mrs. C. E. Littlefield of Lynn, advised me to give Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root a trial. I procured a bottle, and inside of three days commenced to get relief. I followed up that bottle with another, and at the completion of this one found I was completely cured. My strength returned, and to-day I am as well as ever. My business is that of canvasser, I am on my feet a great deal of the time, and have to use much energy in getting around. My cure is therefore all the more remarkable, and is exceedingly gratifying to me."

MRS. H. N. WHEELER.

Among the many famous cures of Swamp-Root investigated by the "CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE" the ones which we publish this week for the benefit of our readers, speak in the highest terms of the wonderful curative properties of this great kidney remedy.

It used to be considered that only urinary and bladder troubles were to be traced to the kidneys, but now modern science proves that nearly all diseases have their beginning in the disorder of these most important organs.

The kidneys filter and purify the blood—that is their work.

So when your kidneys are sick you can understand how quickly your entire body is affected and how every organ seems to fail to do its duty.

If you are sick or "feel badly," begin taking Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, because as soon as your kidneys are well they will help all the other organs to health. A trial will convince you—and you may have a sample bottle free for the asking.

When your kidneys are not doing their work, some of the symptoms which prove it to you are pain or dull ache in the back, excess of uric acid, gravel, rheumatic pains, sediment in the urine, scanty supply, scalding irritation in passing it, obliged to go often during the day and to get up many times during the night to empty the bladder; sleeplessness, nervous irritability, dizziness, irregular heart, breathlessness, sallow, unhealthy complexion, puffy or dark circles under the eyes, sometimes the feet, limbs or body bloat, loss of ambition, general weakness and debility.

Swamp-Root is used in the leading hospitals, recommended by skillful physicians in their private practice; and is taken by doctors themselves who have kidney ailments, because they recognize in it the greatest and most successful remedy that science has ever been able to compound.

To prove its wonderful curative properties, send your name and address to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., when you will receive, free of all charge, a sample bottle of Swamp-Root and a valuable book by mail prepaid. This book contains many of the thousands upon thousands of testimonial letters received from men and women who owe their good health, in fact their very lives, to the wonderful curative properties of this world-famous kidney remedy. Swamp-Root is so remarkably successful that our readers are advised to write for a free sample bottle and to be sure and mention reading this generous offer in the NEW ORLEANS "CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE."

If you are already convinced that Swamp-Root is what you need you can purchase the regular fifty-cent and one-dollar size bottles at the drug stores everywhere.

A BUILDER'S LESSON.

BY JOHN BOYLE O'REILLY.

"How shall I a habit break?"
As you did that habit make
As you gathered, you must lose;
As you yielded, now refuse.
Thread by thread the strands we twist
Till they bind us, neck and wrist;
Thread by thread the patient hand
Must untwine ere free we stand.
As we builded, stone by stone,
We must toil unhelped, alone,
Till the wall is overthrown.

But remember, as we try,
Lighter every test goes by;
Wading in, the stream grows deep
Toward the center's downward sweep;
Backward turn, each step ashore
Shallower is than that before.
Ah, the precious years we waste
Leveling what we raised in haste!
Doing what must be undone
Ere content or love be won!
First across the gulf we cast
Kite-borne threads, till lines are passed,
And habit builds the bridge at last!

NOTED DUNCES.

The world has been very kind to many who were once known as dunces or blockheads, after they have become very successful; but it was very cross to them while they were struggling through discouragement and misinterpretation. Such lives do not show, however, that a numskull is sure to climb to the top. Because the last boy in his class became the great Henry Ward Beecher, there is no reason to conclude that the last boy in the next class, or the next, must become anything great at all. There must be some life in the boy, or he will not rise under any circumstances until the day appointed for the resurrection of the dead. If he starts out in life as a failure, he will end as one, unless he gets thoroughly waked up in some way. Give every boy and girl a fair chance and reasonable encouragement, and do not condemn them because of even a large degree of downright stupidity; for many so-called good-for-nothing boys, blockheads, numskulls, dullards, or dunces, were only boys out of their places—round boys forced into square holes.

"Let us people who are so uncommonly clever and learned," says Thackeray, "have a great tenderness and pity for the folks who are not endowed with the prodigious talents which we have. I have always had a regard for dunces—those of my own school days were among the pleasantest of fellows, and have turned out by no means the dullest in life; whereas, many a youth who could turn off Latin hexameters by the yard, and construe Greek quite glibly, is no better than a feeble prig now, with not a pennyworth more brains than were in his head before his beard grew."

George Stephenson, at the age of twenty, could neither read nor write, yet his name is inseparably linked with the introduction and development of railways.

Wellington was considered a dunce by his mother. At Eton he was called dull, idle, slow, and was about the last boy in school of whom anything was expected. He showed no talent, and had no desire to enter the army. His industry and perseverance were his only redeeming characteristics in the eyes of his parents and teachers. But at forty-six, he had defeated the greatest general living, except himself.

Goldsmith was the laughing-stock of his school-masters. He was graduated "Wooden Spoon," a college name for a dunce. He tried to enter a class in surgery, but was rejected. He was driven to literature. Dr. Johnson found him very poor, and about to be arrested for debt. He made Goldsmith give him the manuscript of the "Vicar of Wakefield," sold it to the publishers, and paid the debt. The manuscript made its author famous. John Harvard was called a boy of no promise, but he founded Harvard College, and became one of the real benefactors of the race.

Robert Clive bore the name of "dunce" and "reprobate" at school, but at thirty-two, with three thousand men, he defeated fifty thousand at Plassey, and laid the foundation of the British Empire in India. Walter Scott was called a blockhead by his teacher.

When Byron happened to get ahead of his class the master would say:

"Now, Gordie, let me see how soon you will be at the foot again."

Sheridan's mother tried in vain to teach him the most elementary studies. Her death aroused his slumbering talents, as has happened in hundreds of cases, and he became one of the most brilliant men of his age. Dr. Chalmers was expelled from St. Andrews School because of his stupidity.

Isaac Barrow was such a dullard that his father said, "If it is God's will to take any of my children by death, I hope it may be Isaac."

"Why do you tell that blockhead the same thing twenty times over?" asked John Wesley's father.

"Because," replied his mother, "if I had told him but nineteen times, all my labor would have been lost, while now he will understand and remember."

Young Linnæus was called by his teachers almost a blockhead. Not finding him fit for the church, his parents sent him to college to study medicine. But the silent teacher within, greater and wiser than all others, led him to the fields; and neither sickness, misfortune nor poverty could drive him from the study of botany, the choice of his heart, and he became the greatest botanist of his age.

David Drew was one of the dullest and most listless boys in his neighborhood, yet, after an accident by which he nearly lost his life, and after the death of his brother, he became so studious and industrious that he could not bear to lose a moment. He read at every meal, using all the time he could get for self-improvement.

We live in a superficial age, and hurry along in a happy-go-lucky way, ignorant or heedless of the capacities of our minds and bodies. The precocious youth, the boy or girl of average intelligence, or the dunce, should alike study his own strength, his weakness, his likes, his dislikes, his bent. "Know thyself," was spoken of old at Delphi; and, though the oracle has long been mute, the words are of eternal significance. No better advice was ever given to man. Philosophy finds its highest province in the study of our own natures. Knowledge thus gained, and that alone, will teach the round boy to avoid the square holes as he would shun falsehood and dishonor. It has been well said that no man ever made an ill figure who understood his own talents, nor a good one who mistook them.—Success.

LOSE TIME WISELY.

It is not worth while to try to steal from nature. There are limits to the human capacity for endurance and for labor. The man who imagines that he can constantly go beyond these limits without paying the penalty is grievously in error, and sooner or later will discover the fact. In the long run, more work and better work can be done by those who exercise due moderation than by those who do not. The magnificent "spurts" of energy which often amaze us are likely to be followed by a corresponding reaction. Herbert Spencer says that the great secret of success is to learn how to lose time wisely. The emphasis here is on the word "wisely." Almost anybody can manage to lose time, but to do so in such a manner as to make the loss a source of recuperation is another thing.—Nashville Christian Advocate.

TWO ROADS TO HAPPINESS.

There are two ways of being happy; we may either diminish our wants, or augment our means—either will do—the result is the same; and it is for each man to decide for himself and do that which happens to be the easier. If you are idle, or sick, or poor, however hard it may be to diminish your wants, it will be harder to augment your means. If you are active and prosperous, or young, or in good health, it may be easier for you to augment your means than to diminish your wants. But if you are wise, you will do both at the same time, young or old, rich or poor, sick or well; and if you are very wise, you will do both in such a way as to augment the general happiness of society. —Benjamin Franklin.

We should all try to learn the lesson of gentleness in our homes. It is the lesson that is needed to make the home happiness a little like heaven's. Home is meant to be a place to grow in. It is a school in which we should learn love in all its branches. It is not a place for selfishness or for self-indulgence. It should never be a place where a man can work off his ill-humor after trying to keep polite and courteous all day outside. It is not the place for the opening of doors of heart and lips to let ugly tempers fly out like ill-omened birds, and soar about at will. It is not a place where people can act as they feel, however un-Christian their feelings may be, withdrawing the guards of self-control relaxing all restraints, and letting their worse self have sway.—Exchange.

A Small Beginning.

A little snow ball on the summit of the Alps, rolled up by the winds, moves slowly downward. Gaining in strength and size, it grows rapidly to giant proportions, and finally becomes the frightful avalanche, destroying everything in its path. Consumption begins with a little cough, a trifling pain, a passing flush on the cheeks. This is but the beginning of the avalanche, consumption, that knows no pity, recognizes no distinction. Just at the beginning thousands commit the error of not checking and curing the disease by using MARSDEN'S PECTORAL BALM.

A Serious Decision.

"Why CHILLIFUGE Won't Cure Chills"—is a question that brings to mind the story of a society of learned men formed for debating problems.

The question was presented: "Why a fish weighing ten pounds, put into a vessel of known weight, filled with water, did not increase the weight?" After hours of hot debate the fool of the club announced that it did, for while the debate had been going on he had tried the experiment.

IN MEMORIAM.

At her home, No. 122 South President St., in the city of Jackson, Mississippi, at 3 o'clock P. M., Saturday, January 6, 1900, there passed from earth to heaven the soul of Mrs. Caroline Price. It was the pleasure of this writer to have known Mrs. Price for a number of years, and to have been regarded by her as one of her friends.

Mrs. Price was born in Marion district, S. C., on August 15, 1841, her maiden name being Caroline Gaskew. In the early days of her young womanhood she was united in marriage to W. L. Barrow, with whom she lived happily until his death. Of this marriage two children survive.

On December 5, 1866, she married Mr. J. F. Price and came with him to his Mississippi home, where they have since resided. Of this marriage three children are left to mourn the loss of a mother they all loved so well.

Mrs. Price early in life connected herself with the Methodist Church, in which faith she lived and died. She was ever faithful in the discharge of her church obligations, and an active and earnest worker in the Master's cause. She was noted for her devotion to her husband and children, being ever on the watch for something that would promote their happiness or further their interests. Next to fidelity to her family she was known for her faithfulness to her friends, but above devotion to family and friends she was possessed of one trait of character that stood boldly above all others and which marked her as the true Christian woman, and that was her devotion to the sick and suffering, the poor and needy, in the relief of which her charity knew no bounds.

Mrs. Price had not been in good health for several months, but was able to look after her household duties until the tenth of November, 1899, when she was compelled to give up, and gradually grew weaker until death claimed her gentle spirit.

Death is at all times sad and sorrowful, and brings grief and heartbreaking tears to all within the family circle. Yet there sometimes occur incidents that serve to mitigate the great grief of the sorrowing ones, and give them the assurance that all is well with their loved one. Such an incident transpired at the bedside of Mrs. Price. Three days before her death, as her husband and children stood grouped around her, eagerly watching for any sign of returning consciousness, she raised her hand and, with the index finger pointed upward, said, "Oh, what a beautiful scene over there, where I am going," and turning her face toward her husband, with her hand still upraised, said, "I am going away over yonder where everything is so lovely." Lowering her hand, she motioned her husband to bend over her, and imprinting a sweet kiss upon his lips, she passed into a state of insensibility, and remained so to the end.

Tenderly watched over by husband and children, she passed quietly away from earth to that beautiful land she had been permitted to look upon.

Mrs. Price died as she had lived, a true Christian, and of her it may be truthfully said:

"Hers was a life well spent; its close
Tho cloudless sundown of repose."

JOYCE—Mrs. K. J. JOYCE, wife of Mr. G. B. Joyce, was born in Mississippi, Oct. 4, 1841, and died in Leesville, La., Dec. 12, 1899, in her sixtieth year. She was sick quite awhile with slow fever, but she bore her afflictions with Christian fortitude, and never murmured nor complained. Her maiden name was McGowen. She spent her childhood days traveling. She was married, at the age of fourteen, to Mr. G. B. Joyce in the State of Texas in 1854. To them were born nine children—six boys and three girls. Three of the children preceded her to the golden shore. After her marriage she and her husband moved to Natchitoches parish, where they lived up to last July; then moved to Leesville, La., where she died. She professed religion in 1859, and united at once with the M. E. Church, South, of which she remained a consistent member until death. No better woman ever lived. She was noble-hearted, true, and affectionate; a devoted wife, a faithful mother, a true Christian. The world is better off by her having lived. She has set in motion an influence for good that will be felt by generations yet unborn. Our loss is her eternal gain. Blessed are the dead that die in the Lord from henceforth; they rest from their labors, and their works do follow them. Her highest ambition was to do God's will, and make her home happy and her many friends pleasant. She always tried to make her friends pleasant. She was so kind and gentle and pleasant every way.

A noble woman has crossed the river,
And bid us all good-bye;
But we'll meet her in the bright forever,
In that home beyond the sky.

She leaves a husband and six children, and a host of other relatives and friends, to mourn her loss. May God bless and comfort the weeping relatives, and especially the aged husband!

STRAHAN—It is my sad duty to offer a short tribute to the memory of Mrs. M. A. STRAHAN. She was born March 31, 1877, and died Nov. 12, 1899, aged twenty-two years seven months and twelve days. She was married to V. E. Strahan, Dec. 7, 1898. Sister Strahan joined the M. E. Church, South, when quite young, and, as far as I know, lived a consistent life. Her death was a sad death to her young and thrifty husband, and also to her widowed mother and friends. She died in child-bearing. She gave birth to a son that was born dead, and in five hours she was a corpse also, and she and her sweet boy were placed in the same coffin, and also in the same grave in the old graveyard near her mother, where she will sleep until God calls her from her slumbers to the home of the blessed. She told her mother that she was ready for the change. The writer preached the funeral at the grave to a very large assembly of relatives and friends. May God bless and keep the dear old mother and young husband is my prayer.

CRISLER—Mr. S. J. CRISLER, the subject of this sketch, was born near Cooper's Wells, Hinds county, Miss., Feb. 9, 1842. Here he spent the early part of his life, enlisting as a soldier in the Confederate army before he was fully grown. On Oct. 17, 1866, he was happily married to Miss Ada Smith, of Madison, and to this union six children were born—five boys and one girl—all of which survive him except one twin boy.

Bro. Crisler joined the church in August, 1866, under the ministry of Rev. A. M. Campbell, and ever lived a good Christian life. He trained his children up in the Christian faith, and the three oldest boys have made successful physicians. He was steward and trustee of the church at the time of his death, which occurred Nov. 7, with that dreadful disease, yellow fever. Thus has passed away an honest, brave, good and true man. The church, State, town and friends feel his loss keenly. May God bless and comfort his family in this sad hour!

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials. Address,

THE BEST EVER MADE.

The very best premium offer we have ever made is our Sewing Machine Offer now running. You get the machine at a fabulously low price, and with it get a six months' subscription free. You have different styles to select from, and you have ten days to test the machine. Don't fail to read our offer.

Two Verdicts.

"After a fair and impartial trial you are judged guilty by this court, and you are sentenced to be hung by the neck until you are dead." The solemn tones of the judge, the despairing face of the prisoner, and the painful stillness of the court-room, makes it a scene of awful impress. Now turn to a brighter scene at the home circle. A mother radiant with joy over the recovery of a child snatched from the clutches of Malaria. An entire family rejoicing, and praising the merits of Dicks' Chillifuge, and giving their verdict that Chillifuge is without an equal for swiftness to cure.

TAKE NOTICE

That we are now handling two different styles of the Holman Bible in Bourgeois type. One we sell to paid-up subscribers at $1.50, the other at $1.30. The $1.30 Bible is substantially the same we have hitherto sold at $1.50. The one we sell at $1.50 is a far better Bible than has ever been sold at such a price. It is a marvel of cheapness. See our offer.

SCHOLARSHIP FREE.

You may, by doing little writing at your home, secure scholarship, free, in either Draughon's Practical Business Colleges—Nashville, St. Louis, Little Rock, Ft. Worth, Galveston, Shreveport or Savannah. Best patronized Business Colleges in the South. For particulars address The Illustrated Youth and Age, Nashville, Tenn.

The "Combination" Bible.

A SUPERB EDITION

of the Holy Scriptures, showing at a glance at the foot of the pages all changes made by the revisers.

New Type. All Proper Names Self-Pronouncing. The Most Valuable Collateral Matter.

There is a steady and increasing demand for first-class Bibles. Everybody is anxious to obtain a copy of the best edition of the Holy Scriptures. Old editions are constantly being replaced by Bibles that are in every way more attractive, and there is practically no limit to the demand.

OUR "COMBINATION" FEATURE.

Hitherto the King James and Revised Versions have been printed in parallel columns, but this makes comparisons of texts tedious and unsatisfactory, and makes the book very unwieldy. We have overcome this difficulty by "combining" the two Versions on the same page, showing at a glance in foot-notes all the Changes Additions and Omissions made by the Revisers.

THE OLD VERSION PRINTED IN FULL.

The King James Version is the basis, and this Version is read straight along from the text, while the Revised Version is read from the text in combination with the foot-notes. Our "Combination" Feature has met with universal approval and is strongly endorsed by leading Divines and Biblical Scholars.

It is only by a comparison of the two Versions that the greatest benefit can be obtained from reading the Holy Scriptures, and this comparison every reader can easily make by our simple arrangement for showing the changes made by the revisers. This is the greatest triumph of Bible Publishing the World has ever known.

OUR OFFER.

To those unprogressive people who do not read and pay for the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE we sell this Bible at the publisher's retail price—$4.25. To our subscribers we sell it at the very low rate of $2. The only condition attached to this offer is that the subscriber must pay his subscription one full year in advance, viz.: to February, 1901. We will send it postpaid to any person who will send us three new cash subscribers at the regular rate. For six new cash subscribers at the regular rate we will send two "Combination" Bibles, postpaid.

For fifty cents additional we will send a Bible with index.

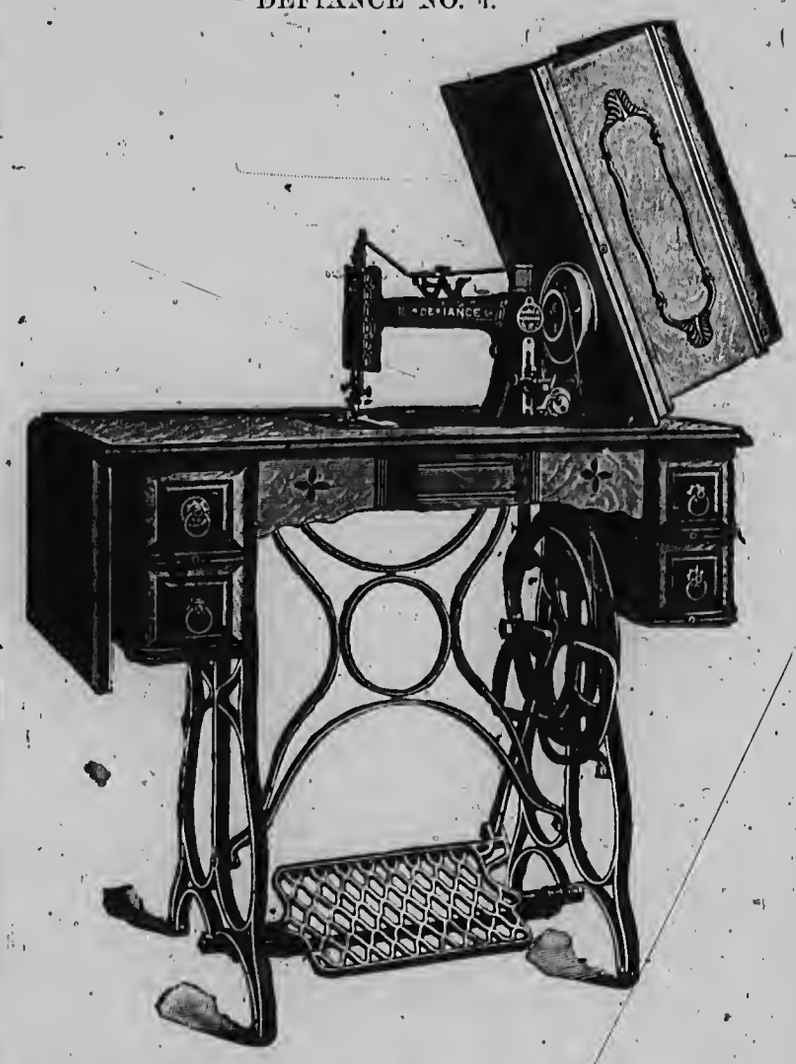
For twenty-five cents additional we will have your name engraved in gilt letters on the outside.

Address REV. W. C. BLACK.

P. S.—We can give no commission on renewals in connection with the above offer.

New Machine Offer.

DEFIANCE NO. 4.



The Defiance Machine is the perfection of simplicity, durability, speed, strength and ease of operation.

Construction. It is constructed of the best material in use, every bearing, without an exception, being of steel or case-hardened.

The Mechanical Devices of this machine are a combination of tried mechanical principles. In detail it differs materially from other machines. Its simplicity is at once apparent, and its great durability is admitted by the best mechanical experts.

The Arm is large and roomy, 8x5½ inches in the clear.

No Vibration. This machine does not vibrate. Its motion is easy and quiet.

Lock Stitch. It is a lock-stitch shuttle machine.

Speedy, Light, Quiet. It is as speedy, light and quiet-running as any shuttle machine manufactured.

Double Feed—Positive Four-Motion. The double feed possesses advantages over all others. Its very shape and form obviates all the disadvantages arising from double feeds as they have heretofore been constructed, and combines in this machine all the advantages of both the single and double feed, doing away with the objections to either of them.

The operation of the feed mechanism is positive, giving an accurate four-motion movement to the feed without the use of springs.

The Needle Bar. This machine has a self-lubricating needle bar, which is always kept clean, well-oiled, and the oil can not drop on the work and soil it.

The Needle is absolutely self-setting. No screwdriver is required in setting, a winged thumb nut being used instead.

The machine is self-threading. Put in the bobbin, draw the thread towards you, through the slot and, it is done.

The Loose Pulley for winding the bobbins without running the machine is so constructed as to admit of an instantaneous stoppage and starting of the machine without stopping the treadle movement—a valuable improvement peculiar to this machine.

Automatic Bobbin Winder. The bobbin winder operates automatically, winding the thread on the bobbin regularly and as evenly as the thread on a spool. Can be operated without running the machine.

Extra Attachments, in velvet-lined case, sent free with each machine: 1 Tucker, 1 Ruffler with shirring plate, 1 Hemmer set (4 widths) and Binder, 1 Braider (Foot and Slide), 1 Thread Cutter and Feller (one piece), 10 Needles, 6 Bobbins, 1 Wrench, 1 Screwdriver, Oil Can filled with oil, Cloth Gauge and Thumb-screw, and a Book of Instructions. The Book of Instructions is profusely illustrated and answers the purpose of a competent teacher.

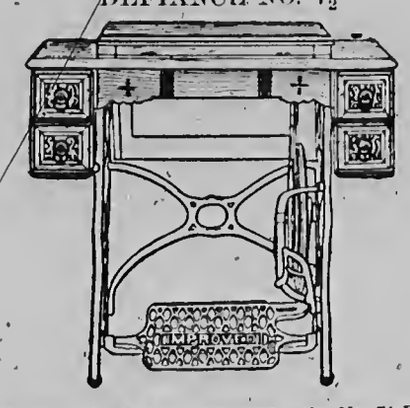
DEFIANCE NO. 7½



This cut shows our new and popular style, the No. 7½ Defiance Drop Cabinet perfectly protecting the machine from dust, and making a convenient and ornamental stand. When machine is ready for use the head is in same position as on ordinary style; when through using, it requires only the turning over of the leaf of table, and the sewing machine head drops into the case or cabinet between the drawers, completely out of sight, forming a handsome table with highly polished top.

No. 3 Machine, drop leaf table, bent cover, case of one drawer at each end and center drawer. Dealer's price, $32. Our price, $18.

No. 4 Machine, drop leaf table, bent cover, case of two drawers at each end and center drawer. Dealer's price, $34. Our price, $19.

No. 5 Machine, drop leaf table, bent cover, case of three drawers at each end and center drawer, making seven drawers in all. Dealer's price, $36. Our price, $20.

No. 7½ Machine, Drop head cabinet, case of two drawers at each end and center drawer. Dealer's price, $38. Our price, $23.

The chief difference between Numbers 3, 4, and 5 is in the furniture—i. e., the number of drawers. If you do not want to pay for the extra drawers, you need not do so. We sell these machines under a ten years' guarantee, by which we mean that if any part gives out by reason of any defect therein, the manufacturer will replace the same free of charge. Moreover, we allow the purchaser to test the machine ten days. If at the end of ten days you are not satisfied, you have only to drop us a postal card, and your money will be refunded.

OUR OFFER.

We will send any one of the above-described machines at the prices named, and also send the ADVOCATE free for six months. The only condition attached to this offer is that subscribers who are in arrears must first pay up all arrearages to date. It would be well to avail yourself of this offer at once, as we can not promise that it will last very long. Notice that you take no risk whatever. We do all the risking. Address

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

Since Jan. 15, 1899, 17,800 Japanese landed at Honolulu.

The mayor of Huntsville, Ala., has revoked slot-machine permits.

John Ruskin, the most noted of all writers upon art, died in London, Jan. 20.

The Colombian insurgents under Uribe have routed an army of 9000 government troops, taking 900 prisoners in two days of fighting.

An Eastern syndicate proposes to construct 310 miles of electric railway lines in and around Honolulu and elsewhere in Oahu Island.

In the fighting going on around Ladysmith the British are avoiding infantry charges and relying largely upon the use of their artillery.

The special committee of investigation in Brigham H. Roberts case submitted its report to Congress on Jan. 20. It is adverse to seating Roberts.

The German bark Marie, from Australia with a cargo of flour for the Transvaal government, has been taken as a prize by a British cruiser in Delagoa Bay.

The proposition to remove the bones of Commodore Paul Jones from Paris and bury them in Arlington Cemetery will probably receive the sanction of Congress.

In a sensational speech in the Senate, Mr. Hale, of Maine, declared that nine-tenths of the American people sympathized with the Boers in their struggle for liberty.

Twenty-eight deaths from the bubonic plague had occurred in Honolulu and twenty-six cases were being treated by the authorities when the steamer Doric left that port.

No decisive engagement has yet been fought in the vicinity of Ladysmith. Gen. Buller is still preparing for the attack, while the Boers are fortifying their position.

The famine area in India is expanding. About 22,000,000 persons are now affected in British territory and 27,000,000 in the native states. About 3,250,000 people are receiving relief.

Earthquake shocks in Mexico, Friday night and Saturday morning, caused loss of life and considerable damage to property. Seven people were killed and sixty wounded at Colima.

There seems to be no doubt of the correctness of the report that the presidents of the leading railroads of the country have entered into an agreement to abolish commissions to agents.

The President has refused the application of Joseph Wilkins and Howard Buell for a pardon. They were convicted of a violation of the oleomargarine law in Philadelphia and sentenced to fine and imprisonment.

Lord Roberts has issued an order directing that all officers in charge of detached commands must pay for all supplies taken, and that under no circumstances must soldiers enter private houses or molest inhabitants.

The largest theatre in Washington was packed to the doors with an enthusiastic audience, which expressed its sympathies with the Boers. Several Senators and a number of Representatives occupied seats on the platform.

Gen. Warren continued to press the right flank of the Boer position on Jan. 21, and advanced about two miles, the Boers compelling him to fight for all the ground gained. The English have not yet reached the main Boer position.

Owing to the prevalence of the bubonic plague in the Orient vessels arriving at Pacific coast ports which fail to bring from the original port of departure proper bills of health will have the extreme penalty of $5000 imposed upon them.

The advices at the London War Office at 4:30 o'clock, Jan. 21, indicated that a big battle was being fought near Ladysmith. Associated Press dispatches from Spearman's Camp were of the same tenor. The result was undecided when the latest dispatches were sent.

Gen. Buller telegraphs that Gen. Clery was in action from 6 A. M. until 7 P. M. on Jan. 20, and succeeded in driving the Boers about three miles and capturing a number of ridges which they occupied, but that the main position of the enemy was still in front of him. The casualties were not heavy.

After confirming the Samoan treaty providing for the dividing up of the Samoan Islands, the vote by which the treaty was ratified was reconsidered and the treaty recalled. The point on which the reconsideration was based was an alleged misapprehension as to whether or not the treaty gave the United States sovereignty over the island of Tutuila.

Hattiesburg, Miss., Jan. 15, 1900.

Bishop Warren A. Candler, of the Methodist Church, South, will leave Atlanta, Tuesday next, for Havana, to establish a church in that city. He takes with him $5000 raised by his personal efforts in Georgia. This will be the first church and school of Methodist denomination to be established in Cuba.

TAKE TIME BY THE FORELOCK.

Owing to an increase in the price of paper, we will not be able to continue the very low prices at which we are now offering our premium Bibles. The present rates, however, will continue until the first of February, unless our stock becomes exhausted. Those who want Bibles, or who expect to want them any time soon, would do well to order at once, as the increase in prices is likely to be permanent. All dealers will be obliged to make an advance in prices, unless their prices are already too high. Even if your subscription has not expired, it would be wise to renew at once, and take advantage of our present prices on Bibles. We invite special attention to our Combination Bible. It is the very best edition of "the Book of books."

REV. W. C. BLACK,
512 Camp St., New Orleans.

THE LIFE OF MOODY.

The Rev. J. Wilbur Chapman, D. D., of New York, is engaged in writing the life of D. L. Moody for John C. Winston & Co., Philadelphia. Dr. Chapman was one of Mr. Moody's most intimate friends, and was closely associated with him in his evangelistic work. He is Vice-President of the Bible Institute of Chicago, of which Mr. Moody was President, and desires that this Institution shall receive a share of the profits from the sale of this book. The publishers promise that the work shall be profusely illustrated. It will also contain an introduction by the Rev. F. B. Meyer, of Christ Church, London, and personal reminiscences from others who were intimately associated with Mr. Moody in his work.

RAILROADING PATENTS.

A single firm of Patent Lawyers, C. A Snow & Co., of Washington, D. C., have in the last year procured 1,630 patents for their clients, many of them for rejected inventions. C. A. Snow & Co. have been accused of railroading patents through the Patent Office, but they insist that this locomotion is better than carting them, for by the latter process the inventor often dies before he gets his patent.

A telegram in the Times-Democrat, of this city, on the 16th instant announced the safe arrival at San Francisco of Dr. Walter R. Lambuth, one of our missionary secretaries, who is just returning from a trip to China and Japan. The Doctor, it is stated, is accompanied by two Chinese brothers, grandsons of Li Hung Chang, who are on their way to Vanderbilt University, Nashville, where they expect to complete their education. They are said to be representatives of the reform element in China.

The World's Student Confederation has issued its call for a day of prayer for students, and the hope is expressed that not only on the Sunday appointed, Feb. 11, but on the preceding and succeeding days earnest prayer will be offered for students and the various phases of educational work.

THE AUTHENTIC LIFE OF

D. L. MOODY,

BY

Rev. J. WILBUR CHAPMAN, D. D.,

For many years MR. MOODY'S MOST INTIMATE CO-WORKER, and THE VICE-PRESIDENT OF THE BIBLE INSTITUTE OF WHICH MR. MOODY WAS PRESIDENT. The book will be replete with personal incident and anecdote, and tells the story of the GREATEST AND MOST USEFUL life of the century. How by his eloquence and power vast assemblies in this country and England were held entranced and thousands of souls were blessed. IT IS A MAGNIFICENT OPPORTUNITY FOR AGENTS. Sold only by subscription. Terms liberal. Freight paid. Send 20c to pay cost of mailing an outfit QUICKLY.

ADVANCEMENT OF SCIENCE.

EVEN BRIGHT'S DISEASE IS NO LONGER REGARDED AS HOPELESS.

If you are suffering from kidney, bladder or uric acid trouble, and have despaired of getting help, you should try Swamp-Root, the great kidney remedy. Every reader of NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE may obtain a sample bottle free by mail, so you may test it for yourself and fully realize the truth of what your friends and fellow-citizens say as regards its marvelous efficacy and worth.

Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root has been tried and tested by thousands who stand high in this community. It is not recommended for everything, but if you have kidney, bladder or uric acid trouble, it will be found just the remedy you need. It brings back the rosy flush of health and strength; it is a purifier and rebuilder, and is a boon to the weak and ailing.

To be confronted suddenly with the knowledge that Bright's disease had hold of one was, at one time, equivalent to hearing a death warrant read; but to-day, thanks to the discoveries of science and the researches of Dr. Kilmer, no case is entirely hopeless. Even those in advanced stages have been rescued and life prolonged by Swamp-Root.

This great remedy is purely vegetable and contains nothing that could harm the most delicate child. It is pleasant to take, and the regular fifty-cent and one-dollar sizes are sold by all druggists.

Send your name and address to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., and a sample bottle and a book telling all about Swamp-Root and its wonderful cures will be sent to you free.

Are the American Churches losing ground? Every little while we hear complaints of the decline of faith and the gradual overwhelming of the church by the world. Statistics do not tell the whole story, but their contribution to the discussion is interesting. In 1890 the census gave as the total population of the country 62,622,250—a gain during the decade of about 12,000,000. Any figures for the present year must be estimates, but they are not supposed generally to go over 70,000,000—a gain of 8,000,000, or about 13 per cent. The census of 1900 gave as the total of church membership 20,612,806. The tables printed in this issue, and which certainly are within the truth, show 27,710,004—a gain of over 7,000,000, or about 34 per cent. Even should there prove to be as great a gain in population in this decade as in the last, it would not exceed 20 per cent., and still the churches would be 14 per cent. ahead. So far as figures of population are concerned the record is one of steady, even rapid, advance.—The Independent.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From Our Regular Correspondent.)

The success of the fight waged by the good people of this country to shut Brigham H. Roberts, the polygamist, out of Congress, which is now fully assured, although the vote of the House will not be taken until to-morrow, contains a valuable lesson that should not be forgotten by those who are striving to bring about any sort of moral reform. It shows the strength of public sentiment when once aroused and united in any cause. Had it been possible to have taken a vote of the members elected to the present House at any time within six months of the election, before public sentiment had either been fully aroused or crystallized, as it were, there is very little doubt that Roberts would have been seated, not because a majority of the members had the slightest sympathy with polygamy, but because they were indifferent. As late as three weeks before the assembling of Congress, one of the oldest, as well as most prominent, members publicly said that Roberts would be seated; that he would vote to seat him, because he thought that the moral status of a Representative was something that concerned only his constituents, or words to that effect. But he did not vote to seat Roberts. In those three weeks he learned by the great stacks of petitions sent to Washington, by the press, and by word of mouth from earnest men and women, that public sentiment throughout the country was overwhelmingly opposed to allowing a polygamist to be a member of Congress. This is not the first time by many that public sentiment has acted schoolmaster for national, State, and municipal legislators, and it should teach us that to win we have only to crystallize public sentiment in favor of any moral reform which can be brought about by legislation, and many can be, although every intelligent person knows that men and women can not be made good by law alone. But he who denies that wholesome laws are factors in making many men and women better, by removing temptations from them, as well as through their fear of punishment, has made poor use of his powers of observation.

The Senate adopted, without opposition, the resolution of inquiry as to the extent polygamy is practiced, or polygamous marriages entered into in the United States, or places over which it has jurisdiction, and what, if any, steps should be taken or measures enacted for the prevention of this practice. This resolution was offered by Senator Rawlins, of Utah, who, although not a Mormon, is very friendly toward them, and was intended to apply especially to the Sulu group of islands, in the Philippines. But it applies also to Utah, where such an investigation, honestly and fearlessly conducted, may do much good.

The Washington Y. M. C. A. still keeps up its extraordinary growth in membership. At its regular monthly meeting and reception to members, held this week, 119 new members were elected.

The President yesterday received a delegation from the Chamber of Commerce of Porto Rico, who supplemented the statements made by the delegation representing the agricultural interests of the island, received by the President a few days ago, as to the immediate needs of the islanders. Open markets and authority to place a loan was the substance of what they advocated.

Rev. John J. Van Schaick, pastor of the Church of Our Father, in a sermon on "A Modern Statesman on Religion," replied to statements recently made by Hon. Thomas B. Reed, ex-Speaker of the House of Representatives. He said, in part: "Speaking of the progress we have made, Mr. Reed says, 'If you say that preaching religion and teaching morality have done this, then will you tell us why the higher life we live was not sooner preached and taught and practiced?' Has Mr. Reed forgot the Sermon on the Mount? Has he found anything finer than the Beatitudes and the prayer upon the cross? And as for preaching, has ever man walked in such spotless purity as Jesus of Nazareth? I believe that the progress of the race depends upon the Christian religion. One of the ex Speaker's strongest arguments is that concerning religion and war. He believes that there will come a time when war will be abolished, but that the proclamation will be issued by the trades, and not the preacher. He points to the fact that eighteen centuries have not abolished war as an evidence that religion can not do it. He cites the fact that religion has used war in its most dreadful forms. He is wrong. There has never been but one religious war waged, and that is against sin. The wars that Mr. Reed refers to were those of theology, and not of religion. The Christian religion has softened war in every century. This softening will end in abolition. If the order to abolish war comes from the trades people, it will not be the selfish weight of gold, but the Christian tradesmen marching side by side with the Christian lawyer, teacher, statesman, and preacher. Mr. Reed sees progress, and this is a vision which we all must see, if we are to advance."

LETTER FROM "GILDEROY."

It is mandatory on the presiding elder to preach on the subject of missions once a year in each charge in his district, and to see that efficient and well-defined plans be adopted for raising missionary funds. It is also the duty of the presiding elder to bring the subject of church extension prominently before the District and Quarterly Conferences, and to see to it that the most efficient plans are adopted for raising the amounts apportioned to each charge. These are not things that he ought to do, or may do, but things he "shall" do. It is not optionary with him whether he does these things or not. I am trying to carry out these two items on this first round. I have heard of but few plans for raising money for missions and church extension. Some of the preachers have adopted plans of their own, but, as yet, I have not heard of a plan adopted by the District or the Quarterly Conference. Indeed, our laymen, it seems, have not yet realized that they have any hand in this work, or that they can do anything towards raising funds to support these two causes. In most of the charges the preachers are expected to raise eleven regular collections and all the extra collections, while the laymen raise but one collection. The lay-women look after their own matters in their own way.

If anyone, preacher or layman, man or woman, has an efficient plan for raising money for missions and church extension, this presiding elder would be glad to hear of it. I would be glad to know of a well-defined plan for doing this work that has been adopted by any District or Quarterly Conference.

I want to do what the Discipline requires me to do, and so I am in search of light and information. When a pastor, I have tried to have the Quarterly Conference adopt a plan of my own devising, but failed to have it done; and now, as a presiding elder, I am trying to have the Quarterly Conferences to consider these subjects, but the members, as a rule, are dumb with silence when these matters are named. About the only response I have heard is, "We will leave all that in the hands of our beloved pastor." The pastor needs the encouragement, the backing, and the moral support of the Quarterly Conference in all of these great undertakings.

The law does not say so, but the language implies that these plans are to be adopted by the Quarterly and District Conferences. And it is certain that these Conferences are not devising and adopting plans of any kind for doing this part of church work in this part of the country. There is nothing in the law of the church, by enactment or by inference, that requires the preacher to devise and adopt a plan for raising money for the causes of missions and church extension. The preachers have gone along, and have done, in some sort and by some plan, what Quarterly Conferences have failed or have positively refused to do. If our Quarterly Conferences would seriously consider these questions, and would devise some wise plans for raising money for these causes, and if the members would see to it that these plans were properly carried out, a new element of vitality and power would appear in these meetings. It would greatly relieve the preachers of financial burdens that do not properly belong to those called of God to preach the gospel, and to minister to the people in word and doctrine. It would tend to cultivate in all of our people an interest in the two most important enterprises the church now has on hand. This would greatly magnify the importance and work of the Quarterly Conferences, now too often hurried, formal and routine business meetings.

It is the duty of preachers in charge to preach on the subject of missions and to circulate missionary literature among the people. We are striving to prepare and to qualify the church for the one great work committed to it—to go into all the world and to preach the gospel to every creature. GILDEROY.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE NOTES.

At this writing the Conference Minutes are being distributed to the preachers. Those living convenient to express offices will receive theirs by express; others by mail. In cases where two or more live in the same town or contiguous to each other, their packages are sent, labeled, to one address. The receiver will please be kind enough to distribute them. With the funds put in my hands for printing and sending forth the Minutes I have to use the utmost economy. I have done the best I could as to time and manner of distribution. It will be observed that there are a few more pages in this than previous publications, which entailed extra expense. There are a few dozen extra copies which I shall be pleased to furnish to those who may desire them at 10 cents per copy, or 75 cents per dozen prepaid.

In the ADVOCATE, of Jan. 18, I requested the preachers in the Durant district to send me the names and postoffice addresses of their Sunday-school superintendents. To this Bros. Evans and Gordon have responded. Will not the other fifteen please do so very soon?

It becomes necessary to make the same request of the preachers in the Columbus district, inasmuch as the Sunday-school Directory for that district has been misplaced or lost in transit.

Brethren, please do not neglect or delay this, as there is a pressing necessity for my having very soon the address of every superintendent in the Conference. Also if there has been any change of superintendents for any school in the Conference during this Conference year, the pastor will please to notify me at once.

We are pleased to note the fact that more than one hundred volumes of choice books have been recently added to the Orphans' Home library at Water Valley as the result of appropriations made for the purpose by the Sunday-school Boards of the two Conferences. Also in the same way has an ample supply of Sunday-school literature been furnished for this year. The Lord bless Bro. and Sister Harrison and the children committed to their care.

G. W. BACHMAN.

Winona, Miss., Jan 27, 1900.

1899-1900.

Rev. J. A. Poe has just sent ten dollars cash from subscription made on Holly Springs circuit last year. He left a good subscription list, which his successor will convert into cash. I hope every pastor will be diligent in securing new subscriptions, and will not overlook those made last year. Let nothing be lost.

Rev. B P. Fulliiove has made first payment on his subscription made at Greenwood during the session of the Annual Conference. By beginning early, and paying in installments, he will go beyond the amount promised. May there be many to imitate this noble example! Let us all double the amounts we promised. What say you, brethren?

Remit all money to Rev. J. C. Park, Winona, for the North Mississippi Conference; to Major R. W. Millsaps, Jackson, for the Mississippi Conference. J. R. BINGHAM.

QUARTERLY CONFERENCE AND TWENTIETH CENTURY FUND.

The Methodist Quarterly Conference met here last Saturday. Rev. J. H. Mitchell, the new presiding elder, gave satisfaction as president of the Conference, and also in the pulpit. He expressed gratification at the good reports made to the Conference.

Rev. T. W. Lewis, the pastor, reported "seven sermons preached and seventy-four pastoral visits made during the month. The assessment for foreign missions, $110; for domestic missions, $30; for Bishops, $13, have all been paid. Sixty dollars special for mission work in Cuba had been given, and also $170 for Rev. J. S. Oakley. The work is in good condition. A good spirit prevails in the entire charge."

The Conference adopted the following resolution:

"Resolved, That, with all our hearts, we commend the Twentieth Century Thank-offering, by which world-wide Methodism proposes to raise thirty millions of dollars for benevolent purposes. That we indorse the action of the General Conference of our own church in decreeing that our part of the fund shall be used for Christian education, the fund not to be less than one million five hundred thousand dollars. That we are glad to have a part in this great work, and we do hereby approve the pledge made for us at the recent session of our Annual Conference to raise five hundred dollars in addition to the four hundred dollars paid by us last year."—Carrollton (Miss.) Conservative.

IMPORTANT NOTICE.

To the Preachers of the Louisiana Conference—

DEAR BRETHREN: Will you be kind enough to drop me a postal card as soon as possible stating as to the probable attendance from your respective charges at the approaching State Epworth League Conference, to be held in Arcadia, La., April 26 to 29, inclusive? I have been appointed to secure rates, and as these rates will be largely determined by the probable attendance, it will be necessary for me to approximate the size of the delegation when writing or interviewing the railroad officials. This I can not do unless you assist me as per request herein set forth.

Yours fraternally,

THOMAS B. CLIFFORD,
Committee on Transportation.

The Mission of Colleges and Universities to the Poor.

BY REV. WILBUR F. TILLETT, D. D.

That colleges and universities exist for the benefit of the rich, and that college education is a luxury which only rich parents can afford to give their children, is a prevalent and hurtful error which it is the design of this article to consider.

In saying that colleges and universities serve poor people far more than they do the rich, we must recognize that "poor" is a relative term; and the statement is, perhaps, not altogether true of those in abject poverty. It is wonderful, however, what power there is in an educated parent's desires and prayers and efforts to get his child educated, even though he be in the depths of poverty. The poor boy is very apt to come to desire himself what his parents so earnestly desire for him, and to work out by their aid the problem of his education; and this no matter how poor they are. Nevertheless, it is mainly that class of poor people who are raised above abject poverty, but who yet have to work hard and economize closely in order to live free of debt and give their children an education, that are most greatly benefited and blessed by colleges and universities. From fifty to eighty per cent. of college students in the South may, in this sense, be very properly designated as poor boys.

If colleges and universities existed mainly for the wealthy classes, it would be unnecessary to endow them; the sons of the rich could well afford to pay for all the privileges they enjoy. It is because the student material of every higher institution of learning is found most largely in the young men of slender means that come to it that liberal endowments, cheapening the cost of education, are a necessity. Every well-equipped modern college spends two or three dollars on every student to where his parents spend one dollar on him. That is, if there were no endowment, it would cost three times as much as it does to enjoy the advantages of the best-equipped colleges and universities. Hence we say that providing higher education for poor boys is the leading idea in the founding, endowing, and equipping of colleges and universities.

It is the boys of limited means in our higher institutions of learning, and not the few rich ones, that dominate the life and create the esprit de corps of the student body. This fortunate and healthy condition of social life puts a painful discount on the rich boy who undertakes to parade the evidences of his wealth, or claims any special consideration because of his riches. It is moral character and mental gifts and fidelity to the duties in hand and economical habits that win recognition and command a premium and excite admiration in the student body of our colleges and universities. In spite of all the temptations of college life, we believe there are not many associations which young men of city, town, and even country life, form, that are, taken altogether, morally and socially, so helpful and inspiring, as those which a young man enters into at a good college or university, which is under Christian influences. In considering how many boys are overcome by temptations at college, it should not be forgotten how many at the same age are overcome at home. From seventeen to twenty-one is a trying age upon young men everywhere; and many a youth whose fall while at college is charged wholly to the evils of college life would have fallen even more certainly if these same critical years had been passed in the community where he grew up.

Most institutions have some method of helping a limited number of poor boys in securing an education. There are, moreover, in many institutions a number of positions where students can partially support themselves by their own labor; but these positions are not, as a rule, available for new students because they are secured by students already on the grounds and personally known. At least one-half of the young men who go to, and graduate from, first-class colleges come out from one hundred to five hundred dollars in debt. Is it wise in a poor boy to go in debt to secure an education? Indeed it is; and it is far better to attend a first-class institution of learning, and go in debt for it, than it is to receive free tuition and board at a greatly inferior school. The costliest school in the end that a young man can possibly go to is a school whose chief recommendation is the small cost and the short time required to complete the course of study. Suppose a young man has no money, but earnestly desires to go to college, and can borrow enough from friends to meet his expenses for just one year, and can not see his way beyond that, should he go that one year under the circumstances? By all means, I answer. I have known a hundred such boys not only to enter, but to go on to graduation, and later to meet with such success in life as to be able speedily to refund all they had borrowed. Let the poor boy who can not go but one year at a time have faith in himself and in that Divine Providence which has been helping worthy poor boys through all past years, take the one step, and the probability is that the way will open before him, however dark it seems. Very few students who enter college for one year, and make a decided success of that one year, but "find a way or make it" to continue for several years at college.

There are no poor people who, as a class, make better use of colleges and universities for the benefit of their children than Methodist preachers. The average Methodist preacher knows that he has not, and will never have, anything of worldly goods to leave his children. He knows that the best that he can do for his children is to give them a Christian education, and make them thereby capable of respectable self-support. To accomplish this end he is willing to practice economy and self-denial to the last extreme. We venture to assert that no class of poor people in America give their children so good an education, in proportion to their financial ability, as Methodist preachers; and statistics will show, if results be compared, that they are richly rewarded for their economy and self-denial by the subsequent success of their children. "Plain living and high thinking" is their motto over against the "high living and plain thinking" of those homes where to make money and enjoy it seems to be the one great object of life. "The free-will of the parent determines the destiny of the child." Happy is that child who has a parent wise enough to see that it is a hundred times better to put five hundred or a thousand dollars that may be saved by economy and self-denial into the head and the heart and the character of his child by giving him a good Christian education rather than to let him grow up in comparative ignorance and inherit five hundred or a thousand or ten thousand dollars, for that matter. The child of such a parent will come to feel that he would rather have the education which five hundred or a thousand dollars secured for him than a fortune of a million, if with his million he must live and die an uneducated and ignorant man.—Nashville Advocate.

If but half the precious moments
That are squandered day by day
Were employed in friendly missions
To the needy by the way,
What a burden of affliction,
What a weight of bitter woe,
From the children of misfortune
Might be lifted as we go.

Very much we might be doing
While we sit with folded hands,
Thoughtless of the call of duty
And philanthropy's demands;
Heedless of the wails of anguish
That we hear on every side,
Hugging closely to our bosoms
Our own selfishness and pride.

GOD LEADETH ME.

The clouds hang heavy round my way,
I can not see;
But through the darkness I believe
God leadeth me.
'Tis sweet to keep my hand in his
While all is dim;
To close my weary, aching eyes,
And follow him.
Through many a thorny path he leads
My tired feet;
Through many a path of tears I go,
But it is sweet
To know that he is close to me,
My God, my Guide.
He leadeth me, and so I walk
Quite satisfied.
To my blind eyes he may reveal
No light at all;
But while I lean on his strong arm,
I can not fall.

THE ENDOWMENT OF GRENADA COLLEGE.

Among the many pleasant events associated with the Christmas holidays at Grenada College, there is one that is very gratifying to its president and faculty—every girl returned to the college after a round of gaieties and merry makings incident to the holidays, better satisfied and more contented with the routine of work. In all my experience as a teacher, which embraces a full decade, I have never known the student force of a college to remain perfectly intact after the mid winter festivities until now. Not only did every girl return, but five new boarders were admitted, and quite a number have made application to enter at the beginning of the Spring term, which commenced on Jan. 18. There never was a time in the history of our Conference Institution when the fulfillment of its purpose was nearer at hand, when the plighted faith of its friends was more pronounced, or the fidelity of our Conference more appreciated. With such support we have every reason to believe the crystallization of our hopes will be solid.

The highest ideals are woven like a golden thread through every department, and the ambition of teacher and pupil is to weave a flawless fabric fit for the Master's use. Our girls are taught to create high ideals, and their after life will bear the approving stamp and seal of Grenada College. We have a home school, where our girls can attain a higher degree of mental development, and at the same time be taught the blessedness of knowing Christ in all the fullness and beauty of daily Christian living. All the nicer points of courtesy are emphasized, even in the minor details of life. We will commence our new annex before many weeks, as our boarding department is crowded, and we are laying great plans for the future.

Several of our big-hearted Christians have a plan on foot to start an endowment fund for Grenada College. This is absolutely necessary if we expect to compete with first-class colleges, and it is the ambition of the president to lift the standard of our institution until it shall be without a collegiate peer in the South. As yet this section has done but little toward broadening the plan of education. There are 413 leading colleges in the United States, and 287 have endowments—three out of every four. In the M. E. Church the ratio is less than one in five. We have only one real university in all this beautiful Southland with a respectable endowment—our own Vanderbilt; and we are indebted to a Northern man for this generosity. This endowment is a little less than a million dollars. Harvard boasts of an endowment fund of nearly nine million dollars; yet it cost a small fortune to put a student through Harvard; but when he is through the question is settled. Harvard is now asking for an increase of her endowment. I believe she is asking for two million. Yale is sustained by over four million. Amherst and Brown have large endowments. I can not now recall any woman's college that has done work equal to Harvard, or that has the endowment of Harvard. Bishop Hendrix makes a true statement when he says no denomination is stronger than her institutions of learning. The vital truths of Christianity can only be taught in a denominational college. There is a distinction between vital and fundamental truths, as any thoughtful mind will readily discern.

While it may be many years before we can even hope to enter the arena of competition with these leading institutions of learning, yet, if we never make the effort, we will always remain in the proscribed limits of today. Lincoln says, "Hitch your wagon to the stars."

If the North Mississippi Conference will lend every effort to support one college, and give that college an endowment sufficient to carry out the plan the president has already formulated, it will only be a short time before North Mississippi will have a college where superiority will be acknowledged by all eminent educators. Our girls to day demand higher education at least equal to the boys. If the North Mississippi Conference expects to have a controlling voice in our General Conference and all religious councils, she must be reinforced by great institutions of learning, both male and female.

Give Grenada College the endowment, and you will have the power; but no institution can make bricks without straw. According to the plan suggested by two prominent Christians, anyone can contribute one hundred dollars (two hundred, if desired), and when one hundred thousand dollars is secured, the endowment will be complete.

Very few in Mississippi are able to contribute largely, but many are able and willing to contribute one hundred dollars. We are now enjoying an unprecedented era of prosperity, and to save our church from drifting on the shoal of materialism, let us hold our sons and daughters close to the vital tenets of our faith.

M. L. Hoskins.

COMMANDER BOOTH TUCKER.

Commander Booth Tucker, duly estimated from the proper standpoint, is one of the most picturesque and beneficent personalities of modern times. There is no suggestion of "the pomp of power," "the insolence of office;" nothing of the "Sir Absolute" about him. He never brandishes his sceptre; never presses upon you with the trappings of his authority. With many, a sturdy self-assertiveness is a necessity to command or respect. Fawners and weaklings seem not to regard, if they recognize aught else. Burke puts pretty much that idea thus: "Men and States, to be secure, must be respected. Power and eminence and consideration are things not to be begged. They must be commanded." But he wins and controls by the lowly might of his command ing loveliness and self-abnegation; by the ingratiations of his noble, tender, yet forceful individuality. Erskine tells us, in his speech on Stockdale, "Nothing but fear will control, where it is vain to look for affection." But he looks to "affection," and finds "control" in the generous loyalty of heart and reverent gratitude of his adherents.

His humility or meekness is all the more creditable and notable, that it is remote from the preventives or correctives of vain-glory and self inflation incident to official superiority and pre-eminence in a following where superior intelligence, high culture, and elevated social station obtain. Here the man, to truly rule, must be more, and do more, than merely wear the robe, the crown, and sway the sceptre of royalty. He must have the kingliness of true manhood, and look to a superiority in mental and moral forces, and is not seduced nor tempted by the perilous flattery of abjectness of adherents, nor by his own superiority to them in intellectual traits and cultivation.

But Commander Booth Tucker is not the official head of a body of savants or "literati," where largely prevails the spirit that, "without force or opposition, subdues the fierceness of pride and power, and obliges sovereigns to submit to the soft collar of social esteem, and even compels stern authority to submit to elegance." He is the commander of a body of men composed largely of the most ignorant, unonitured, once most degraded—what men commonly term "the riff-raff of society," the "scum of creation," or, to use the French phrase for the bottom of social and moral debasement, "sans culottes." To convert and lift these men inspires in them a gratitude, a devotion, a warmth of adulation that has great dangers for the recipient.

Another consideration is of tremendous weight in an attempt at an analysis of his character. In practical outcome, if not theoretic implicitness of subordination and unquestioned imperialism, the code of the Salvation Army is almost an anachronism in its peremptory absoluteness of rule. It superadds to the strictness of military command almost the blind deference of fanatical zealotry. This absoluteness of sway is all the more incident to the seductions of ambition, the pride of rule, or vanity of command, that it applies far more to the officers than to the privates. The rank and file are not in the category of possible rivalry with those high in command. Their remoteness from competition with the latter silences questionings, discourages and forbids disaffection or insubordination, makes a virtual "impasse" to a rivalristic advancement. Men are far more ready to concede to those in whom concessions will never inspire rivalry, nor intrigue against their supremacy. Condescension is never so safe as, and never more gracious and ingratiating than, when it stoops to the lowest and least favored; and it is sometimes one of the affectations and very self-complacent vagaries of haughty authority and stilted condescension.

I take it that, being an Englishman, counts considerably in a natural proclivity to rule, a love of obeisance, a tendency to exact deference, and cheerful subordination in all pertinent relations. We know the self-complacent loyalty to rank (almost a fetich with many) and social subordinations consecrated by a reverend and revered conventionality found in England, or, to use something from Burke, their "proud submission and dignified obedience."

Then, too, Commander Booth Tucker was born and raised in India, where caste has a powerful insidiousness to intoxicate with self-importance on the one hand, and to abase to spirit-breaking abjectness on the other from habitude, from cultured condonation, and from a conventionality almost impassible, certainly predominant; a haughty prerogative, merciless and unconscious of its odiousness, uncompromising in its exactions and revulsions.

The above considerations will tend to give one a better appreciation of a man who has resisted the blandishments of power, and the unique seductiveness of his environment.

Commander Booth Tucker is eminently (almost pre-eminently) a man of wisdom. He has a deep, broad experience, and penetrating insight into actual life; has sounded very many of the depths of humanity with the plummet of his contacts and observations; knows man as he is, steeped in poverty, in sin, in degradation. And he has inventiveness enough, the organizing and executive ability to devise remedies or ameliorations for many of "the ills that flesh is heir to." He is like some wise, humane physician, of great natural gifts of diagnosis, scrupulous methods, fearless nature, large remedial resources and inventiveness, who goes into the haunts of some awful pestilence that has baffled one; studies it, devises a remedy, extirpates it, or greatly mitigates its fatality. It is a wonderful catalogue of "moving incidents" to hear of his imminent perils "in India from Hindoo fanaticism, and his explorations, in disguise, of the dens and haunts of infamy, of civilization." Surely this man is of the John Howard type—a broad-gauge philanthropist.

Burke tells us that "it has been the glory of the great masters in all the arts to confront and overcome, and when they have overcome the first difficulty, to turn it into a new instrument for new conquests over new difficulties." But if it be a glory to achieve in arts, how much better to achieve in humanity! Triumphs in marble and on canvas, the Jupiter and friezes of Phidias, the achievements of Praxiteles and Apelles, the proud jewel, the best gem of the Parthenon, are well; but better to take the clod or stone, man, and transform him into an angel, making him a "spiritual house" informed with the Highest Intelligence, to whom the mute and supine Minerva of the Parthenon, however ravishing to the old Greek, is nothing.

I think it quite certain that difficulty is an inspiration to Commander Tucker, and fires his capabilities, like a high leap of a mettlesome race horse. "C'est des difficultes, qui naissent les miracles," says old Bruyere. He has solved some of the most vexing social problems—work for the workless, homes for the homeless, churches for the churchless; the dreadful congestion of the workless poor in the cities, relieved by the salutary, beneficent outflow to the unpopulated areas of our broad country; putting a buttress of hope under the nerveless, degraded, those sunk in the slough of despond or despair. He has electrified, and not galvanized social degradation; has "plucked up drowned honor by the roots."

As a moral and religious force, or a factor in the broadest beneficence of piety, his weight is imponderable, and out of all proportion to intellect, although the latter is not to be flouted. He is a man who has a heart full of humaneness. This impression of his sweetly philanthropic and tender nature comes out unmistakably. But he is not mawkish, puling, canting, gushing, or effusive, but manly and fresh. There is no straining after or study at effects, no clerical clap-trap, unless you may call his special and sometimes very marked piping to the Salvation Army by the latter name. He is not the slave of routine, no mere functionariet; has the gift and the courage of grand spontaneities; is open and alert to the suggestions of others, and self-found insights; "catches on" to legitimate expedients, finds clues in all his environments, and no exigency seems to frustrate or even embarrass him. His renunciation of his handsome salary and high position in India; his repeated refusals to be endowed with wealth, as the price of his renunciation of his consecration to the Salvation Army; the taunts and jeers of his old associates; his many dangers and assaults, and almost miraculous escapes from Hindoo fanaticism in India; his dauntless courage, his sublime serenity under the numberless besetments of his arduous and lofty path, remind one of the faithful Abdiel leaving his old associates, the devil and his angels, and passing through derision and dangers to God and his hosts:

"From amidst them forth he pass'd
Long way through hostile scorn which he sustain'd;
Superior, nor of violence fear'd aught."

A FEW WORDS ABOUT OUR MISSIONARY COLLECTIONS.

As a member of the Board of Missions, we would insist that the brethren of the North Mississippi Conference collect the amount assessed their chargee for foreign and domestic missions at once, and get it into the hands of Rev. F. P. Jinkins, of Aberdeen, Miss., Conference treasurer. We firmly believe that every dollar assessed for missions can be, and ought to be, paid. If the brethren will put this matter on the hearts of the people, we believe they will pay it. Early collections means full collections; late collections often means no collections at all. Let us prepare to take our collections for missions just as faithfully as we prepare for the pulpit. If any man will read Dennis' "Missions after a Hundred Years," and "Our Island Empire," by Morris (in the Epworth League course), he can not be otherwise than an earnest advocate of missions.

One of the best things the church could do would be to put these books into the hands of every Methodist family. It would be a great blessing also if our Review of Missions could go to every home. Deeper interest in missions would surely be the result. The church has done much for missions, but we are really playing at this great work.

Even if the church at home should do nothing more than raise the means to send the gospel abroad, it would be doing a great work. As we gather money for that purpose, we feel that we are doing our best preaching.

Much stress is being put just now upon our educational interests. This ought to be done, but meanwhile we ought not to suspend effort in the cause of missions.

We hope the North Mississippi Conference will do a thing this year that it has never done, and that is to pay every cent of its missionary assessments. Brethren, let's do this. What say you? All hands at it, and it will be done. May the God of grace guide us in this work!

Your brother in Christ,

J. W. Raper.

Mrs. J. B. Stone, of North Miss. Conference
Conference Officers of Mississippi Conference
Mrs. E. R. Kennedy, of Louisiana Conference

The last quarter of our fiscal year is drawing toward its close. As the time approaches for the summing up of results, we find that many of our Home Mission auxiliaries have sent in no reports, and we again most earnestly urge them to do so at once. Let each corresponding secretary forward a full report of the year's work to her district secretary. The names and addresses of the latter can be found in the Minutes of our last annual meeting in Alexandria.

Through the efforts of our president, Mrs. F. A. Lyons, the work in North Louisiana has been greatly strengthened and encouraged, and one new society organized in Arcadia; one also at Burgundy Street Church, in New Orleans, formed by Miss Werlein and Mrs. Lyons. We praise God for the noble, self-sacrificing women of our church, and feel that the world is better and brighter for their presence.

Phillips Brooks says: "No man or woman of the humblest sort can really be strong, gentle, pure and good without the world being better for it, without somebody being helped and comforted by the very existence of that goodness."

Our Twentieth Century Rally Day, Feb. 6, is near at hand. What shall we offer to our God this last year of the nineteenth century for all the blessed privileges we enjoy to-day? Our church calls for an offering of $1,500,000 for the equipment and endowment of her educational institutions. The women of the Home Mission Society have been accorded the privilege, by the church, of donating their amounts to the schools that are under the auspices of the society, and $25,000 is the sum named for that purpose. Ten thousand dollars of this amount is necessary to secure the property bequeathed to us by Miss Baker, of Baltimore (Friendship Home); and the balance, $15,000, is needed to complete and equip existing schools. There is nothing in life that appeals more to the heart than caring for neglected children, and these classes, both foreign and native born, we are trying to reach before they are broken and marred by crime and sin. Shall the indifference of Christian men and women hand these over to become a menace to society, or shall they unite to throw around these helpless ones moral training and education? It is hard to rescue those who are old in crime, but the child-heart is easily touched, and we would save them from the influences of evil. How could saloons flourish, or jails and rescue homes be needed another generation, if we give the children—the world's best hope—their birthright? Think of these things, dear friends, and let every member of the Home Mission Society prepare to meet the responsibilities and opportunities before her, and unite, with one accord, to spread the glad tidings of the gospel of salvation. Let us do what we can to stem the tide of evil by training Christian workers for the upbuilding of Christ's kingdom, and according to the blessings measured out to us in homes, schools, churches, and numberless mercies, let us endeavor to bless the lives of others. "For ye are bought with a price; therefore, glorify God in your body and in spirit, which are God's."

The Christian Life.

THE WORTH OF SYMPATHY.

I have encountered some—so, perhaps, have you—who tell us sympathy is wasted force; that to hear the griefs of others on your own heart, to walk as a helper at the side of those who are fighting desperate battles with temptation and adversity, to pore over the personal problems of others, to search for the clue of tangles webbed by other hands, is to scatter one's energies for naught; that the strength which sympathy takes out of one, one might have saved and have turned into more fruitful uses. So, long ago, they said in Christ's presence that the breaking of the alabaster box was a waste of treasure—"This might have been sold for three hundred pence." How accurately does history repeat itself in human lives! To-day the same contrasts are dividing lives that divided them two thousand years ago. The same utilitarian spirit may determine one's course to-day. It is entirely possible for anyone to economize his sympathies by a rigid withholding of them; to live within himself, immersed in personal aims; to live apart from his brother's joys and sorrows, neither inviting nor giving those instinctive confidences by which human lives are grappled to one another with hooks of steel; but let him not imagine he can do this with impunity. Love has its retributions as well as law; and to starve love within one's self by repulsing it in others, is to throw away the true wealth of living. "There is that withholdeth more than is meet, but it tendeth to poverty." And then, on the other hand, we see to-day, in lives lived before our eyes, the generosity of true religion. "There is that scattereth, and increaseth yet more." We see the life that hoards not its sympathies, pouring them forth with a love like God's love, and growing richer in its selfhood by that mighty spending; we see the life that can find room within itself to treasure another's secret, and to guard another's aspiration; that can have compassion on the ignorant, and on them that are out of the way; that can bear griefs not its own, and carry sorrows as a trust for others. And that life is broadening ever in the lines of character with a beauty that incarnates and individualizes the generosity of true religion.—President Charles Cuthbert Hall.

AN EVERY-DAY DUTY.

Men pray for holiness as if it were something apart from their every day life, something that had nothing at all to do with their conduct in their domestic, social and business relations. They sing, "Nearer, my God, to thee," with glowing fervor, but never think that the prayer can be answered only by the uplifting of their own lives to the plane of God's requirements. Holiness is not a mere sentiment, not a vague vision of glory overhanging us like a heavenly cloud, not a rapture or an ecstasy, not something that God sends down to wrap us like a garment in its radiant folds. If being holy means anything at all, it means being true, honest, upright, pure, gentle, patient, kind, and unselfish. We really have no more religion than we get into our every-day practice. Wherein our devotion is higher than our living, it counts for nothing.—Exchange.

DO A LITTLE.

Many a Christian destroys his peace and usefulness because he is not willing to do little things. He wants to speak and pray well, eloquently, edifyingly, or not at all. Because he can not do some great thing he won't do anything. He must sit in the highest seat or nowhere. Now, no one is fit to do great things, unless he is willing to do little things. He must be faithful in the least, or he will never be useful in the greatest. If all were willing to add a little to the interest of a meeting, a Sabbath school, or to the strength and influence of the church, there would not be so many praying to be excused. Happy is the man who is willing to do a little, the servant of all, a door-keeper, bell-ringer, fire-builder, lamp-lighter, anything that will serve Christ in the house of God.—Northwestern Advocate.

The Christian is like the pearl-diver, who is out of the sunshine for a little, spending his short day amid rocks and weeds and dangers at the bottom of the ocean. Does he desire to spend his life there? No, but his Master does. Is his life there? No, his life is up above. A communication is open to the surface, and the fresh pure life comes down to him from God. Is he not wasting time there? He is gathering pearls for his Master's crown. Will he always stay there? When the last pearl is gathered, the "Come up higher" will beckon him away, and the weights which kept him down will become an exceeding weight of glory, and he will go, he and these he brings with him, to his Father.—Henry Drummond, in "The Ideal Life."

We look at our neighbor's errors with a microscope, and at our own through the wrong end of a telescope. We have two sets of weights and measures, one for home use and the other for foreign. Every vice has two names, and we call it by the flattering and minimizing one when we commit it, and by the ugly one when our neighbor does it. Everybody can see the hump on his friend's shoulders, but it takes some effort to see our own.—Dr. Maclaren.

From the Work.

Rev. Geo. S. Sanders, Whitney, Miss., Jan. 13, 1900: "This is my third year on the Tremont circuit as a supply. The work was in bad shape when I started here, but it has been growing some in every respect all the time. At the recent Conference Bro. Wyatt took one of the best churches off, and that, of course, made the circuit still weaker, as it was weak already. A few nights ago one of my best churches burned (Mt. Pleasant)—not the best house, however, but the largest congregation. We hope to rebuild at once."

Rev. G. W. Gordon, Ackerman, Jan. 19, 1900: "Our people gave us a cordial, hearty welcome. The pounding to which we were subjected soon after getting into the parsonage was exceedingly pleasant and substantially beneficial. Many of the good things are still on hand. We have entered upon our work with good prospects of a successful year. Our time has been employed for several days raising money to liquidate a debt on our parsonage here of about $300. Pray for us! Received by certificate at Ackerman 10 persons, and will have at least 3 others to announce at next appointment. Sunday-school growing and the woman's and children's societies doing well."

SHARON, MISS.

I have seen recently in the Advocate accounts of storms and poundings at various parsonages. My people take a more practical view of expressing this appreciation of their pastor. For instance: They commenced sending in their good things on Thanksgiving, and have kept it up until yesterday, when a good Presbyterian brother sent his wagon loaded with flour, sugar, lard, meat, and sweet potatoes. We have had things in such profusion that we have actually thrown away all the backbones and spare-ribs sent in to us; but we took good care to eat all the meat off before we threw them away. But, seriously, Mr. Editor, the people of Sharon have been very kind to the inmates of this parsonage, and we hereby express our profound thanks for and full appreciation of the same.

F. M. Williame.

Jan. 23, 1900.

Rev. J. W. Raper, Montpelier, Miss., Jan. 19, 1900: "We have had a fine beginning on this charge for this, our fourth and last year. Our first Quarterly Conference has passed, and it was an occasion of pleasure and profit. Our presiding elder, Rev. W. W. Woollard, gave us a good sermon Saturday, and a fine sermon Sunday. Our people are much pleased with him. The charge made a good report on the finance for the first quarter. We have already secured about half of our Conference collections, and have done something on the thank-offering, and expect to make a good report. This charge is one of the best in the district and, perhaps, in the Conference. The people know just how to make a preacher feel at home. They are very kind to us, and we receive many tokens of their appreciation. We are working and praying for at least a hundred conversions this year."

Rev. J. A. Parker, P. C.: "In my new charge I have found some encouragement by way of a cordial reception and good congregations. If God and the levee hold the water back, as has been the case for two years, I expect a real pleasant—and hope for a real profitable—year. The Marksville congregation is especially encouraging. Our 'hand' there is a small one—very small—and not much practiced in church work. The members are willing and loyal, and a hearty co-operation is expected at that point. At Simmesport much the same may be said of a larger membership. There we have a very fine Sunday school, and a successful W. H. M. Society, which is doing admirable work at the parsonage in both improvement and furnishing. The society has good backing at Woodside and Marine. At the last named place I have made only one visit, and that during last year as presiding elder. Was very favorably impressed with the people there. I will (D. V.) see them again before this is in type, as I go there on the 27th and 28th instant."

Rev. R. A. Davis, Waterproof, La., Jan. 16, 1900: "My work has received me, this, my third year, very kindly indeed. Though the roads are almost impassable, just before Christmas the good people of St. Joseph and vicinity saw proper to pound the preacher at Waterproof. Accordingly, they sent a coop of turkeys, a coop of chickens, boxes of canned goods, flour, barrel of sweet potatoes, Irish potatoes, etc., to the regular packet, the 'St. Joseph,' plying between Natchez and Vicksburg, which brought them down to the Waterproof landing, and the next morning they were sent up to the parsonage in Waterproof, to the agreeable surprise of the preacher and his family. We take this method of returning our sincere thanks to the kind donors, and pray the blessings of our heavenly Father upon them. We feel almost imprisoned, on account of the bad weather and terrible roads, especially since my horse has died, and I have no way to travel this large circuit; but, trusting in the Lord, we are determined to 'go forward,' for the promise is, 'Trust in the Lord, and do good; so shalt thou dwell in the land, and verily thou shalt be fed.' Pray for us."

LETTER FROM GULFPORT.

So far as ascertained, I have the distinction of being the first preacher to reach his new field of labor after the adjournment of our late Conference; at any rate, among those who had a long move, as we reached the city of Gulfport, Dec. 23. Although we were not expected quite so soon, and our train reached Gulfport after night-fall, still our reception was most cordial. Some of the brethren chancing to be at the train, a carriage was ordered, and we were driven to the elegant new home of Bro. "Tom" Evans, whom everybody knows, of course. Our mother was made equally comfortable with another good family. As soon as possible, the stewards provided for us a cosy, comfortable home, and we are now domiciled in our own "hired house." In this growing young city the demand for houses is so far in excess of the supply, I am told, that frequently a house is rented in advance, or just as soon as a lot is bought and the lumber on the ground. We must have a parsonage here in the near future. Our church, now in process of erection, we earnestly hope to see completed by the time the District Conference convenes.

I can not say too much in praise of the good people of Gulfport, and their many kindnesses to us since our arrival. All, irrespective of denomination, including Catholics, have shown us so many acts of kindness and hospitality that it has drawn our hearts to them; and now, lest Bro. Williams should think he is the only one whom the "storms" strike, I hasten to say that on the evening of the day we moved into our house we had the most delightful "pounding" it was ever our good fortune to receive. About 8 P. M. our friends came in large numbers—Methodist, Baptist, Presbyterian, Episcopalian, and Catholics—and no one came empty-handed. There also drove up at the same time a wagon laden with "good things" for the inner man. There was everything for the larder, from delightful pickles, jellies, jams, sauces, hams, etc., up to a barrel of flour from two of our leading business men; also something in the dry goods line. The evening was delightfully spent, and was an occasion long to be remembered by the pastor's family.

I am sometimes almost appalled at the magnitude and responsibility of work on this coast, particularly in the growing city of Gulfport, which seems to have such a bright future before it. The church must keep pace with the advancement along other lines. I am glad to be numbered with our band of workers on the coast, and I hope, by God's help, to make this the best year's work of my ministry.

We have a faithful and aggressive band of workers here, well organized, with a flourishing Epworth League, etc. Mrs. Parker hopes to reorganize our Woman's F. M. S. at an early day. Concerning the work in the beautiful town of Long Beach, and Mississippi City, and Handsboro, I must write at another time.

J. S. Parker, P. C.

THE KIND OF REVIVAL NEEDED.

The impression is prevalent throughout Christendom that the pressing need of the church is a downright, old-fashioned, Holy Ghost revival. The characteristics of such a revival are given by an exchange, as follows:

1. A revival that begins personally in the hearts of the pastors and the members of the church.

2. A revival in the thoughtful, honest, prayerful reading of the Bible.

3. A revival that will rebuild the broken-down family altars and keep burning thereon the fire of daily, devout worship.

4 A revival that will make all members of the church profoundly solicitous for the salvation of their neighbors.

5. A revival that will cause all members of the church to labor personally with their neighbors to bring them to Christ.

6. A revival that will enable every church member to say from the heart, "I was glad when they said unto me, Let us go up to the Lord."

7. A revival that will make it a pleasure to the members to live right up to the spirit of the vows they took upon themselves when they joined the church.

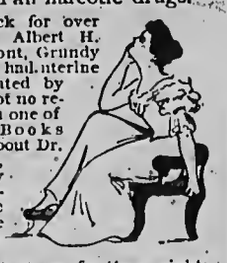
A revival that will meet these conditions will not fall far short of being a genuine, old fashioned, Holy Ghost revival. God is ready. Let us have it.—Selected.

The vision of the stork is one which brightens the eyes and quickens the heart beat of every young wife. Yet often the vision is never realized, and as the laughter of infant voices floats from without into the childless home the eyes sadden and the heart grows hungry.

It often happens that childlessness is due to conditions which may be corrected. Many women have found that the vitality and vigor imparted by Doctor Pierce's Favorite Prescription to the womanly organs, has been the one thing needful to fulfill the joy of motherhood. This famous medicine is not a cure-all, but a specialist's prescription, having as a single aim the cure of diseases peculiar to women.

Sick or weak women are invited to consult Dr. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y., by letter, free of charge, thus avoiding the indelicate questions, offensive examinations, and local treatments, generally considered necessary by inexperienced practitioners. All letters are held as strictly private and sacredly confidential. Each answer is sent in a perfectly plain envelope.

There is neither alcohol nor other intoxicant contained in "Favorite Prescription," and it is absolutely free from opium, cocaine and all narcotic drugs.



"My wife was sick for over eight years," writes Albert H. Fulte, Esq., of Altamont, Grundy County, Tenn. "She had uterine disease and was treated by two physicians and got no relief. At last I read, in one of your Memorandum Books which you sent me, about Dr. Pierce's medicines, and we decided to try his 'Favorite Prescription,' I sent to the drug store and got one bottle and the first dose gave ease and sleep. She had not slept any for three nights. Being sure that it would cure her I sent for five more bottles, and when she had taken the sixth bottle she was sound and well. We now have a fine boy at our house."

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets promote a healthy condition of the stomach.

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 1, 1900.

THE SABBATH AND THE RAILROADS.

Strong effort is being made in Mississippi to have the Legislature, now in session, to pass a bill prohibiting the running of extra trains on Sunday, and also the performance on that day of all unnecessary railroad work. The reform is being engineered by the State Sunday League, which will shortly present a memorial to that body requesting the enactment of a measure of about the same nature as the one which has been in operation in Georgia for a number of years, and which has proved highly beneficial and effective. The legislation desired does not contemplate the stoppage of mail trains, but aims, however, to prevent all avoidable Sunday traffic and labor.

Railroads are conspicuously great Sabbath desecrators, and as they are yearly growing in power and in disregard of the Sabbath as a day of rest, it is highly important that in every State steps should be taken toward bringing about a reform in this direction. The evil has already assumed such magnitude that the timid hearted join with the enemies of the Sabbath in asserting that nothing can be done but to accept the situation as it is. One thing is certain: nothing will be done unless something is attempted, and no matter how grave the evil, it is the duty of the Christian public to labor for its restriction and abolition.

Mississippi will not be alone and without precedent in seeking to limit Sunday railroad traffic by law, as several other States already have enactments of the kind mentioned.

As matters now stand, there are nearly a million and a half of railroad employees in this country who practically have no Sabbath either for rest or for worship. These men need the Sabbath, and have as much right to its privileges as any other class of men. Shall they forever be denied its gracious opportunities and hallowed influences because of the indifference and selfishness of the public, and the avarice of corporations? Shall there be no restriction whatever upon the demoralizing influence of Sunday trains and Sunday labor? There is hardly any question that a vast deal of business is attended to on Sunday by the railroads that could be looked after without serious loss or inconvenience on the other days of the week, as, for instance, track-laying and repairing, work in the shops, clerical work in the offices, and the running of extra trains, to say nothing of freight trains not loaded with perishable goods.

The management of more than one leading railway would be glad to observe the Sabbath in some degree, at least, provided other railroads would do the same; but, unless there is concert of action, they could not afford to pursue this policy. Hence nothing short of prohibitory State legislation on the subject can be expected to reach and correct the evil, as then all the railroads would be affected alike and could afford without injury to pay some respect to the Sabbath. A bill similar to the one now contemplated was defeated in the last Legislature by only a few votes. Since then sentiment favorable to such a measure has increased to such an extent that the ready passage thereof is confidently looked for. No true friend of the civil Sabbath, to say nothing of the religious Sabbath, should hesitate a moment about casting his vote and influence in favor of such a reform.

RUN OUT THE GAMBLERS.

The extent to which gambling is being carried on, almost without let or hindrance, in this city and its suburbs at present, together with the unblushing boldness of the thing, is shameful in the extreme, and ought not to be tolerated for an hour by the officials whose duty it is not to make laws, but to enforce them. Gamblers rank among the most dangerous enemies that threaten the purity and integrity of social and commercial life, and every well-regulated commonwealth seeks to prohibit the gambling evil by means of rigorous laws. On account of the extremely demoralizing influence of this vice, which has its root in dishonesty, and of which it is one expression, no self-respecting community or municipality can afford to wink at or meekly endure it. The gambler is in no sense a producer, or an encourager of industry. He simply feeds and fattens upon the savings and earnings of others. Whatever gain comes to him through the practice of his vile trade represents so much dead loss to his fellow-gambler, or some unfortunate whom he fleeces. In fact, the whole gambling business is conducted on the principle of getting something without giving or paying an honest equivalent therefor, and is nothing short of stealing. On account of the seeming ease and quickness with which money is made by this method, it presents a most pleasing and powerful temptation to those who are not firmly grounded in righteousness, and who are in haste to be rich without having to toil long and hard for riches. It has a terrible fascination even for amateurs, and on account of the chance element that it involves it soon begets a recklessness that totally unfits its follower for legitimate occupations. Ordinary methods of making money seem to the gambler entirely too tame and too laborious. And yet no man is a greater slave than the professional gambler.

The man who gambles is generally looked upon as untrustworthy, even in the localities where the evil is winked at, and if his habits are known, he finds it exceedingly hard to obtain profitable employment.

We are glad to note the bold stand taken by Mayor Flower last week before the Police Board of this city against the gambling nuisance; and in his efforts to have the law enforced against these parasites upon human society he should have the hearty support, as well as thanks, of all good citizens. Not every Mayor is thus outspoken against evil. At the meeting mentioned the Mayor stated as a fact capable of proof that the laws against gambling are being most outrageously violated here. He mentioned that he was constantly receiving communications from reputable citizens complaining of the existence of gambling dens, and informing him of their location, and he also stated that he had furnished the superintendent of the Board a list of not less than forty gambling houses in operation in the city.

These are startling disclosures, and if the members of the Police Board have any real sense of honor or any decent respect for the laws which they are sworn to enforce, the charges of the Mayor ought to stir them to vigorous action against the gambling fraternity. With these facts before them they can not plead ignorance, and further continuance of the disgraceful policy of inaction hitherto pursued will not only subject them to the just wrath and censure of all friends of law and order, but will furnish stronger grounds than ever for suspicion of being bribed by the gambling element. As the Daily Picayune well says: "Gamblers are willing to pay to be let alone by the police, and as a consequence they are let alone, but have to pay heavily in order to shut official eyes. If the matter could be investigated here, and the facts brought out as they were in New York, when the criminal corruption in the police department in that city was brought to light, a shocking state of things would be discovered."

Letters, complaints, petitions, and resolutions ought to be poured in upon the police officials by the better class of citizens until they either resign or deal with the gamblers as the law directs. What need have we for police if card-shuffling cheats, and such like, are to ply their trade unmolested?

Nor is New Orleans the only Southern city thus afflicted. There is strong evidence that in several leading towns of Mississippi the same evil is astonishingly prevalent and is almost unrebuked. What can good citizens be thinking of when they allow such things to go unnoticed, when they make no protest against the non-enforcement of laws for the protection of public morality and commendable industry? The time for action is now! The "let-alone" policy is both wrong and cowardly.

THE TIME IS SHORT.

I make affectionate and earnest appeal in behalf of the Twentieth Century Thank-offering Fund. Unless immediate and urgent interest in the movement be taken by presiding elders and pastors, the expectations of the church will be disappointed and our Methodism suffer a positive discount. But such a result is not to be thought of as a bare possibility. We can and will succeed. Some pastors have already done nobly, and many others are working out wisely formed plans. Every mail brings me grateful intelligence of the great things accomplished. If properly and earnestly presented, the people will respond.

I am anxious that we have small offerings from the many, while receiving large gifts from the favored few. Every member in Southern Methodism ought to be on the historic roll of the Twentieth Century Fund. Each as he is able and thankful, should freely give. The time is short. The next six months will determine the fate of this great connectional movement.

AN ADMIRABLE PROVISION.

The Wesleyan Methodist Conference in England has adopted an excellent plan for the protection of the Connection against charlatans and mendicants, and also for the proper commendation of worthy men and their causes. A committee is appointed by the Conference on "Financial Appeals by Strangers," whose duty it is to inquire into the credentials of "strangers" making appeals, and the worthiness of every cause for which aid is asked. The pulpits of the Connection are, therefore, not to be opened to soliciting "strangers" until the endorsement of the committee has been secured. This is certainly a wise precaution. It is at once a protection against fraud and a commendation of the worthy.

In a late issue of the Methodist Recorder I find a note from Rev. Allen Ruse, chairman of the committee, which is as follows:

"I have been desired by the committee appointed by the Conference on the subject of 'Financial Appeals by Strangers,' to inform the superintendents of circuits that there are, at the present time, several visitors from other countries who are making appeals to the Connection, which the committee can not recommend to our people. Some of these strangers are entirely unauthorized, and their appeals are really on behalf of private enterprises and for personal ends. Before allowing our Trust premises to these strangers, superintendents are asked to communicate with me, so as to see whether the committee has considered their credentials and the merit of their appeals."

We have a slight statutory check upon our own people traveling abroad in the interest of local enterprises, but against the "begging friars" of other churches, and no church, we have no protection but the resistance of the individual pastor. The pressure upon the pastor is often very great, and he ought to have the support of authoritative Conference action. CHAS. B. GALLOWAY.

A RELIGIOUS DAILY.

Last week the daily papers contained the following interesting announcement, which was sent out from Topeka, Kan., the home of Mr. Sheldon. The experiment is certainly unique in journalism, and will be watched with eager and general attention:

"Rev. Charles M. Sheldon, author of 'In His Steps,' is to be given an opportunity to edit a daily newspaper as he thinks a Christian daily should be edited. For the week beginning March 13, he will have absolute control of every department of the Topeka Capital News, editorial and advertising. At the Detroit convention of the Christian Endeavor Society, Mr. Sheldon asked what philanthropic gentleman in this age of munificent endowments to educational institutions would give $1,000,000 for the creation of a great Christian daily?' The philanthropic gentleman has not appeared with the money, but Dell Keyser, the president of the Topeka Capital Company, offered to give the paper to Mr. Sheldon for one week, and the offer has been accepted. It is understood that able writers are to assist Mr. Sheldon, and that statesmen, prominent divines and editors of some of the dailies of New York, Chicago and St. Louis will help him by suggestions."

It is stated that should the receipts exceed the expenditures, the proceeds will be devoted to missionary and philanthropic work.

HAVE DONE WITH THINKING IN THE SMALL.

Says an exchange: "An appeal has been issued for $3,000,000 to carry on the educational work which Mr. Moody instituted."

Our Twentieth Century Movement calls for only half as much to carry on in the South the educational work instituted by Asbury, McKendree, Soule, Bascom, Capers, Paine, Pierce, Andrew, Wightman, McTyeire, Keener, and the rest, during the last hundred years. And yet some think the impossible has been proposed.

Our Southern people need, above all things, to entertain larger ideas about education. We think on the subject in the small; we plan by contracted policies, and then fall short of our Lilliputian schemes. The only big things in it all are the big names we give to small schools.

If the Twentieth Century Movement does no more than get our minds used to larger conceptions on the subject of education, it will have justified itself, and will have come to more than it cost in the end.

We must quit talking of colleges supported by incomes expressed in hundreds. We must talk of thousands and tens of thousands, or else face the fact that starveling high schools are not colleges, and that there is not in Conferences, nor Boards of Trustees, nor anybody else, any power of transubstantiation to make sorry secondary schools anything but what they really are.

Let us have an era of larger ideas. In this sense, let us all become expansionists.—Wesleyan Advocate.

LITERARY NOTES.

BY W. F. B.

The leading article in Appletons' Popular Science Monthly, for February, is entitled South Sea Bubbles in Science, by Prof. Trowbridge, of Harvard University. The mechanism of the trolley car is clearly described and pictured by William Baxter, Jr., C. E. Prof. Charles A. Briggs contributes an interesting article under the title, Is the Christian Religion Declining? He believes not. Explosives, how they are made, their comparative power, and the many uses, is the subject of an extremely interesting and instructive article by Prof. Charles E. Munroe, of the Columbian Museum at Washington, D. C. The changes during last year in the Klondike gold fields is the subject of an illustrated article by Prof. Angelo Heilprin, the well-known traveler and scientist. A timely article by G. C. Speranza, a member of the New York bar, calls attention to the Decline of Criminal Jurisprudence in America, and points out the important place which the criminal code holds in the jurisprudence of a State. Prof. F. W. Clarke, of the United States Geological Survey, contributes a thoughtful paper entitled, The Man of Science in Practical Affairs.

In the February Century appears the first instalment of hitherto unpublished extracts from the private diary of Dr, B. E. O'Meara, Napoleon Bonaparte's physician at St. Helena. The original manuscript of this journal has come into the possession of The Century Co. The West as the Eastern author sees it, and the West as it actually is, are the theme of a trenchant essay by E. Hough. In Midwinter in New York, Jacob A. Riis tells incidentally how the American metropolis looked to him from his native Denmark. Other contents of the number are a group of poems, The Hoosier Youngster, by James Whitcomb Riley, illustrated by Florence Scovel Shinn; an anonymous article on The Military Element in Col. Waring's Career, and the last instalment of Capt. Joshua Slocum's narrative of his solitary voyage around the world. In the fourth of his Cromwell studies Mr. Morley treats of the execution of Archbishop Land, Cromwell's reorganization of the army, and the battle of Naseby, which put an end to the king's fighting force.

PROHIBITION IN MAINE.

Oh, no; there is no trouble with the prohibitory law in Maine when anything like an honest and brave effort is made to execute it, as is shown in Bath at the present time, when it is said that no man dares to sell liquor. The simple fact is, the prohibitory law is the most drastic and effective, when used, of any law on the statute books. Neal Dow, with the eye of an eagle, watched it for a life-time, and where it was found to be weak, he made it strong. No man dare violate it when a community wakes up to demand that it be faithfully executed.—Zion's Herald (Boston).

Nothing can stand against an aroused moral sentiment when fearlessly voiced by the public press. Christian deputy sheriffs to arrest youthful offenders is the latest proposition in Brooklyn. Sheriff Walton, at the suggestion of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, has promised to appoint representative churchmen, probably one from each ward, deputy sheriffs. Their special province is to take steps to overcome the rapidly growing evils of street gambling, the assembling at improper times and places of the young of both sexes, the illegal sale of tobacco and intoxicants, and other crimes.—Times-Democrat.

Mr. Moody and Father McGlynn died poor—an unquestionable confirmation of the unselfishness, sincerity and real goodness of the lives which they lived. They had but to speak and the multitude would pour money into their hands, but none of it stuck to their fingers; it went immediately for the good of others. "He died poor" is the best thing that can be said of the really good man; and when this mercenary age passes, as pass it will, this fundamental Christian fact will obtain general recognition.—Zion's Herald.

EPWORTH LEAGUE DEPARTMENT.

"ALL FOR CHRIST."

REV. THOMAS B. CLIFFORD, Morgan City, La. EDITOR.

MISSISSIPPI.

REV. HENRY G. HAWKINS, Madison, Miss ASSOCIATE EDITOR.

Mr. Robt. M. Means, of Whitesboro, Texas, who is secretary of the Texas State Epworth League, has kindly sent us a copy of the Constitution and By Laws under which the Lone Star State Epworth League works. Their State gathering is biennial, alternating with the International Conference. The number of delegates is unlimited, but in voting each chapter has one vote for every twenty members, or a two thirds fraction thereof. All traveling preachers of the State attending are members. In Mississippi we have it, "All preachers and presiding elders who have Leagues in their respective charges or districts, shall be admitted as delegates."

The Texas by-law No. 4 is, "In addition to the expense money of his office, the secretary shall receive annually a salary of $100." This is much in advance of Mississippi. We work our State officers, our secretary especially; and, it may be, sometimes even forget to give thanks.

Other circular information sent by Secretary Means shows that Texas has been prolific of Epworth League literature in the form of pamphlets, tracts, record books, etc.

In the approaching State League Conference, to be held at Vicksburg, the last week of April, the purpose is to try as far as possible to make it practical and helpful to those Leagues desirous of knowing how to conduct the meetings, and perform the work of a League. In order to gain this end each one of the State officers will hold a kind of Normal for the work of his department. For instance, Mrs. G. H. Mathis, of Columbus, who is in charge of the literary and social work, expects to hold a League Social with the co operation and help of the delegates and local League. She will hold a regular literary meeting with some appropriate subject. Also she proposes to have a systematic Bible Study, using chart.

We must not forsake the assembling of ourselves together. This is needed for inspiration and persuasion. But we must remember that in our League work there is something to do besides attending the meetings. Probably a great many church members, as well as Leaguers, make a mistake just here, thinking to fulfill the obligations of membership by "showing up" at the meeting.

Josiah Strong is of the opinion that, just as the wholesale dealers in recent years have found it necessary to send their drummers immediately to their customers with samples, so the churches must begin to send representatives in larger number immediately to the homes that are to be reached. He believes that there must be more personal contact; Christians must cease to expect the preacher to love men for them, if men are to believe and follow them to the churches.

ENCOURAGING NEWS FROM RUSTON.

MR. EDITOR: Bro. P. R. Knickerbocker, who has been preaching for me for the past ten days, returned to his work in Crowley to-day. Our church would not hold the crowds who came to hear him. There were 99 conversions, many reclamations, and the spiritual life of the church strengthened.

Bro. J. L. Pierce will preach tomorrow night, and I will close the meeting Sunday. Have received 36 members since Conference. Took the Conference collections on Jan. 14. Asked for $304, and got $315. I am looking forward to a good year.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE BROTHERHOOD.

Again we are called upon to mourn the loss of one of our members. Rev. C. G. Andrews, D. D., was one of the charter members of our organization, and was always prompt and faithful to meet the assessments thereof. He was for four years its president, and always took a lively interest in its proceedings and welfare. But he has been called home, and it will now be a mournful pleasure on the part of those of us who survive him to pay our mortuary fee.

In this connection let me do what the Brotherhood at its last meeting requested me to do, viz.: state in the ADVOCATE the condition upon which a brother who has forfeited his membership may be reinstated. It is simply this: Pay the assessments that have been made during the past twelve months. These have been two in number, occasioned by the death of two of our oldest and best members—Rev. J. M. Pugh and Rev C. G. Andrews. Surely all our brethren who have dropped out for any cause will cheerfully do this, and be reinstated.

And will not those members of our Conference who have never joined the Brotherhood take this occasion to come in? We ought to increase the membership of our organization until it will pay to the widow of a deceased member at least $500. The Brotherhood in the North Mississippi Conference, I am informed, pays $600, and that in the Virginia Conference $800. Why should we be so far behind?

And why not have a large increase of non-beneficiary members from among our laymen? They are called upon to pay only $1 on the death of a member. Any layman seeing this, and desiring to become a non-beneficiary member, may do so by sending their name and address, with ten cents, to our treasurer, Rev. B. F. Lewis, Ellisville, Miss. And if you will add to this $2, to go to the families of the two brethren recently called away, it will be a sacrifice well pleasing to God.

TO AUTHORS.

At the last session of the General League Board the General Secretary "was ordered to advertise for manuscripts on biography and history, on general literature, and on popular science, from which to select the course of 1900 1901."

We have already given publicity to this order, but now make the formal announcement. Four books are selected by the Epworth League Board at its sitting in May to constitute the reading course for the year. These books should, it is desired, cover the four departments of biography or history, literature, science (popularly treated), and religion (devotional). The Board has hoped that these books might come from writers in our own church. They should be brief and comprehensive narratives or treatises, not exceeding when printed above three to four hundred 12mo pages. In all cases a popular, but elevated style should be followed. We hope this call may produce us a number of manuscripts for inspection. They should be lodged with the Secretary at the Central Office before May 1 next.

PASS NOT IN SILENCE.

BY SOPHIE L. SCHENCK.

Passing through life, speak words to cheer and bless;
Fear not to let your loving thonghts be known;
A touch may soothe a heart and tenderness
Prevent despair. We trace love in a tone.
Sad hearts are everywhere—tears overcast
Eyes, young and old. Death visits earth so fast,
Keep not the kindly word till life has past.

Often we see the friend we hold most dear
Bowed down by woe, for sorrow stalks around;
Her ruthless darts shoot broadcast far and near,
Cutting deep wounds, while rushing without sound;
Do not in silence pass the grieving by;
In tender looks a soothing balm may lie,
Torn hearts may heal through words of sympathy.

Sometimes the aged may be grave and worn,
Shrinking beneath some scornful look or tone—
Pass not in silence, lest the one forlorn
Should droop, through thinking they were left alone.
While the still nature sympathy may share,
Silence maintained assumes a chilling air,
Then speak some word, so let friends know you care.

SUCCEEDED WHERE OTHERS FAILED.

Every now and then we hear of young men, especially foreigners, without credit or influence, and with very little capital, taking up abandoned farms in New England, upon which native Americans have half starved, and not only getting a good living, but often making money on them.

We are constantly seeing men, in all walks of life, stepping in, where others have failed, and from their rejected ideas reaping rich harvests. Every now and then a young man without capital or influence will step into an abandoned location, where another man has failed, and make a fortune. A young man with energy and push takes a run-down hotel, where, perhaps, half a score of landlords have failed, and gets rich. An energetic woman will take a boarding-house which several before her could not make pay, and by reason of her industry and good judgment, taste and skill, so completely transform the place that she soon makes a competence for herself and her children, whom she sends to school, and, perhaps, later, to college.

It is astonishing what miracles a mixture of brains and energy will accomplish. A young physician, for instance, fresh from a medical school, without prestige or capital, takes an office in a small town where his predecessor just managed to get a living, and soon is on the high road to fame and fortune. He rearranges the dingy, tumble-down old office, giving it a fresh, business-like air. He dresses neatly, is courteous and attentive to his patients, keeps up his study and research, and by his general conduct inspires feelings of respect and confidence in the people among whom he is thrown, the result of which is soon apparent in increased practice.

A young lawyer who has just been admitted to the bar will go into a town where several before him have failed, and by his energy and manly, business-like methods soon succeeds in establishing a lucrative practice. Instead of sitting round the office, like some of his predecessors, with his feet upon a table, telling stories and chewing tobacco while waiting for clients, he spends his spare time studying his law books and adding to his general information. He goes into society, gets acquainted with the people, is always on the lookout to improve any opportunity that comes in his way, and finally makes his way to the top of the ladder.

We know a barber who recently took a shop which was so dingy and unattractive in appearance that it repelled rather than invited customers, and had consequently been abandoned by its former tenant, who was unable to make a living in the place. With some paint, varnish, and the exercise of a little taste, the new tenant revolutionized the business, and is now earning a comfortable support for himself and family.

We have known of several instances where miners have made fortunes out of the waste which men who had failed in working the mines had thrown away.

It is often difficult to see any difference between the men who succeed and those who fail. They often start out with the same amount of capital, and, apparently, with equal advantages; but, although, perhaps, not noticeable by the average observer, one has a little more energy, a little more politeness, is a little more accommodating, attends a little more closely to details, is more prompt, gets to the store or the office a little earlier and stays a little later, takes a paper or two and a magazine, reads books and papers along the line of his business or profession; but these are the seeming trifles that make all the difference between success and failure.—Success.

WHAT BENJAMIN FRANKLIN DID.

Here is a long list of the good deeds of Benjamin Franklin. This catalogue has been summarized by Curtis Guild, who was present at the unveiling of the Franklin statue, in Philadelphia, sixty-seven years after the patriot and philosopher's death:

He founded the Philadelphia Library, the leader in the field of hundreds of others of similar character.

He edited the best paper in the Colonies, and gave a start to the press of America.

He exemplified the value of advertising in modern business.

His "Poor Richard" maxims were wit and wisdom that brought home valuable truths to readers, such as they could understand and make of practical service.

He founded the American post-office system.

It was he who caused Philadelphia to be paved, lighted and kept clean.

He invented, when fuel was scarce, the Franklin stove, which economized it; and made a free gift of his invention to the public, besides suggesting various other heating inventions, later on, in which this country leads all others.

He was the remover of the once universal nuisance—smoky chimneys.

He was the first effective promulgator of the gospel of ventilation.

He made important electrical discoveries, and, it is said, "robbed thunder of its terrors, and lightning of its power to destroy."

He was instrumental in founding the very first high school in Pennsylvania; he protested till his death against using the funds of that institution in teaching the youth the language of Greece and Rome, when French, German and Spanish were so much more required in regular business transactions.

He founded the American Philosophical Society, the first organization of friends of science in this country.

His aid was valuable in founding the Pennsylvania Hospital.

He led that State in its struggle of thirty years against the tyranny of the Penns.

When the Indians were carrying on bloody marauding expeditions within eighty miles of Philadelphia, he commanded and led the troops of that city that were sent against them.

He was the author of the first scheme for uniting the Colonies; his scheme contained many features that bind the States in the Union to-day.

More than any other man, he was instrumental in causing the repeal of the Stamp Act; and, more than any other man, he educated the Colonies up to independence.

He discovered the temperature of the Gulf Stream, and that northwest storms begin in the southwest.

He directed attention to the advantage of building ships with water-tight compartments, getting the idea from the Chinese.—Selected.

BOY WANTED.

Roland stopped, and looked at the sign:

BOY WANTED.

It hung outside a large cutlery establishment, next to a store where there had been a big fire. He had made up his mind that he was old enough to look for work, and try to relieve mother. Should he go in? He hesitated; then with all the courage he could command went inside. He was sent back to a room where men on high stools were writing in big books, too busy to notice him, but a tall gentleman did, and questioned him so fast he could hardly answer.

"What kind of work do you expect to do? Don't know? Most boys do. Never worked out before? Suppose you think it's all play. Well," pointing to some steps, "go down there, and the man at the foot will tell you what to do."

Roland went down, and found half a dozen boys at work, with their sleeves rolled up, cleaning and polishing knives. The man at the foot of the steps looked up, and said:

"Come to try your hand? Well, three have just left in disgust; don't seem to be boys' work, somehow, but it's got to be done. You see," he said, picking up some knives and scissors, and showing spots of rust on them, "the water which saved our building the other night injured some of our finest goods. If you want to try your hand at cleaning, I'll show you how. We pay by the dozen."

"Tain't fair," said one of the boys; "some has more rust on than others."

"If you don't like our terms, you need not work for us," said the foreman; and the boy, muttering that he wanted to be errand-boy, and see something of life, left, while Roland went to work with a will. As he finished each piece he held it up, examined it critically, and wondered if another would think it well done.

When the hour for closing came, the gentleman who had sent him down-stairs appeared, and looking round at the boys, said:

"Well?"

"There is the boy we want," said the foreman, pointing to Roland. "He will take pride in doing anything you give him to do. He has been well trained."

Again the tall man spoke quickly:

"That's what we want. 'Boy wanted,' doesn't mean any kind of a boy. Mother know you came? No? Well, take her your first wages, and tell her there's a place open to you here. Then put your arms around her neck, and thank her for teaching you to be thorough. If more boys were thorough, more boys would succeed in life."

"I guess, mother," said Roland, when he told her about it, "it was because I tried to do everything as you would like it. I forgot I was doing it because there was a 'boy wanted.'"—Annie Weston Whitney.

WISE HINTS FOR YOUNG PEOPLE.

The advice once given to his son by Henry Ward Beecher is trenchant and valuable as that of Polonius to Laertes, and may be profitably applied by young women as well as young men. Listen to the words of the great preacher, and let them be engraved on the tablets of your memory:

You must not go into debt. Avoid debt as you would the devil. Make it a fundamental rule: No debt—cash or nothing.

Make few promises. Religiously observe the smallest promise. A man who means to keep his promises can not afford to make many.

Be scrupulously careful in all statements. Aim at accuracy and perfect frankness, no guess-work—either nothing or absolute truth.

When working for others, sink yourself out of sight; seek their interest. Make yourself necessary to those who employ you, by industry, fidelity, and scrupulous integrity. Selfishness is fatal.

Hold yourself responsible for a higher standard than anybody expects of you. Keep your own standard high. Never excuse yourself to yourself. Never pity yourself. Be a hard master to yourself, but lenient to everybody else.

Concentrate your force on your own business; do not turn off. Be constant, steadfast, persevering.—Exchange.

BEST OF ALL.

Two girls were talking one day. They were young and eager and ambitious, and their talk was of people who had "succeeded." Finally, one exclaimed enthusiastically, "Oh, is there anything in the world finer than a cultivated brain?" Her friend was silent a moment, then she answered slowly, "Yes, one thing—a cultivated heart!" It was an echo of the old word, "Keep thy heart with all diligence, for out of it are the issues of life."—Exchange.

A Small Beginning.

A little snow ball on the summit of the Alps, rolled up by the winds, moves slowly downward. Gaining in strength and size, it grows rapidly to giant proportions, and finally becomes the frightful avalanche, destroying everything in its path. Consumption begins with a little cough, a trifling pain, a passing flush on the cheeks. This is but the beginning of the avalanche, consumption, that knows no pity, recognizes no distinction. Just at the beginning thousands commit the error of not checking and curing the disease by using MARSDEN'S PECTORAL BALM.

A Serious Decision.

"Why CHILLIFUGE Won't Cure Chills"—is a question that brings to mind the story of a society of learned men formed for debating problems.

The question was presented: "Why a fish weighing ten pounds, put into a vessel of known weight, filled with water, did not increase the weight?" After hours of hot debate the fool of the club announced that it did, for while the debate had been going on he had tried the experiment.

COOLEY—Miss ANNIE LOUISE COOLEY was born Sept. 17, 1874, at Winchester, Miss., and departed this life at Ellisville, Miss., July 28, 1899. When some eleven years of age she found herself bereft of both father and mother. Some three years afterwards she united with the M. E. Church, South. She made her home with her uncle, Samuel J. Johnson, where she endeared herself to all, especially the little children. Of a retiring disposition, the outside world could never be conscious of her many noble traits of character. Inheriting the taint of consumption, she realized that a shadow was upon her path that must be diminished and destroyed. During the past Winter she contracted cold, and about April last was stricken down with inflamed lungs. At the request of her brother, Gus, she was conveyed to his home, where I reside, and this gave me daily access to her presence. For some two months she hoped to recover, and when the certain fact of death was realized, she discovered her dependence for salvation of soul lay in the fact of her Christian education and membership in the church. Then she sought consciousness of a personal Savior, and received the witness of the Holy Spirit to her full acceptance. The remaining days of her life were happy, joyous Converse about Jesus and heaven were her delight, and her sole desire was to impress others with the value of her new-found treasure. Calmly, triumphantly she approached "the dark valley of the shadow of death, fearing no evil." July 28, at 7:30 A. M., she closed her eyes and fell asleep in Jesus. ROBT. B. DOWNER.

Ellisville, Miss.

SHARP—Miss EUNA SHARP was born Oct. 4, 1879, and died Jan. 4, 1900, at the home of her grandmother in Jackson, Tenn.

Miss Euna was a member of the M. E. Church, South, for several years. Her life was a demonstration of the truth that the young can be pious, and that religion is as real with them as with older persons.

As her pastor for nearly three years, I can truthfully say that she manifested the mind and spirit of her Lord, and though quiet and undemonstrative, she was faithful to her duty, and gentle and loving in all her deportment. She was specially attentive to the preaching of the Word, and her presence at church was an inspiration to me. She was a dutiful daughter, and was very devoted to a younger sister committed to her care, her mother having died several years ago. Wherever she went she won the esteem and confidence of those with whom she was associated. Her death was a great shock to friends and relatives, and especially to her father, who left her Jan. 1, and knew not of her illness until the news of her death reached him. Her remains were brought to Wall Hill, her former home, for interment.

To the mourning ones we would say: Weep not as those who have no hope, but so live that there may be a happy uniting in the sweet by-and-by. G. H. JACOBS.

BRADFORD—Mrs. SUSIE BRADFORD (nee Hearne), daughter of F. M. and Susan Hearne, and wife of Dr. W. M. Bradford, joined the M. E. Church in 1888, in the twentieth year of her age, and died in Blanchard, La., at one o'clock, Nov. 22, 1899, in her thirty-second year. Her remains were laid to rest in the cemetery at Overton, Texas.

Though the writer had the privilege of knowing Sister Bradford for only a few months before her death; he was deeply impressed by the beautiful traits of character and the evidences of cultured womanhood which were so strikingly exhibited in her home life. She was stricken with typhoid fever, and lingered for nearly three weeks. Though suffering much, she manifested throughout her entire illness remarkable submission and a tender affectionate solicitude for those nearest her heart. Conscious of her approach to the heavenly world, and calling her husband, her brothers and sisters, and her aged and venerable Christian father, to her bedside, she bade each a fond "Adieu." The scene of her departure was inexpressibly touching and pathetic. By her death two dear little children are left motherless. May God grant all who loved her (and there are many) a sweet reunion! M. G. JENKINS.

FLURRY—Mrs. FANNIE E. FLURRY, daughter of John R. and Agnes Byrd, was born May 7, 1850. She was married to Rev. John Flurry, Nov. 4, 1868, and died Nov. 6, 1899.

Sister Flurry was the mother of twelve children—six boys and six girls. Ten of the children are still living. Two have crossed over the river, and are now with their sainted mother in heaven.

It was my privilege to be the pastor of this noble woman for two years, and she was as dear to me as a mother. I visited her only a few days before her death, and found her happy in Jesus. Her last days were like a beautiful sunset; no cloude; all was well, the gates ajar, and the dear old mother passed sweetly away. During her illness she had a vision of heaven. She stood on the banks of the river, and saw the golden gates and loved ones waiting for her. Her last words were, "Glory, glory."

There is no death; an angel form
Walks o'er the earth with silent tread.
He bears our best loved ones away,
And then we call them dead.

May God comfort the aged and bereaved husband and children! Weep not; for she is waiting for you. G. W. HUFF.

Wool Market, Miss.

NEYLAND—ANNIE RAY NEYLAND was born Feb. 14, 1897, and died Jan. 5, 1900.

A little flower was taken from the earthly home and planted in the heavenly garden. It blooms no more on earth, but blooms to all eternity in heaven. A little star to shine; shine long enough to be the idol and light of home; but at an unexpected time its lovely light on earth was darkened by death's dark angel, and removed from its earthly home to its eternal home, to shine forever with Jesus, who said, "Suffer little children to come unto me;" where these angels always behold our Father in heaven.

Little Annie Ray was a sweet and lovable child. She suffered untold agony for three days and nights. Her clothes were almost burned from her body before the fire could be put out. All was done that could be done for her. She was conscious to the last, but never complained but very little. Then, loved parents, brothers and sister, dry your tears and weep not for Annie Ray, for she is at rest, and will wait for you at the beautiful gate. Then look that way, and fancy that you see and hear her saying, "Mama and papa, come this way." Their pastor, C. C. GRIFFIN.

SHURDEN—Sister D. J. SHURDEN was born in Kemper county the twenty-ninth day of November, 1858. In 1879 she moved to Good Hope, Leake county, and was married to L. J. Pennell the same year, with whom she lived happily till his death, which was in 1891. In 1892 she was married to D. J. Shurder, and they trod the path of life together till Saturday night, Jan 6 1900, when the death angel summoned her from this life.

Sister Shurden lived a very retired life, and suffered afflictions almost innumerable, but she bore up under the chastening rod (knowing that whom the Lord loveth he chasteneth) like a true Christian, she having joined her lot with the Christians of the M. E. Church, South, when she was a girl. She leaves a husband, eight children, and a large number of relatives and friends, to mourn their loss; but, thanks be to God! her record and her last words assure them she has gone where the wicked cease from troubling and the weary are at rest.

May God guide, protect and comfort the bereaved ones! THOS. J. O'NEIL.

CRISLER—CHARLES HENRY, second child of Rev. Charles W. Crisler and Hattie Dunna, was born in Brookhaven, Miss., March 2, 1893, and fulfilled his short course in Jackson, La., Dec. 30, 1899, after passing through the infant sufferings that sometimes come to demonstrate afresh the connection between individual pain and the fall of a race, involving the guiltless babe in the chain of retribution. It is the parents' consolation to hold fast also the truth of the sequal involvment of their child in the new racial life of the second Adam, even in the foot of dissolution. In such faith little Charles had been baptized by Rev. T. L. Mellen, June 4, 1893, and, as a child of the promises, would, doubtless, have attained the measure of the stature of the fullness of Christ had his appointed time extended to the measure of manhood's full maturity. His sphere of development must be within the veil, however, when the certainty of the unending life and the fadeless beauties of the spirit's abiding-place are not less real because unseen, nor less cherished because now only hoped for.

FITZGERALD SALE PARKER.

NUGENT—WM. NUGENT was born in Rapides parish, Nov. 1, 1823. He was married to Miss Tusrelt E. Hollingsworth, April 18, 1845, at Tancock's Prairie, by Rev. J. W. Wodell. He died at his home in Grant parish, Jan. 7, 1900. He professed religion at the age of fourteen years, and joined the M. E. Church, South. He was a steward in his church for forty years. He feared God and lived a true Christian life, and he has gone to enjoy that rest which awaits the people of God. The Lord giveth, and the Lord taketh away; blessed be the name of the Lord. To the bereaved ones we extend love and sympathy.

WINE OF CARDUI

A LITTLE DOES MUCH:

BOONE, Iowa, Dec. 14.
No tongue can tell what I have endured in the past ten years with my monthly sickness. While suffering untold agony, a friend called and recommended Wine of Cardui. I sent for a bottle, and Oh! what relief. After the first dose I began to feel better and have had no pain since.—
MRS. GRACE LAMPHERE.

McELREE'S Wine of Cardui

Wine of Cardui not only cures but it acts AT ONCE. Here is a case of ten years' standing, and yet one single dose made the sufferer feel better, and stopped the pain. The Wine goes straight to the seat of the trouble. It acts directly upon the menstrual and genital organs. Its action is not violent, and it does not force a result. It simply gives Nature that little assistance that the sufferer's system lacks. A single disorder in the feminine organs spreads many disorders all over the body, and when the Wine cures the source, all the other ills vanish as a matter of course. A woman can be her own physician and cure herself at home. Local examinations are largely things of the past—the obnoxious custom is no longer necessary. Wine of Cardui is the only perfectly safe and sure vegetable Wine made to-day for the cure of "female troubles".

There is a steady and increasing demand for first-class Bibles. Everybody is anxious to obtain a copy of the best edition of the Holy Scriptures. Old editions are constantly being replaced by Bibles that are in every way more attractive, and there is practically no limit to the demand.

OUR "COMBINATION" FEATURE.

Hitherto the King James and Revised Versions have been printed in parallel columns, but this makes comparisons of texts tedious and unsatisfactory, and makes the book very unwieldy. We have overcome this difficulty by "combining" the two Versions on the same page, showing at a glance in foot-notes all the Changes Additions and Omissions made by the Revisers.

THE OLD VERSION PRINTED IN FULL.

The King James Version is the basis, and this Version is read straight along from the text, while the Revised Version is read from the text in combination with the foot-notes. Our "Combination" Feature has met with universal approval and is strongly endorsed by leading Divines and Biblical Scholars.

It is only by a comparison of the two Versions that the greatest benefit can be obtained from reading the Holy Scriptures, and this comparison every reader can easily make by our simple arrangement for showing the changes made by the revisers. This is the greatest triumph of Bible Publishing the World has ever known.

OUR OFFER.

To those unprogressive people who do not read and pay for the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE we sell this Bible at the publisher's retail price—$4.25. To our subscribers we sell it at the very low rate of $2. The only condition attached to this offer is that the subscriber must pay his subscription one full year in advance, viz.: to February, 1901. We will send it postpaid to any person who will send us three new cash subscribers at the regular rate. For six new cash subscribers at the regular rate we will send two "Combination" Bibles, postpaid.

For fifty cents additional we will send a Bible with index.

For twenty-five cents additional we will have your name engraved in gilt letters on the outside.

Address REV. W. C. BLACK.

P. S.—We can give no commission on renewals in connection with the above offer.

New Machine Offer.

No. 4 Machine, drop leaf table, gothic cover, case of two drawers at each end and center drawer. Dealer's price, $25. Our price, $15 50.
No. 5 Machine, drop leaf table, gothic cover, case of three drawers at each end, making seven drawers in all. Dealer's price, $26. Our price, $16.25.

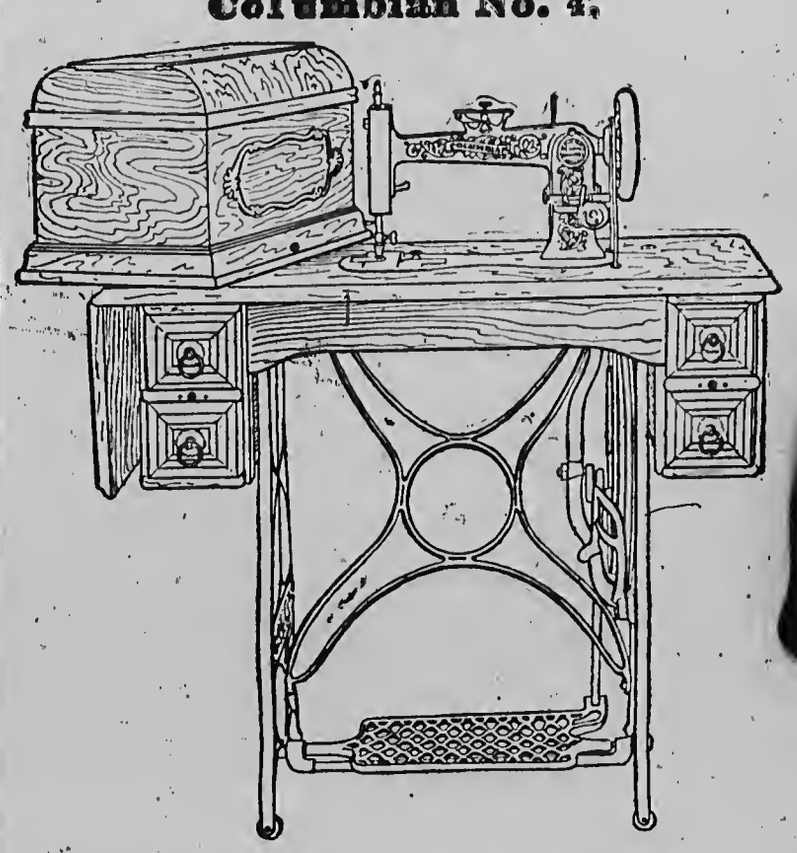
Columbian No. 4.



EXCELLENCE OF THE COLUMBIAN.—All wearing parts are of case-hardened steel possessing great durability, and by the turning of a screw all lost motion caused by wear can be taken up. All parts are fitted so accurately that the machines are absolutely noiseless, and as easy running as fine adjustment and best mechanical skill is possible to produce. No expense or time is spared to make them perfect in every respect, as every machine passes a rigid inspection by competent men before leaving the factory.

NICKEL PLATED.—The balance wheel and many of the fine parts are nickel-plated, with other parts finely enameled and ornamented, giving it a rich appearance.

A Self Setting Needle and Self-Threading Cylinder Shuttle are used in the Columbian High-Arm Sewing Machine. They are so simple that any one can easily operate them in a few minutes' time, as our Instruction Book is fully illustrated, showing how to do all kinds of fancy work with attachments.

Extra Attachments, in velvet-lined case, sent free with each machine: 1 Tucker, 1 Ruffler with shirring plate, 1 Hemmer set (4 widths) and Binder; 1 Braider (Foot and Slide), 1 Thread Cutter.

ADDITIONAL ACCESSORIES.—Each machine is supplied with the following outfit: 1 Hemmer and Feller (one piece), 10 Needles, 6 Bobbins, 1 Wrench, 1 Screw Driver, Oil Can with Oil, Cloth Gauge and Thumb Screw, and a Book of Instructions. The Book of Instructions is profusely illustrated, and answers the purpose of a competent teacher.

No. 3—Drop leaf, Bent cover, case of two drawers at one end and center drawer Dealer's price, $29. Our price, $17.
No. 4—Drop leaf table, Bent cover, case of two drawers at each end and center drawer. Dealer's price, $31. Our price, $17.75.
No. 5—Drop leaf table, Bent cover, case of three drawers at each end and center drawer, making a seven-drawer machine. Dealer's price, $33. Our price, $18.50.

The chief difference between Numbers 3, 4, and 5 is in the furniture—i. e., the number of drawers. If you do not want to pay for the extra drawers, you need not do so. We sell these machines under a ten years' guarantee, by which we mean that if any part gives out by reason of any defect therein, the manufacturer will replace the same free of charge. Moreover, we allow the purchaser to test the machine ten days. If at the end of ten days you are not satisfied, you have only to drop us a postal card, and your money will be refunded.

OUR OFFER.

We will send any one of the above-described machines at the prices named, and also send the ADVOCATE free for six months. The only condition attached to this offer is that subscribers who are in arrears must first pay up all arrearages to date. It would be well to avail yourself of this offer at once, as we can not promise that it will last very long. Notice that you take no risk whatever. We do all the risking. Address REV. W. C. BLACK,
512 Camp St., New Orleans.

P. S.—The machine will be shipped direct from the factory in the North

The British War Office has announced that Gen. Buller's entire army had recrossed to the south of the Tugela river and was in retreat. Buller announced in the published dispatch that he had withdrawn without molestation by the Boers.

Rev. D. Cox, F. S. A., the English clergyman who aroused criticism because he forwarded a donation to the Amsterdam Dutch committee for the Boer sick and wounded, has subscribed liberally to the British soldiers' relief fund and composed a special hymn on behalf of British soldiers to be sung in English churches.

The action of the committee of the House of Representatives, in deciding to recommend favorably the Nicaragua Canal bill providing for an initial grant of $10,000,000 for the beginning of work on the canal and the placing of the prosecution of the work under the continuous contract system until the expenditures reach $140,000,000, has brought the canal question into prominence.

The details as to the situation in Natal are gradually being unfolded, although there still remains much to be explained. According to a dispatch from General Buller, the position on Spion Kop, captured with much difficulty on Thursday last, was abandoned Wednesday night by the officer in command, because it was found that guns could not be placed in position and water could not be had.

The QUEEN AND CRESCENT ROUTE announces that for Mardi Gras it will make a rate of one fare for the round-trip to New Orleans.

Tickets will be on sale commencing Feb. 20, and closing with train arriving at New Orleans morning of Feb. 27, good to return until March 15, 1900. This will give intending visitors an opportunity to see all the parades and participate in all the festivities.

It is understood that there will be at least five parades, though the societies are all secret and very little information leaks out to the public. It is definitely known that the first parade will occur on Feb. 21 and the last on Feb. 27, and those desiring to "see it all" should arrange to spend, at least, the entire time from Feb. 21 to 27 inclusive in New Orleans. By doing so they will be enabled to see everything there is to see and also have time to do such business as may be desirable.

The Mardi Gras week comes so late this year that it is safe to prophesy that the weather and all other conditions will be propitious.

There was one thing Evangelist Moody would not endure—and in this he showed his excellent judgment—he would not allow a religious crank to spoil a religious service. With his well-nigh unerring judgment of men and his extensive experience, he could detect a crank at sight, and again and again we have seen him kindly, but firmly, "call one down" when he began to rant or proceeded to exploit some hobby. It would be well if Moody's practice were more often followed by ministers in charge of social or Conference meetings. We have known some churches to suffer for years from the presence and unedifying exhortations of people who sought the prayer meeting mainly for the opportunity it gave them to air their peculiar views and grievances. It is better, much better, to cut off the persistently offending member than to allow the whole body to suffer.—Zion's Herald.

THE ROBERTS CASE SETTLED.

The action taken by Congress on the 25th instant in adopting by a vote of 270 to 50 a resolution to exclude Brigham H. Roberts, the Mormon Representative-elect from Utah, his seat being thereby declared vacant, not only meets with the general and joyous approval of the American people, but is regarded also as a splendid triumph of Christian sentiment. A celebrated case has thus been settled in an eminently satisfactory way.

Large crowds were in attendance on the closing day of the debate, and the proceedings were observed with the intensest interest. It certainly can not be charged that the House was hasty in its decision, for the matter has been under investigation ever since Congress assembled, and the whole question was thoroughly sifted. Scarcely anybody expected that Roberts would be given a permanent seat in the House, but some were confident that he would be sworn in, at least.

Over a score of speakers, it is said, participated in the final debate, several of the speeches on each side being specially able. Mr. De Armand, of Missouri, closed for the minority, which was in favor of seating Roberts, and then expelling him. Mr. Lanahan, of Texas, in a masterly speech, some passages from which we quote, closed for the majority. Among other things, he said that if there had ever been a necessity for the rational assertion and vindication of the supreme prerogative of the House, the occasion was now upon us. "Neither does the Constitution require, nor do the people expect, the House of Representatives to do anything ridiculous." He maintained that the House possessed the inherent power, aside from its express and implied constitutional warrant, to protect and uphold itself in its dignity, integrity and reputation. The Constitution gives it the right to make its rules, and the greatest rule of the House is that which declares that questions of privilege shall be first.

After citing several supposable instances which would warrant the House in setting aside persons bearing certificates of election, he added: "We are cheerful to accord to the people of Utah all the privileges and immunities of citizens of sovereign States, but we will not welcome nor recognize the credentials of their Representative-elect, if he be a polygamist in fact, and have more than one living wife. The people of Utah must keep their covenants with the American people and respect the laws and civilization of the age."

TAKE NOTICE

That we are now handling two different styles of the Holman Bible in Bourgeois type. One we sell to paid-up subscribers at $1.50, the other at $1.30. The $1.30 Bible is substantially the same we have hitherto sold at $1.50. The one we sell at $1.50 is a far better Bible than has ever been sold at such a price. It is a marvel of cheapness. See our offer.

THE LIFE OF MOODY.

The Rev. J. Wilbur Chapman, D. D., of New York, is engaged in writing the life of D. L. Moody for John C. Winston & Co., Philadelphia. Dr. Chapman was one of Mr Moody's most intimate friends, and was closely associated with him in his evangelistic work. He is Vice-President of the Bible Institute of Chicago, of which Mr Moody was President, and desires that this institution shall receive a share of the profits from the sale of this book. The publishers promise that the work shall be profusely illustrated. It will also contain an introduction by the Rev. F. B. Meyer, of Christ Church, London, and personal reminiscences from others who were intimately associated with Mr. Moody in his work.

RAILROADING PATENTS.

A single firm of Patent Lawyers, C. A Snow & Co., of Washington, D. C., have in the last year procured 1,630 patents for their clients, many of them for rejected inventions. C. A. Snow & Co. have been accused of railroading patents through the Patent Office, but they insist that this locomotion, is better than ox-carting them, for by the latter process the inventor often dies before he gets his patent.

Two Verdicts.

"After a fair and impartial trial you are judged guilty by this court, and you are sentenced to be hung by the neck until you are dead." The solemn tones of the judge, the despairing face of the prisoner, and the painful stillness of the court-room, makes it a scene of awful impress. Now turn to a brighter scene at the home circle. A mother radiant with joy over the recovery of a child snatched from the clutches of Malaria. An entire family rejoicing, and praising the merits of Dicks' Chillfuge, and giving their verdict that Chillfuge is without an equal for swiftness to cure.

PIANOS,

No industry has advanced more rapidly in the past ten years than the manufacture of pianos. Nor has a greater revolution taken place. Twenty-five years ago there were but few makes of any wide reputation and they made but few instruments. Then the Jesse French Piano & Organ Co., were comparatively unknown. Now they are the best known firm in America, with branches in many of the leading cities, and one of, if not the largest, manufacturers and dealers in the U S, as their output this year is expected to reach nearly 6,000 pianos. They manufacture the three well known popular pianos, namely, the celebrated Starr, Jesse French and Richmond, household names from ocean to ocean and the Lakes to the Gulf, favorably known for their artistic merit and great durability, being made and sold on honor under a full guarantee. The secret of their success lies in the fact that they have always made it a rule to furnish the best goods at lowest prices—and we feel assured that any of our readers contemplating purchasing a piano will do well before buying to drop them a line; a two-cent stamp may save you many dollars. Remember their address, Jesse French Piano & Organ Co., St. Louis, Mo.

In connection with the present agitation in Germany in favor of a largely increased navy, attention is drawn to the fact that within recent years that country has achieved a high place as a maritime power in the mere matter of commercial tonnage. It is only within the past ten years that Germany has amounted to anything at all in a maritime way, as previous to that time most of her steam merchant ships were built in England.

THE SOUL'S RELEASE.

What is death, that we so dread?
Just to pass beyond the veil,
See the visions eyes ne'er saw,
Till from form the spirit fled;
And the soul, immortal, soars
Far above this earthly sphere
To the home prepared above,
Where we need no sorrow fear.

Death but summons us to come
To our Father's home of love,
Just to close our eyes in sleep
While he bears our souls above;
There to join the heavenly throng
Of God's angels, bright and fair,
Safely anchored in his home,
Freed from earthly woe and care.

Only love and peace and joy,
Happiness no words express,
Will immortal spirits know
When death comes their souls to bless.
Only rightly let us live,
Then we need not future fear,
For the gracious Father's love
E'er will hold our spirits dear.

Oh! rejoicing, think of home,
Where our spirits all shall meet,
In the realms of perfect love,
Where our loved ones we shall greet,
And shall e'er roam soul with soul,
Happy in eternal life,
Where we'll find but perfect rest,
And be free from earthly strife.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From Our Regular Correspondent.)

The proper attitnde for the United ates Government to maintain to- rds the combatants in the Senth rican war has become a very live estion in Congress, and ont of it, , for that matter. The taking up The Hague treaty by the Senate added interest to the question. e language of that treaty is very plicit as to the right of the signa- y powers to mediate: "Powers, ngers to the dispnte, have the ht to offer good offices or media- n, even during the conrse of hos- ities. The exercise of this right never be regarded by one or the er of the parties in conflict as an friendly act." Those who believe t this government should stop the odshed by mediation—and they numerons and influential—claim t mediation, following the ratifi- ion of The Hague treaty by the nate, would be right and proper on part of this government, and that could not be construed to mean er than a love of peace. On the er hand, these who support the icy of nentrality proclaimed by President point to the declara- n made by the American signers The Hague treaty as an insnr- untable bar to mediation. The tion of that declaration affecting question follows: "Nothing in convention shall be so constrned to require the United States of erica to depart from its tradi- al policy of not intrnding npon, interfering with, or entangling it- in the political questions of pol- or interna administration of any ign state." This being presiden- year, there is, nnfortnnately, a dency in Congress to mix this stion up with American politics. Dr. J. Wilbur Chapman, of New k, preached at an afternoon meet- and an evening meeting of the istian Endeavor Union of the trict of Colnmbia, the first held in nt Vernon Place M. E. Chnrch, the other in the First Congrega- al Church. Althongh entirely erent, both sermons emphasized nsed for loving Christ, the con- ding words of one of them being, t us say, 'Jesus, I love thee,' and e love him, let ns love to please ."

The Andnbon Society, the object which is to prevent the killing of ds to supply the demands of mil- ry, held its annnal meeting in the t Baptist Church. Many of the minent men and women of Wash- ton are active members of this ety. Surgeon-General George M. nberg, U. S. A., was re-elected sident.

rs. Margaret Dye Ellis, snperin- dent of legislation of the National C. T. U., preached a temperance mon from the pnlpit of St. Paul's E. Chnrch this week, in which she : "We stand face to face with a ous problem, more complex and difficult of solntion than slavery, and this is the liqnor question. Glad- stone said it was the duty of a gov- ernment to make it easy to do right and hard to do wrong. We know that some day the government will decide whose right it is to rule, and then legislation will stamp ont the great evil. The greatest hindrance to the pntting away of the evil is the apathy of the Christian people. There has been, however, during the past twenty-five years a great ad- vance in temperance work, but there is mnch more to be done. The point of the woman's crusade is to close the saloons. As soon as the woman- hood of the nation lays its hand npon the saloons the law of the nation says, 'Step back; this is a protected industry.' One odd and delightful thing abont Washington Snnday- schools is the fact that they have a juvenile temperance organization. The importance of early temperance training and pledges can not be over- rated." Mrs. Ellis declared that 75 per cent. of the 90,000 men in our prisons are nnder thirty years of age, and that this horrible condition of affairs was due almost wholly to the bad influence of the saloons, and that while Congress might postpone and temporize, it would eventnally be compelled to legislate against the liqnor traffic.

How powerful the influence of the liquor interests are in Congress was shown by the formation of a "Beer Committee," composed of members of the House representing districts in which there are breweries. There was no law or authority for the for- mation of snch a committee. It was the voluntary act of these members, who openly stated that the purpose of the "Beer Committee" was to keep a watch on legislation and head off anything inimical to the brewers. Certainly the temperance constitn- ents of those members wonld be jus- tifiable in taking the field to work against the return of members of the "Beer Committee" to the next Con- gress. In fact, it is only by some such tactics that congressmen can be made to nnderstand that they owe something to those of their constitn- ents who do not run breweries or saloons.

Dr. Thomas Chalmers Easton preached his sixth anniversary ser- mon at the Eastern Presbyterian Chnrch this week, taking for his theme, "Attaining Life's Highest Ideal," with his text from Phil. iii, 13, 14. The condition of this church has steadily improved nnder Dr. Eas- ton's ministry, bnt it still carries a debt of $34,000, which is being slow- ly redneed.

EVANGELISTIC WORK IN JAPAN.

BY WALTER R. LAMBUTH.

A conference of missionaries was held in the city of Osaka on the twelfth instant for devotional exer- cises and the discussion of a paper. Rev. T. H. Haden, of our mission, conducted the former, which occnp- pied the morning hours, while Rev. T. C. Winn, of the Presbyterian Church, read the paper on "Evangel- istic Work in Japan." It is a snbject of intense interest at this junctnre, when the whole empire has been thrown wide open, and it was a priv- ilege to hear its discussion in the presence of forty of the most experi- enced workers on this field. The hindrances were first considered as follows: The diminntion of street chapel congregations, the small at- tendance npon the regular church services in proportion to the mem- bership, the spirit of nationalism, and a revival of Buddhism. The latter may, in a certain sense, be said to have been disestablished by the gov- ernment. The priests have been de- prived of their long-standing reve- nnes from burial and other public ceremonies, and have been forced to extraordinary effort to sustain their ecclesiastical system. Mendicant priests have been sent out; propa- gandists commissioned, schools es- tablished, and systematic efforts made to oppose Christianity, which they hold responsible for the new order of things. So alert and deter- mined are they in their resistance that whole towns have been pledged to keep Christians ont, landlords re- fuse to rent for any purpose, and the young people are threatened by the village elders in case of sympathy with or attendance upon the services of the despised sect. In fact, in such localities it amounts to a boycott of the most stringent sort.

The spirit of nationalism has al- ways been fostered, but since the war with China it has become intensified. At one time it found expression in an organized effort to revive the ancient reverence for the emperor—a rever- ence which does not fall short of worship among the lower classes. Hand in hand with the latest works on science, one finds the myths and fables of Japanese cosmogony em- balmed in school histories. Galvan- ized into life, these old theories cen- ter in the Mikado as the direct de- scendant of the gods. Out of such claims grow forms of paternalism and sumptuary laws which tend to keep up class distinctions. How nat- ural the concomitant thought that the genius of the Japanese is divine, and should have the right of way!

Added to this spirit of nationalism, which has been utilized by both Buddhists and politicians to further their schemes, have been the tides of mammonism and rationalism—the one growing out of rapidly develop- ing commercial interests, and the other the sequence of an early inocu- lation of their scholastic literature with a certain class of German thought. But tides must ebb as well as flow, and for the present both cur- rents have probably spent their force. The encouragements presented by the author of the paper were:

1. The opening of Japan on the eighteenth of July to free missionary residence. By the strict interpreta- tion of the old treaty foreigners could not travel in the interior, ex cept for health or scientific observa- tion, and residence was impossible unless under contract to teach for a Japanese employer. The restrictions were more severe than in either China or Korea.

2. The friendly attitude of the government. The missionary is free to build or rent, church property is exempt from taxation, and the com- mon people are at liberty, so far as official jurisdiction is concerned, to seek religious instruction at the hands of the missionaries.

3. Less real devotion to heathen religions than formerly, as evidenced by a marked falling off in attendance npon popular shrines. In the face of an apparent revival of Buddhism there is a real wane of heathenism. Buildings on temple grounds are often found for rent, and not a few of the most important temples even are involved in debt.

4. The conviction of the thought ful men of the country is that the old religions can no longer help Japan. In other words, the wine of new Japan can not be held in the bottles of her old religious faiths. One of the ablest writers has affirmed that the day of Buddhism has passed; there is no hope of its permanent revival, nor of its ability to render further aid.

5. Urgent requests from native Christians to the missionaries to go and live and labor in the interior towns—a recognition of the value of their services and the helpfulness of their presence. This has not always been the case.

6. Increased sale for the Scriptures. Rev. Mr. Snyder has sold several hundred copies of the Gospels and New Testament in a single day on the trains, the passengers buying and reading with avidity. His success has stimulated the circulation of the Scriptures in other quarters.

The New Testament in former years had a wide circulation, and the leaven of the gospel has permeated the mass far beyond our power to measure it. It is my conviction that hundreds, even thousands, in the em pire are intellectually convinced, but have not the courage of their convic tions. The day will come when, under the revival influence of the Spirit of God upon the churches, the now silent adherents will declare themselves. I am thankful to say that even in the humblest walks of life there are men at the present time who constantly feed upon the Word and fearlessly avow their faith in Christ. A jinrikisha coolie was pull- ing two Buddhist priests along a country road. Their conversation turned upon the beautiful parable of the sower, and they wondered where the story came from. The coolie turned himself about in the shafts, and said: "I am a Christian. You will find that story in the fourth chapter of the Gospel of Mark."

Dr. J. D. Davis, the veteran mis- sionary, who was for so many years associated with Joseph Neesima, and who has had so sore an experience in connection with the Doshisha trou- bles, closed his remarks on this occa- sion by most emphatically affirming: "There are many reasons for hope- fulness. I thank God and take cour- age." He pointed out the fact that the tides of mammonism, rational- ism and nationalism were on the wane; that, beset as they have been on every hand, fewer native preach- ers had fallen away than one might have supposed, and that the leaders of the nation, dissatisfied with their policy, are pondering the question of morals in education.

How refreshing, in the midst of the readjustments going on in this em- pire—and not all of them of the most reassuring sort—to meet with a body of men and women so full of hope! It is the characteristic of the mission- ary on every field. He has a right to be hopeful. His commission is from the Son of God; he is under the leadership of the Holy Spirit, and goes up to the battle with the con- sciousness that ultimate victory is with the arm of the Almighty. In seeking for the hiding place of power the foreign missionary has learned the force of those awe-inspiring words, "Be still, and know that I am God."

Kobe, Japan, Dec. 18, 1899.

MISSOURI LETTER.

BY REV. M. B. CHAPMAN, D. D.

Thus far we have had an ideal Winter in Missouri, and I doubt if you have had any more pleasant weather in the South than this climate has been blessed with. The contrast has been very great between this and last Winter, and so far we have had very little ice. The last four days have been like Spring, and it must have been such a Winter as this when Artemus Ward says he took a specimen of Missouri weather to the Paris Exposition and it took the premium.

Kansas City is a typical Western city, with a population of about 250,000, including Kansas City, Kan- sas, and is rapidly growing in population and in business. Among the cities of the United States, it ranks tenth in commercial interests, second in the live stock and packing business, and is the third largest railroad center in this country. It has all the features of a great metropolis, and undoubtedly has a magnificent future before it.

The pastors of the two leading churches of Southern Methodism in this city are both Louisianians, and I am sure that you will be glad to learn of the fine work that Dr. Werlein is doing at Central Church. It is a down-town church, in a thickly settled portion of the city, and has a large and growing mem- bership. They greatly need a new church, and when the old Walnut Street Church property, which is very valuable, is sold, they will erect a large and handsome building. Troost Avenue Church is in the best residence section of the city, and has a very promising outlook. It is the handsomest building owned by our church in Kansas City, and was built under the pastorate of Dr. Tigert in 1892. We have seven other churches, two of them missions, with a total membership of about 2400. Our people are, perhaps, not as aggressive as they should be, but we have a fine field and are hopeful for the future.

The St. Louis and Kansas Confer- ences of the M. E. Church are to meet in the two Kansas Cities on the twenty-first of March, and on Sunday a great joint mass meeting in the interests of the Twentieth Century Movement is to be held in Conven- tion Hall in this city, an immense auditorium which will seat about 12,000 people. The Southern Meth odist Churches have been asked to meet with them, and a joint commit- tee has been appointed to arrange for the meeting. Bishop Galloway, Dr. Buckley, and other great speak ers are to deliver addresses, and it is hoped that it will not only stir up our own people, but bring Methodism prominently before the public in this city.

One of the most important and interesting features of our church in Kansas City is the Scarritt Bible and Training-school, which I sometimes think is not made sufficiently prom- inent in our connectional work. It is owned and controlled by the Woman's Board of Foreign Missions of our church, and was started eight years ago, the plan having been suggested by Miss Belle H. Bennett, of Kentucky. It has been successful from the beginning, one hundred and ninety students having been enrolled, forty-four of whom have received diplomas. This year, thirty-one have been enrolled in the Bible depart ment, and thirteen as nurses—the largest enrollment the school has ever had. Miss M. L. Gibson has been the efficient and successful principal from the beginning. While the school has special reference to the training of missionaries of the M. E. Church, South, for the foreign field, it is open to missionary and Bible students, Sunday-school teach- ers, students who seek to be trained as nurses, and home missionary workers of all evangelical denomina- tions.

The building is admirably located in the northeastern portion of the city, in what is known as the Melrose division, and is a beautiful structure one hundred and fifty-two feet in length, with a depth of one hundred and four feet, built of brick, with trimmings of Lake Superior stone. The interior arrangements and fur- nishings could not be excelled, and the parlors, library, museum, and memorial chapel are all beautiful rooms. The hospital, which occupies the west wing of the third floor, is an important feature of the institution. It has accommodations for twenty- five patients, and all the wards and rooms are generally full.

The school has an endowment of $80,000, but this is wholly inadequate to meet the demands upon it. There should be a greater number of free scholarships and a large Students' Loan Fund, as many young women who desire to enter the school can not do so because they are unable to pay the board which is necessary to meet the current expenses. If some of our men of large means could only appreciate the great work which this school is doing, and what it might accomplish with a larger endowment, they would invest their money in this enterprise which would yield them large spiritual dividends.

I was greatly pained to hear of the death of Dr. C. G. Andrews, whom I have known from my boyhood, and who had a warm place in my heart. As the years go on, how many of our friends pass away, and while they make heaven brighter, the world grows more lonely.

OUR KENTUCKY LETTER.

BY REV. GEO. NEEDHAM.

I have read your paper for years with interest. Your Louisiana Meth- odism is of a sturdy type. How could it well be otherwise when that magnificent old Roman, Bishop Keener, has made his home among you? And the ADVOCATE you so ably edit has had a wonderful run of able editors. Your paper is keeping well up, and I may say the press of the church are keeping up finely, and our general church literature has genuine life, vivacity and timeliness about it. And the Southern Method- ist pulpit is not degenerating. Fewer stars, but a higher average. We have certainly a vast body of useful lights. Doubtless our average of scholarship is also rising. Let us hope the Twentieth Century Educa- tional Movement will make for still further advancement, and we have every reason to believe it will.

There are some things we are all thinking about, among them in the march of membership. Many reasons have been assigned. It is not confined to our church. If it were, we would look for local and denominational causes alone; but it may be said to be characteristic of Christendom, except mission fields. Something has diminished the influx of members. There are thousands reported as saved through one or an- other instrumentality, but such an alarmingly large proportion never report for membership in any of the Christian churches. Let us not care- lessly blame this or that. Doubtless there are many causes, and they should be studied and removed. No partisan blindness should hinder careful investigation, nor such cor- rections as are needed. It may be some old methods have worn out, and that some new ones are not working well. Whatever is in the way ought to go.

If we consider all the causes in our own church, doubtless something might be set down to the holiness specialists, who require such high tension, and turn many away from the church by their overdrawn char- acterization of its low state, and their claim that the church persecutes ho- liness. It appears to be a fact that a smaller per cent. of the converts at their revivals appear for membership than from average revivals. Some, of course, are attracted to member- ship by this special view.

As to general causes affecting all churches, there is abroad in the land an anti-church feeling, and in the church itself some slackening of church devotion. A toning up of the church in doctrine and life, and beau- tiful patience in bearing opposition, and the development of spiritual tact and sympathy in dealing with these new phases, is needed. Infidelity of the pronounced blatant type I can hardly think is growing, but possibly in many quarters an insidious ration- alism is. The church must look well to all these, and press on men the necessity of salvation, and on saved men and women the necessity of identifying themselves with the peo- ple of God in trying to keep up the church he has instituted in the world. This is needful also to maintain their own standing.

Bradfordsville, Ky.

The income of our Missionary So- ciety of the M. E. Church last year, including what was paid on the debt, was the largest of any year of its history. The total amount was something over $1,300,000. Over $1,200,000 was appropriated for the support of missions in all parts of the world thus far occupied by the church.—Nashville Advocate.

I DO NOT ASK.

I do not ask, O Lord, that life may be
A pleasant road;
I do not ask that thou wouldst take from me
Aught of its load;
I do not ask that flowers should always spring
Beneath my feet;
I know too well the poison and the sting
Of things too sweet.
For one thing only, Lord, dear Lord, I plead:
Lead me aright—
Though strength should falter and though heart should bleed—
Through peace to light.

THE RELATIONSHIP OF THE BEAUTIFUL AND THE USEFUL.

That utility is not the only thing to be considered in this life may be inferred from the fact that God, as a rule, combines the beautiful with the useful. As it is inadmissible to suppose that God ever made anything without a use, so it is not possible for us to escape the conclusion forced upon us by the Scripture statement, "He hath made everything beautiful in its time."

We admire the sky and the vegetation, but do we ever think why one should be make to appear blue and the other green? Surround yourselves with orange colored objects, or live in a violet-colored light, and, perhaps, you will begin to understand why the beautiful middle tints of the spectrum were selected by the Creator for the eyes of man to continually behold.

We love the sunlight in Winter and the shade in Summer. Have we stopped to consider that where these conditions are most desirable, most of the trees are such as cast their beautiful leaves in Winter, so that the sunlight may gladden the earth, and present a magnificent foliage in Summer, that the grateful shadows may appear?

We make use of bread containing the wheat that grew in a region where even the hardy nature of the cereal would not prevent it from succumbing to the intense cold when the tender blades are beginning to grow. Do we often remember that the beautiful snow becomes a most useful and efficient protection for it?

We enjoy the delightful breeze that cools us in Summer, or makes subtle music in the tree-tops. Does it occur to us that these effects are only incidental to the grand purpose of keeping the atmosphere pure by a constant circulation?

We listen to the gentle murmur of the rill, or to the roar of the cataract or ocean; we hear and see and feel a thousand similar things. Do we recognize the fact that all this is nothing more than a touch of beauty added to the useful for the satisfaction of the Creator and for our edification?

But that utility is not the only thing is indicated by the fact that God has made things beautiful solely for the sake of beauty.

The balancing of the clouds, the sunrise and sunset, the rainbow, the aurora, compel us to pay tribute to the Great Artist's ideas of beauty. The myriad forms of loveliness in the sea and upon the land, animate and inanimate, proclaim God's ideals to one who will use his eyes. The sub bass of the thunder, or its echo upon the shores of the sea; the trumpet voice of the tornado, or the soughing of the zephyr; the melodious symphonies of the birds, or the less pretentious tones of the insect musicians—these, and many other sounds not heard by our imperfect ears, all bear witness to the fact that the thoughts of God are beautiful.

God pity the man who gets, and desires to get, out of this life only that which is strictly useful, or can be applied to the accomplishment of some utilitarian purpose! Of such a breed come those who quarrel with their neighbor, because he insists that the old log school-house is out of date; because he takes his children from the field and sends them to the best school he can find, nine or ten months in the year; because he introduces a piano, or some other musical instrument, into his home, and encourages his daughter or son to cultivate the fine arts; because he dresses neatly, and has everything about his home clean and tidy; because he thinks the temple of his God should be the best-looking and best-furnished edifice in the community. And such are they who would blame the King of Glory with extravagance for having the streets of the beautiful city paved with gold, and so broad; for adorning the gates with pearl and building the walls of jasper; and would quarrel with him for not using a paving material that will allow the formation of ruts in which their spiritual "wonderful one hoss shay" might run through all eternity.

Esthetic tastes are natural and God like. The propensity for ornamentation common to all races indicates this. The ignorant savage, with his tattoo marks, his dabs of paint, or his fantastic clothing, is but putting into crude expression what his civilized brother exhibits in a more refined manner. The shape, setting and characteristics of his tepee, or hut, his canoe, his weapons, his utensils, are but the embodiment of the same idea that gives shape and character to the proudest works of art and architecture (and to the products of the highest modern art).

Why should God so plainly show to us that the beautiful is desirable, and why should he so emphatically encourage us to cultivate it? We hold that it makes men better by refining their sensibilities. A poet has said:

"Beauty was lent to nature as a type
Of heaven's unspeakable and holy joy,
Where all perfection makes the sum of bliss."

Every glimpse of heaven we can get shows that it is a beautiful place. We read of a beautiful city in which dwells the King in his beauty, who will one day give beautiful crowns to those who, under the preaching of them that stand with beautiful feet upon the mountain proclaiming the glad tidings of peace, forsake their ugly sins and worship him in the beauty of holiness. Everything on earth typifies this beauty, and everything that stimulates the love for the beautiful in man lifts him nearer that heaven which is the perfection of all beauty. The love of the beautiful brings us innumerable benefits which, although in many instances intangible and indefinable, exert a marked influence on our life.

We admire the intellectual beauty of a Shakespeare, a Bacon, an Emerson, and many others. We venerate the moral beauty of a Joseph, a Daniel, a Paul, and numerous heroes of ancient and modern times. We adore the spiritual beauty of all good men and women that have been a blessing to this world. The influence of these characters will be felt indeed as long as the world stands, and God would have it so.

By a well-determined principle man takes on the qualities of that which most engages his attention. "As he thinketh in his heart, so is he," says the Book, and a profounder truth was never uttered. The admiration of physical, intellectual, moral or spiritual beauty under proper conditions, leads to this sort of beauty in the one who admires.

Who of us that has studied a beautiful statue of a Venus or an Apollo, or one of the paintings of the Madonna, but wishes to be physically beautiful! Who that has analyzed the mental features of a Gladstone but would like to be intellectually beautiful! Who that has comprehended the worth of an Elijah or a Paul, or a Hobson's hand of heroes, or of any ancient or modern performer of a golden deed (celebrities who have stood at their post in desperate dangers, or rescued a fellow-creature at the cost of their life), but longs for a time when, by some similar exploit, he may establish a right to be considered morally beautiful! Who that has interpreted the thoughts of a Thomas a Kempis, or of any other spiritually beautiful soul from St. John down to the pious mother who is the embodiment of all beauty, but fervently desires the same kind of beauty! And these longings and aspirations, if genuine, bear fruit in our character in the shape of added graces and excellences, until we come to love the beauties of holiness, and receive in ourselves an answer to the promise, "He will beautify the meek with salvation."

For these reasons we conclude that it is right and our duty to render everything about us beautiful. We should strive to make ourselves and our children as attractive looking as possible. Not through the mistaken means of elaborate dress and ornament, for

".....Loveliness
Needs not the foreign aid of ornament,
But is, when unadorned, adorned the most."

Nice clothing and tasteful ornaments are to be desired, but they must not be depended on, however, to take the place of the natural elegance and grace that are developed in quite a different way.

Let us give our children every opportunity to become intellectually beautiful by supplying them with the best school facilities, by placing in their hands good books and periodicals, by creating about them an atmosphere of refined moral and mental influences. Let us cultivate moral beauty in them by teaching them to be heroic, even in the little things of life. Above all, let us early teach them the beauty of a religious life, emphasizing the fact that "if there be any virtue, and if there be any praise," it can be found by continually thinking upon "things that are honest, pure, lovely, and of good report."

It is right also for us to beautify our homes, since they are the most heavenly places on earth, or, at least, they should be. If we rear our children in a hovel when it is in our power to give them something better, we are criminals in the sight of God, despoilers of our children's happiness, and enemies to society. Encourage the children to make home beautiful. Simple decoration, a piece of fancy work, a glass of flowers, will make a vast change in the appearance of any room, and will proclaim the fact that good taste and a god-like love for the beautiful abide in the house. Let us then borrow the beautiful devices God has placed within our reach for this very purpose.

Nor should we rest satisfied until the temples of our God are the best edifices in the community. They should be the handsomest, the best-furnished, and best-kept buildings in existence. Instead of being just "any sort of a house," the haunt of spiders and dirt-dauhers, and a receptacle for dust and torn paper and trash, the sanctuary should be a model of architectural skill, a place fit for the indwelling of the Holy Spirit, where nothing unclean or unworthy is permitted to enter, unless it be a sinner seeking salvation. We should be forever disgraced if we should receive an earthly friend in an untidy home; yet we think nothing of inviting the Holy Guest to a place where we should blush to call our acquaintances, if we thought they would consider us responsible for the state of affairs.

THE PLANNING PASTOR AND THE CHURCH.

The first quarter of the year is rapidly passing away. Upon the manner in which the pastor's work is planned and initiated depends, to a large degree, his final and complete success. These months are in the foundation of the superstructure until it passes the scrutiny of the Great Architect. In the highest and truest sense this is foundation-time. The intelligent pastor who lays broad and deep the solid masonry of well-studied plans, good pastoral work, systematic financiering, and devout preaching, ought to succeed in any field. And is it too much to say emphatically that he ought to fail, if these conditions are not faithfully met, and as industriously performed?

I.—THE TRUE PASTOR WILL PREPARE WELL-STUDIED PLANS.

Imagine success for the general who has no plans, and who possesses no reserve resources, and you have the military impossibility pictured in some Arabian Nights' romance, but not at all acceptable to the lover of truth or the wise tactician! Can a pastor rely upon inspiration and impulse alone when the God-given powers of mind and heart are his to use—talents, pounds (some five, more one, and many two)—to be returned to the Lord of the vineyard with usury? Is it a fact that in our ministry there are men who think that to be led by the Spirit means a false fatalism, which depends entirely upon the Lord, and waits until the enemy storm the poorly intrenched camps, and then hope for victory? God truly, in matters of so great importance, "helps them who help themselves." "Woe to them that are at ease in Zion." Zion needs at every point a spiritual "Stonewall" Jackson to lead his hosts to victory. The famous Confederate general always planned his attacks so that, in any event, he would occupy the best positions before the enemy could seize and hold points of such tremendous advantage. To meet unbelief and infidelity, it requires such foresight and such plans as will give the pastor the position which commands the citadel of the human heart, and all the trenches of the enemy. Peter had this position on the day of Pentecost, and while the sermon was inspired by the Holy Ghost, the knowledge of the particular humanity with which his sermon on that memorable day had to deal was the study of years and the fruit of a life experience. Three thousand of his fellow-creatures fell before the thrusts of the gospel at their very weakest points—struck down by a perfect knowledge of human nature, with spirit power. This is essential to success. We should by all tokens reach the human heart, and must plan in the most effectual way to take it for our Christ, and so take it as to have for him a willing captive and a devoted slave. Jesus attacked the very heart of Saul on the Damascus road, and conquered him into Paul, the rejoicing bond-slave. Then God does not count it a small thing to use the highest intelligence and most thorough knowledge in the furtherance of his kingdom.

Now, it is clear that what we must first plan to do is to use the hearts of our people to win other hearts under the roof of the church while the gospel is being proclaimed. Plan to get the ear of all the people in your field. To do this, and thus open the way most certainly and effectually, it is necessary to visit every member of the church, taking a personal interest in the children, and, above all things, to "make full proof of the ministry" without the seeming professionalism, which is often objectionable. Most of the trophies won for our Lord in the home field must be allured, instructed, captured in the homes of the "people called Methodists," and not by visionary schemes to evangelize Romanists, nor by industrious proselyting of other Protestants. But there is a large population of non church going people in almost every town and in many rural communities, which certainly answers to our Lord's description, "Lift up your eyes and look on the fields, for they are white already to the harvest." In this large field of human need we find our victories of faith and love, our strongest trials and grandest struggles, our widest possibilities and most enduring success. Plan, then, to win the submerged tenths for your Master. Do not satisfy yourself by a personal visitation, but send the godly women of the church to bring them into Sunday-school and preaching service. To utilize the whole working force of the church in any one direction is not only impossible, but unwise; to use the whole force of the church in battalions here and there in the field of conflict is practicable and prudent. Have your wisest battalion sent after the lost; your sweetest, tenderest voices to speak to human sorrow; your most sympathetic to visit the sick.

Secure co-operation as the second feature of your planning. A Methodist pastor must secure this if he hopes for the largest success. Our changing ministry must not wait for twelve months to pass away ere this is secured. Without doubt, the Official Board should be the spiritual staff of a true pastor. An intelligent steward of the church said to me a short time since, "I want to do all that my church requires of me as one of her official body." That is loyalty to duty and to God. The pastor feels that he can rely upon that man for any important duty, and is assured that all of his Financial Board are men of God, and hopes to have their fullest co-operation in every good word and work. The co-operation of the whole church can most often be secured through a thoroughly representative Board of Stewards.

Dr. J. O. Peck spent a whole night in prayer with his Official Board preparatory to a revival of religion. This apostolic co-operation of his spiritual staff presaged the great harvest of souls which these harvesters gathered in the spiritual awakening that followed. The membership of any church will catch the spirit which animates the leaders of the body ecclesiastic, and they will co-operate with a wise and enthusiastic pastor. We think we know the spirit of our people, and if only panoplied with the power of the Holy Ghost, and led by true commanders, we need not fear for the safety of the ark of God.

II.—THE TRUE PASTOR WILL USE ONLY PLANS INDORSED BY THE HOLY GHOST.

"It seemed good unto the Holy Ghost, and to us, to lay upon you no greater burden than these necessary things," is the way that Luke describes the apostolic method of planning for the work and duties of the church. Possibly no other crisis of our ministerial experience demands so clearly the divine guidance as the planning for a revival, and we fear that the presence of the Holy Ghost is not always earnestly sought until we are face to face with the enemy drawn up in battle array. Changing front in the face of an ever-watchful foe is hazardous, and most often disastrous. Let us ask God to inspire us with an appreciation of the "tide in the affairs of men which, if taken at the flood, leads on to fortune." Then will spiritual wealth be laid at our feet, and then will souls come like doves flocking home to their windows!

If we had the spiritual sense to apprehend opportunities, we would be less empty-handed when we bring our sheaves with us, and would not feel so keenly even now the loss of many precious souls, whom we could have led to Jesus. Paul said something to Timothy about being "instant in season, out of season"—the Spirit's message to every pastor to plan under the guidance of the Holy Ghost to capture souls, when it would seem to a worldly Christian very inopportune and very unwise.

Many of the schemes now in vogue to create excitement of a nervous sort, and to catch the popular ear, are positively sacrilegious. John Wesley needed nothing in his days of evangelizing and organization but the Word, the Spirit, the faithful staff of those who believed, and the witnesses of Christ's saving power.

THE INFIDEL.

The infidel may be for himself and to himself a "free-thinker," but it seems to us that he should not be allowed the right to secretly or publicly destroy the belief of others. That the infidel ought to be silenced from his pernicious utterances we believe to be a matter of expediency—yea, of necessity. There would be no infraction of moral or civil law in enforcing such silence. He should be regarded as Knox characterized him—a public enemy, and as such rigorously dealt with as his blasphemy deserves.

There is scarcely a criminal under indictment, or undergoing just punishment, whose crime, from a moral point of view, is not inferior to the fearful injury wrought by the infidel under the guise of our boasted freedom of speech and extreme religious tolerance.

Without being characterized intolerant fanatics, we might justly commend the Eastern judge, who, while court was in session, charged the grand jury to indict a certain infidel, calling him by name, if he lectured in the city. He was the judge needed, and had the courage of the right—since impious blasphemers ought to be amenable to the laws.

Has not the infidel been tolerated only through an immeasurable breach of kindly indulgence? What criminal is there but whose gaols are limited, proscribed, and subject to just penalty? Yet the infidel enters your homes, if not directly, indirectly, and attempts to rob you of your Bible, its holy teachings, prophecy, inspiration, revelation—the foundation of your home altars, the rock of your faith, your stay against life's trials and burdens, the star of hope that guides you and points to the blessed immortality of the future, and sends you adrift upon the great restless, surging ocean of time, without "helm or rudder" to save!

What do you think of the man who would go into your church, steal your Bible, desecrated its holy altars, and then burn it down? You would bring him before your courts, its outraged laws, and punish him with the extreme penalty of the law. But where in all the wide range of human tolerance is there any plea for a man who goes into the temple of the soul—the immortal part of man—and desecrates the figures that are so veined there, which are indeed the chiseled work of a lifetime of faith, service, and consecration?

Would infidels, with their boasted culture, walk into any of the world's famous statue halls, or galleries of art, and destroy the works of genius treasured there? No; their own sense of wrong, their appreciation of the products of toil and inspiration, would deter them from such unholy desecration and demolition. And yet they walk into God's hall of statues—the world full of human hearts and souls—and with the hammer of ridicule and sophistry they endeavor to break and destroy all the splendid statues wrought from the marble of life by the hand and chisel of Christianity. And yet their boasted refinement, their high mental culture (they have no soul culture, mind you) stay not their hands or tongues or pens from impious deeds.

The anarchist is hushed and stayed by the laws from his utterances because they are destructive to good government; yet these men, who are the enemies of all that is high and holy, are allowed to go on in their unholy work. Are they not more than public enemies?

How little the world, in its rush and hurry after greed and gold, considers the monstrous injury the infidel inflicts upon the youth of the land in attempting to destroy all the most valuable and sacred lessons of life—the lessons taught and emphasized at the most sacred of all human altars—the mother's knee.

Argument, logic, and unquestioned facts in theology, do not disturb or silence the man who does not believe in God, and who has no moral basis for thought. The iron hand of outraged law is perhaps the only thing that could effectually silence such a scoffer and enemy of mankind.

Though the heathen "feel after God, if haply they might find him," it remains for the infidel to reject all that has ever been discovered that would genuinely satisfy the longings of the soul.

Where can infidels go for soul nourishment? High mental culture does not fill the void. Some of the brightest geniuses of the world have dropped out of life like a lost Pleiad from the heaven, to waste their brilliant powers in the utter darkness that engulfed them. They must, in large degree, become bestial in their instincts. They can not think or feel as do other men when they prostitute their intellects to base and ignoble usages. Their restless souls fail to find solace and rest, and must, as some black vulture of the night, prey upon questionable food. Yea, they drift on and on till the Holy Ghost withdraws his saving influence, and then there comes—Nemesis. Like Belshazzar, they must see the handwriting upon the wall, a long way off, before the day of their dramatic passing.

When the infidel has finished his intellectual temple which he has wrought and dedicated to evil; when his impious blasphemy, perpetrated often for notoriety and money, has been hushed; when he has ceased pleasing the vicious and shocking the pure, then at last he hears the deep and awful thunders of God's wrath, and can not escape from the burning, overwhelming stings of a guilty conscience.

Were it not that God's wrath is always tempered with mercy, he would not allow these scoffers at religion and the destroyers of hope to live. What, then, shall we do with them? Until the Christian public sees fit to restrain them by legal enactment, simply let Nemesis, cruel, unrelenting, terrible, gradually do her work; let her scourge and lash them as with a scorpion's tail till she drive them as she did Hume (the greatest of them all)—if tradition be true—to an appeal for help that shook the foundation of his subtle sophistry and the superstructure of his philosophy.

Hear that poor unfortunate as the wrongs of man and God confront and appall him; hear the wail of a passing soul, "O God—if there is a God—have mercy upon my soul—if there is a soul."

Resolutions by the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society of the Methodist Church, Crowley, La., in memory of Mrs. Laura Chevis Taylor, who departed this life Nov. 1, 1899:

Whereas, Almighty God, in his wisdom and goodness, has permitted the death of our loved friend and co-laborer, Mrs. Laura Chevie Taylor; therefore, be it

Resolved, That we deeply deplore her removal from our midst. We humbly bow in submission to the divine will, realizing that our loss is her eternal gain.

Resolved, That we hereby express our appreciation of her faithful labors, and of her zealous Christian character, praying that her spirit may yet animate our little band.

Resolved, That we extend our heartfelt sympathy to those whom she loved best, and commend them to the care of the all-wise Father, in whose service her life was spent.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the New Orleans Christian Advocate and to the Crowley papers for publication.

NOTICE.

To the Members of the Home Mission Society, Mississippi Conference:

The Annual Conference of the Woman's Home Mission Society, Mississippi Conference, will meet in Brandon, Miss., Thursday evening, March 8, 1900. I urge each auxiliary to send a delegate, if possible. Brandon is central and easy of access, so I shall expect a full attendance of delegates and officers.

Do not fail to observe our Twentieth Century Rally Day, which is the sixth of February. If better results can be obtained on the Sabbath, observe either the fourth or eleventh of February, instead of the sixth. On Rally Day every member of each auxiliary should pledge and, if possible, pay $1. This is the least that is expected. The name of every auxiliary that contributes one dollar for each member will be printed in the Honor Roll of Our Homes. Try to secure large gifts from individuals, but above all, secure one dollar from each member. This is not an assessment, nor a pledge, or any customary collection, but a thank-offering. This money is to endow, equip, or build the educational institutions of our society. Key West and Freedsbury are now the most needy.

Many of the auxiliaries failed to observe the Week of Prayer at the time appointed. As it is of the utmost importance that this should not be neglected, I suggest that the week preceding or following Rally Day be observed as the Week of Prayer, using the programme which will be found in October number of Our Homes. How many auxiliaries will send at least two new subscribers to Our Homes as one result of the Week of Prayer, and also collect $2 50 on the amount pledged to the scholarship fund?

Several more applications for aid from needy parsonages have been received, which we will fail to reach unless treasurers of auxiliaries are prompt in collecting all dues for the year. Let each one endeavor to faithfully do her part.

Pray for God's blessing upon the annual meeting.

FROM THE WORK.

CARROLLTON AND M'ANERNEY.

First Quarterly Conference was held Jan. 20, and Bro. Mitchell magnified his office. The day was rainy, but the stewards reported a good collection for the support of the ministry, whole assessment for foreign missions. Domestic missions and Bishops' Fund paid in full. Also, $60 for Cuban work, and $170 for J. S. Oakley Home. With such a leader as J. R. Bingham, and such lieutenants as A. H. George, W. P. Hughes, T. H. Bingham, Dr. Hightower and W. D. Felts, of McAnerny, this charge can not but succeed. The good things are still coming to the parsonage in great abundance.

LETTER FROM DRY CREEK CIRCUIT.

Upon our return from Conference we were very cordially received by the good people of the Dry Creek circuit. This is our second year here, and we hope to make it the most successful of the two years. Many thanks to our friends for their expression of kindness and appreciation of us. As they have ministered to us in temporal things, we shall try to minister to them in spiritual things. My first Quarterly Conference will embrace the fourth Sabbath in March at Dry Creek. We hope to have a gracious season at that time. Bro. J. D. Harper, our presiding elder, is expected to be with us, and he will no doubt give us the gospel in power, as he usually does. Bro. Harper has many friends on this circuit. He was presiding elder here twenty years ago, and the people often speak of the strong appeals that he made at the old Sugar Creek Camp Ground. May God bless Bro. Harper and all the preachers and people of this, the Alexandria district!

I united in matrimony, on the eighteenth of January, Mr. J. V. Sirman, of Dido, La., and Miss Katie Gibson, of Grant, La.

H. L. HUGHES, P. C.

LETTER FROM BRO. VANDENBURG.

I reached my appointment for this year a few days after adjournment of Conference, and have made one round. I found many good people within the bounds of this circuit, and quite a number of local preachers, as true and loyal as any pastor could wish to be associated with. They are ever ready to co-operate with the preacher in charge in any movement to advance the cause of the Master.

The people have received us kindly and are manifesting their loyalty to Methodism and the cause of Christianity in a very substantial way by providing for the temporal needs of the preacher and his family. In addition to this, the ladies of Vancleave and vicinity have raised some money since we reached here, and, adding this to some funds already on hand, they are trying to make us comfortable in the way of furnishing the preacher's home.

We found the parsonage in an unfinished condition, not ready for occupancy, but a few of the brethren met and ordered brick and other necessary material to build a chimney to the parsonage, etc. We expect it to be ready for us to move into before many days pass by.

The Lord granting your scribe health and strength and the guidance of his Holy Spirit, we hope to be able to strengthen the cause of Methodism and Christianity in this part of his vineyard.

SALLIS CHARGE.

We have begun our work on Sallis charge and are expecting a great revival in our midst. I have met many young men and ladies whom I once had the pleasure of instructing in the school-room, and most of them are members of the church and on their way to heaven. I hope they will all be saved from sin ere this year shall close. Our first Quarterly Conference was held Dec. 30, '99. Bro. T. W. Dye was with us, and preached an excellent sermon and presided to the satisfaction of all. He is an excellent man socially, religionsly, and intellectually. It was a blessing to have him in our home. On account of bad weather our churches were not well represented and finances were short.

The good people of Sallis continue to give tokens of appreciation. Had a real pounding on the twenty-sixth that made the children leap for joy.

The pastor meets with many things that causes his heart to rejoice, but his wife and little ones at home need encouragement, and the good people of Sallie are mindful of them in a substantial way, and cause them to feel that they are not forgotten.

May the Lord bless the people who are so thoughtful of the itinerant's wife and little ones! We are praying and expecting a revival throughout the charge. We trust while the good people are giving the things necessary to sustain our bodies, that we may repay them in spiritual blessings.

LETTER FROM BURGUNDY STREET CHURCH, NEW ORLEANS.

When but a boy in Alabama I heard of some place they called "New Orleans," I little thought that from helping the cattle buyers drive their stock to Columbus, Miss., to be shipped to this unknown land, where boys had all the sugar they could eat, and where "sugar-house" molasses was as plentiful as the pure water that flowed from the Alabama springs, and of oranges and bananas there was no end. God was through many changing experiences to bring that same boy to live among those unknown people, almost under the shadow of those sugar refineries, and even to preach the gospel to those supposedly heaven-blessed city dwellers. But thus it is; and while in some respects it may be that "the half was not told me," there is no little truth in the saying that "distance lends enchantment to the view." The sugar is here, but it takes money to get it; the beef is good, but a market bill comes with it; the glass-windowed houses are as represented, but twenty-five dollars per month to live in them knocks the light out of some of the panes. Oh! how strange to the childish dreams of Mountainville does the reality seem!

Roman Catholic Cathedrals, most of them being costly structures, are very numerous here, even in the poorer parts of the city. Their tolling bells almost annoy you, so continuous is their ringing at stated hours. In nearly every case they have schools attached, and many "sisters of charity" who are continuously on the go, giving us an example of what deaconnesses or city missionaries might be doing in our own church. They seem to get money any way they can, from begging and praying out of purgatory to enchre parties and whisky selling. But there are many Protestants here as well, a number being true hill-country Methodists. I had the pleasure of being with one such family recently.

Saints abound—St. Ann, St. Anthony, St. Claude—these and all their families of saints for many generations. But they are all dead saints, and known by name only. We have about 260 members in our Burgundy Street Church, and a splendid League and good choir. A good Home Mission Society and Junior League have been organized since Conference, and they both have excellent fields in which to work. We hope to see our H. M. Society put a city missionary in this much-in-need field ere long, and see all hearts united in pushing the battle against sin and unrighteousness.

You may run away from hydrophobia, because you can see it coming in the frothing tongue and the snapping jaws of the mad dog. But the diseases which carry off the greater part of mankind there's no running away from. They are stealthy, insidious, and come as a thief in the night.

Six per cent. of the daily deaths are due to consumption. The name of the disease suggests the horror of emaciation, the labored breathing, the hectic color, the night-sweats which mark the struggles of the daily weakening victim.

To those with weak lungs, obstinate, lingering cough, bronchitis, and kindred ailments which, if neglected, lead on to consumption, Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery brings hope, help and healing. Its cures have been many and marvelous. Thousands who had lost hope, have found a permanent cure in "Golden Medical Discovery."

"Last spring I wrote you in regard to my health which at that time was very poor," writes Mrs. Mettie M. Barnes, of Garfield, Pawnee Co., Kansas. "My trouble was bronchial affection. Symptoms: spitting of blood almost every morning for five years, shortness of breath, raw and sore throat, loss of trength, at times almost loss of voice, irregular periods—in fact I thought I was surely going into consumption. I consulted you and you advised me to give Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery a trial, which I did, and with happy results. I used two bottles of 'Golden Medical Discovery' and health returned as I used the medicine. I have only raised blood three times since I began using it. My periods are regular, strength returned, and I am almost a new person. I know of a lady that was cured of consumption by this same 'Golden Medical Discovery,' and she always sings its praise."

Some dealers may offer you a "just as good" medicine in place of Dr. Pierce's, because there's more profit in the sale of the substitute. If any dealer thinks more of his profit than of your patronage, he's not entitled to your trade.

SELF-PRONOUNCING

S. S. Teachers' Reference Bible.

Text Conforms Exactly to the Oxford Teachers' Edition.

The self-pronouncing text enables the reader to pronounce all proper names at a glance.

This Bible is printed from Large, Beautiful and Clear New Type. All Proper Names are Divided into Syllables and Every Vowel is Marked and the Syllables Inflected, showing the Sounds and Accents as they are given in a Dictionary, thus enabling the reader to properly pronounce every word. This feature is a great improvement and a strong recommendation for this Bible over others.

This Bible contains the celebrated Oxford Teachers' Helps together with a complete series of New Maps illustrating the geography of Palestine and the surrounding countries from the earliest times, and embodying the most recent discoveries renders this Bible especially desirable to teachers and students of the Holy Scriptures.

This book in Bourgeois type will be sent, postpaid, on receipt of price ($2.25) to any address; but to that select class who read and pay for the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE, we furnish it on the following terms: Pay your subscription one full year in advance, viz., to February, 1901, and we will send it to you, postpaid, for $1.30. An edition in more expensive binding will be furnished at $1.50. (A little later you will have to pay to March, 1901.)

For fifty cents additional we will send Bible with index. For twenty-five cents additional we will have your name engraved on the outside in gilt letters.

P. S.—We can give no commission on subscriptions or renewal in connection with the above offer.

In California.

The Golden State is seriously considering the necessity of quarantining against consumptives. This means that God's fresh air and sunshine, nowhere more entrancing and beautiful than on the Pacific slope, may be denied to the unfortunate sufferers. Thousands have been greatly benefited and many cured by the delicious atmosphere of California, and it appears a most cruel measure, even though sanctioned by medical. Many persons now in the advanced stages of consumption, and surely doomed, could have been cured by early resort to that most gracious healing remedy, MARSDEN'S PECTORAL BALM.

Beef Steak in a Bottle.

That fresh, juicy beef, ready for digestion, can be made into a delicious cordial is a marvel, but chemistry has accomplished it. Sick people at a distance from markets and needing the nourishment afforded by beef tea can procure Dicks' NUTRITIVE ELIXIR and find it the best liquid food and stimulant known. For loss of appetite, weak digestion, debility, typhoid fever, and consumption it is invaluable.

THE PROBLEM OF THE TRUSTS.

This great Repnhlio has, during its history, snocessfnlly grappled with many grave problems, but the one that now prevents itself in the shape of those vast and mighty combinations and aggregations of capital known as trnsts, is in the highest degree difficnlt and delicate, and in dealing therewith there is need of the wisest statesmanship. The trnst is nniqne in the history of civilization, and is peculiarly a modern development. The large wealth and power commaded by Croesns, Crassns, and other noted men of ancient times, pales into insignificance in comparison with the vast resonrces and infinence possessed in this day by gigantic monopolies like the Standard Oil Trnst, the Sngar Trnst, etc.

That trnsts and oombines have become a mighty evil, and that the danger therefrom is rapidly growing in magnitnde, is admitted hy all save those who are personally interested in their operations and profits. There is now a trnst on nearly every leading commodity and articie of mannfactnre, not less than three hnndred snch comhinations being known and catalognsd, while the nnmber is increasing daily. The primary object of these oomhinations of capital, which aggregate anywhere from a million on np to two and three hnndred million dollars, is to get complete control of certain commodities and lines of indnstry, so as to exclnde all competition worthy the name, and dictate prices at will. Then, hy cheapening the cost of prodnction and ordering a raise in prices all over the conntry, profits are enormonsly increased, even thongh the rise be bnt a half cent or a cent on sngar, a few cents per bnshel on coal, or a fraction on coffee, etc. While trnsts wonld defeat their own selfish ends hy pntting extremely high prices on articles of consnmption and wear, they nsnally sqneeze the pnhlic just as far as it will stand, and are absolntely merciless in their greed.

Trnsts on articles of inxnry wonld not constitnte a very serions menace to the welfare of the masses, bnt since great monopolies have been formed to control the price of the very necessities of life, and since this power is being nnscrnpnlonsly nsed in not a few instances, as the common people know to their bitter sorrow, the banefnl effect of trnsts is felt all over the conntry. Hence the qnestion of trnst regnlation is one that vitally concerns the well being and the freedom of the general pnhlic. While the rich and the well to do can afford to pay higher prices for necessities as well as lnxnries, even a slight increase in the cost of fnel and articles of food and clothing works great hardship upon the wage-earners of the conntry, and particnlarly npon the poor, who have no hank acconnt and no margin to go npon. No little snffering has been canscd among the poorer olasses this Winter by the exorbitant price of coal, for which the coal combine is largely responsible. No matter how seriously it may affect the pnblic, the trnst aims to eliminate as far as it can the operation of the law of snpply and demand in the regnlation of prices, and snbstitutes its own arbitrary and selfish rnlings.

Among the trnsts of recent formation is the Paper Trnst, which has already oansed an advance in the cost of white paper of from 97 to 110 per cent. within two years, thereby directly seriously affecting every newspaper in the oonntry, and forcing many of them to increase their snbscription rates. "Within the past six months," says an exchange, in speaking of the infinence of the Paper Trnst, "the cost of paper, ink, oil, and metals has increased from 20 to 50 per cent." Thns trihnte is being exacted by the trnsts from the disseminators of intelligence, and as has well been said, "A tax on intelligence is an insnlt to mankind."

One of the worst featnres of "trnstism" is the elimination of competition, resulting in the shntting down of small concerns, causing connntless thonsands of workmen and middlemen to be thrown ont of employment, and reducing the masses who labor for these giant monopolies to a dead level of helpless dependency. The tendenoy of the trnst system is toward the destrnction of individnalism and personal liberty, and the establishment of what may he termed a "moneyed oligarchy," exercising almost oomplete snpremacy in all the affairs of the oonntry—political, commercial, and indnstrial. Already the drift in this direction is painfnlly and plainly apparent.

Signs are not wanting that the American people are fast waking np to the serionsness of the trnst qnestion, which is now being agitated throughont the connntry, and onr leaders are beginning to consider, as well they may, the matter of trnst regulation. Anti-trnst leagnes are being formed in varions oities, pnhlic meetings are being held, and the press of the oonntry is giving no little attention to the snhject. Several States have already passed severe anti trnst laws, those recently enacted in Texas being of the most drastic natnre.

That something onght to be done to limit the power of the trnsts is nnqnestionahle. If allowed to go too long nnchecked, the people will be entirely at their mercy. It behooves every State to take, in the near fntnre, some steps toward trnst regnlation. There is a possibility, however, that the reaction against trnsts may go too far, and that legislation against them may in some cases become too sweeping and indiscriminate. Passion and prejndice, when worked npon to any great extent, know not the meaning of prudence and moderation. Abnse corporate capital as we may, the fact mnst he recognized that civilization, as we now know it, with its mines and mannfactures, its railroad and steamship lines and vast commerce, wonld be impossihle withont extensive oombinations of wealth. The great enterprises and industries rendered necessary hy a large popnlation and a high degree of development conld not be carried on economically and snccessfnlly hy means of individnal capital and effort. It is not so mnch the total snppression of trnsts that is needed, hnt the wise, firm and just regnlation of the same.

A WORTHY APPEAL FROM HAWAII.

As Congress is shont to devise and inangnrate a new form of government for the Island of Hawaii, and as there is grave danger that certain demoralizing vices and trades, may be given nnrestrained license and sway in that land, the better class of citizens have nnited in a strong petition to Congress asking for the prohibition of the following: First, of the importation, mannfactnre and sale of intoxicating liqnors; second, of the importation and sale of opinm, and, third, of gaming. The appeal is signed hy leading hnsiness men, plantation owners, teachers, physicians and missionaries, the petitioners, it is said, representing the social, financial and religions interests of not less than ninety per cent. of the popnlation. On acconnt of the mixed character of the popnlation of these islands, inclnding, as it does, 39,000 Hawaiians, 15,000 Portnguese, 24,000 Japanese, and 21,000 Chinese, the gaming, opinm, and whiskey evils are peculiarly hanefnl in that region, and the peace and order and well being of society nrgently demand that no toleration be given snch things.

Besides calling attention to the fearfnl ravages in the islands of the evils mentioned, the petition cites the fact that the Hawaiian government has forbidden gaming and opinm selling by law, and is now endeavoring to regnlate the liqnor traffic.

In view of the fact that the appeal simply asks for the protection hy legal safegnards of the best interests of the people of Hawaii, and also that it emanates from the intelligent and rnling class, it wonld be wellnigh treasonable for Congress to take any other than favorable action npon it. It is to he expected, of conrse, that the brewers and distillers of this oonntry will make a hard fight against the granting of these reqnests, for the prohibition of the whiskey bnsiness in the Hawaiian Islands wonld mean the loss of an inviting market for intoxicants. The friends of temperance shonld hring strong pressnre to hear npon Congress in the interest of this praiseworthy and hnmanitarian appeal.

We heartily agree with the editor of the Central Advocate in saying:

"It wonid he monstrons if American rnle in the Hawaiian Islands shonld mean the extension of the vices and demoralizing traffics of onr land into that region. These peacefnl islands of the Pacific Ocean were rescued from savagery and cannibalism by missionaries who went forth from here; they have been built np into a valnahle and hountifnl heritage, and, by a strange series of events, they have been bronght, as we believe, providentially, nnder onr flag and made a part of onr permanent national possessions. We are responsible now in the sight of God and hefore the nations of the earth for their well-being. The men at Washington who have hefore them the task of creating a new form of government for the Hawaiian Islands ought to feel a grave sense of their responsihility; bnt that responsibility does not rest alone npon them, hnt npon the people at home as well. From all parts of this oonntry letters ought to be written to Senators and Congressmen, making an appeal in behalf of these three reqnests that oome from Hawaii."

OUR TWENTIETH CENTURY THANK-OFFERING.

The splendid movement we have inangnrated in behalf of Christian edncation and the rallying of onr forces for more aggressive spiritnal warfare is, we are glad to say, steadily gaining in momentnm, thongh by no means as rapidly as shonld be the case. Althongh abont $600,000 has been snbscribed, or considerably over one-third the amonnt asked for, mnch remains to he done, and the season for dallying has passed. Onr English brethren, with commendable Methodistic push and promptness, are already in sight of snccess; bnt we are not yet so fortnnate. We do not believe, however, that Sonthern Methodists, as a class, are so poor, illiberal, and disloyal as to allow this magnificent undertaking to fail. Thongh far from having the wealth possessed by some other ohnrches, we lack a good deal of being a panper denomination. If we remember correctly, the Salvation Army not a great while ago raised dnring a single week in self-denial offerings the large snm of $100,000. What an inspiring example! We have started well, bnt, nnless we bestir onrselves, there is danger of onr being ontdone by the converts in onr foreign mission fields. Hear what the editor of the Nashville Advocate has to say npon this point:

"Our mission fields fnrnish ns with a noteworthy development as a resnlt of the Twentieth Centnry Movement. Where we shonld expect to find onr ohnrch weakest, being composed of converts from heathenism, it has shown itself to be strongest, if we take Christian liberality as the test. Brazil has given more than $10,300 as her thankoffering, Mexico has given $5,000, Korea has given $2,350, the Indian Mission has given $9,055, and China has begnn her contribntion by giving $500."

ANTI-TRUST MEETING.

At the Tnlane Hall, in this city, on Monday night, the twenty-ninth nltimo, a ronsing anti-trnst meeting was heid nnder the anspices of the Ladies' Arena Clnb, the hall being packed to overflowing. The meeting was presided over hy Jndge John Clegg, who introdnced the speakers in a most felicitous way. The andience was a representative gathering, and inclnded not merely laboring men, who are most affected hy the trusts, hnt professional men, stndents and society people. A large nnmber of ladies were also present. The speakers were: Mr. Ashton Phelps; Dr. B. M. Palmer, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church, and Bishop Hngh Miller Thompson, of Mississippi, each of whom delivered capital and taking addresses, the remarks of the last two heing peculiarly eloquent. Chancellor Fulton, of the University of Mississippi, and Representative Cox, also of Mississippi, had promised to be present and deliver addresses, bnt were prevented from coming by sickness.

Before adjonrnment resolntions were adopted nrging the dnty of securing rigorous legislation against "these rapacious representatives of the fendal spirit," and the need of organizing anti-trnst leagnes in every mnnicipality of the Union. A committee was appointed to organize snch a leagne as soon as possihle in this State. Thns the hattle against the trnsts has begnn in this region as well as elsewhere. Let the good work go on.

REJOICING OVER A SPLENDID GIFT.

There is great rejoicing just now among the membership of the Dryades Street Methodist Church, of this city, on acconnt of the lifting of a mortgage of $2700 on the ohnrch through the mnnificent liberality of Bro. J. H. Keller, one of the members, who, on Thnrsday of last week, without giving anybody an inkling beforehand of his intention, drew a check for the fnll amonnt of the debt, presented it to the holders of the note, and thns obtained its cancellation. As soon as the good news became known, Hon. John A. Woodville, president of the Board of Trustees, called a special meeting of the Board, at which resolntions were passed heartily thanking Mr. Keller for his noble act. The note had been rnnning ever since 1891, the annnal interest on it being considerably over $200, and, as is nsnal in snch cases, this heavy debt has for some time been a serions drawback to the prosperity of the ohnroh. Now that the incumbrance has been removed, the members are manifesting the greatest enthnsiasm, and the pastor, Rev. B. F. White, is thankfnl and hopeful in the highest degree. On last Snnday morning the pastor and congregation gave appropriate expression to their joy and gratitnde hy holding a "praise" service, which was greatly enjoyed by all present.

Bro. Keller is a large-hearted Christian, whose nnostentations generosity is not limited to rare occasions, hnt manifests itself in frequent gifts to varions charities.

We may add, in this connection, that the parsonage belonging to the Dryades Street Church has recently undergone thorough renovation and repairs, and is now an exceedingly comfortahle and pleasant preacher's home.

CIRCULATE THIS TRACT.

The Review of Missions, for February, contains the gratifying announcement that the story of the life of that wonderfnl and far-famed missionary, Dr. John G. Paton, as embodied in an article in the Jannary nnmber of the Review of Missions, is to be reprodnced in tract form, and can he had from onr Missionary Secretaries at Nashville at five cents a copy, or fifty cents a dozen, post paid. The tract will be printed on extra fine paper, with all the illnstrations, inclnding Dr. Paton's pictnre, and will contain twenty-four pages. The record of the work of Dr. Paton, as told hy himself, is more thrilling than any romance, and reads like a repetition of the "Acts of the Apostles." It is a tract that onght to be extensively circulated among our people, for its pernsal is sure to result in the stimnlation of faith and zeal as well as of interest in the grand cause of missions. Those who assist in its circnlation may rest assured that they will he doing a noble work, and we trnst that onr preachers and consecrated laymen will not fail to take advantage of this opportnnity for doing good.

LITERARY NOTES.

BY W. F. B.

The First Night of a Play, Throngh the Sinms with Mrs. Ballington Booth, What It Means to Be a Librarian, hy Herbert Putnam, librarian of Congress, and The Pew and the Man in It, hy Ian Maclaren, are among the notable featnres of the February Ladies' Home Jonrnal. An American Mother answers conclnsively Have Women Robbed Men of Their Religion? and there is an interesting article on Mme. Chaminade, the famous composer and pianist. Another article describes Frank Stockton's New Home in West Virginia. The opening chapters of The Parson's Butterfly, a new serial by Mrs. Charles Terry Collins, are also presented. Molly Donahne discusses woman's rights with Mr. Dooley, and Edith and I in Paris, Her Boston Experiences, and The Autobiography of a Girl continne with increasing interest.

In The Forum, for February, Lieut.-Gen. Den Boer Poortngael, of the Holland Privy Connoil, contributes the leading article on The Relation of England to the Transvaal; an able paper is furnished on The People's Party by Senator Marion Butler. President Charles Dahney, of the University of Tennessee, writes a timely article on Washington's University. Two papers on the Old-Age Pension Problem in England are contributed by two eminent men—the first hy Michael Davitt, M. P., on A Plea for Old-Age Pensions, and the second by Rt. Hon. W. H. Lecky, the brilliant English historian, on Why I Oppose Old-Age Pensions.

In the February number of the American Illustrated Methodist Magazine the first article is, The Author of Alice in Wonderland, hy Jennie Lon Flnney. The eighth chapter of Famous Hymn Writers treats of John Keble, the author of The Christian Year, and many other well-known hymns. Allegheny College, the alma mater of Bishops Kingsley and Thohnrn, and many other prominent Methodists, is ably treated in this nnmber. The article is profnsely illnstrated, and contains an excellent likeness of President McKinley, who was for some time a student at this college. The Revolntionary Storm is the snbject of the twelfth chapter of The History of Methodism. It deals with the intensely dramatic period when so many Loyalist Methodists left the connlry for good, and when the others who remained and helped to bnild np the repnblic snffered from deep-rooted snspicion, and were often shamefnlly mistreated. A series of articles on The Itineranoy, under the general title of The Methodist Minister's Wheel of Fate, by Rev. S. J. Wallis, is hegnn in this nnmber.

Rev. P. O. Lowrey, pastor of the Burgundy Street Church, of this city, is alive to the importance of circnlating religions literatnre among his flock, and is making a vigorous canvass in behalf of onr church periodicals. As one resnlt, he has recently obtained a goodly nnmber of snbscribers to the ADVOCATE. His example is worthy of imitation.

"I am well pleased with my work. Bro. W. W. Simmons, onr beloved presiding elder, was with us on the twenty-eighth nltimo, it being qnarterly meeting occasion, and preached a splendid sermon. His presence is an inspiration and his godly admonitions are like the precions ointment."

Rev. Geo. D. French, of the Tennessee Conference, is now making a tour in this section in the interest of the American Bible Society, of which he is agent. Last Snnday morning the congregation at Felicity Street Church, and at night the one at Carondelet Street Church, had the pleasnre of listening to edifying sermons from him. Bro. French is vigorously pnshing the noble cause he represents.

We say "Amen" to the following from the Nashville Advocate, of Feb. 1: "If onr representatives in Congress and State Legislatnres were as mnch interested in the preservation of the morals of the people as they are in taking care of their health, we wonld hear less of efforts to prevent the adnlteration of malt and spiritnous liqnors, and more to pnt an end to the saloon and the many evil things which the saloon fosters and keeps alive. Onr law-makers seem to act on the principle that it is their hnsiness to keep the people healthy and the people's bnsiness to escape the snares of the devil, if they can."

We are glad to say that the Union Epworth Leagne Gospel Meeting held last week at Felicity Street Church, aronsed considerable interest, and was prodnctive of mnch good. The Leaguers and their friends tnrned ont well. A number of persons were led to a deeper consecration, and nearly all who attended were quickened in faith and zeal. Most of the preaching was done hy Rev. F. N. Parker, whose sermons were strong, searching, and highly helpful to all who heard them. It was decided to continne the meeting throngh this week also. Rev. R. H. Wynn has been engaged to do the preaching. We earnestly hope to hear of still more gracions results.

The Epworth Era, the official organ of the Epworth Leagne, nnder the able, prndent, and brilliant editorship of that gifted Mississippian, Dr. H. M. DuBose, is indeed a paper to he proud of, and we rejoice to note that its circnlation is steadily increasing, the snbscription list on Jan. 1 having reached approximately 15,000. On acconnt, however, of the low snbscription price, namely, one dollar, Dr. DuBose states that at least 20,000 snbscribers are needed in order that it may be pnblished without loss, and hence it is hoped that onr pastors and League officers will continne to pnsh the circnlation of the Era nntil it becomes entirely self-sustaining. We nnderstand that the paper is soon to be enlarged and farther improved.

The following paragraph, taken from the Magnolia Gazette, of Feb. 3, will be read with mnch sorrow by the many friends of Bro. and Sister Stevens, to whom we extend our sincerest sympathy in this sore bereavement:

"Rev. W. M. Stevens and wife arrived here Friday morning from their home in Lake, Miss., on a sad mission. On Thursday morning, Feb. 1, their precious little baby boy, James Angnstns, closed his eyes in death, and they bronght his body here for hnrial. He lived one year six months and one day, and then went to join his twin brother, David Newton Stevens, who died at the age of three months. The funeral took place at 2 o'clock from the Methodist Church, Rev. F. M. Keen officiating."

A MUNIFICENT GIFT.

Extract from the Minutes of the Board of Trustees of the Dryades Street (New Orleans) Methodist Episcopal Church, South, held on Wednesday, January 31, 1900, at the office of J. A Woodville.

W. H. Krone offered the following resolution:

Whereas, Brother John H. Keller, being moved by a generous and liberal spirit to donate to the Dryades Street Methodist Episcopal Church, South, the sum of $2679.24, being the amount of a mortgage indebtedness which has been standing since September 14th, 1891, and has donated, unsolicited, this amount; therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Board of Trustees of the Dryades Street Methodist Episcopal Church, South, hereby extends its sincere thanks for this munificent gift, and wish Brother Keller the rich blessings which follow such an unselfish action.

The resolution was unanimously carried.

It was then moved and seconded that a copy be furnished the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE for publication. Carried.

GREAT DEMAND FOR BELLS.

THE OUTPUT OF 1900 WILL BE GREATER THAN EVER BEFORE.

Churches, schools, public buildings and farm houses have made such extraordinary demands upon the famous Blymyer bell foundry at Cincinnati that it has been found necessary to build a new factory twice the size of the old one and to double its capacity for making these sweet toned monitors. The new factory is 320x118 feet, situated so conveniently to the trunk-line railways that better facilities for rapid filling of orders are gained. Blymyer bells are manufactured by the Cincinnati Bell Foundry Company, Cincinnati, Ohio, who will send to prospective purchasers an illustrated catalogue giving reasons for the excellent quality and great durability of their product.

NOTICE.

To the Pastors and Sunday-school Superintendents of the Mississippi Conference—

DEAR BRETHREN: It is with great pleasure that I cite you to the report of the Board of Missions of our last Conference. It is gratifying to note an increase of nearly 1,500 dollars over the previous year to this Board, thus demonstrating that the missionary spirit is, at least, not dying out among us; yet, when compared with the enrolled membership, shows an exceedingly small per capita for this all-important, if not first, work of the church. Nearly 25 cents per member! Certainly this does not suggest very fervent zeal for the conversion of the heathen. Indeed, when we consider that many pay from one to five dollars, we are met with the inevitable conclusion that many more pay nothing. Let the motto for the year be, "Something from every member, be it ever so small," for this pressing cause. Thirty cents per member. The price of three dozen eggs, two pounds of butter, or one half-bushel of potatoes, would furnish the amount. The contribution of all the Sunday eggs (at no matter how low a price) would more than meet this demand. Try it.

I am pleased to inform the children of the Conference that the report from the Sunday-schools is the largest for the last decade, if not in the history of the Conference.

Permit me, my young friends, to exhort you to grow in this grace. May I not insist that each of our 17,000 children contribute one nickle a month to send the gospel to the foreign lands? This would nearly meet the assessment put upon our Conference, while the small sum of one cent per month would largely increase the amount contributed during the past year. It was a wise enactment which calls for the organizing of all of our Sunday-schools into missionary schools, and if properly worked by our superintendents, will result not only in an education to the children, but greatly relieve the present urgent demands upon our Missionary Boards.

Brethren of the pastorate, let me remind you of the law above referred to, and, brother superintendents, let me beg of you make this cause prominent in your schools.

The Review of Missions, which has been furnished for one dollar, has been reduced to fifty cents, and, in my humble judgment, is the best periodical for the money which comes to any home. No one can afford to be without it who desires to keep up with the history of the day or of the movements of the church.

The Holston idea is a good one, but if the Sunday-schools will take hold of this cause, we can let the Leagues take hold of the great Twentieth Century Movement. Let us organize and work from the beginning. T. B. HOLLOMAN,
Pres. Board of Missions.

Falsehood may have its hour, but it has no future.—Pressense.

To Be Prepared

For war is the surest way for this nation to maintain peace. That is the opinion of the wisest statesmen. It is equally true that to be prepared for Spring is the best way to avoid the peculiar dangers of the season. This is a lesson multitudes are learning, and at this time, when the blood is sure to be loaded with impurities, and to be weak and sluggish, the millions begin to take Hood's Sarsaparilla, which purifies, enriches and vitalizes the blood, expels all disease germs, creates a good appetite, gives strength and energy, and puts the whole system in a healthy condition, preventing pneumonia, fevers, and other dangerous diseases which are liable to attack a weakened system.

The QUEEN AND CRESCENT ROUTE announces that for Mardi Gras it will make a rate of one fare for the round trip to New Orleans.

Tickets will be on sale commencing Feb. 20, and closing with train arriving at New Orleans morning of Feb. 27, good to return until March 15, 1900. This will give intending visitors an opportunity to see all the parades and participate in all the festivities.

It is understood that there will be at least five parades, though the societies are all secret and very little information leaks out to the public. It is definitely known that the first parade will occur on Feb. 21 and the last on Feb. 27, and those desiring to "see it all" should arrange to spend, at least, the entire time from Feb. 21 to 27 inclusive in New Orleans. By doing so they will be enabled to see everything there is to see and also have time to do such business as may be desirable.

The Mardi Gras week comes so late this year that it is safe to prophesy that the weather and all other conditions will be propitious.

Let every preacher try to bring one or two faithful laymen, and I trust every local preacher in the district will attend.

B. T. CREWS.

If we think of Christianity as a religion, its central point is the incarnation. If we think of it as a gospel, its central point is the cross and the empty tomb, and both are necessary for an adequate conception of what has come to us through Christ.—Rev. A. T. Taylor.

WONDERFUL CURES BY SWAMP-ROOT.

Deacon Pollard Finds Swamp-Root Present Help in Time of Trouble.

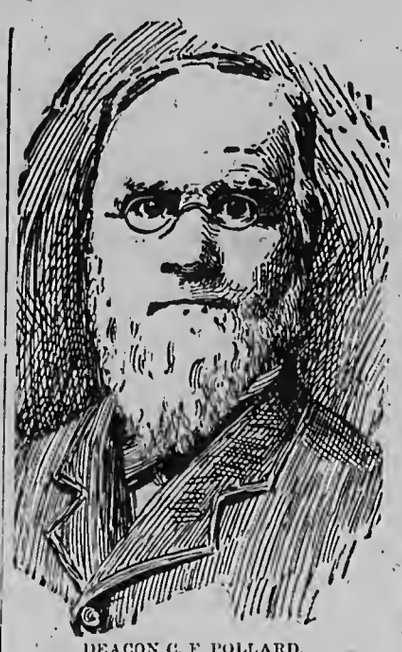
Among the many famous cures of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root the great kidney, liver and bladder remedy investigated by the "CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE," the ones which we publish this week for the benefit of our readers, speak in the highest terms of the wonderful curative properties of this great kidney remedy.

Deacon Charles F. Pollard, a prominent Baptist deacon of Lynn, Mass., residing at 74 High Rock Street, adds his testimony to the wealth of others, as to the wonderful curative effects of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp Root. Deacon Pollard on Jan. 2nd writes:

"For years I had kidney and bladder troubles, and was also a victim of acute rheumatism in my arms and legs. The pains from the latter affection were very hard to bear. I tried many doctors and medicines without benefit. Some time ago I commenced to take Swamp-Root. It has entirely cured my rheumatism and has greatly helped my other troubles. I should not think of keeping house without having Swamp Root as a conspicuous feature of the housekeeping utensils.

"I can only speak in the highest praise of its health-giving properties."

C. F. POLLARD.



DEACON C. F. POLLARD.

What a Woman Says of Swamp-Root.

Mrs. H. N. Wheeler of 268 Boston St., Lynn, Mass., writes on Dec. 11th, '99: "About 18 months ago I had a very severe attack of grip. I was extremely sick for three weeks, and when I finally was able to leave my bed I was left with excruciating pains in my back. My water at times looked very like coffee. I could pass but little at a time, and then only after suffering great pain. My physical condition was such that I had no strength and was all run down. The doctors said my kidneys were not affected, but I felt certain that they were the cause of my trouble. My sister, Mrs. C. E. Littlefield of Lynn, advised me to give Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root a trial. I procured a bottle, and inside of three days commenced to get relief. I followed up that bottle with another, and at the completion of this one found I was completely cured. My strength returned, and to-day I am as well as ever. My business is that of canvasser, I am on my feet a great deal of the time, and have to use much energy in getting around. My cure is therefore all the more remarkable, and is exceedingly gratifying to me."

MRS. H. N. WHEELER.

It used to be considered that only urinary and bladder troubles were to be traced to the kidneys, but now modern science proves that nearly all diseases have their beginning in the disorder of these most important organs.

The kidneys filter and purify the blood—that is their work.

So when your kidneys are sick you can understand how quickly your entire body is affected and how every organ seems to fail to do its duty.

If you are sick or "feel badly," begin taking Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, because as soon as your kidneys are well they will help all the other organs to health. A trial will convince you—and you may have a sample bottle free for the asking.

When your kidneys are not doing their work, some of the symptoms which prove it to you are pain or dull ache in the back, excess of uric acid, gravel, rheumatic pains, sediment in the urine, scanty supply, scalding irritation in passing it, obliged to go often during the day and to get up many times during the night to empty the bladder; sleeplessness, nervous irritability, dizziness, irregular heart, breathlessness, sallow, unhealthy complexion, puffy or dark circles under the eyes, loss of ambition, general weakness and debility.

Swamp-Root is used in the leading hospitals, recommended by skillful physicians in their private practice, and is taken by doctors themselves who have kidney ailments, because they recognize in it the greatest and most successful remedy that science has ever been able to compound.

Sample Bottle Free.

To prove its wonderful curative properties, send your name and address to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., when you will receive, free of all charge, a sample bottle of Swamp-Root and a valuable book by mail prepaid. This book contains many of the thousands upon thousands of testimonial letters received from men and women who owe their good health, in fact their very lives, to the wonderful curative properties of this world-famous kidney remedy. Swamp-Root is so remarkably successful that our readers are advised to write for a free sample bottle and to be sure and mention reading this generous offer in the NEW ORLEANS "CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE."

If you are already convinced that Swamp-Root is what you need you can purchase the regular fifty-cent and one-dollar size bottles at the drug stores everywhere.

A MEMORY.

BY EUGENE FIELD.

The fire upon the hearth is low,
And there is stillness everywhere;
Like troubled spirits here and there
The firelight shadows flutter go.
And as the shadows round me creep
A childish treble breaks the gloom,
And softly from a farther room
Comes, "Now I lay me down to sleep."

And somehow, with that little prayer
And that sweet treble in my ears,
My thought goes back to distant years,
And lingers with a dear one there;
Again I hear the child's Amen,
My mother's face comes back to me;
Crooched at her side I seem to be,
And mother holds my hand again.

O, for an hour in that dear place!
O, for the peace of that dear time!
O, for the childish trust enblime!
O, for a glimpse of mother's face!
Yet the shadows round me creep,
I do not seem to be alone—
Sweet magic of that treble tone—
And "Now I lay me down to sleep."

WHAT HOME SHOULD BE.

The home is the truest index to character, the key to life of the individual, the social safegnard. No man was ever led astray whose home was the most attractive place on earth to him. No woman ever stepped aside from the path of virtue who found her chiefest joy in her home.

A home means that place where the most perfect freedom is enjoyed, where the greatest privacy is secured, where love, sympathy, and comfort abound—the place to which the business man's thoughts revert with pride and pleasure in the midst of cares and worries incident to his occupation, and to which he hurries when the day is done. I know what kind of home a man has when I see him walking toward it in the evening, and when he starts out in the morning. There is no mistake about it. The man who has a happy home has no more resemblance to the man who has a house, but no home, than if he were not created in the same shape and form. There is a proud independence about him, combined with a gentle consideration for others. Business men find him out; he is a prince among men, whether he be employer or employee. His coat is a robe of royalty and is recognized wherever he goes, and his face wins confidence and brings prosperity.

What a happy man it is who can invite a friend home at any time, assured of a bright welcome, an orderly, attractive house, and a good meal, the very best he could find anywhere, and the most appetizing. His wife has no gossip to retail, no trials of servants, or grocers, or meat markets, but can make him forget everything but the restful sphere of the place. Her quiet taste in the arrangement of the rooms, which, like a well-dressed person, make no impression of form or color, and her sweet presence in them, bring peace and rest.

It does not require wealth to build a home. It needs only unselfish love for each other, and love of home. It must be so arranged as to appear to run like a perfect piece of machinery, without noise or friction anywhere, each servant, where there are servants, conscious of filling a post of honor.

We owe it to our husbands, our children, and ourselves to create a happy home. Yes, I believe we owe it to God; for the home is the center from which every good thing in this world comes. A home where God is feared, a home in which the neighbor is loved, a home whose motto is, "As ye would that others do to you, do ye even so to them," is a refuge from every ill of life. That is a home where in health you find the very highest pleasure you can desire, in sickness the tenderest care, at all times feel that God is nearer to you—more consciously with you than elsewhere in the world. Living within your means, striving to please no one but those about you, envying no one's better fortune, in fact seeing no better, because no happier, that makes home. Learn the secret of building a home, and your husband will not be a member of any club. Learn to be the most attractive woman in the most attractive place on earth to him, and if he is a true man he will never wander from you even in thought. Be ready to go out with him at all times, happy to stay at home with him at all times. Remember the crown of womanhood is wifehood, the crown of wifehood is motherhood, and the safest haven on this earth is the home where you can close your doors and shut out all the world at will, or open to receive whom you will. No one can be thrust upon you in your home. No evil can enter there uninvited by you, and if by contact with the world any loved one steps astray, the only hope of redemption is through a home.—Mrs. C. K. R., in Coming Age.

THEY WERE FARMER BOYS.

There are some people foolish enough to laugh at the homely virtues of farm life. They are, fortunately, few, and they are, fortunately, growing fewer; but it is well sometimes to look at the list of great men who came up from the farm—not all of them, for that would fill volumes, but some of the most notable ones that flash into the mind in a moment.

Nearly three-fourths of the men who have been chosen by the people for the great offices of the nation are men who were familiar with wooded hills and cultivated fields. For example: Washington, Lincoln, Grant, Garfield, Hamlin, Greeley, Tilden, Hayes, Blaine, Harrison, and many others equally conspicuous. Henry Watterson spent his early life in rural Kentucky. Murat Halstead was born and lived in Ohio. Jay Gould spent his early years on his father's farm in New York. Whittier spent his youth in a village, dividing his time between farm employment and his studies. Whitelaw Reid was a boy on an Ohio farm. The reader can add names by the score of successful professional and business men of his own acquaintance whose foundation for success was laid on the farm.—Christian Work.

SHOW WHAT YOU CAN DO.

Three times out of four, in the competition and strife for various positions, you must prove yourself to have the grit in you and the capacity which employers desire. You must go to them in thorough, downright earnest. "I want to work for you: now what shall I do?" "But I have no place for you." "That isn't the thing; I want to work for you; what shall I do?" "But I don't want you." "But I want to work for you." "Well, if you are so pertinacious, pile those bars of pig-iron up there." The man went at it, and showed strength and speed. "Now," said the employer, "you make those five men work as you did;" and he employed him. Of course, he rose higher.—Exchange.

ROOSEVELT TO YOUNG MEN.

"If you could speak commandingly to the young men of our city," I asked him one day, "what would you say to them?" "I'd try to develop and work out an ideal of mine—the theory of the duty of the leisure class to the community. I have tried to do it by example, and it is what I have preached, first and foremost, to be American heart and soul, and to go in with any person, heedless of anything but that person's qualifications. For myself, I'd work as quick beside Pat Dugan as with the last descendant of a patroon; it literally makes no difference to me, so long as the work is good and the man is thoroughly in earnest.

"One other thing I'd like to teach young men of wealth—that he who has not got wealth owes his first duty to his family, but he who has means owes his first duty to the State. It is ignoble to try to heap money on money. I would preach the doctrine of work to all and to the men of wealth the doctrine of unremunerative work."—From a character sketch of Theodore Roosevelt, by Julian Ralph.

SHORT-SIGHTED PEOPLE.

Parents who quarrel before their children.

Those who talk about their troubles to strangers.

Those who think that gaining riches will make them happy.

Parents who permit their children to grow up in idleness.

The young woman who does not make a confidant of her mother.

The father who tells his children to go one way, while he walks another.

Those who never try to be religious except when they think they are being watched.—Selected.

John Wesley's mother once wrote to him when he was in college: "Would you judge of the lawfulness or the unlawfulness of pleasure, take this rule:

"Whatever weakens your reason,

Impairs the tenderness of your conscience,

Obscures your sense of God, or takes off the relish of spiritual things;

Whatever increases the authority of your body over your mind,

That thing to you, is sin."—Exchange.

A Small Beginning.

A little snow ball on the summit of the Alps, rolled up by the winds, moves slowly downward. Gaining in strength and size, it grows rapidly to giant proportions, and finally becomes the frightful avalanche, destroying everything in its path. Consumption begins with a little cough, a trifling pain, a passing flush on the cheeks. This is but the beginning of the avalanche, consumption, that knows no pity, recognizes no distinction. Just at the beginning thousands commit the error of not checking and curing the disease by using MARSDEN'S PECTORAL BALM.

A Serious Decision.

"Why CHILLIFUGE Won't Cure Chills"—is a question that brings to mind the story of a society of learned men formed for debating problems.

The question was presented: "Why a fish weighing ten pounds, put into a vessel of known weight, filled with water, did not increase the weight?" After hours of hot debate the fool of the club announced that it did, for while the debate had been going on he had tried the experiment.

OBITUARIES.

WILLIAMS—Sister THERESA WILLIAMS was born in Hanover, Germany, March 19, 1823, and came over to America (New Orleans, La.) during the year 1841. Since this date she has made Louisiana her home. She died near Lafayette, La., Dec. 27, 1899. Thus ended a long and useful life; but the influence of that life is still exerted, not only upon the relative, but also upon a large circle of friends, to whose memory she still lives.

Sister Williams was an intelligent Christian woman; was one of the greatest readers I have ever known, and one whose faculty for retaining up to the time of her last illness—was remarkably strong. During the writer's four years' pastorate at Lafayette she was a frequent and welcome visitor at the parsonage. Her presence was indeed a benediction to the pastor and his family. She was not a melancholy visitor, but, on the contrary, was cheerful with levity and grave without sadness. For a number of years she lived in Franklin, La., where she had a host of friends, the mention of whose names would extend this notice beyond the prescribed limits. While there she was associated in Sunday-school work with Gov. Murphy J. Foster, during his connection with the church and Sunday-school at that place.

Sister Williams was not terrified by the approach of the "last enemy." She knew "in whom she had believed," that "he was able to keep that which she had committed unto him against that day." During one of my last visits she expressed a "desire to depart and to be with Christ." She leaves a number of relatives and a large circle of devoted friends, by whom she will be sadly missed. But while we are sad at the parting, let us rejoice in anticipation of a reunion around the "throne of God." I. T. REAMES.

PURIFOY—JOHN W. PURIFOY was born in Upson county, Ga., Oct. 27, 1829, and died at the hospital in New Orleans, La., where he had gone to be treated, Jan. 7, 1900. He was married to Miss Mary L. Green, Nov. 27, 1851, and to them were born seven children, only three of whom survive. His wife died in 1870, and in 1871 he was married to Miss E. A. Maddox. Six children were the fruit of this last marriage, five of whom, with their mother, are living to mourn his loss.

We are not advised of the time of Bro. Purifoy's conversion and accession to the church, nor of the date of his removal from Georgia to Mississippi. We first knew him more than twenty years ago in Jefferson county, Miss. He was then a matured Christian, and had, doubtless, been a disciple of Christ from early manhood, if not from his youth. While living near Union Church, Jefferson county, Miss., he served the church there in the capacity of trustee, steward, and Sunday-school superintendent. Some years ago he removed from Union Church to Crystal Springs, where he led the same "quiet and peaceable life in all godliness and honesty" he had led elsewhere. In '97 and '98 I was his pastor there, and can testify to his Christian integrity and faithfulness. He loved the house of God, and was a teacher in the Sunday-school. His brother-in-law, Dr. T. H. Maddox, was with him in his last days, and writes me of his trust and submission to the will of God. He adds, 'His contentment glowed when I said to him in our deep distress, 'Religion is our only refuge.'"

A pure, high-toned, upright Christian gentleman has gone from earth to heaven. May the blessings of God abide upon his bereaved family! W. B. LEWIS.

GRAY—Mrs. KATHERINE S. GRAY was born in Sumner county, Tenn., in 1816, and died at the home of her son, Charles J. Gray, near Cotton Valley, Webster parish, La., Nov. 11, 1899, aged eighty-three years. She joined the M. E. Church, South, in early life, and remained a devoted member of the same until God took her to him. She moved from Tennessee to Louisiana in 1852, and located near Haughton, in Bossier parish, where she has resided most of the time. In 1898 she went to live with her son, Charles J. Gray.

Sister Gray was an Israelite indeed, in whom was no guile. Before moving from Haughton it was the writer's privilege to visit her in her home, and he always felt that he had been greatly blessed in doing so. In her latter years she was greatly afflicted, but she bore her sufferings with great patience. She was an affectionate mother, a generous, kind-hearted neighbor, and a Christian who loved God with all her heart. She was also a constant reader of her church paper, and delighted to have the CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE in her home. May her gentle, beautiful life be constantly remembered and imitated by her bereaved children and friends! May God comfort the bereaved ones and help them to meet her on the happy, golden shore!

H. J. BOLTZ.

BOONE—Mrs. DELIA BOONE was born Dec. 8, 1842, near Carthage, Leake county, Miss. Taylor Williams was her father. She was married to J. F. Boone in 1867, and died at Magnolia, Miss., Dec. 16, 1899. She first joined the Congregational Methodist Church, and continued in that church till in 1884, when she became a member of the M. E. Church, South, in which she was a consistent member till her death. She was the mother of four children—three sons and one daughter. The daughter died at the age of five months. The sons Rev. V. V. Boone, of the Mississippi Conference; Emmet, of Texas, and Daniel, of this place—are all living. Miss Florence Grogan, a niece of Sister Boone, was taken into the family at about ten years of age, and filled the place of daughter and sister in the family affection. The family came to Magnolia in 1894, and during the five years' residence here Sister Boone made many friends. She was faithful to every trust committed to her. She loved the church, took an interest in the Sunday-school, studied the lessons for spiritual profit, and died in the faith. She is a great loss to the family and the church. J. W. SANNALL.

PRICE—Resolutions respecting Mrs. J. F. PRICE, Jackson, Miss.:

We, the committee appointed to draft resolutions of respect to the memory of our faithful co-worker, Mrs. J. F. Price, who "fell on sleep" Jan. 6, 1900, beg leave to submit the following:

Whereas, In the removal of this dear friend the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society has lost one of its most faithful, earnest members; therefore, be it

Resolved, That in her death we are comforted to know that our loss is her eternal gain. Our loss is great, but in proportion she is blessed; hence we bow in submission to His will "whose ways are past finding out."

Resolved, That we, her sisters in Christ and co-workers with her in the advancement of his kingdom on earth, especially tender our sympathy to the desolate husband and children, and earnestly commend them to the enduring grace and loving care of our heavenly Father, "who doeth all things well."

Resolved, That these resolutions be spread upon the Minutes of our Woman's Foreign Missionary Society, and a copy be sent to the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE for publication, and two copies be sent to the bereaved family.

Mrs. A. P. Ball, Mrs. R. P. Moore, Mrs. J. T. Lowther, Committee.

FAIRBANKS—ELLIS FAIRBANKS was born in Jackson county, Miss., Dec. 15, 1822, and died of apoplexy Jan. 23 1900, and now sleeps in the family graveyard within a few miles of the place of his birth.

Bro. Fairbanks was of a quiet and unassuming disposition, believed by all who knew him, and will be sadly missed. When about twenty-one years of age he gave his heart to God, and ever afterward he was true to his profession. His religion was of the kind that purified the heart and drew heavily upon the purse.

In the death of Bro. Fairbanks the world loses a nobleman, the church a loyal supporter, the preacher one of his best friends, and the bereaved ones a loving husband and father.

May the peace that passeth all understanding abide with the aged widow, who for many years has known the sweetness of our Savior's love! God bless the other bereaved ones also. May they remain steadfast, and always abound in the work of the Lord!

J. W. CAMPBELL, P. C.

DAVIS—MARY FRANCES DAVIS (nee Williams) was born March 31, 1869, and died Dec. 6, 1899. She was married to T. F. Davis, Dec. 22, 1885. She joined the Methodist Church when about thirteen years old, and lived a consistent member until her death. Hers was a Christian character. She loved her church; she was kind to all whom she met, and was devoted to her husband and family. She leaves small children to mourn the loss of a loving mother; but, dear children, live as your mother did, and you will come to find her again where bereavements are not.

Sister Davis was a patient sufferer, taking all her afflictions as the will of the Lord, and whatever was his will was best with her; so, when she came to die, she died calmly and peacefully.

Consumption has done his worst,
And laid the body low;
But the immortal soul hath burst
Into life's eternal glow.

Two Verdicts.

"After a fair and impartial trial you are judged guilty by this court, and you are sentenced to be hung by the neck until you are dead." The solemn tones of the judge, the despairing face of the prisoner, and the painful stillness of the court-room, makes it a scene of awful impress. Now turn to a brighter scene at the home circle. A mother radiant with joy over the recovery of a child snatched from the clutches of Malaria. An entire family rejoicing, and praising the merits of Dicks' Chillifuge, and giving their verdict that Chillifuge is without an equal for swiftness to cure.

The "Combination" Bible.

A SUPERB EDITION

of the Holy Scriptures, showing at a glance at the foot of the pages all changes made by the revisers.

New Type. All Proper Names Self-Pronouncing. The Most Valuable Collateral Matter.

There is a steady and increasing demand for first-class Bibles. Everybody is anxious to obtain a copy of the best edition of the Holy Scriptures. Old editions are constantly being replaced by Bibles that are in every way more attractive, and there is practically no limit to the demand.

OUR "COMBINATION" FEATURE.

Hitherto the King James and Revised Versions have been printed in parallel columns, but this makes comparisons of texts tedious and unsatisfactory, and makes the book very unwieldy. We have overcome this difficulty by "combining" the two Versions on the same page, showing at a glance in foot-notes all the Changes Additions and Omissions made by the Revisers.

THE OLD VERSION PRINTED IN FULL.

The King James Version is the basis, and this Version is read straight along from the text, while the Revised Version is read from the text in combination with the foot-notes. Our "Combination" Feature has met with universal approval and is strongly endorsed by leading Divines and Biblical Scholars.

It is only by a comparison of the two Versions that the greatest benefit can be obtained from reading the Holy Scriptures, and this comparison every reader can easily make by our simple arrangement for showing the changes made by the revisers. This is the greatest triumph of Bible Publishing the World has ever known.

OUR OFFER.

To those unprogressive people who do not read and pay for the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE we sell this Bible at the publisher's retail price—$4.25. To our subscribers we sell it at the very low rate of $2. The only condition attached to this offer is that the subscriber must pay his subscription one full year in advance, viz.: to February, 1901. We will send it postpaid to any person who will send us three new cash subscribers at the regular rate. For six new cash subscribers at the regular rate we will send two "Combination" Bibles, postpaid.

For fifty cents additional we will send a Bible with index.

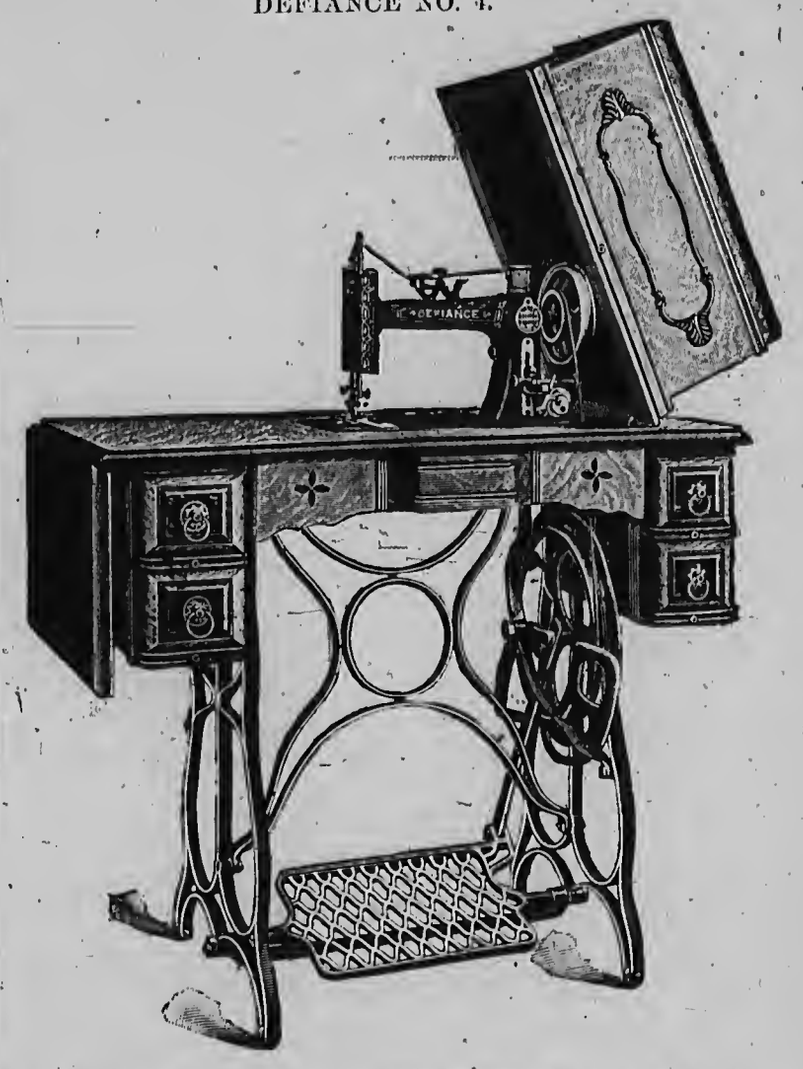
For twenty-five cents additional we will have your name engraved in gilt letters on the outside.

Address REV. W. C. BLACK.

P. S.—We can give no commission on renewals in connection with the above offer.

New Machine Offer.

DEFIANCE NO. 4.



The Defiance Machine is the perfection of simplicity, durability, speed, strength and ease of operation.

Construction. It is constructed of the best material in use, every bearing, without an exception, being of steel or case-hardened.

The Mechanical Devices of this machine are a combination of tried mechanical principles. In detail it differs materially from other machines. Its simplicity is at once apparent, and its great durability is admitted by the best mechanical experts.

The Arm is large and roomy, 8x5½ inches in the clear.

No Vibration. This machine does not vibrate. Its motion is easy and quiet.

Lock Stitch. It is a lock-stitch shuttle machine.

Speedy, Light, Quiet. It is as speedy, light and quiet-running as any shuttle machine manufactured.

Double Feed—Positive Four-Motion. The double feed possesses advantages over all others. Its very shape and form obviates all the disadvantages arising from double feeds as they have heretofore been constructed, and combines in this machine all the advantages of both the single and double feed, doing away with the objections to either of them.

The operation of the feed mechanism is positive, giving an accurate four-motion movement to the feed without the use of springs.

The Needle Bar. This machine has a self-lubricating needle bar, which is always kept clean, well-oiled, and the oil can not drop on the work and soil it.

The Needle is absolutely self-setting. No screwdriver is required in setting, a winged thumb nut being used instead.

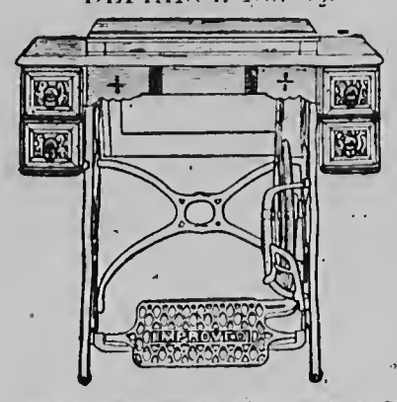
The machine is self-threading. Put in the bobbin, draw the thread towards you, through the slot and, it is done.

The Loose Pulley for winding the bobbine without running the machine is so constructed as to admit of an instantaneous stoppage and starting of the machine without stopping the treadle movement—a valuable improvement peculiar to this machine.

Automatic Bobbin Winder. The bobbin winder operates automatically, winding the thread on the bobbin regularly and as evenly as the thread on a spool. Can be operated without running the machine.

Extra Attachments, in velvet-lined case, sent free with each machine: 1 Tucker, 1 Ruffler with shirring plate, 1 Hemmer set (4 widths) and Hieder, 1 Braider (Foot and Slide), 1 Thread Cutter Additional Accessories. Each machine is supplied with the following outfit: 1 Hemmer and Feller (one piece), 10 Needles, 6 Bobbins, 1 Wrench, 1 Screwdriver, Oil Can filled with oil, Cloth Guage and Thumb-screw, and a Book of Instructions. The Book of Instructions is profusely illustrated and answers the purpose of a competent teacher.

DEFIANCE NO. 7½.



This cut shows our new and popular style, the No. 7½ Defiance Drop Cabinet perfectly protecting the machine from dust, and making a convenient and ornamental stand. When machine is ready for use the head is in same position as on ordinary style; when through using, it requires only the turning over of the leaf of table, and the sewing machine head drops into the case or cabinet between the drawers, completely out of sight, forming a handsome table with highly polished top.

No. 3 Machine, drop leaf table, bent cover, case of one drawer at each end and center drawer. Dealer's price, $32. Our price, $18.

No. 4 Machine, drop leaf table, bent cover, case of two drawers at each end and center drawer. Dealer's price, $34. Our price, $19.

No. 5 Machine, drop leaf table, bent cover, case of three drawers at each end and center drawer, making seven drawers in all. Dealer's price, $36. Our price, $20.

No. 7½ Machine, Drop head cabinet, case of two drawers at each end and center drawer. Dealer's price, $38. Our price, $23.

All the woodwork is of the best quality, either Light Antique or Golden Oak Finish. For Walnut Woodwork add $2 to above list prices.

The chief difference between Numbers 3, 4, and 5 is in the furniture—i. e., the number of drawers. If you do not want to pay for the extra drawers, you need not do so. We sell these machines under a ten years' guarantee, by which we mean that if any part gives out by reason of any defect therein, the manufacturer will replace the same free of charge. Moreover, we allow the purchaser to test the machine ten days. If at the end of ten days you are not satisfied, you have only to drop us a postal card, and your money will be refunded.

OUR OFFER.

We will send any one of the above-described machines at the prices named, and also send the ADVOCATE free for six months. The only condition attached to this offer is that subscribers who are in arrears must first pay up all arrearages to date. It would be well to avail yourself of this offer at once, as we can not promise that it will last very long. Notice that you take no risk whatever. We do all the risking. Address REV. W. C. BLACK, 512 Camp St., New Orleans.

P. S.—The machine will be shipped direct from the factory in the North

CHOICE Vegetables will always find a ready market—but only that farmer can raise them who has studied the great secret how to obtain both quality and quantity by the judicious use of well-balanced fertilizers. No fertilizer for Vegetables can produce a large yield unless it contains at least 8% Potash. Send for our books, which furnish full information. We send them free of charge.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

One man was killed and six wounded in a riot in San Juan, Puerto Rico, on Jan. 24.

Gen. Joubert is said to be suffering from a wound and incapacitated for field duty.

The bill giving Cuban vessels the most favored nation treatment in American waters passed the House.

Senator Morgan thinks the Nicaragua Canal bill will be passed and signed by the President within thirty days.

St. George's Church, on St. Charles avenue, was dedicated on Sunday, Bishop Sessums preaching the sermon.

Lord Methuen's camp on the Modder river has been selected as the base from which to invade the Orange Free State.

A rebellion has occurred among the Soudanese troops at Khartoum, where there are only 150 white British soldiers.

One hundred and two sunstrokes were officially reported in Buenos Ayres on Saturday. The temperature was 120 in the shade.

Mrs. Rich, the American woman convicted a few days ago in Juarez, Mexico, of murder, will not be pardoned by the governor of the State of Chihuahua.

The Victoria Cross will be conferred upon the four British officers who were conspicuous in their efforts to rescue the British guns at the battle of Colenso.

A movement has been started to raise funds by popular subscription to erect a monument to the memory of the late Gov. Goebel, who was killed last week.

Property estimated in value between $1,000,000 and $2,000,000 was destroyed by fire in St. Louis on Sunday. One fireman was killed and eight others injured.

Negroes who have returned to Mobile from Liberia bring stories of terrible sufferings endured by those who went to Africa in the hope of improving their condition.

It is announced at Washington that England will renounce its claims under the Clayton-Bulwer treaty and permit the United States to control the Nicaragua Canal exclusively.

Secretary Hay received $750 collected by the St. Louis Westiche Post for the benefit of the widows and orphans of Boer soldiers. The money was forwarded to the United States consul at Pretoria.

The merchants and manufacturers of Chattanooga have formed an association to protect themselves against people taking advantage of the bankruptcy laws with the object of defrauding creditors.

Gov. Ahumada, of the State of Chihuahua, Mexico, has granted the petition of citizens and remitted all back taxes and all that may become due within six months. This action is taken on account of the long drouth.

A heliogram flashed from Ladysmith said the Boer investment line was thinning. This is taken to mean that the burghers are moving in force toward the Tugela river to oppose another forward movement of Gen. Buller.

The President, on Feb. 2, transmitted to Congress the first volume of the report of the Philippine Commission. Among other things a territorial form of government is recommended for the archipelago, with a governor appointed by the President.

Some fifty members of the Western Fruit Jobbers' Association met in Chicago yesterday and organized the American Banana Dealers' Association. The object of the association is to compel the Banana Trust to abrogate unjust and oppressive regulations.

The Democratic and Republican leaders have met at Louisville, and reached an agreement, which, if accepted and carried out, will end the strife which has stirred the State of Kentucky. The Democrats have gained nearly every point they contended for. The troops are to be withdrawn from Frankfort at once, Goebel's election is to be validated by the Legislature, and when that is done Beckham's title to the office of governor is not to be questioned.

Gov. Goebel, who was declared governor of Kentucky by the contest committee, was shot last Tuesday, and died some days later. Lieutenant Gov. Beckham has succeeded to the office. Louisville will be the temporary seat of the Democratic State government. Gov. Taylor, the Republican candidate, who was ousted by the committee, has, with the assistance of the militia, prevented the Kentucky Legislature from meeting in the State House.

Advices from South Africa are of a conflicting and confusing character. Some of them indicate that Buller has again crossed the Tugela and is for a third time moving to the relief of Ladysmith, but the War Office at London has no news to give out, and cables dated Feb. 3 barely allude to an advance as a possibility of the near future. It is said that Buller will advance, but that no more news will be permitted to pass the lines until the city is relieved. The advices generally indicate that the Boers are concentrating around Ladysmith.

New Orleans Methodist Preachers' Meeting.

This week's meeting was devoted mainly to hearing reports from the different pastors of the past month's work.

The pastor of Dryades Street Church reported that a mortgage of $2700 on the church property had been raised, and that the outlook for his church is highly encouraging. The pastor of Burgundy Street Church reported the organization of a Junior League and W. H. M. Society; one addition to the church on profession of faith. The pastor of Felicity Street Church reported an increase in spirituality among the young people. While no decided progress is noticeable, all the departments of church work are in successful operation. The pastor of the Algiers Church reported the organization of a Junior League and good attendance at the regular services. The pastor of Louisiana Avenue reported 3 additions to the church on profession of faith, and that the League is doing splendid work. The pastor of Carondelet reported one addition on profession of faith and six by certificate. Improvement has been noticed in church and prayer meeting attendance. The pastor of Rayne Memorial reported an advance along many lines. Eight have been received into the church by certificate and one on profession. The Carrollton pastor reported a very flourishing Sunday-school, and that his work is encouraging in many respects. The pastor of Tchoupitoulas Mission mentioned several encouraging things about his work, though the field is a peculiarly difficult one.

All of the pastors stated that the Union Epworth League Revival Services had given them a spiritual uplift.

Rev. Dr. French, agent of the American Bible Society, was present and made a short talk.

The "Temptation of Jesus" will be the subject for discussion at the next meeting. Rev. P. O. Lowrey will open discussion.

FREE TO EVERYBODY.

Dr. J. M. Willis, a specialist of Crawfordsville, Indiana, will send free by mail to all who send him their address, a package of Pansy Compound, which is two weeks' treatment, with printed instructions, and is a positive cure for constipation, biliousness, dyspepsia, rheumatism, neuralgia, nervous or sick headache, la grippe, and blood poison.

TAKE NOTICE

That we are now handling two different styles of the Holman Bible in Bourgeois type. One we sell to paid-up subscribers at $1.50, the other at $1.30. The $1.30 Bible is substantially the same we have hitherto sold at $1.50. The one we sell at $1.50 is a far better Bible than has ever been sold at such a price. It is a marvel of cheapness. See our offer.

THE LIFE OF MOODY.

The Rev. J. Wilbur Chapman, D. D., of New York, is engaged in writing the life of D. L. Moody for John C. Winston & Co., Philadelphia. Dr. Chapman was one of Mr Moody's most intimate friends, and was closely associated with him in his evangelistic work. He is Vice-President of the Bible Institute of Chicago, of which Mr Moody was President, and desires that this Institution shall receive a share of the profits from the sale of this book. The publishers promise that the work shall be profusely illustrated. It will also contain an introduction by the Rev. F. B. Meyer, of Christ Church, London, and personal reminiscences from others who were intimately associated with Mr. Moody in his work.

AN APPEAL.

In simple justice to the English authors who have made The Expositor's Bible, and to their chosen publishers, we urge that their rights in this country be respected, especially by all clergymen.

This we do in view of the fact that an unauthorized reprint of this work has been undertaken by an American re-printer, a reprint which, as we are informed, is not being made under the editorial supervision of the editor-in-chief, or of the other authors, nor with their consent; nor have any arrangements been made by the promoters of this reprint to make any payment for the authors' rights.

Surely with the dawn of the twentieth century, the right of literary property should be held, at least, by clergymen, to be as sacred as that to other property, and (in the realm of conscience) a moral wrong should be avoided as zealously as a legal wrong.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From Our Regular Correspondent.)

Hon. Frederick W. Holls, who was one of the American delegates to the Peace Conference at The Hague, delivered a very interesting address in the lecture hall of Columbia University to about as distingnished an audience as it would be possible to get together in Washington, on the work of the conference which resulted in the adoption of the treaty providing for the permanent court of arbitration, which was this week ratified by the Senate without a dissenting voice. Mr. Holls summed up the work of the conference by saying that it had established the Magna Charta of international law, and that, while its work would probably show many failings and occasion many disappointments, it marked, on the whole, the greatest advance in the line of peace and good-will in the history of the races of the earth.

Bishop Hurst has received so many favorable replies to the prospectus of the Epworth College of Literature, to be a part of the American University, that he has authorized an architect to prepare plans for a handsome marble building, about 200 by 100 feet, at a cost of $200,000. While the architect has been directed to make the contemplated building harmonize with the general classical style of the plans of the group of educational buildings which will eventually occupy the grounds of the American University, it is intended that it shall be somewhat more ornate on the outside than the College of History, which is already finished. Bishop Hurst will send out a special appeal to the 1,700,000 Epworth Leaguers of the United States, asking for $1 contributions to the fund for the erection and maintenance of the Epworth College of Literature, and he is confident that more than the required amount will be raised during the present year. The site selected for the building faces the College of History, and is by the side of the site upon which the Illinois College of Languages will be erected.

President McKinley has received a petition from a committee representing the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church, strongly protesting against the sale of intoxicating liquors in the territory acquired from Spain by the United States. Following is a portion of the protest: "Since the recent accessions to our national domain in the Indies, East and West, anxious eyes have been directed toward those lands by the Christian people of America. Recognizing the fact that opportunity involves responsibility, deep solicitude has been felt as to the results that shall follow in those islands from the assumption of authority by our government. The unfurling of our national flag should be to those peoples the pledge of the starting of influences that shall be elevating and in every way beneficent. And surely the hope of such results seem justified, in view of our avowal of disinterested and philanthropic motives in entering on the recent conflict with Spain. The official records show that the amount of alcoholic liquors exported to those countries has doubled in six months. The American saloon, that foul blot on our civilization, has already gone to curse those lands. Whatever blessings of a higher Christian civilization we may have hoped to bring to those distant islands, it is to be feared that the benefits conferred will be counterbalanced by the demoralization and ruin inflicted by the American liquor traffic. Deprecating the coming of such sad calamities on these helpless races, and with trembling apprehension of God's righteous judgments on our beloved country, we come in the name of the million communicant members, and of other millions of adherents of the Presbyterian Church in the United States of America, to address you, the President of our Republic, earnestly asking the exercise of your power to the prevention of this great wrong."

Miss Jessie Ackerman, who has been around the world twice as a missionary, under the auspices of the W. C. T. U., delivered an address this week on her experiences in South Africa, where she was quite recently. She prefaced her remarks by saying that she, and not the W. C. T. U., must be held responsible for the opinions she intended expressing. Of President Kruger, with whom she had a conversation (Gen. Joubert acting as interpreter), she said: "I have looked into Mr. Gladstone's face, and stood face to face with Bismarck; I have noted the grand and massive lines of strength in his visage; I have watched the expression of wisdom and force in the face of Li Hung Chang, but never have I seen such a strong, noble character depicted in a human face as in that of President Kruger. There is a kindly look in his face that shows his heart beats for all that is good and holy and beautiful." Miss Ackerman said of the war: "The war is not between the English people and the Boers, but between Joseph Chamberlain, Cecil Rhodes, and the Boers. These two Englishmen will never be dealt with properly until they fall into the hands of the Almighty, and I should like to be there to see their treatment." Miss Ackerman closed her address by attacking the army "canteen," and she used some very strong language. She said the law to abolish the "canteen," for which the women of the country worked so hard, failed, "because here in this city there was a traitor to man who dared to insult all American intelligence by giving the now well-known interpretation to the canteen law."

Washington, Feb. 7, 1900.

THE MAKING OF A STATE.

BY MARY V. DUVAL.

Oliver Wendell Holmes says, "To be able to judge correctly of any man's character and disposition, you must begin back as far at least as his grandfather," and so, in making a judgment of the qualities that, combined, make ours one of the greatest States of the Union, we must study carefully the pioneer element, the men who redeemed our "forests primeval," and gathered together here, in less than half a century, a storied past, rich in traditions and customs, while they planned a future that was as glorious, as untried. The future historian of the State will, doubtless, deal less with mere facts and figures, and more with the causes and effects that make history a live and logical thing.

The early history of the State represented, not the slow development, the painful progress through war, famine and pestilence that make such pitiful reading of the story of other and older colonies. Instead, there was a direct and immediate transformation of the finest flower of civilization into a soil that had waited through ages for its coming, and gave to the rare exotic, when it came, a kindly welcome. It was but a repetition of the old fable of Minerva springing, full-fledged, from the brain of Jupiter; reaching, at a single bound, that high estate to which her less fortunate sisters had attained only through suffering, toil, and periods of retarded growth.

In searching for the roots of our civilization, it is to the country preeminently that we must go, instead of to the town or to the city. Exceptions to this are the early French settlements that fringed our territory along the gulf coast and on the banks of the Mississippi river. Drawn thither by the love of adventure and by the hope of gain held out by John Law, of "Mississippi Bubble" fame, they were soon engulfed by that rising tide of Anglo-American immigration which, setting in from the older Southern States, mainly those east of the Alleghanies and the Blue Ridge, soon absorbed all other nationalities, or left them to linger, as did Longfellow's Acadians, on alien soil—"Another race, with other customs and language."

The names of the French D'Ibervilles, De Tontis, and Bienvilles, and the Spanish Gayosos, Miros, and other proud and courtly Dons, mark an epoch indeed in our colonial and territorial history of which we may well be proud; but it is an epoch, so far as the real making State is concerned, which is pre-historic, and while it gives picturesque touches to our otherwise somewhat prosaic annals, and has left its impress indelibly stamped upon certain localities and communities, we must look elsewhere for that inner life and history which we are seeking so earnestly.

For all that is lasting and best in our civilization, for that which has moulded the spirit and temper of the people, and the genius and integrity of their institutions, we must look to an Anglo-Americanism which traces its origin back through those Southern States of which Virginia was the mother, through the old Dominion herself, and thence to centers of culture and refinement in those portions of England whose intellectual and political life was quickened by the influence of the Universities of Oxford and Cambridge.

From the farm-houses of Virginia, modeled after the manor-houses of England, a steady stream of emigration began soon after the close of the Revolution, spreading first to the Carolinas, Kentucky and Tennessee, and from thence sending out vigorous tributaries to the younger States, Mississippi and Alabama. As was to be expected, the wealthy planters and professional men who, in the early decades of the nineteenth century, began to build homes on the fair lands where the Choctaws and Chickasaws had once claimed ownership, sought as models the plan on which so many of the homes built by their forefathers in Virginia and elsewhere had been constructed. So we find that, after the inevitable era of the double log cabin had passed, there arose, fair to behold, many stately mansions with Grecian porticoes and pillared fronts, drawn after plans which had their origin in that classical architecture copied by Thomas Jefferson from well-known Greek and Roman models.

There was represented, on a newer and grander scale, the well-remembered ancestral homes in old Virginia, in the Old North State, or some other one of that group south of Mason and Dixon's line, which reproduced so faithfully the England of the eighteenth century. From the vantage-ground of his spacious veranda the planter loved to contemplate the broad sweep of lawn, through whose groves of native oaks the carriage-drive wound to the broad gate-way, was open to all comers alike. Beyond and around stretched his acres of cotton and corn—the rich returns for his labors made by a generous, responsive soil. The negro quarter stood in the rear of the "big house," its rows of white-washed cabins built on either side of a central street, over which the pickaninnies rolled and rollicked from sheer delight in living. The gracious manners, handed down through generations of English, Scotch, or Irish-Americans, were his, and his the proud birthright of "gentleman" in the best sense of the term.

Not only old manners and old speech, but the old pride of the earlier States, was reproduced upon the soil of the new "Arcadia" upon the banks of the Mississippi. In the libraries every current periodical and publication of the day, American or foreign, was found, giving food for thought and conversation on the leading events of the day, from prices in the slave and cotton markets to the latest productions of literature and art, and up thence to the noblest things that can engage the attention of the mind of man. The love of land and the passion for out-of-door pursuits was, down to the period of the Civil War, the chief characteristic, not of the Mississippian alone, but of the Anglo-Americans of the entire South. They cultivated the soil for pure love of it, and caressed the bosom of the earth with the same fondness their forefathers had shown in the "tight little isle across the sea." The true Saxon avoidance of cities and the corresponding love of rural life, with the elegant leisure which a rich soil and generous climate engendered, made life in Mississippi during the first half of the nineteenth century a pastoral idyl, a poet's dream.

Few of the dangers and privations that characterized the pioneer life of other States were to be endured in this. The notable exceptions are the massacre at Ft. Rosalie and the bloodshed that followed Bienville's trail into the heart of the Chickasaw country. This, however, was at a period far distant from the time when the real building of the State began. Diplomacy, rather than an appeal to arms, won the victory for the white man, though at one time the shadow of a general uprising of the native Indians lowered over the early settlers, to be dispelled forever by the South's ideal hero, Andrew Jackson. The generally peaceful character of the native Indians favored that love of rural life to find which the early settler braved the long and tedious journey over mountain and stream, separating himself forever from his fatherland and its hallowed associations. The pioneer settlers of other American colonies had to build cities in self-defense. The colony on Manhattan Island became, first, New Amsterdam, and then New York, because the Knickerbockers and their descendants were not able to cope, singly and alone, with the savage foe. Oglethorpe, for the same reason, built wisely and well at Savannah; the advance guard of civilization in Middle Tennessee broke ground on the Cumberland at Nashville. Louisiana had her, New Orleans, and Alabama her Mobile, but the typical Mississippian has ever considered his country dwelling his castle, and himself able to hold it against all who might dispute with him the right of possession.

"Steam," says Emerson, "is almost an Englishman;" "grass," says James Lane Allen, "is almost a Kentuckian," and we may add in this connection that "cotton is almost, if not altogether, a Mississippian."

The hereditary love of land and agricultural pursuits characteristic of the descendants of those who had redeemed the older Southern States from the wilderness, had grown into a passion during the first decades of the nineteenth century, and the stories of the rich alluvial lands east of the Mississippi fed the imagination and fired the blood of those in whom the pioneer instinct was still and active. The wondrous fertility of the soil, with its marvelous yield of cotton; the delightful climate, adapted to almost every production of the temperate zone, seemed to the young paladin of Virginia and the Carolinas a veritable land of promise, which abounded, not in milk and honey alone, but where "cotton, hog and hominy" were the staple productions, and fortunes were in easy reach of those who sought them.

The descendant of the Virginian cavaliers was caught by that glamour of the imagination which pictured himself as the proud possessor of broad and fertile acres of black cotton lands, as yet untouched by plow or harrow; of numerous dusky slaves singing their happy and contented labor songs, and looking to him as their liege-lord and master; of the gleaming white walls of a mansion formed on the model of the home of his fathers, presided over by some dainty Southern maiden who could jingle a huge bunch of keys, superintend the housekeeping, and in his absence the plantation work; keep the looms and spindles busy, make pickles, preserves and cake after the most approved of old Virginian recipes, train her children and her slaves in Christian doctrine and morals, comfort the sick, cheer the dying, and still find time to cultivate those graces of mind and body which have made the name of Southern woman synonymous with all that is beautiful and true.

We hear much in this progressive age of the enlargement of woman's sphere and of the increasing of woman's responsibilities. The pioneer women of the South builded better than they knew, for they, too, were the makers of States and of statesmen.

What a brave time that must have been when the new States were filling up with the best that the old had to offer! How like a romance the long journey over-land of those bold spirits who came to seek homes and build governments in the new Eldorado of the South! We can see in fancy, and by the help of tradition, the patriarchal procession moving in stately dignity over mountain, hill and stream; the family carriage with its blooded horses, its fair occupants and gay outriders; the slowly-moving, snowy-covered wagons, and the swarm of sable retainers, whose song and dance at night when the campfire shed its flickering light on the animated scene, presents a picture on whose canvas there now remains only the colors dimmed by time and change—a memory to be cherished, a tradition to be handed down to future generations. The old methods and manners, forms and customs of living thus transplanted from the old States to the new, made life strong and sweet and simple—a life that was worth the living, a country that was worth the dying for. It made generations of strong, brave men and true, beautiful women, living upright and noble lives, ready to sacrifice themselves unselfishly for family or public welfare, making in the Western wilderness a government whose foundation was laid in equity, whose laws were just and humane, enacted for the generations that have since arisen to bless the memory of the founders of the State. Every pulsation of life in that heroic time beat in unison with the heart of nature, and all things bore the impress of a tranquil pastoral life. The incentives to, and the necessities for, building great cities were lacking, and even the towns and villages scattered at wide intervals through the country-side drew their existence from the exigencies of plantation life, and the demands that, once a month at least, drew the country folks to the county seat, overflowing the quiet streets and inundating the court-house squares with a flood of life and color that will yet be utilized by the poets and romance writers of the future.

The old types of country life, so strong and of such individuality—those that represented the "tender grace of a day that is dead"—have passed away after holding sway in this State for at least three-quarters of a century.

The changed conditions of the South since 1865 have led to the gradual blotting out of the ancient regime—the almost feudal system and mode of living that incorporated all that was grand and noble in the Middle Ages with all that was enlightened and progressive in modern times.

The love of country life has become less strong, and the movement of the white population towards town and railroads has cast a change that is very marked over rural habits and modes of living. The country magnate, whose stalwart sons and blooming daughters were expected to inherit his landed estates in the good old way, has disappeared; the homes that in their day were the abodes of peace and plenty, and the centers of a generous hospitality, are now the stopping-places of a shiftless black tenantry; the residences, for the time, of the aspiring colored gentleman and "his lady." The State is still dominated by agricultural instincts, and Cotton is still king, but the old life which drew its strong, helpful currents from deep reservoirs underneath our social system has passed away, and what we do to preserve its memory and traditions must be done quickly.

There is a wealth of material lying around us which we have but to utilize to make the story of our past glow upon the pages of history, fiction, and poetry. When some future writer, in "thoughts that breathe and words that burn," shall do for the South what Walter Scott and Robert Burns did for their native land, then will the world know that this land of poetry and song is also the land of heroes and hero-worshipers.

(Concluded next week.)

For Pastors and Presiding Elders of the Mississippi Conference.

The following is an extract from the report on the Twentieth Century Fund as published in the Minutes, with some corrections in punctuation and verbiage that are necessary to the sense of it:

The success of this movement depends greatly upon the zeal with which it is operated during the next six months. We urge our pastors to throw themselves unreservedly into it at once. If there be confidence in ourselves and our people, barriers will be removed and success achieved. Faith and ardor will discover the means.

We make the following requests:

1. We request that on each pastoral charge, where it has not already been done, a complete roll of membership be promptly made in the roll-book, and that it be impressed upon all that when the work of raising the fund is completed, the roll-book is to be kept among the permanent records of the charge.

2. We request the immediate organization in each charge of a Twentieth Century Fund Committee of two, or more, active laymen, of which committee the pastor shall be chairman. Where it seems advisable, the committee shall appoint a Board of Canvassers, to be composed of one member for every fifty members of the church, besides one or two extra canvassers for work among our adherents. The pastor is to appoint the committee, or if the church or Quarterly Conference is at hand, it may be done under the call for "Miscellaneous Business." This committee is to circulate literature, especially the "New Century Education," which is the monthly paper issued in the interest of the fund; and it is to push the movement with all possible vigor. It will generally be found best for the committee to hold one, or more, educational meetings, at which public subscriptions shall be made, these public appeals to be followed by private solicitations and house-to-house canvassing.

3. Where an Epworth League is organized pastors are urged to assign to it work in connection with this movement.

4. We request that each presiding elder choose two or more active persons who, along with himself, shall compose the Executive Committee of the district, whose duty it shall be to project great educational meetings in different parts of the district, cooperating with the pastors and local committees in securing the best speakers for the interior circuits and most indifferent communities.

In reference to the distribution of the fund your Board of Education recommend the adoption of the following:

"Resolved, That all amounts specially directed by the donors shall be sent to the Treasurer of this board, R. W. Millsaps, Jackson, Miss., and by him forwarded at once to the Treasurer of the institution to which donated."

Begging your attention to these requests, I am,

Your brother,

H. G. HAWKINS.

THE LAND BEYOND THE SEA.

BY FREDERICK WILLIAM FABER.

The land beyond the sea!
When will our toil be done?
Slow-footed years! more swiftly run
Into the gold of that unsettling sun!
Homesick we are for thee,
Calm land beyond the sea!

The land beyond the sea!
Why fadest thou in light?
Why art thou better seen towards night?
Dear land! look always plain, look always bright,
That we may gaze on thee,
Calm land beyond the sea!

The land beyond the sea!
Sweet is thy endless rest.
But sweeter far that Father's breast
Upon thy shores eternally possest;
For Jesus reigns o'er thee,
Calm land beyond the sea!

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

REPORT OF COMMITTEE ON BOOKS AND PERIODICALS.

(Published by request of the North Mississippi Conference.)

Notwithstanding the year just closing has been an unfavorable one to the prosperity of many lines of business in various sections of the country, we find that our church has been blessed by a liberal patronage of our Publishing House and church organs, and that there is a marked increase in the demand for pure, wholesome literature, as will be seen by the reports of the several departments to which we briefly refer.

OUR PUBLISHING HOUSE.

The report of our Book Agents, made at the close of the last fiscal year, March 31, 1899, and approved by the Book Committee, Aug. 16, 1899, shows a net increase over that of 1898 of $13,611.60 in the total business transacted, which we are glad to note; and the financial condition of the country to-day justifies us in expressing the belief that even a better showing may be made for the next year. Believing the report of the Book Agents to be one of general interest, we quote at length from it as follows:

"Total business from all departments	$350 416 29
Gain in assets for the year.	40,144 19
Cash and sinking fund...	200 986 07
Total assets March 31, 1899	911,685 20

LIABILITIES.

Outstanding bonds	$ 25 00
Amount on deposit by Sunday-school Boards.	3 233 42
Over-payments on the part of customers	2 557 99
On deposit	3 380 48
Total debt April 1, 1899	$ 9,196 89
Capital as per ledger	$902 488 31

"Like a long series preceding it, the year was unpropitious to the prosperity of the House. There was war, with its distractions; pestilence, with its terrors, and wide waste of wealth by rain and frost.

"When the settlement for the year was made we were gratified to find the balance so well in our favor. To all who contributed to this result we owe hearty thanks, and would make due acknowledgment of our obligation.

"The outlook is better for the current year, and we hope for better results for the year's work, and yet the financial gains may not be greater, for by the establishment of a branch house at Dallas, Texas, the expense account for the year has been considerably increased. This branch house has been long desired by our brethren of the Southwest who represent much of the territory and membership of the church. It is hoped that it will not only prove a great convenience to them, but increase the usefulness of the House, and very soon add to its revenues. The present prospect of the enterprise is hopeful."

NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE.

Dr. W. C. Black, editor and publisher of the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, makes a very favorable and commendable report, from which it is readily seen that he is a man of financial ability as well as of intellectual and spiritual power. The liquidation of the Keener debt, which has been against the concern for so many years, is noted with especial interest. While there has been some increase in the circulation of this excellent paper, yet it is not read as extensively as it should be by the Methodists of our Conference, and we urge upon our ministers to use greater efforts to put it into the homes of their laymen.

THE NASHVILLE CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE

In referring to the Nashville Christian Advocate, we do so with a deep feeling of spiritual and church pride, because we believe it to be the best religious publication of its kind in this broad land of ours, and we congratulate the church on being fortunate enough to have as the editor of our connectional organ a man of God who is equal to all emergencies, and who has as his able assistant another faithful itinerant whose superior for the position he occupies has not been found. The Nashville Advocate abounds in good things. The editorials, while written in a kind and tender manner, are strong and forceful, and carry convictions with them. The condensed news department is presented in such way that even the busiest man may keep posted on the important events of the day without interference with his duties. The selections are of the choicest and purest, and they are full of rich and nutritious spiritual food for the young mind. It should go into every Southern Methodist home, and we urge our ministers to be more diligent in their efforts to increase its circulation, not on account of the increase in revenues to be derived therefrom, but because of the great and never-ending good it will accomplish among the people in whose interests they are laboring.

THE METHODIST REVIEW.

The circulation of the Review, we regret to learn, is less than it has been. This publication has a great and important mission to perform in the work of the church, and our ministers should not lose sight of the fact that its increased circulation will aid them materially in the furtherance of the cause of Christianity.

THE EPWORTH ERA.

With the rapid growth of the Epworth League the Era circulation increases, but we are informed that the income is still inadequate to its support. The pages are full of interesting and valuable information, for the young especially, and we trust that it may receive the patronage that it deserves.

SUNDAY-SCHOOL LITERATURE.

The Sunday school Committee will, doubtless, make you a full report touching upon this important subject, and we refer to it only to add our commendation, and to express our gratification at the success attained along this line.

SONG BOOKS.

We note with pleasure that there is a growing tendency throughout this Conference to substitute in the Sunday-schools and Epworth Leagues our "Young People's Hymnal," in place of the song books published by outside and oftentimes irresponsible concerns, and that our own hymn books are being more extensively used in the churches.

OTHER BOOKS.

Among the many good books being sold by our Publishing House there are none more worthy of careful study than "The Son of Man," by Gross Alexander, and "Studies in Bible Truths," by Bishop Keener, and we commend them especially to both ministers and laymen.

WORK OF OUR COLPORTER.

Rev. G. W. Bachman, who has so faithfully served us during the past years in the capacity of colporter, reports that he has attended seven District Conferences and visited fifty-five churches in forty six pastoral charges; that he has sold books to the amount of $2,065 10, and papers, including Sunday-school literature, to the amount of $670 30.

It is the desire of the Book Agents, Messrs. Barbee and Smith, that Bro. Bachman be reappointed to the place he now holds, and this committee joins in the recommendation, believing that the furtherance of the work can be best accomplished by him who has been so unceasing and untiring in his efforts to place good books and periodicals into the hands and homes of our members throughout the North Mississippi Conference.

EQUAL LAY REPRESENTATION IN THE ANNUAL CONFERENCES A NECESSITY.

When the next General Conference meets in Dallas, in May, 1902, it will have been thirty-six years since lay representation in our Annual and General Conferences was adopted by the M. E. Church, South. It has been clearly proved that this policy has in it no danger to the church, but rather much good. Nor do we believe any hazard will be incurred extending this to full quality between the clergy and laity in the Annual Conferences. In fact, there are many good reasons why this should be done.

First, the unending and perplexing financial problems will all be solved thereby. It has ever been repulsive to the American mind to submit to "Taxation without representation;" whereas, by the present policy, there are vast sections of our territory which rarely, if ever, have a lay representative in the Annual Conference—not one in ten years. They merely allow the apportionments to be made to their charges year after year, without protest, for the sake of peace. They are loathe to disturb the "order of things," in the first place; then, again, the times are often inopportune. Organizations pay small heed to a "hue and cry" at times when anarchy and communism give the "cue and fashion" to every public speech and bill of grievances. This has always been so. There is good in it, and it may result in much harm by running to extremes. We think much harm has come to our church from matters remaining in statu quo for too long a time. Assessments have thus been fixed on charges (and I am not objecting to amount of assessments, provided they are equitably pro rated) where the people have very little interest in such matters, because few of them have ever come in contact with the great Conferences of our church, and they feel that the exactions are made without their knowledge or consent; hence the pastor and the spirited laymen who assist him exhaust themselves in vain efforts to arouse the membership, and finally give up in despair, saying, "It can't be done."

Brethren, "it can be done." This is the watchword of every faithful Methodist. Who has not read it in the papers and heard it from the rostrum till its force is lost? Why, the brother who never attends Conference! Another capital phrase among church people is, "Not a question of ability, but of willingness."

Now, I believe both of these to be true conditions. "It can be done" by placing the management of these affairs largely in the hands of those who handle the treasure, thus arousing the "willingness" where the "ability" slumbers through contact and responsibility. This would be augmented by equal lay representation.

Second, only questions of polity and administration can arise in our Annual Conferences. So no harm could come from the fact that laymen are not theologians. Not every preacher is that, as to that matter. But the laymen are the "men of affairs" in the world, and are much better prepared to grapple with the material affairs of the church—not that ministers are incompetent. They have done remarkably, considering that they have also had charge of the work of preaching and teaching of doctrine and morals. The mind likes variety, but too great a strain in such contrasted spheres is inexpedient. True, doctrine and practice ought to meet and coalesce in the field of morals, and it is profitable for preachers to understand finances and for laymen to study doctrine. But the rule of progress insists that each man have a something definite to perform, and that he perform it. When this is violated there is confusion, and much loose performance and non-performance; and, however great has been our success, recent evidence goes to show that it would have been much greater had our Annual Conferences been made up of, at least, an equal number of laymen and preachers. It would popularize our polity without conceding anything to worldliness.

Thirdly, it would develop as high a type of piety among the membership as is claimed for the ministry, and it would tend to unify the two classes, since while each would specialize in a separate domain, their labors would be so much more identical. We would no more be pained with that insult to probity in the expression, "There is more expected of preachers than of private members, anyhow." A holy strife for spiritual labors would be gendered by giving more of our worthy laymen prominence in the councils of the church. This is not to be gainsaid.

Some think an increase in the representation in the Annual Conference would render that body unwieldy, making its entertainment burdensome. "Some are already too large," say they. All this can be easily remedied. We can have the size reduced by increasing the number, which, indeed, would effect much in bringing the Conference nearer the people; or, which is best in any case, let the members of the Annual Conference pay a moderate per diem for entertainment. This will bring bids from twice the number of towns now applying for the annual meetings. Any faithful pastor or layman would save money by paying this in order to get more of the laymen in the business of the body. For they usually have to make up deficits that would never occur on the equality plan. Thus they pay out many times more than five or six days' board at Conference would cost.

Preachers and laymen who attend Annual Conferences are not objects of charity in the pauper sense. They can, if necessary, pay their way. "But," say some, "we can't have full attendance, even with free entertainment." No wonder. I wouldn't go to Conference either if I just had to sit about and look on with nothing assigned me to do, as if I were incapable. Give our laymen an equal chance, and you will soon see their places filled.

Again, a good policy would be to have the Board of Stewards provide an annual fund sufficient for the pastor and one laymen from each charge, to be maintained at Conference. This would be an economical policy, by reason of the increase in temporal and spiritual interest which it would bring about throughout the church.

This article closes with this prophecy: When the equality policy is adopted throughout our machinery, statistics will show large net increases in every department. The new century should be entered upon with this advantage.

GOLDEN WEDDING.

The Rev. J. M. Johnston, of the Louisiana Conference, will celebrate his "golden wedding" on the fourteenth of February. We desire to furnish your readers with a brief sketch of his long and useful life. His grandparents came from Ireland in the year 1760 and were members of the Wesleyan Societies, and probably sat at the feet of the Gamaliel of Methodism. His parents were natives of North Carolina.

Bro. Johnston transferred to the Louisiana Conference in 1875, the seat of the Conference being at Alexandria that year.

Bro. Johnston passed his seventy-fifth birthday on Jan. 20. He is still hearty and strong, and though a superannuate of one year, is doing supply work at Pollock and Olla. He has lost none of the vigor of his youth, and lives on the "mountain-top." He has been a member of the church for 63 years; 52 years he has occupied an official position; 35 years he has been a herald on the towers of our Zion. During all these years of ministerial labor his character has been unchallenged. "Nothing against Bro. Johnston" has always been the reply when the Conference roll was called. His first work in this Conference was Big Cane and Evergreen.

Sister Mary Elizabeth Johnston (nee Moore), his faithful companion during a half century, is a descendant of the invincible John Knox, whose fervent prayers shook crowned heads when he exclaimed, "Give me Scotland, or I die!"

C. C. MILLER.

Alexandria, La., Feb. 6, 1900.

Happiness consists primarily in a good conscience. He who has a conscience void of offense towards God and man enjoys a satisfaction and happiness which nothing else can give. The moral element within us can not be ignored. The soul must be adjusted to duty and God. Man can not escape his destiny. He can not come down to the brute life if he would. The irrepressible conflict goes on. Here is a worm that may never die, a fire that may never be quenched. To know and enjoy God, to live in lowly obedience and devotion, to keep a heart free from worldliness and care, is bliss supreme. Here is the secret the wise men have sought.—Texas Advocate.

Do your best loyally and cheerfully, and suffer yourself to feel no anxiety or fear. Your times are in God's hands. He has assigned you your place; he will direct your paths; he will accept your efforts, if they be faithful.—Canon Farrar.

REMEMBERED.

How shall we tribute bring, how sweep the strings for song?
From store so rich, from choral-sounding all the years along?
Where fill the pen? From fountain at its brim for years?
With heaven's crystal, or with the sudden plenty of our tears?
Yet the Te Salutamus are we moved as one to make,
And from the fullness of abundant resource take;
From the garden, over-full, gather bells of fuller bloom,
And all the brothers coming, heap their fragrance on a tomb.

No one may speak for these at home, who all along the years
The great heart knew in smiles, in labors and in tears;
For her whose hand, his clasping in the scented days of youth,
Unclasped awhile from his, holds yet his knightly troth and truth.

Amazed we on this cypress look, these dark embroideries of death;
Their shadow troubles us—in shadow let us lay them underneath;
We stand in light, serene, far-scattered, vivid light of glance and smile;
Speak we of light, then, shining along the course time laid awhile.

Honors we keep, as heirs of Him whose life of kingly span
Across the arch of years perfected the full structure of a man;
Our traverse of the structure glad for the gladdening of the throng;
Along it safety learning, upon it bursting into song.

The pastors watched, unsleeping, on Judaean plain one night,
And to their flocks from the birth returned, gave voice from pure foresight;
Our pastor kept his happy vigils, from manger, from the tree,
Gathering light to the guided flock, for saved and lost to see.

At whiles the represented hosts go up for counselling, for wider things,
And Zion bevets to her work great sons to gain great happenings;
New spring our tears to greater flow! Our captain and our son
Militant no more, we mourn and lay great armor by, its action done.

The hosts all take their leave at last above, for service or for rest,
And righteous years are ladders runged straight to the Throne addressed;
Ours it is to sight those years, each higher, each to duty fast,
And from the last high year on earth to see the greatest step the last.

Blessings to Him who starred from highest place the way
To us, and, leaving, left the gift of light to those who stay.
We voice His glory, and more widely see, through eyes now dim
For tears, the highway homeward taken by our greatest one to Him.

Reverently written in memory of Charles Green Andrews, D. D., who, for a number of years here, has held me in his grateful debt, and whose departing has not released it.

A LAST WORD.

To the Auxiliaries in the Louisiana Conference:

This last word before the day appointed for our Twentieth Century Rally, and before the close of our fiscal year, goes forth with a prayer that He who holds all hearts in His hand may awaken within each one a deep sense of gratitude for His mercies and blessings to this people for generations. May the Spirit's power reveal to each one the full meaning of this day of opportunity, that an honest effort may be made to meet its obligations!

This month closes the most critical year in the history of the Woman's Home Mission Society. The hand of the Lord our God has been upon us for good in the past, and the open door for larger opportunity of service in the future is his commendatory "Well done!" on our past efforts. "Thou hast been faithful over a few things, I will make thee ruler over many things." The day of small things was not despised by our faithful workers, and for their reward God gives them rule over many large enterprises. Will they meet this growing responsibility with the same loyalty of devotion and endeavor? I believe they will.

The fiscal year closes with this month. Let every member of every auxiliary pay up her dues in full and see that every pledge for special work has been redeemed. If this is not done, the Board can not meet its obligations. Examine the list of your membership and see if any new members have been added during the year. If not, why not? Give your answer by trying to secure many before the opening of the new year, and thus add both influence and financial strength to your society.

In February we have the time set apart for the bringing in of our great thank-offering for the blessings of a century. We have done a great deal of praying, talking, and writing upon this subject—preparing the minds and hearts of our people to realize their personal duty and privilege; now has come the day of action. It is our opportunity to let the Spirit's call express itself through our liberality. Let us not do despite to his grace and come short of the glory of God. He has promised to supply our need, and he is going to do it through our own love and liberality out of the gold and silver he has placed in our keeping.

Let us come up to the courts of the Lord with joy and thanksgiving during the month, and feel, as we lay our gifts upon the altar, that he sanctifies them and adds power and blessing, that they may accomplish his glory in the salvation of the children of his love.

The time has come for us to close our accounts for the year. Let every Conference, auxiliary, and member of the Home Mission Society ask of itself, "How much owest thou unto thy Lord?" and answer by paying up honestly all back dues and pledges for special work before March 1, so that the reports of the General Treasurer may be ready for presentation at the annual meeting of the Board.

Are all things in readiness for your Twentieth Century Thank-offering service? If you have not done your part in preparing, you have that far blocked the way to success. If you have done all in your power, trust in the Lord, and give while you pray for the spirit of liberality in others. When the service is over send a list of your pledges for the Honor Roll of Our Homes.—Our Homes.

Not merely, however, is the absence of selfish or impure desires needful to clear the judgment and brighten the reason; the presence of warm sympathies, and pure affections, and enthusiasm for the right and the truth are also important elements. The cold heart, however impartial, can not give that impetus to the intellect that the fervent impulse of a true and honorable soul will inspire. It is the glow of interest in the truth and love for the right which can best and most surely find out what is true and right, and follow it when found. Let us, then, never forget that while the spread and increase of intelligence is always on the side of virtue, yet without good feeling, pure aims, and right conduct, we can not hope for a strong intellect, a sound judgment, or a clear mind.—Public Ledger.

The Christian Life.

As the mother hushes the grieved, weeping child, with its hot, flushed face pressed against her own, so does our Father in heaven often allow us to moan out our sorrows in his strong arms, with the blessed light of his face falling upon us. Like the "shadow of the great rock in a weary land," he is always near to cheer us along when we are ready to sink down by the wayside in despair. When we are faint and thirsty, the cool, clear water gushes up at our feet. In every emergency of life he is the same tender, loving, Infinite Friend.—Mrs. M. A. Hoit.

All actions done from the same motive are alike in God's eyes. We are not all called to great service, but we are called to sympathetic interest in those who are so, and to help them as we may. It was a law in Israel: "As his part is that goeth down to the battle, so shall his part be that tarrieth by the stuff." It is the law of Christ's kingdom, in which motives, not deeds, and spiritual susceptibility, not the accidents of the mode of its expression, determine place, capacity of receiving, and therefore reward.—Alexander Maclaren, D. D.

Forbear; give up a little; take less than belongs to you; endure more than should be put upon you. Make allowance for another's judgment of the case; differing in constitution, circumstances and interests, we shall often decide differently about the justice and integrity of things; and mutual concessions alone can heal the breaches and bridge over the chasms between us, while unfair resentment and stiff maintenance of our position will breed endless dispute and bitterness.—C. A. Bartol, D. D.

Don't try to hold God's hand; let him hold yours. Let him do the holding, and you do the trusting.—H. W. Webb Pepoe.

FROM THE WORK.

PLEASANT GROVE CIROUIT.

Very much to our pleasure, and not beyond the patience of the good people, I was returned to this work at our last Conference. In due course of time the friendly winds and waves of good will brought to the shores of our necessities vessels laden with the rich treasures of a broad liberality—all of which were readily unloaded without reference to any law of import tax. The packages ranged in weight from 1 to 196 pounds in kind, covering the general field of necessaries, several delicacies, and three extraordinaries—turkeys. This personal consideration was further demonstrated by a Christmas gift to the parsonage of two new floors, a new carpet, nice lamp, nice rocker, and money to buy furniture. Nearly every Sabbath has been bright, which made it possible to have good attendance upon public worship, and we have had some very fine services. The presence and power of the Holy Spirit was upon the people. We need and hope to have a most successful year. BEN P. JACO, P. C.

PARIS, MISS.

This is quite a large work, having seven appointments and five hundred and eighty-six members. The possibilities of this charge are great. In fact, it ought to be one of the best circuits in this Conference. What we need is the consecration of time, talent, and means. We are planning for and expecting a year of success in the Master's cause. The people have been very kind to us since we came, and have remembered us in a very substantial way.

We had a good time at our first quarterly meeting. "Gilderoy," our beloved presiding elder, was on hand, and gave us two excellent sermons. Our people are delighted with him. The charge made a good report on the finances for the first quarter. The stewards made a liberal assessment for the pastor. The Lord helping us, we aim to do the best year's work we have ever done.

On coming to this charge we found only one Sunday-school, and no Epworth Leagues. We have organized one Sunday-school and one Epworth League, and we expect to organize several more of each. Pray for us. J. H. ROGERS.

Feb. 5, 1900.

DUMAS, MISS.

The old itinerant wheel turned around last November, and, to my greatest surprise, picked me up from Corinth, and sat me down at Dumas, to serve Ripley circuit for this year: and we are not sorry we are here. When we arrived here, a few days before Christmas, there was not a vacant house for us, but Bro. D. A. Tigrett and his good wife, and all the rest, opened their doors and hearts to us. We made Bro. Tigrett's our headquarters until a house was located. All gave us a hearty welcome into their homes. The people have received us kindly all over the work, and tokens of appreciation are coming from every quarter. Their appreciation has been shown not merely in word, but by means of numerous substantial gifts such as meats, dry goods, canned goods, crockery, glass-ware, barrel of flour, sugar, coffee, soda, salt, starch, mo

We are well pleased with our new presiding elder, Rev. W. M. Young. He is the right man in the right place.

Our first Quarterly Conference was one of the most spiritual I have ever attended. The Lord was sensibly present. Though held on Monday, yet all the churches were represented save one, and finances were double what they were at the first quarterly meeting last year.

We have resolved that this shall be the best year of our itinerant life.

May the Lord bless you in your work! B. P. FULLILOVE, P. C.

A SWEEPING REVIVAL AT BUNKIE, LA.

We have just closed a sweeping revival at Bunkie and Evergreen, La., of ten days at each place; assisted by the Rev. Clarence B. Stronse, editor of The Religions Review of Reviews, New York. Scores of leading men of each town and the surrounding country were converted. Ninety-five united with the different churches, ranging in age from 15 to 65. Through the labors of this man of God the gambling business was broken up in each of these towns, and more than 500 men stood up, first and last, to declare that the saloon should never return, nor a "blind tiger" live in these parts again. At the closing service at Evergreen more than fifty promised to erect family altars. We have received 35 into the church; 10 more have applied for membership.

Bro. Stronse's preaching qualities are of a high order. He attacks sin in all its phases vigorously and uncompromisingly. His sermons are not pretty little essays, nor addresses upon semi secular themes, but discourses surcharged with gospel truth, and delivered with becoming dignity and grace. They are thoughtful, instructive, show careful preparation and are usually delivered without notes. They impress the hearers as coming from a soul that has felt the power of the truth, and in the ardor of love wishes others to know it.

We thank God for this meeting. A great reformation has come over the whole community; a good, healthy, moral and religious sentiment now pervades.

We are planning to enlarge our church at Bunkie. This charge is one of the best in the district, and, perhaps, in the Conference. The people know just how to make a preacher feel at home. They are very kind to us, and we receive many tokens of their appreciation.

TOPISAW (MISS.) CHARGE.

I reached my new field of labor the first day of January. The good people of this charge received me very cordially. The first Sunday of the new year I preached to a large and responsive congregation at Pleasant Grove. The good people at this church seem ready and willing to do something for the Master. The new church here, which we hope to finish this year, will reflect great credit upon the community.

At Topisaw, my next appointment, I found a well-organized Sunday-school doing good work under the wise leadership of Lovick S. Felder. Three and a half miles west of this church, at a snug school-house, we have a live prayer meeting every Sunday night.

On the third Sunday I preached to a large congregation at Sartin's Church. After the sermon a collection was taken to raise money to finish a splendid new church at this point, and $78 in cash was obtained. The Building Committee turned over the money to me, authorizing me to order the full amount of lumber needed, with the assurance that the balance due would be paid on delivery of the lumber. This I accordingly did. We hope to have the building finished, and a revival of Holy Ghost religion in it, before the Summer is over.

On this, my first round, I have induced twenty-two men to pledge themselves to pay ten cents per month, and nine others to promise twenty-five cents per month, on the Conference collections. Forty-five girls have each promised me a hen for the Lord's work. They have all agreed to tend the hens well, and devote the proceeds to the missionary cause.

Our Board of Stewards, thirteen in number, is composed of godly, large hearted men, who have not neglected their pastor.

We are hard at work, and are praying much for a sweeping revival at each church.

Success to the ADVOCATE! We hope to see it in many homes before the year closes. J. J. GOLDEN.

SURCHARGED WITH THE HOLY SPIRIT.

When a lecturer on electricity wants to show an example of a human body surcharged with his fire, he places a person on a stool with glass legs. The glass serves to isolate him from the earth, because it will not conduct the fire—the electric fluid; were it not for this, however much might be poured into his frame, it would be carried away by the earth; but when thus isolated from it, he retains all that enters him. You see no fire, you hear no fire; but you are told that it is pouring into him. Presently you are challenged to the proof—asked to come near, and hold your hand close to his person; when you do so, a spark of fire shoots out toward you.

If thou, then, wouldst have thy soul surcharged with the fire of God, so that those who come nigh to thee shall feel some mysterious influence proceeding out from thee, thou must draw nigh to the source of that fire—to the throne of God and of the Lamb, and shut thyself out from the world—that cold world which so swiftly steals our fire away. Enter into thy closet and shut the door, and there, isolated "before the throne," await the baptism; then the fire shall fill thee, and when thou comest forth, holy power will attend thee, and thou shalt labor, not in thy own strength, but "with demonstration of the spirit and with power."—Rev. William Arthur, in Tongue of Fire.

Don't be too swift to take offense. Many times the shot is not at you. Don't cry before you are hit. But if your feelings are hurt, bear it in silence. Don't tell a lie. Don't parade it before others. Suffer in silence, and wait God's time to right the matter. Learn to suffer for Christ's sake. You can get the victory over the devil by not talking about your injured feelings. He likes for you to speak of it often. It adds fuel to the fire.—Churchman.

"WITH BRAINS SIR!"

A great artist was once asked what he mixed his pigments with to obtain such wonderful effects. His reply was: "With brains, sir!"

This would be the real answer to hundreds of people who are all the time asking what Dr. Pierce's medicines are mixed with to produce such marvelous cures. These medicines are the result of Dr. Pierce's thorough professional education; his deep study of the principles of materia medica and of the human physiology in health and disease; and above all his unparalleled practical experience.

"I thank God for giving you wisdom and knowledge, and guiding you in making these medicines," says Mrs. H. A. Alshrook, of Austin, Lonoke Co., Ark., in an earnest letter to Dr. Pierce. "After five months of great suffering I write this for the benefit of other sufferers from the same afflictions. I doctored with our family physician without any good results, so my husband urged me to try Dr. Pierce's medicines—which I did, with wonderful results. I am completely cured. I took four bottles of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, four of his 'Golden Medical Discovery' and two vials of his 'Pleasant Pellets.'"

There is no medicine in the world that has helped and cured so many weak and ailing women, as Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It was devised solely for that purpose by one of America's most eminent specialists in this particular field of medical practice. Any woman may write to Dr. Pierce for advice which will be sent confidentially and absolutely free of charge.

Dr. Pierce's great thousand-page Common Sense Medical Adviser will be sent for the mere cost of mailing; paper-bound for 21 one-cent stamps, or cloth-bound for 31 stamps. It is a grand and useful book. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, 663 Main Street, Buffalo, N. Y.

The Golden State is seriously considering the necessity of quarantining against consumptives. This means that God's fresh air and sunshine, nowhere more entrancing and beautiful than on the Pacific slope, may be denied to the unfortunate sufferers. Thousands have been greatly benefited and many cured by the delicious atmosphere of California, and it appears a most cruel measure, even though sanctioned by medical. Many persons now in the advanced stages of consumption, and surely doomed, could have been cured by early resort to that most gracious healing remedy, MARSDEN'S PECTORAL BALM.

That fresh, juicy beef, ready for digestion, can be made into a delicious cordial is a marvel, but chemistry has accomplished it. Sick people at a distance from markets and needing the nourishment afforded by beef tea can procure Dicks' NUTRITIVE ELIXIR and find it the best liquid food and stimulant known. For loss of appetite, weak digestion, debility, typhoid fever, and consumption it is invaluable.

THE TWENTIETH CENTURY MOVEMENT.

The next few months will furnish substantial evidence as to whether Southern Methodists, as well as other Methodists, are so imbued with a spirit of thankfulness to God for his manifold mercies and for the benefit the church has been to them as to cause them to lay a worthy and willing thank-offering on the altar of the church. As a denomination, we take a pardonable pride in the excellence of our polity, and in the grandeur and purity of the doctrines we emphasize. The testing time has come. If we are sincere in all that we say about the measureless blessing that Methodism has been to the world and to us individually, now is the time to let "gifts speak our gratitude." As the closing year of the nineteenth century is fast speeding away, our plans for raising a splendid thank-offering ere the new century dawns must needs be put into prompt execution.

Some Methodists, however, have not yet been able to disabuse themselves of the idea that the Twentieth Century Movement means the levying of a burdensome assessment of so much per member. The thank-offering feature of it they seem to have missed entirely. Though we are somewhat given to boasting on occasion, have we not, as a church, great reason for gratitude? What denomination has had so wonderful a growth as Methodism? What church has done more during the past hundred years to evangelize the masses in England and in America? Where can be found a more excellent polity and system of church government than ours? What communion can boast a purer and, at the same time, more liberal system of doctrine than that which Methodists hold? All the creeds of Christendom have felt the liberalizing influence of our theology. What other church puts such emphasis upon the necessity of regeneration and a holy life, or teaches more clearly the privilege of conscious acceptance with God? What denomination believes more strongly in missions and in Christian education? As Bishop Hendrix puts it, "Methodism is now recognized as the most aggressive religious force in three continents." After considering these things, the Methodist who feels little love and gratitude for his church is indeed to be pitied. We are asked at this time, however, for a special token of gratitude for what God has done for us, as well as for the benefit the church has been to us.

We are more and more convinced of the wisdom and providential ordering of the movement. Valuable testimony to its excellence is to be found in the fact that several other denominations, especially in the British Isles, are imitating the example of the Methodists in this regard.

The final success of the undertaking will depend not merely upon what is done in the great centers, but upon the offerings that come from the circuits and the small towns, for it is here that the bulk of our membership is to be found. Unless the work is prosecuted with enthusiasm and faithfulness on the part of the pastors in the country, the results are going to be disappointing. As not more than from forty to fifty per cent. of our membership are reached ordinarily by any appeal from the pulpit, a house-to-house canvass and personal presentation of the matter are absolutely essential to the securing of an offering from each member. All this calls for prayer, patience, persistence, and pluck, but Methodist preachers usually are not found wanting in any of these respects.

Of this we may be sure: The pastor who, in presenting the claims of the movement, manifests indifference and produces the impression that it is a sort of tax and additional burden, will not be burdened with offerings. Never was there greater need of co-operation and thorough organization. Now is the time for our pastors to utilize consecrated lay workers of both sexes. The Epworth Leaguers in many places are rendering invaluable aid in the securing of thank-offerings. No pastor who has a large membership under his care can afford to prosecute this important work single-handed and alone. Unless our people are first thoroughly enlightened as to the merits of this movement solicitations for offerings will meet with but feeble and meager response. Every charge ought to be sowed down with educational literature, especially with the little monthly issued by the Board of Education known as the "New Century Education."

Unquestionably, the church that leads in the work of Christian education is destined to exert the most commanding influence in the future; but leaving out of consideration the vast and unquestioned benefit the fund will be to our needy institutions of learning in giving them better and enlarged facilities and equipment, the success of this movement will not only bring about the strengthening of denominational loyalty, without which no church can be a power, but will result in a wonderful quickening of the conscience, faith, and zeal of our church membership. It will furnish a magnificent illustration of the power and advantage of co-operative effort, and will bring the rank and file of our people into closer touch with the noble aims and enterprises of the church. The rallying of our forces into greater harmony, to deeper consecration, and more self-denying liberality, will be no small gain to the church and to the cause of Christ. If the work is prosecuted, as it should be, with earnest prayer for an outpouring of God's Spirit upon the church, may we not rightly expect this to be the most glorious year in our history?

A NEW BOOK.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE AND OTHER SUPERSTITIONS. Being Selected Chapters from "Faith-Healing, Christian Science, and Kindred Phenomena" By J. M. Buckley, LL.D. 16 mo. 128 pages. Cloth. New York: The Century Co. 1899.

As the title indicates, this volume is an abridgment of a larger work on the same subject published several years ago by the Century Co., with the addition, however, of a "Supplementary Paper" embodying some of the results of the more recent investigation by the author of the moral, scientific and legal phases of the subject. The facts brought out and the startling conclusions reached by Dr. Buckley in his first volume anent the matters here treated of attracted wide attention and provoked no little discussion. Notwithstanding this, the author asserts that "neither the authenticity of any fact nor the accuracy of any quotation has been impeached."

For forty years or more the author has been a diligent student of the phenomena of spiritualism, mesmerism, animal magnetism, faith-healing, mind-cure, and such like, the reality of the supposedly miraculous cures wrought being carefully inquired into, and their real causes sought. On account both of his widely recognized ability and the thoroughness of his investigations, the deductions reached are highly important and trustworthy.

Dr. Buckley admits, to the surprise of some, that many undoubted and remarkable recoveries have taken place and still occur at Roman Catholic and Greek Catholic shrines, where relics are the objects of superstitious veneration. A similar admission also is made as regards mesmerism, faith-healing, mind-cure, witchcraft, fetichism, and Christian science, all of which at times are successful in the treatment of tumors, paralysis, rheumatism, convulsions, sciatica, neuralgia, melancholia, hysteria, and other nervous diseases. The fact is pointed out that as regards seemingly miraculous cures Protestant faith-healers can not claim advantage over Roman Catholics, Magnetizers, Spiritualists, heathen priests and magicians, or even over the Mormons, all having exactly the same limitations as to incurable diseases and irreparable injuries, and also as to their liability to relapses. None of the healers or agencies mentioned can raise the dead, remove congenital blindness or deafness, or restore a lost eye or a lost limb. Furthermore, not a few of the supposed cures, as Dr. Buckley shows, are but momentary and incomplete, the old complaint shortly reappearing with increased intensity. The jubilant testimonies of marvelous cures are trumpeted abroad, but the magnetic healers, Christian scientists, and others of that tribe, are strangely silent about the hundreds of pitiable relapses that occur.

In striking contrast to the limitations of these claimants to supernatural healing power, the author quotes the testimony of the Scriptures as regards the miracles of healing wrought by the apostles and by Christ, who healed "all manner of disease, and all manner of sickness," and did it uniformly. Nor is there the slightest hint of a subsequent relapse.

The author makes the astonishing disclosure that the supposed wonders of healing achieved by mind-curers, spiritualists, faith-healers, etc., "can be paralleled without assuming any supernatural cause, and that a formula can be constructed out of the elements of the human mind which will give as high average results." This formula he states to be "concentration of the attention" upon the part affected or the result desired. It has been demonstrated most conclusively that subjective mental states often exercise a powerful influence upon the physical man, both in producing and in relieving sickness. The almost miraculous effects produced by concentration of the attention are greatly increased by the presence of two other mental states, namely, "reverence," whether it be for God, false gods, spirits, the operator, or simple mystery, and "confident expectancy." So, then, the magical results boasted of by the high priests of these various superstitions can be accounted for on natural grounds, and are shown to be due to the operation of the same natural laws, whether understood by the manipulator or not.

In not a few instances, especially where recovery is gradual, the recuperative power of nature undoubtedly operates in connection with the mental states mentioned in bringing about a cure. Attention is called to the fact that oftentimes the afflicted are grievously mistaken in their diagnosis of their ailments, and hence their claim to have been miraculously cured of heart disease, malignant cancer, consumption, etc., is to be taken "cum grano salis." The strangest thing of all is that many who claim to have been completely cured by some one of the agencies under discussion show unmistakable signs of disease.

"Faith-cure," technically so called, is characterized as a pitiable and dangerous heresy, opening the door to every superstition, such as attaching undue importance to signs, dreams, impressions, assurances, etc., and converting the Bible into a mere book of magic. As is here pointed out, a fundamental teaching of Christian science is that "the body, disease, the influence of medicine, and death are but 'delusions' of mortal mind." By direct quotations from Mrs. Eddy and other writers of that school, Christian science is proved to be one of the wildest and most pernicious vagaries ever propagated in any age or believed in by supposedly sane people.

It is not to be inferred that Dr. Buckley is a disbeliever in the propriety and efficacy of prayer in sickness or in providential healing. The Bible doctrine, however, he is convinced, is that in treating all maladies we are to use the best means at our command in connection with prayer. Nor does the Word of God give assurance that prayer will always secure the recovery of the sick.

This book is a masterly, fearless, and timely exposure of the healing crazes and quackism now abroad in the land, and ought to be read by all who desire to know the exact truth about these delusions, especially by pastors, teachers, physicians, and professional men, who need to be thoroughly informed with reference thereto. The volume cites a multitude of authentic facts and instances.

GIVE THEM NO QUARTER.

We mean the gamblers and all other defiant and persistent lawbreakers. Complaints of the gambling nuisance continue to pour in upon the Mayor of this city, who, we rejoice to say, is commendably active in endeavoring to have the statute against gambling strictly enforced. On last Friday, having received definite proof of gross neglect of duty on the part of five police officers in regard to the suppression of gambling-dens, Mayor Flower ordered charges to be preferred against them, and came very near having them suspended. The matter will shortly come up before the Police Board, and we trust that such action will be taken as to impress the officers with the fact that gambling is not an evil to be winked at, and that failure in the future to proceed against it will be counted a most serious offense. The stronger public sentiment becomes against this shameful iniquity, the easier it will be for the officers to put it down, and the surer they will be to do so. The friends of law and order need to make their influence felt. "The wicked flee," the good Book says, "when no man pursueth;" but they make much faster time when some one is after them. No law, however good, can execute itself.

Are the officers of the neighboring parish of Jefferson all asleep, or have they sold out entirely to the gamblers, that they permit gaming of every description to be carried on, in Bucktown and elsewhere right under their very noses? The evil is rank enough in the parish of Orleans, but if reports be true, just across the line the sports and gamesters hold high carnival Sunday and every day in the most shameless fashion. Shall this thing remain wholly unrebuked and unsuppressed? Heaven forbid!

INSTIGATED BY MAMMONISM.

The recent protest from citizens (by no means all, however) of a couple of Mississippi seacoast towns against the proposed legislation for the restriction of Sunday railroad traffic, and forbidding the running of Sunday excursion trains, would be amusing were it not for the godless and mercenary spirit it exhibits. What care these pleaders for Sunday excursions, Sunday sports, and Sabbath traffic, as to the morals of society, for the Sabbath rights of others, or for the sacred sanctity of the day, so long as Sabbath desecration is to them a great means of gain? What care these pretended champions of liberty for the real welfare of the poor or for the peace and order of a community so long as Sabbath trade and amusements afford opportunity for a pecuniary harvest? So grasping and conscienceless are they that they deem six days not enough in which to labor and get gain and revel, but they demand the seventh also for their selfish purposes, and, as is pretended, for promoting public prosperity. Their boasted zeal for the public good is strongly open to the suspicion of being prompted by an unholy love of worldly enjoyment and by an overweening desire for filthy lucre. In other words, they would build up their towns at the sacrifice of sobriety and righteousness and Sabbath sanctity and put a premium upon godlessness, vice and folly in order to obtain the almighty dollar.

MILLSAPS COLLEGE NOTES.

Intermediate examinations are at last at an end. The reports show that the work done for the half term is better than in any previous year.

The Senior class last Saturday planted their class-tree with all due ceremony. It is hoped that it may flourish and adorn our already beautiful campus.

With the beginning of the second term's work Prof. D. H. Bishop, our new English teacher, took charge of that department. Prof. Bishop is a graduate of Emory and Henry College of Virginia, and was for two years assistant teacher of English at Vanderbilt University. We all welcome him, and hope that he will find his duties pleasant at our college.

The Mississippi Historical Association has just concluded a most successful meeting in our city. A number of excellent papers were read, which were very much enjoyed by those in attendance. One of our instructors, Dr. A. M. Muckenfuss, read a very able paper before the association.

Mr. R. B. Rioketts, of the class of '98, has been elected assistant teacher of biology and geology in Millsaps College. Judging from his record as a student, we feel sure that he will make a most successful teacher.

The Millsaps Collegian will again make its appearance in a few days.

ETHELBERT H. GALLOWAY.

DEATH OF BRO. WHITSON.

The following card from Bro. R. G. Porter fills us with profound sorrow, and will be read with sad interest by not a few. To the bereaved ones we tender heartfelt sympathy:

"Rev. F. A. Whitsen, preacher in charge of New Albany circuit, died of pneumonia in the parsonage in New Albany, at five o'clock A. M., Wednesday, Feb. 7, 1900. A good man and true and a strong preacher has gone to his reward. A more extended notice will be furnished. He will be buried in the family burying-ground near Water Valley."

GONE HOME.

Rev. T. C. Clarke, a beloved local elder in the M. E. Church, South, and grandfather of Rev. W. L. Blackwell, of the Mississippi Conference, died at Cato, Rankin county, Miss., Friday afternoon, Feb. 9, 1900. He was eighty-one and a half years old, and had been a preacher forty-two years. He died in peace and rests with Jesus. A suitable memoir will be prepared later.

PAUL D. HARDIN.

Chapman, Miss.

NOTICE.

To the Preachers of the Louisiana Conference—

DEAR BRETHREN: The Louisiana Conference Sunday-school Board will supply all really needy Sunday-schools with literature. Make your orders plainly, just as you would make them in ordering from our Publishing House, and send them to me. I will endorse them and forward to Publishing House.

Where superintendents or others make out the order, please have your pastor approve before sending to me. Programmes for Children's Day will be furnished on application, free of cost.

I would take this opportunity to call special attention to the meeting of the State Sunday-school Association, which meets this year in Baton Rouge, and urge upon prstors and superintendents the importance of having their schools represented in that meeting. For particulars in regard to the working, aim, methods, etc., of the association I take the liberty of referring you to Bro. A. M. Mayo, of Lake Charles, who will, I am sure, take pleasure in giving all necessary information.

J. I. HOFFPAUIR,
Pres. La. Conf. S. S. Board.

Greensburg, La.

NOTES.

The address of Rev. R. S. Lawson is Cascilla, Miss., instead of Tatum, Miss.

Rev. F. N. Parker, pastor of Carondelet Street Church, and Rev. E. N. Evans, pastor at Baton Rouge, exchanged pulpits on last Sabbath.

Rev. J. R. Jones, preacher in charge of the South Warren circuit, Mississippi Conference, writes that the outlook for a good year is quite flattering.

Rev. N. B. Harmon has made an auspicious beginning at Canton, Miss. Congregations have increased, and everything points to a prosperous pastorate.

The pastor of Benita (La.) circuit, Rev. W. R. Harwell, writes that his work is moving on nicely, and that they all like their new-made presiding elder very much.

A private letter from a friend in Gloster, Miss., mentions that Rev. J. W. McLaurin has made a good beginning there, and that everything bids fair for a successful year. This is in keeping with Bro. McLaurin's usual excellent record.

Rev. W. S. Lagrone, presiding elder of the Sardis district, writes: "The preachers in my district are all in place, and all doing well, except Rev. W. J. Burt has been sick ever since Conference, and has filled but few of his appointments."

Rev. H. P. Crowe is in high favor with his flock at Verona, Miss. He is in the midst of a local-option contest, and is bestirring himself vigorously in the good cause.

The Methodists of Steen's Creek, Miss., are delighted with their new pastor, Rev. G. M. Hull, who, in keeping with his record, is giving good account of himself in the pulpit and the pastorate.

We are gratified to learn through a letter recently received from Rev. Edgar C. McVoy, pastor at Chillicothe, Mo., that his father's health remains good. Our young friend states that he is working hard to build a new church this Spring, to cost about $15,000. We wish him all possible success.

Says the Wesleyan Advocate of last week: "Thousands of Southern Methodists will be pained to know that Miss Laura Haygood is critically—if not hopelessly—ill in China. The latest news from her is such as to arouse the most serious apprehension concerning her condition."

Rev. R. D. Norsworthy, pastor at Bay St. Louis, writes: "We were kindly received, and feel encouraged to believe that much good will be done here this year. The people are very kind and thoughtful of us." We congratulate the Methodists of the Bay upon having one of the strongest preachers in the Conference.

We take the liberty of giving the following extract from a private letter written by Rev. F. S. Parker, presiding elder of the Baton Rouge district, to a friend in this city. He says: "I have been all over the district, and find my work congenial, and many doors of opportunity are opened for preaching and organization."

Miss Addie Purnell, of Jackson, Miss., requests us to state that the date fixed for the Week of Prayer to be observed by the Woman's Home Mission Society has been changed from the first to the third week in February. She also desires the members of each auxiliary to ask their pastor to preach on "Home Missions" either the third or fourth Sabbath in this month.

We congratulate our worthy friend and brother, Rev. H. R. Singleton, who is now stationed at Searcy, Ark., upon his good fortune. He writes us as follows: "I am having a good time—with big Leagues, Sabbath-schools, prayer meetings, and big congregations—drinking water at the White Sulphur and Iron Springs here, and enjoying the best health I ever had. Come and try Searcy."

Rev. W. A. Bewlin, pastor of Okolona Ct., Miss., sends us the following sad news: "Mrs. Mary L. Gattings, of Prairie Station, Miss., the eldest member of the Methodist Church at that place, died on the morning of the sixth instant. Her remains were interred at Aberdeen, Miss., Rev. W. W. Weellard officiating. The many pastors and weary itinerants who have enjoyed the kind hospitality of her Christian home will be sad to hear of her departure."

We are deeply pained to learn of the death, which occurred at Mt. Pleasant, Tenn., Feb. 3, of Irvine Asbury Lewis, the eldest son of Rev. T. W. and Mrs. N. M. Lewis, of Carrollton, Miss. He was a bright, godly and promising youth of seventeen years of age, and had left home but three weeks before he died to attend school in Tennessee. His end was full of peace. His father was with him in his last hours. The funeral took place at Carrollton, where his remains were brought for interment, on Monday, the fifth instant, the services being conducted by Rev. John H. Mitchell, presiding elder of the Winona district, assisted by Revs. G. W. Bachman, J. C. Park, and B. B. Sullivan. On our seventh page will be found a short note from Bro. Bingham, giving fuller particulars, the announcement of the sad event unfortunately being received too late for insertion in last week's issue. May God graciously comfort our dear brother and sister in this crushing sorrow!

"ALL FOR CHRIST."

REV. THOMAS B. CLIFFORD, Morgan City, La
EDITOR.

MISSISSIPPI.

REV. HENRY G. HAWKINS, Madison, Miss
ASSOCIATE EDITOR.

By some error the Minutes of the last State League Conference have it that the 1900 Conference is to be at Natchez Vicksburg is the place, picturesquely situated amid the Walnut Hills on the Mississippi. It may be that some of the Leaguers of the State have never looked at the Father of Waters, after whom we are called Mississippians. We trust that a host will take advantage of the opportunity that will be offered to combine the pleasure of some sight-seeing and the profit of League knowledge, by attending the State Conference in the last days of April. Vicksburg is named after Rev. Newit Vick, a local Methodist preacher, who owned the site, and who, at his death in 1819 or 1820, left directions for it to be surveyed and laid off in town lots. During the Civil War the Confederates at Vicksburg baffled Farragut and Sherman, and the capture of it by Grant later on was after a campaign that cost him 9,000 men. The National Cemetery, just above the city, contains 16,600 graves, and is well worth a visit.

Any League that desires copies of the Minutes of 1899 State Epworth League Conference, held at Vicksburg, can obtain them by applying to Miss Vic Thompson, Tupelo, Miss. Pastors to whom copies may have been sent should distribute them among the League workers.

The following is an extract from the report of the Board of Education of the Mississippi Conference on the Twentieth Century Fund: "Where an Epworth League is organized pastors are urged to assign to it, in connection with this movement, work in securing subscriptions and collecting the money."

TO THE PASTORS AND EPWORTH LEAGUE PRESIDENTS, MERIDIAN DISTRICT.

Please have your 5-cent per capita assessment to defray the expenses of the State Conference and other State work collected at once, and remit to D. G. Patton, treasurer, Jackson, Miss, and report same to me. I am very anxious to have all the Leagues in our district pay their assessment before the Conference meets.

Leagues were reported at the Annual Conference at the following places: Central, South Side and West End, Meridian; Poplar Springs, Binnsville, Landerdale, Vimville, Shubuta, and Winchester. There have been Leagues at East End, Meridian, and Daleville, but none were reported at the Annual Conference. I hope they will reorganize at once. May this be the best year of our League work!

W. D. HAWKINS,
Dist. Sec.

Lesson writers will please note that the scriptural reference for the Epworth League prayer meeting topic for March 4 is Acts xvi, 6-13, instead of Acts vi, 6-13.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE MINUTES.

The Minutes start out to the preachers to-morrow. They are out in good time, and they would have been out sooner had not certain matter been so slow in reaching the secretary. The secretaries and the publisher have shown all possible diligence. The secretary has been asked why he put the Shreveport district at the head of the appointments as published in the secular papers and in the ADVOCATE. He is not responsible, as he did not furnish the list of appointments to the NEW ORLEANS and Nashville Advocates, nor to the secular papers. In the published Minutes it will be found that the districts are arranged geographically, as is his custom, beginning with the New Orleans district, and ending with the Delhi district, in the northeast of the State.

JOHN T. SAWYER,
Secretary.

Shreveport, La., Feb. 6, 1900.

CORRECTION.

The printed Minutes have it that Madison circuit did not pay preacher's salary in full. In justice to the stewards and members, I should state that all the assessments were paid in full, and so reported. H. G. HAWKINS, Pastor.

NOTICE.

To the Members of the North Mississippi Conference:

DEAR BRETHREN: The Sunday-school Board has empowered me to appoint a Supervisor of Sunday-schools in each district of our Conference. He may be a minister or a layman. He is expected to look after the schools of his district, and help organize schools where there are none. He is expected to visit as many as possible, organize weekly teachers' meetings, encourage the purchasing of libraries, and do any and everything that will promote the work. He should be versed in methods of teaching, and should be, if possible, a successful Sunday-school teacher. We want, besides this man, some enthusiastic teacher who will visit other schools than his own, call the teachers together, and instruct them on methods, and awaken a genuine enthusiasm in Sunday-school work. It is expected also that, when possible, he will organize institutes composed of Sunday-school officers and teachers, and study methods and formulate plans for more effective work.

I write you not only to ask your co-operation generally, but to ask your immediate aid in finding these men. The Board will pay all expenses incurred by these helpers in correspondence or travel. Please see in person any who can serve us, and write me who they are, and their addresses.

Very truly your brother,
GEO. J. LEFTWICH,
Chairman.

P. S.—Will you kindly read our report to the last Conference at Greenwood? G. J. L.

Aberdeen, Miss., Jan. 22, 1900.

NOTICE CONCERNING CHURCH EXTENSION APPLICATIONS.

The Executive Committee of the Board of Church Extension of the Louisiana Conference will meet in Monroe, March 7. All applications for aid must be in the hands of the secretary at that time in order to come before the General Board at its annual meeting in April. See Paragraph 28, Church Extension Manual. Send all applications to Rev. S. J. Davies, Arcadia, La. Application blanks will be furnished by me on application.

ORPHANS' HOME.

After visiting Brookhaven, Stonewall, Ellisville and Hattiesburg in the interest of the orphans, we made a visit to the Home at Water Valley. I found everything in excellent condition.

Bro. Harrison, the manager, is full of years and experience, and is conducting it for the glory of God and the good of the helpless orphans. The children are happy; have good clothing and wholesome food, and are being taught to work. Thirty-five of them are in school, under an experienced and competent teacher. They are taught to love God and keep his Commandments.

Bro. Harrison is preparing to put out ten thousand strawberry plants and an orchard. Trees of a good quality would be very much appreciated by the Home just at this time.

The work is prospering, for which we thank God, and will try to push this worthy cause.

Our paper will be out this week. W. T. GRIFFIN,

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE MINUTES.

On Jan. 27 the Minutes were sent out to all the pastors and presiding elders of the Conference. Where it was possible to do so, I sent them by express, as the agent in Meridian gave me lower rates on them than I could get in the postoffice. We found great difficulty in prorating the Minutes, as we had no specific information of the charges that were changed at our last Conference, except from three of the brethren, and that came after the Minutes were sent off. I trust the brethren have all received their allotment before this, and that, considering all the circumstances, they are pleased with them. J. M. WEEMS.

THE LUCKY BORN.

BY EDWILDA NORDAHL.

For every one that reaches the goal,
A hundred will start in the race;
But the ninety and nine will pause on the way
To list to the harps that the sirens play
That lure them and charm and debase.
One stops to hear the wild thrush sing,
And one to gather flowers;
And one on the bank of a lilling stream
Will idly lie and dream and dream
Through all the calling hours.

And one will pause to woo a maid,
And one to mourn a friend,
And one to chase the butterflies;
And one builds castles in the skies.
And when they have lost, in the end,
They will look on the victor, as he stands,
With his laurels proudly worn,
And say, "I had won as well as he,
Were such talent and strength but given me;
Besides, he was lucky born."

THE POWER OF INFLUENCE.

It is a truism that influence can not be measured. But it is also an awful truth, inspiring to the pure in heart and perturbing to the careless and vicious to whom the thought comes home. We touch humanity at a thousand points with almost every breath we draw.

It is related of a certain housekeeper that after she had complained several times to the grocer regarding baskets of unsound fruit sent to her address, she was one day offered a basket of peaches and a basket of gem melons, accompanied with this assurance:

"You will not find a single damaged peach or melon in either of these packages. If you do, I will gladly refund the money you pay for them."

She found every peach and melon perfect. The housekeeper reported this on her next visit to the dealer's store, and asked why he was so positive in warranting his goods. "Why?" exclaimed the man. "Why, because I have found that the farmer who furnished those baskets never sends dishonest packages to market."

The farmer's number among the commission dealer's consignments was "135." After that the lady always bought No. 135, and the contents of the baskets never failed in measure, condition or in quality.

Admiration for the conscientious farmer grew upon the housekeeper and literally made her more conscientious herself. She felt ashamed whenever she was tempted to slight her work. No. 135 seemed to be looking at her.

One particular that deepened this impression was the non-appearance in market on Mondays of any baskets bearing the favorite mark. Farmer 135 would not pack fruit on Sunday, the dealer said. The housekeeper felt her face flush when that was said. She had never been so scrupulous.

The Summer and Autumn passed, but the sermon of the faultless fruit continued to preach to its buyer when she could buy no more. Careless lapses of duty frequently brought up the thought: "No. 135 would not have done that." She remembered and thanked the unknown man whose integrity had strengthened and helped her. His rectitude represented to her the presence of the sinless Teacher.

The above instance is but one among thousands of the power of involuntary influence. A good man's life is one of the moral tonics of society. His silent example is in itself a blessing to the world.—Baptist Union.

THE VALUE OF TRAINING.

It is apparent on every hand that the trained man or woman has the advantage in the race for success in life. The novice must always take the inferior place. The half-trained man must try to be content with a position of dissatisfaction far below that occupied by the man who has made the best and wisest use of his opportunities, and has achieved a greater degree of skill and efficiency as a result. The half-trained man is an unfortunate. If he is in commercial life, he is unable to read the signs of the times aright, and is quite sure to become involved in distressing complications. If he is in professional life, he will be humiliated. As a lawyer, his limited knowledge of law will destroy his competence and impair his reputation. As a physician, he will be doomed to failure almost from the beginning, because he will lack the confidence of his patients in his ability. As a minister, he will be unable to attain the highest point of influence and power because of his unfortunate limitations. The demand arises from every quarter for men and women who are thoroughly trained to conduct and control the activities of life.

This higher development is reached by the faithful performance of each task and the faithful discharge of each duty. The half-trained man is generally a shirk. He would like to wear the laurel, but will not struggle for it, forgetting that the laurel is won only through patient and heroic continuance. This struggle begins early in life. It manifests itself in the determination of the boy or girl to reach out after the highest and best things, and to subordinate the things that are secondary and non-essential to those that are first and essential. If the scholar in the school is satisfied to let a problem go unsolved and with its principle not understood, or to fall into careless, day-dreaming habits of study, or to allow wise suggestions for the conduct of life and the development of his intellectual faculties to remain unused, the foundations of the half-trained man are being laid.

The laurel worn by the successful trained man or woman is not won by one bold dash, or by the exhibition on one occasion of inherent heroism, as is the case with the winning of a Victoria Cross. It is the rich, satisfying, and permanent award of patient and persistent striving for the realization of high ideals.—Selected.

A WOMAN OF TACT.

She had been talking pleasantly to two or three women. She had made her good-bys all cheerful and bright, and, after she had disappeared, one woman turned to another and said in a tone that was scoffing: "She is a thorough woman of tact." Now, in this case the woman who had said none but pleasant words; who, by a bright story, had prevented the discussion of a petty scandal, was a woman who was as brave-hearted as any that ever lived, and who bore, not only her own, but the burdens of a good many other people; yet she saw no reason why she should inflict her troubles on her friends, or why she should not be in its best sense a woman of tact.

A woman of tact is one who feels that the story told to hurt your feelings is essentially bad form and inconsiderate of the feelings of others.

A woman of tact is the one who is courteous to old people, who laughs with the young, and who makes herself agreeable to all women in all conditions of life.

A woman of tact is one who makes her good-morning a pleasant greeting, her visit a bright spot in the day and her good-by a hope that she may come again.

A woman of tact is one who does not gauge people by their clothes, or their riches, but who condemns bad manners.

A veritable woman of tact is the best type of a Christian, for her very consideration makes other women long to imitate her. Remember that to do your work as a woman of tact means more than speaking from platform or assumed elevation.

A woman of tact is one who is courteous under all circumstances and in every condition in which she may be placed. She is the woman who can receive the unwelcome guest with a smile so bright and a handshake so cordial that in trying to make the welcome seem real it becomes so. A woman of tact is one whose love for humanity is second only in her life's devotion, and whose watchword is unselfishness in thought and action. By making self last it finally becomes natural to have it so.—Selected.

ON LIVING BEYOND ONE'S MEANS.

Dr. George C. Lorimer, in an article on "Living beyond one's means," says:

"Some one has said that our children desire to begin where these children leave off. Consequently, if they can procure the elegancies of life in no other way, they will secure them on the credit system and pay interest on a cut-throat chattel mortgage, a form of finance that would bankrupt the Rothschilds and lead to a panic on every exchange in the world. For it is a fact that the poor pay far higher for the accommodation they receive than do the rich for theirs. The not unusual outcome of this kind of housekeeping is that the debtor falls behind in his payments, is annoyed by duns, borrows a trifle from a friend to ward off the evil day, and at last abandons hope, losing furniture and all that has been paid as interest and principal.

"In happy contrast was the course adopted by a bright-eyed wife in Chicago. Calling at the house, I remarked: 'Your home looks very pretty.' She replied emphatically: 'It is pretty, for we have paid for everything in it.' Then she told me that before her marriage her intended requested her to select a carpet and he would buy it on trust; but that she stoutly refused, and assured him that the bare floor was good enough for her until he could afford to pay for what he purchased. I exclaimed: 'Bravo!' and I am persuaded the little woman has made a good business man of her husband by this time."

KEEP YOUR TOP COOL.

It is reported of Artemus Ward that he once offered his flask of whisky to the driver of the stage on the top of which he was riding through a mountainous section. The stage-driver refused the flask in most decided tones. Said he: "I don't drink; I won't drink; I don't like to see anybody else drink. I am of the opinion of those mountains—keep your top cool! They've got snow and I've got brains; that's all the difference."

PAIN NOT NECESSARY

When having dental operations performed. We have a simple, but efficacious method of deadening the most sensitive tooth, even when the nerve is exposed. The cavity can then be thoroughly cleansed and filled without pain.

Teeth extracted by an expert without the least pain, with

GAS, VITALIZED AIR OR BOSTON SPRAY.

The last deadens the gums only. You do not lose consciousness.

We make a specialty of Teeth That Improve the Expression.

Every set mounted on a trial plate, so that you can try your teeth before taking them.

Gold Fillings.....$1.00 up
Inserted without the least pain.
Gold Crowns, Porcelain Crowns, Bridge Work (Teeth without Plate), per tooth.....$3.00 to $5.00
Sets of Teeth from.....$5.00 to $50
Even the $5.00 sets are guaranteed to fit.

The Rev. Dr. W. C. Black says: "The Boston Dental Company has the patronage of leading professional and business men, many of whom have given testimonials as to the excellent character of its work. A verification of this statement, as a matter of personal knowledge, will be given by the editor of this paper."—Christian Advocate.

There's a great deal of wisdom in his remark—"Keep your top cool." Without a sound brain, man is not much use to the world. Alcohol, whether in beer, cider, wine, brandy or whisky, is a foe of the brain; and when it gets there inflames it and renders it unfit for use. Be like the honest stage-driver and resolve to "keep your top cool."—Little Folks' Paper.

OPTIMIST AND PESSIMIST.

In answer to a teacher's question as to what constitutes an "optimist" and a "pessimist," some school boy has ventured the reply: "An optimist is a man who is happy when he's miserable, and a pessimist is a man who is miserable when he's happy." Despite the unconscious cynicism of this observation, there is something of true suggestion to it. A brave and cheery optimism can conquer circumstance, even when all one's surroundings are on the face of them most unhappy, while a despondent temper would make it impossible for even an angel to be gay. Optimism and pessimism are, after all, subjective states more than they are products of an outward condition.—Observer.

"A kiss from my mother," said Benjamin West, "made me a painter." The noblest characters are found among those men who in youth yielded most to a mother's influence. To love your mother well is the sure mark of a true boy or girl. And you will love your mother rightly if you have the spirit of Timothy or, rather, of Timothy's Savior, whom even the pain of the cross did not separate from his mother.—Presbyterian.

I have now disposed of all my property to my family. There is one thing more I wish I could give them, and that is Christian religion. If they had that, and I had not given them one shilling, they would have been rich; and if they had not that, and I had given them all the world, they would be poor.—Patrick Henry.

BOSTON DENTAL COMPANY.

Owing to excellent work and satisfactory prices, this firm has a large and constantly increasing practice. It includes among its patrons leading professional and business men.

A Small Beginning.

A little snow ball on the summit of the Alps, rolled up by the winds, moves slowly downward. Gaining in strength and size, it grows rapidly to giant proportions, and finally becomes the frightful avalanche, destroying everything in its path. Consumption begins with a little cough, a trifling pain, a passing flush on the cheeks. This is but the beginning of the avalanche, consumption, that knows no pity, recognizes no distinction. Just at the beginning thousands commit the error of not checking and curing the disease by using MARSDEN'S PECTORAL BALM.

A Serious Decision.

"Why CHILLIFUGE Won't Cure Chills"—is a question that brings to mind the story of a society of learned men formed for debating problems.

The question was presented: "Why a fish weighing ten pounds, put into a vessel of known weight, filled with water, did not increase the weight?" After hours of hot debate the fool of the club announced that it did, for while the debate had been going on he had tried the experiment.

PRICE REDUCED.

IF you look at a dozen common lamp-chimneys, and then at Macbeth's "pearl top" or "pearl glass," you will see the differences—all but one—they break from heat; Macbeth's don't; you can't see that.

Common glass is misty, milky, dusty; you can't see through it; Macbeth's is clear.

Tough, clear glass is worth fine work; and a perfect chimney of fine tough glass is worth a hundred such as you hear pop, clash on the least provocation.

NUGENT—On Jan. 8, 1900, in the "Liberty Chapel Cemetery," the last remains of WILLIAM NUGENT, one of the oldest and most respected citizens of the parish of Grant, were laid to rest.

Bro. Nugent was born Nov. 1, 1823, and was married to Tussett E. Hollingsworth, April 8, 1845. He joined the M. E. Church at fourteen years of age, and moved to Rapides parish in 1848, where he lived an exemplary Christian life until his death. As a pioneer, he moved to a wilderness, and lived to see it become thickly settled. He was a man of strong personality, and possessed an active mind.

Bro. Nugent often spoke of the early days of Methodism, and of the heroes and pioneers who planted the gospel in these parts, especially esteeming such men as Bros. Methvin, Weems, Gold, Moses Davis, our own Dr. Walker, and many others yet living. Six boys and four girls were born to him. His wife still abides and mourns his loss. His children have grown up in the faith and church of their father. He was a life-long class leader and exhorter, and was for forty years a steward in the M. E. Church, South. For sixty-two long years he lived a loyal Methodist—a professor and possessor of entire sanctification. He joined the Methodist Protestant Church six months before his death, but his zeal for God never abated. His home has always been the preacher's home. Truly he was ready as a sheaf for the garner.

"Servant of God, well done;
Thy glorious warfare's past;
The battle's fought, the race is won,
And thou art crowned at last."

His former pastor,
WM. B. VAN VALKENBURGH.

BREWER—DANIEL CLAUDE BREWER was born July 27, 1870, in Carroll county, Miss. When about fifteen years of age he made a profession of faith in Christ, and identified himself with the Methodist Church at Midway, near his boyhood home. For some years he was a resident of the town of Carrollton, and the faithful and efficient deputy sheriff of his county. At the late November election he was elected to the office of sheriff by an overwhelming majority, receiving, perhaps, the largest vote ever polled for this office. For some months he had been in declining health, and for many weeks prior to his death was confined to his room. He died on Sunday afternoon, Dec. 10, 1899, in full assurance of faith in the world's Redeemer, and in triumphant hope of a glorious immortality.

Claude Brewer was a true and manly Christian gentleman. This one short sentence, to my mind, forcefully sets forth his life and character. His high-minded life among a people who knew and loved him is his own sufficient meed of praise. He was one of the most devoted and affectionate sons I have ever known. He gave his life to ministries of love and self-sacrifice in behalf of his widowed mother and his brothers and sisters. He responded to every call in contributing of his means to the cause of Christ. Even during his last illness he made a liberal offering to the new parsonage, and also to the collections ordered by the Annual Conference. For two years I was his pastor, and he was a true and trusted friend. His end was peace. We live in the fond hope that "beyond the sunset's radiant glow," in brighter worlds and fairer climes, we shall see him again.

H. T. CUNNINGHAM.

FORD—Mrs. MALINDA CAROLINE FORD (nee Gibson) was born in Fairfield district, S. C., Dec. 6, 1820; was married to Dorraf in the year 1836; was happily converted and joined the Methodist Church at Sardis, Ala., in early life. She died in great peace at her son's, Zaharian Ford, in Natchez, Miss., Dec. 20, 1899.

Aunt Caroline was a great sufferer from her early womanhood to the day of her death, and when the summons came she was ready. She told her physician that Christ was hers and she was his. Thus ended a long life of suffering and a life of meekness, faith and submission to the divine will. She leaves three sons to mourn her departure, one son and daughter having preceded her to the spirit world. Thanks be to God, her record and her last words assure them she has gone where the "wicked cease from troubling and the weary are at rest." May Heaven's choice blessings rest upon the bereaved! We buried her in Brandon Cemetery. J. F. ROBINSON.

ELLIS—Our dear father, Mr. J. W. ELLIS, passed to his home beyond on the eve of the twenty-seventh of December, 1899. Gently, quietly, and without a murmur, he sweetly went to sleep to wake on earth no more. He had reached a ripe old age that few of earth ever reach, and when death's messenger came he did not seem to dread the message. Many years ago he united with the M. E. Church, South. He leaves a wife and five children (three sons and two daughters), besides a goodly number of grandchildren and many friends and relations, to mourn his departure. He died at the home of his eldest son, Rev. J. C. Ellis, of the Mississippi Conference. Oh, may we meet our father dear where sorrow can not come! His body sleeps in the Quitman Cemetery. The funeral services were conducted by Rev. A. T. Ball.

A vacant chair is in our home,
A voice is missing here;
No more amidst the tolls of earth
Dear father's step we'll hear.

His body in its narrow bed
To dust is there consigned.
He sleepeth now among the dead;
God help us be resigned.

Oh, it is hard to say, "Good-bye,"
No more on earth to meet;
But may we meet beyond the sky,
In heaven's home so sweet.

His daughter, MRS. J. C. ELLIS.

AINSWORTH—LIZZIE AINSWORTH was born in Lawrence county, near Pine Grove Church, March, 1887, and departed this life Jan. 2, 1900. Her mother died in 1898, so that for eighteen months little Lizzie watched with motherly care over her younger sisters. Her life was short, but full of suffering. Hers was an obedient, self-sacrificing, Christ-like spirit. Her words and actions showed plainly that she was a child of God. Though she suffered intensely during her last illness, yet more than once she arose from her bed and knelt in prayer. Not long before her voice was hushed in death she told her father that "mama and Jesus were with her." It was sad to see the life of one so young slowly ebbing away, but "of such is the kingdom of heaven." Her meek and gentle spirit has returned to God, who gave it. GEO. W. HIVELEY.

Brookhaven, Miss.

LEWIS—IRVINE AUBURY, eldest son of Rev. T. W. and Mrs. N. M. Lewis, aged seventeen years, died at Mt. Pleasant, Tenn., Feb. 3. I had known Irvine from his childhood. He has spent days and weeks in my home. He was one of the noblest young men I ever knew. His devotion to his mother, and his solicitude for her comfort, were most beautiful. Three weeks ago he went to Bostick and Diuring's Training-school full of hope and noble ambition, but pneumonia seized him, and in spite of all that skilled physicians and tender nursing could do, he has passed into the regions beyond. Some years ago he gave his heart to God, and has lived a Christian life. His father was with him in his last hours. Jesus was with him all the journey through to his Father's house above. J. R. BINGHAM.

Carrollton, Miss.

THE HABIT OF DUTY.

Most boys think that they would be heroes if they only had a chance. The chance rarely comes except in the line of some duty. The habit of performing faithfully the work assigned one is more often heroic than is realized, and when heroically performed one is not usually conscious of heroism until afterward. Such was the conduct of the elevator boy in the Baldwin Hotel, San Francisco, which was destroyed by fire the day before Thanksgiving. The fire broke out about four o'clock in the morning. The four or five hundred guests were all asleep, and had to be wakened. Many rushed for the elevator, which was kept moving as rapidly as possible. Finally it, too, was endangered by the spreading fire. The woodwork above and around it was in flames, but voices were heard from the upper floors. The young boy in charge, without hesitating, started the elevator, reached the upper floor, hurried every waiting guest into the car, and descended to the ground floor. The car had scarcely reached the bottom when the roof fell. By his coolness and courage the elevator boy saved several, perhaps many, lives. Had he stopped to think how heroic he was he would probably have become frightened and run away. He thought only of doing his duty, which was to run the elevator as long as there was a guest needing his service.—Northwestern Advocate.

WINE OF CARDUI

A SURE MEDICINE.

HANDSOM, VA., Dec. 31.

I have been suffering from female weakness for four years, and have taken many medicines, but Wine of Cardui and Black-Draught have done more for me than anything else.

MRS. CAROLINE EVANS.

McELREE'S Wine of Cardui

It is a mistake to take any and every kind of medicine when you are sick. There is danger in it. Most of the so-called cures for "female weakness" do nothing more than deaden the pain temporarily, and when the effect wears away the patient is weaker and sicker than before. It is never wise to take chances. You have only one life, and that is dear and precious. If you have any pain, ache, disorder or weakness in the feminine organs, nothing will help you like Wine of Cardui. It helps do away with morning sickness during the early stages of pregnancy, and modifies the pains of childbirth; recovery is rapid and future health is assured. The Wine is purely vegetable, being made of herbs whose medicinal properties act directly upon the organs of womanhood. It is a long-tried remedy, and has many years of success behind it. It is sure. Why take a chance medicine when you can get a sure medicine?

The "Combination" Bible.

A SUPERB EDITION

of the Holy Scriptures, showing at a glance at the foot of the pages all changes made by the revisers.

New Type. All Proper Names Self-Pronouncing. The Most Valuable Collateral Matter.

There is a steady and increasing demand for first-class Bibles. Everybody is anxious to obtain a copy of the best edition of the Holy Scriptures. Old editions are constantly being replaced by Bibles that are in every way more attractive, and there is practically no limit to the demand.

OUR "COMBINATION" FEATURE.

Hitherto the King James and Revised Versions have been printed in parallel columns, but this makes comparisons of texts tedious and unsatisfactory, and makes the book very unwieldy. We have overcome this difficulty by "combining" the two Versions on the same page, showing at a glance in foot-notes all the Changes Additions and Omissions made by the Revisers.

THE OLD VERSION PRINTED IN FULL.

The King James Version is the basis, and this Version is read straight along from the text, while the Revised Version is read from the text in combination with the foot-notes. Our "Combination" Feature has met with universal approval and is strongly endorsed by leading Divines and Biblical Scholars.

It is only by a comparison of the two Versions that the greatest benefit can be obtained from reading the Holy Scriptures, and this comparison every reader can easily make by our simple arrangement for showing the changes made by the revisers. This is the greatest triumph of Bible Publishing the World has ever known.

OUR OFFER.

To those unprogressive people who do not read and pay for the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE we sell this Bible at the publisher's retail price—$4.25. To our subscribers we sell it at the very low rate of $2. The only condition attached to this offer is that the subscriber must pay his subscription one full year in advance, viz.: to February, 1901. We will send it postpaid to any person who will send us three new cash subscribers at the regular rate. For six new cash subscribers at the regular rate we will send two "Combination" Bibles, postpaid.

For fifty cents additional we will send a Bible with index.

For twenty-five cents additional we will have your name engraved in gilt letters on the outside.

Address REV. W. C. BLACK.

P. S.—We can give no commission on renewals in connection with the above offer.

No. 4 Machine, drop leaf table, gothic cover, case of two drawers at each end and center drawer. Dealer's price, $25. Our price, $15.50.

No. 5 Machine, drop leaf table, gothic cover, case of three drawers at each end, making seven drawers in all. Dealer's price, $26. Our price, $16.25.

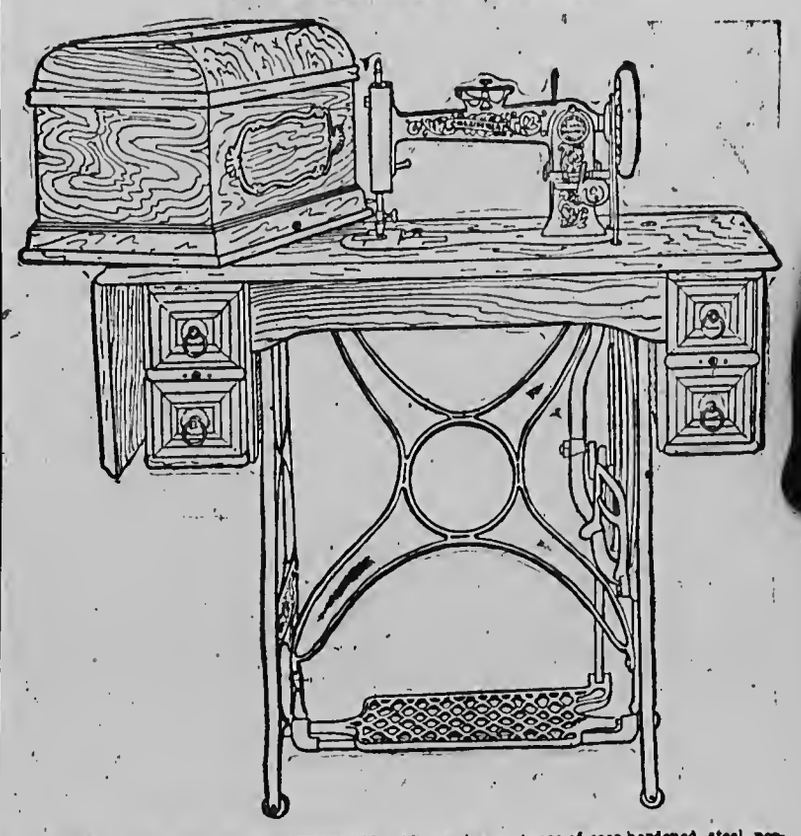
Columbian No. 4.



EXCELLENCE OF THE COLUMBIAN.—All wearing parts are of case-hardened steel possessing great durability, and by the turning of a screw all lost motion caused by wear can be taken up. All parts are fitted so accurately that the machines are absolutely noiseless, and as easy running as fine adjustment and best mechanical skill is possible to produce. No expense or time is spared to make them perfect in every respect, as every machine passes a rigid inspection by competent men before leaving the factory.

NICKEL PLATED.—The balance wheel and many of the fine parts are nickel-plated, with other parts finely enameled and ornamented, giving it a rich appearance.

A Self-Setting Needle and Self-Threading Cylinder Shuttle are used in the Columbian High-Arm Sewing Machine. They are so simple that any one can easily operate them in a few minutes' time, as our Instruction Book is fully illustrated, showing how to do all kinds of fancy work with attachments.

Extra Attachments, in velvet-lined case, sent free with each machine: 1 Tucker, 1 Ruffler with shirring plate, 1 Hemmer set (4 widths) and Binder, 1 Braider (Foot and Slide), 1 Thread Cutter.

ADDITIONAL ACCESSORIES.—Each machine is supplied with the following outfit: 1 Hemmer and Feller (one piece), 10 Needles, 6 Bobbins, 1 Wrench, 1 Screw Driver, Oil Can with Oil, Cloth Gauge and Thumb Screw, and a Book of Instructions. The Book of Instructions is profusely illustrated, and answers the purpose of a competent teacher.

No. 3—Drop leaf, Bent cover, case of two drawers at one end and center drawer. Dealer's price, $29. Our price, $17.

No. 4—Drop leaf table, Bent cover, case of two drawers at each end and center drawer. Dealer's price, $31. Our price, $17.75.

No. 5—Drop leaf table, Bent cover, case of three drawers at each end and center drawer, making a seven-drawer machine. Dealer's price, $33. Our price, $18.50.

The chief difference between Numbers 3, 4, and 5 is in the furniture—i. e., the number of drawers. If you do not want to pay for the extra drawers, you need not do so. We sell these machines under a ten years' guarantee, by which we mean that if any part gives out by reason of any defect therein, the manufacturer will replace the same free of charge. Moreover, we allow the purchaser to test the machine ten days. If at the end of ten days you are not satisfied, you have only to drop us a postal card, and your money will be refunded.

OUR OFFER.

We will send any one of the above-described machines at the prices named, and also send the ADVOCATE free for six months. The only condition attached to this offer is that subscribers who are in arrears must first pay up all arrearages to date. It would be well to avail yourself of this offer at once, as we can not promise that it will last very long. Notice that you take no risk whatever. We do all the risking. Address REV. W. C. BLACK,
512 Camp St., New Orleans.

P. S.—The machine will be shipped direct from the factory in the North

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

Ex-Empress Eugenie, who has been critically ill, is much improved.

Boers report their losses as very light in the past week's fighting before Ladysmith.

Portugal is said to have practically entered into an offensive and defensive alliance with England.

The British government announces that in three weeks' time Roberts will have a force of 194,000 men.

The Secretary of the Navy will appoint Commander Seaton Schroeder to be the first Naval Governor of the Samoan Island of Tutuila.

The Kentucky Republicans are trying to spread the report that the Democrats shot Goebel for effect, and that the fatal results were not intended.

A resolution expressing sympathy for the South African republics passed the Senate, but the vote was reconsidered and the resolution went over.

Five hundred miners at the Bryson Coal and Coke Company's mines, near Tazwell, Tenn., are on a strike. They want an advance of 10 per cent. in wages.

The local branch of the Ancient Order of Hibernians has passed decided pro-Boer resolutions, and will raise funds for the aid of wounded Boers and their families.

The impression seems to be gaining ground that Gens. Bullier, MacDonald and French were all moving in obedience to orders from Roberts for systematic activity.

Three men were sent to the penitentiary for two years and sentenced to pay a fine of $500 each for stealing a ballot box and making fraudulent election returns in Philadelphia.

The strike in the building trades in Chicago has begun. Several thousand men have quite work, and contractors announce that they will employ non-union men as fast as possible.

The British public supports the ministry in the South African war. The English press is apprehensive of continental opposition and is urging an increase in both army and navy.

Prof. G. Frederick, a prominent scientist, calls attention to the danger to the levee system by reason of the Chicago Canal, which has raised the level of the river at St. Louis one foot.

The National Agricultural Press League, composed of fifty agricultural papers, held a meeting on Feb. 12. Resolutions were adopted urging on Congress the speedy repeal of all duty on newspaper and wood pulp.

At the meeting of the Louisiana Sugar Planters' Association, held last week, it was decided to vigorously combat all reciprocity treaties now pending before the Senate, or proposed, which allow a reduction in the present duties on sugar and rice.

Gen. Buller's retreat was due to the fact that a balloonist found the Boers to be in unsuspected strength with masked batteries which would have not only prevented an advance, but would have made it virtually impossible to hold the Vaal Krantz.

It is expected that at a very early date Congress will take up the bills providing forms of government for the Hawaiian Islands and for Porto Rico. In the case of the Hawaiian Islands the task involves no serious difficulties, as no tariff arrangement is necessary.

There is a bill before Congress to create a new executive department at Washington, to have charge of all matters relating to mines and mining and the geological survey of the country. This department is to be presided over by a special Cabinet officer entitled the Secretary of Mines and Mining.

After a conference with leading Republicans of Kentucky, Gov. Taylor definitely announced that he would not sign the Louisville agreement. He then issued a proclamation reconvening the Legislature in Frankfort, stating that the members would not be interfered with, and that he would allow the matters in dispute to be settled by the courts. The Republicans expect an adverse decision in the Legislature and before the courts, and will make a campaign on the issues thus made

The political situation in Kentucky is quiet. The Democratic Governor, with a majority of both Houses of the State Legislature, is at Louisville, which is temporarily the seat of the State Government. They are engaged in peaceful legislation. The Republican claimant of the gubernatorial power is at Frankfort, with a minority of the two Houses of the General Assembly. The State buildings at Frankfort are still occupied by troops, although the largest parts of the State forces and of the armed mob of mountaineers have been sent to their homes.

LITERARY NOTES.

BY W. F. B.

The Woman's Home Companion for February contains Hetty Green's discussion of The Benefits of a Business Training for Women. Waldon Fawcett sets forth the advantages women may derive from the automobile. Dr. Newell Dwight Hillis, the latest successor of Henry Ward Beecher, makes a plea for the revival of beauty in social and family life. In the same number Edward A. Steiner, under the title What Might Have Been an American Colony, revives an incident in the early history of our navy as brilliant as the attack at Manila Bay. John Kendrick Bangs continues his witty Idiot at Home papers, and among the excellent fiction Mrs. Burton Harrison is beginning a spirited American novel. Valuable features of a domestic nature abound in such articles as The Care of the Child, by an eminent physician; Man's Ideal Woman, Over the Club-Woman's Tea-Cups, The Truth About Table-Linens, Winter-Vegetable Dishes, and other articles.

In Ainslee's Magazine for February the most valuable contribution is the character sketch of Cecil Rhodes, by Allen Sangree. Harry Thurston Peck, in an article on This Decade's Immortal Books, contends that this is the most sterile decade of the century, holding that only two writers of the period will live. The United States of the World, by George Leland Hunter, is a paper of great significance at this stage of the world's politics. The cruise of the "Wilmington" up the Amazon is vividly described by E. H. Coleman, while G. H. Payne tells of Howard Gould's transatlantic cruise in the "Niagara." The Vindication of Henderson of Greene, by Brand Whitlock, is the best work this forceful writer has yet done. There are also stories by Opie Read, Edith Robinson, Howard Fielding and Gen. King.

Health-Culture for February is an excellent number of this magazine which is devoted to practical hygiene. It opens with Part 2 of Practical Dietetics by W. R. C. Latson, M. D., considering the processes of digestion with illustrations and diagrams, showing the stomach and digestive tract. Dr. Felix L. Oswald points out the Hygienic Progress of the Century, showing that much has been done in this direction. Chas. H. Shepard, M. D., makes a strong plea for moderation in many ways as promotive of good health. Chas. E. Page, M. D., considers points on Christian Science, Drugs and Obesity. Jas. H. Jackson, M. D., shows how health may be obtained by Right Living. Mrs. Etta Morse Hudders considers Cereals as Food, giving special attention to corn. How I Got a Living as a Doctor is a continuation of Dr. Henri Echo's story. The editor discusses the eating question in an editorial entitled The Jaws of Death, and also considers the Physical Signs of Longevity.

TAKE NOTICE

That we are now handling two different styles of the Holman Bible in Bourgeois type. One we sell to paid-up subscribers at $1.50, the other at $1.30. The $1.30 Bible is substantially the same we have hitherto sold at $1.50. The one we sell at $1.50 is a far better Bible than has ever been sold at such a price. It is a marvel of cheapness. See our offer.

JOHN T. SAWYER, P. E.

An educated young lady of Richmond, Va., became very much impressed with the sacredness of the body, even when defiled by sin. While contemplating this subject, she rode near a well-dressed young man lying dead drunk by the roadside. As she halted she observed flies pestering the features of the flushed face. Her first thought was, How beastly! Her second, How pitiful! It is a newly fallen temple, thought she. So, alighting from her carriage, she carefully spread her handkerchief over his face and returned home Some days later the young man called and thus addressed her: "I am ashamed to look you in the face; I am the man you so kindly cared for the other day. The name on the handkerchief with which you covered my face revealed my benefactor." He told her he had called to thank her, saying also that with his hand on his mother's Bible, he had sworn to never again touch an intoxicating drop. With a prayer on his lips he signed the pledge. This pledge was never broken. Thus in all the future that temple was sacred to temperance. His brilliant talents won for him a noble place in his country's service. This man was William Wirt.—Selected.

Rattlesnake Watermelon.

The Rattlesnake Watermelon has long been a favorite in Georgia, but there has been some trouble to get pure seed, because melon varieties mix more readily than almost any thing in the vegetable kingdom. In this connection, attention is called to the advertisement of Hon. M. I. Branch, of Berzelia, Ga., who proposes to supply absolutely pure melon seed. He makes a specialty of the Rattlesnake Melon, and has taken great pains to keep the seed pure.

The advertisement of the Hartman Manufacturing Company, of Elwood City, Pa., which appears elsewhere in this issue, is an unusually attractive ad. It gives a very correct cut of their famous Steel Rod Picket Fence in combination with ornamental Steel Gate. This is an excellent lawn fence, and has the advantage of being unobtrusive, rather adding to, than detracting from, the natural beauty of the enclosure. It will be found of equal value in enclosing such public grounds as school-yards, court squares, cemeteries, parks, etc. It is strong and durable, and will twice outlast the ordinary wood picket fence, and costs no more. Park and County Commissioners, School Trustees, and other public officials, as well as private citizens, will find it to their interest to look into the quality and merits of this fence. Write these people for catalogue, either at Elwood City, Pa, or 309 Broadway New York City.

A GENUINE WORKER.

There are very few of us who appreciate fully the possibilities of labor. Whatever may be said of the literary merits of the first Lord Lytton, nobody can deny that he was at least a great worker. He read and traveled and wrote much. He mixed with society. He took an active part in politics. His mind was one of the most versatile of his generation. Yet he tells us himself that he devoted to reading and writing no more than three hours a day and less during the Parliamentary session. "But then," he adds, "during these hours I have given my whole attention to what I was about." People are less anxious to see new lights and turn sharp corners than many young ministers think. But in time they will come to recognize and honor a genuine laborer. We are not to rest upon our labors, and no great saint has ever claimed merit. They have all died—notwithstanding the marvelous results of their ministry—trusting to mere mercy. The best day, the happiest day, is the day when every hour and even every fragment of an hour is estimated with a most scrupulous care until all the program of work is accomplished, and it is marvelous how in labor the torments of the spirit are scattered. "My Father worketh hitherto, and I work," said Christ, and the laborer understands the union.—Rev. Dr. W. R. Nicoll, in British Weekly.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From Our Regular Correspondent.)

President McKinley listened to ong appeals on the army "can n" question made by Mrs. L. M. N. vene, president of the National . C. T. U.; Mrs. A. A. Gordon, vice- sident at large, and Mrs. M. D. lis, superintendent of legislation, ring an interview which he granted those ladies for the purpose, but thing was accomplished. The esident said that the construction the "canteen" law by the Attor- y-General would have to be ac- pted as final, and that it was to ngress that those opposed to the anteen" must look for its abolish- nt. He added that, whenever ngress should speak in plain terms the question, the executive branch the government would be ready to ecute the law. While this was dis- pointing to the ladies, they an- nced their determination to keep the fight until Congress enacted a that could not by any possibility given two meanings.

Capt. Frank W. Wells, chaplain of First Regiment of Volunteers, o has just returned from the Phil- ines, has been telling Washington ildiers some things which make it dent that the appeal to the Presi- nt to use his influence to prohibit liquor traffic in our new posses- ns was timely. He said in a pub address: "There are more than 0 liquor dealers in the islands, rep- senting firms in America. The uor rate of transportation from ntucky to the Philippine Archi- lago is less than the rate from ntucky to California. In the city Manila alone there are 400 places ere liquor is sold. Before the mericans came to the islands there re but three saloons, and at these ft drinks' only were dispensed. e can better afford to send whisky ywhere else than to the Philip- nes. We do not need it there. No tion ever developed through the e of rum. I do not mean this as a ticism of our army or navy. I am ly a witness. It is a violation of English law for intoxicating liq- rs to be sold on a British transport government vessel. Our nation ould be just as careful. Our gov- rnment, with less liquor in the serv- , is the best in the world. I told d to our Chief Executive only a w days ago. When I arrived at ilo, I discovered that whisky was d in the barracks, not fifteen feet m my quarters. I reported the tter to the officers, and was told at it had been called to the atten- n of the colonel three times. Then ent to the provost marshal, and in very short time the custom was continued. The sale and use of uor disqualifies the troops for serv- . The Filipinos are falling in th every movement the Americans ke, excepting the sale of liquor in army. While on board one of transports to Cebu, I found that uor-selling was the same as on the er transports. I tried to have stopped, but failed. I took spe- l care of the men in my regiment, th the determination that, if I uld not save their souls, I would at st get them to hell sober. I never w so much liquor on a Mississippi amboat—and I have traveled on a d many—as I saw on the trans- rt 'Sheridan' the last three days were at Cebu. There one could on every street corner native men with bottles of liquor in bas ts and a cup. These women would ll the liquor to our soldiers." is is an awful picture, and there is roborative evidence that it is not erdrawn.

Dr. B. L. Whitman, the retiring sident of Columbian University, cupied the pulpit of the E. Street ptist Church, Sunday, and preached strong sermon on "Christ as a diator," taking his text from Col. 17.

The Philippine Commission which the President is now engaged in forming will differ radically from the old commission, which recently made its voluminous report. The old commission was sent to investigate, report the conditions it found, and make recommendations for the information of the President and Congress, and it faithfully performed that duty. The new commission will go with authority to act. It will set up local governments throughout the islands, and will support them while teaching them how to stand alone. It will have a momentous task, and its work will largely determine the future of the people of those islands. It is not surprising, therefore, that the President should go slowly in selecting men for such important duties. Judge Taft, of Ohio, who will head the commission, is the only selection yet made.

The Methodist Social Union, of Washington, gave a banquet this week in honor of Bishop Walden, of Cincinnati, who was also entertained on his birthday by President and Mrs. McKinley at a family dinner at the White House. Interesting addresses were made at the banquet by Hon. A. B. Duvall, who spoke on "The Layman in Methodism," Mrs. Gen. Fisk on "Woman's Work in Methodism," Judge William M. Springer on "Methodist Unity," and Bishop Walden on "The Outlook for Methodism." The Bishop said he regarded the banquet as a continuation of his sixty-ninth birthday, which had lasted forty-eight hours.

LETTER FROM CHINA.

MR. EDITOR: My husband has handed over to me the pleasure of redeeming a promise made you for an article in your paper, and after looking over my rather limited field of interesting "somethings" to write about, I've decided you'd perhaps find more of information in an account of the workings of the Tien Tsu Hui, or Anti-Foot-Binding Society. Yours,

FLORENCE KEISER NANCE.

19 Quinsan Rd., Shanghai, China, Jan. 6, 1900.

The Tien Tsu Hui, or Natural Foot Society, was founded several years ago by Mrs. Archibald Little, a wonderfully energetic English woman, wife of a business man of this city. Its aim, while distinctly humanitarian rather than religious, is, nevertheless, Christian, and is receiving hearty support by all missions.

Of all atrocious and cruel customs in China, that of the bound foot certainly heads the list. In crippling a woman's usefulness for life it has given rise to a great many other crimes. Mrs. Little states that from the lips of numberless Chinese women it has been given as a perfectly plausible excuse for the "putting out of the way" of girl babies. "We love them, these babies of ours. How can we stand to see them go through the years of torture that come inevitably if they are to become ladies eligible for matrimony? The smaller the feet the more easily is she married."

Being impressed by the awfulness of this custom, and having untied hands, Mrs. Little initiated a society for its prevention. It has found members among all classes of society, for Shanghai presents a conglomerate mass of humanity. Seeing that the freedom of the women's feet rests with the men of China, she has made talks to the men and boys of the various schools and colleges, and permitted these Chinese to become associate members of the Tien Tsu Hui.

At the request of the members of the association, its president lately made a trip to a number of cities in neighboring provinces. The results were most encouraging. At each of the seven cities visited a good audience was obtained, and many officials gave their names for life membership, in evidence of their desire to forward this good work.

At one meeting fifteen officials were present. It is certainly a good day when a woman speaking for women in this old empire finds fifteen officials in attendance on her words.

It has been the custom in the Protestant schools for girls to demand unbinding of feet on admission. This has, however, not been the custom in the Catholic schools. After much persuasion by Mrs. Little, the Mother Superior of a large school in Ningpo decided to give permission for releasing the feet. She made a great feast for the children, and after the dining announced that a great day of rejoicing was at hand for the girls of the school; the feet were unbound, and for a whole day there was such dancing and singing and hilarity in that school as it had before never known.

This is the first of many trips inland. May all of them meet with a like success!

THE MAKING OF A STATE.

BY MARY V. DUVAL

(Concluded.)

There is nothing wrong with our history save the telling of it. It has gone on quietly, making itself ready for use since DeSoto and his mail clad knights first set foot upon our soil. Unfortunately our historians have often lived in latitudes too far North to be able to get a correct conception of what we deserve. It has depended very much on which side of Mason and Dixon's line an event transpired as to whether, in the opinion of the chronicler, it was worth the telling. The very plenitude of material within our reach, the vast stores of unwritten history at our very doors, have made us indifferent as to its preservation. In dealing out great men and the great events which followed hard upon their careers, nature has been so lavish with us that we have failed to appreciate our opportunities. In a land whose patrimony is legend and tradition, romance and song, we have turned away from our birthright and worshiped at the shrine of Plymouth Rock and Bunker Hill.

The popular historians, with true New England thrift, have utilized their scant material to the utmost, and have cultivated their genealogical tree until it has waxed strong and overshadowed with its branches those of other and less-favored localities. The South, with a prodigality equally characteristic, has allowed her rich heritage to go to waste, with scarcely an effort to preserve it intact. An intelligent foreigner who should carefully examine the numerous histories of these United States—histories by means of which our boys and girls are supposed to be instructed in reference to our country's greatness—would certainly infer that the foundation of this republic was due almost entirely to those pioneers who settled on the bleak and barren shores of New England. He would read with intense interest and admiration, no doubt, of that little band of Pilgrim Fathers which constituted the forlorn hope of those who had separated themselves from what they considered the tyranny and corruption of the Church of England. He would look in vain, however, for a story equally thrilling of the French and Dutch Huguenots, who, braving persecutions and martyrdoms compared with which those of the Separatists from the Church of England were as child's play, sought altars and firesides in Maryland, Virginia, and the Carolinas, founding there those principles of civil and religious liberty which will endure forever. It is true that they burned no witches and persecuted no Quakers, but there are other episodes as interesting, if less grewsome, awaiting alone the magic touch of that historian who shall write with an impartial pen. Every bay and inlet, creek and harbor in New England, and along the northeastern shore of the Atlantic, has its legend, embalmed in verse or prose by the poets and romancers, native and to the manner born. With what scant material did Washington Irving immortalize Sleepy Hollow, Wolfert's Roost, and other localities touched by the magic of his pen! James Fenimore Cooper, who slew with his pen, it is said, more Indians than ever existed on the American continent, has done for the so-called Middle States what Scott did for the highlands of his country, and Dickens and Thackeray accomplished for the sordid monotony of the streets of London town.

It may be observed that this is a plea for literature as well as history. In fact, the two go hand in hand, and can not be separated.

Where can we find a more powerful picture of the battle of Waterloo than that found in the "Les Miserables" of Victor Hugo? What historian has given us such inimitable pictures of the life and manners and the lack of morals of the French Court from the days of Charles the Ninth to the execution of Marie Antoinette as are to be found in the pages of Dumas the Elder? Where can we find a more accurate picture of the social and political life of the England of the Stuarts than in that strongest of historical novels, "Henry Esmond"? "The Last of the Mohicans," the only work of Cooper worth the preserving, is a figment of the imagination not half so impressive as the real story of "The Last of the Choctaws," haunting the spot where his lodge-pole had stood, refusing to leave his native land, though death from exposure and starvation was the only alternative. Where can we find in history or fiction a legend more beautiful than that of the Pascagoulas, who, with the death-song on their lips, advanced to meet the engulfing waves? Where shall we find figures more noble and stalwart than those of Pushmataha and Greenwood LeFlore? Treaties more picturesque and binding than those of "Dancing Rabbit," and that which bound the haughty Chickasaw to relinquish his birthright? King Philip's war was a mere bagatelle compared to that with the Creeks and Seminoles, which decided forever the question of race supremacy in the South.

Until very recently the popular idea of the first settlers of Virginia, the real progenitors of the Southern people, was, that they were a band of lawless adventurers and escaped jailbirds, who sought the wilds of America to escape the hanging they so richly deserved at home. It is only late researches that have established the fact that the first act of the colonists at Jamestown was to erect a canvas-covered chapel, in which the daily services of the Church of England were devoutly and voluntarily held.

We need some poet who shall do for us what Longfellow and Lowell and Whittier have done for New England, and then, perhaps, John Smith, the fearless explorer who discovered and named the sea-board of half a continent, will take at least equal rank with Miles Standish, the Puritan captain whose field of operation was confined, perhaps, to the dimensions of a New England township. History has made much capital of the so-called conspiracy of Aaron Burr, and his descent of the Mississippi with a force of armed and determined men. Judging from the consternation it produced among the settlers along its banks, and the alarm it caused the administration at Washington, rumor must have assigned to it the proportions of a veritable armada. Whether or not this modern Lucifer was guilty of the gigantic plot attributed to him, the historian of that time has not failed to paint in vivid colors what might have happened had Burr succeeded in seizing New Orleans, at that time a most un-American city, gaining over the discontented forces of the United States, and placing himself at the head of a mighty empire in the Southwest.

Our horror at what might have been is not unmixed with admiration for the audacity of the man who could plan such an enterprise, and seek with a handful of men to carry it out. If Burr's plans were treasonable and dangerous to the government, then certainly those who first intercepted and detained him were patriots worthy of all honor. Once past the limits of the Territory of Mississippi, with his flotilla of boats he would have reached New Orleans without fear of detention. Yet who, outside the circumscribed limits of local and State historians, ever hears the name of Cowles Mead, the acting governor of Mississippi, who, in spite of all of Burr's expostulations and seductive arguments; in spite of the well-armed force he carried with him, forced a surrender of men, arms, and ammunition? Who but local and State historians makes mention of the decision of Mr. Poindexter, then attorney-general of the territory, that Burr was not answerable to the powers that had detained him, and should be removed to a competent tribunal? While many disagreed with him on that point, there was one man who never doubted the force of the argument, and that man was Burr himself, who, to prove his concurrence, made haste to leave the territory where he had, unexpectedly, no doubt, found men who could think as well as act. Who doubts that if Burr's arrest had taken place north of a certain parallel of latitude, the names of the men who successfully arrested his plans would have been placed in the same calendar with the three backwoodsmen who performed the less hazardous feat of detaining the English spy, Major Andre, as he carried his treasonable dispatches to Benedict Arnold?

Nathan Hale, the hero spy of the Revolution, has been commemorated in history and fiction, and his name will justly go down through the ages linked with those of other men who died for love of home and country. Who, outside of his native Tennessee, gives more than a passing thought to Sam Davis, the noble Confederate spy, almost who, in sight of his birth-place, almost within sound of his mother's voice, died an ignominious death, refusing to buy his life by whispering the name of the real offender, his captain, who lay manacled near him in an adjoining cell? That the historian of the future may be blind to sectional differences, and mete out full and impartial justice to all, is a consummation devoutly to be wished.

THE TWENTIETH CENTURY FUND.

Dear brethren of the North Mississippi Conference, are we not falling behind on the Twentieth Century Thank-offering? We can not be too early or too earnest in pressing this claim upon the consciences and the pockets of our peoples or ourselves. The use of the pulpit and the platform, as well as of the press, is to be made with vigor and persistency; but nothing must be allowed to put aside the roll-book and personal presentation of the subject by the preacher or his appointee. The ultimatum of the work lies here. We have no wealthy members to come forward with impulsive generosity, and lay their ten thousands or thousands on this altar. Even hundreds per capita will be few. We depend on dollars from the many, and this is really better. But the many must see the need and value of giving their money now to the schools of the church. Here preachers and their aids are to be teachers. But do we ourselves grasp the fact that the Christian education we are set to do touches with vital energy every nerve and muscle of the church? In leading our people, let us make the best possible use of the press. From this source nothing at hand is better for the masses than New Century Education, the special organ of the church in the education field—full of matter to stimulate, instruct, and encourage—edited by the able and efficient Secretary of Education, Dr. J. D. Hammond. This bright, genial monthly, of good size—sixteen pages—full of the best matter for its purpose, is within reach of anybody. Ten cents a year! Think of that, brethren. The smallest self-denial will pay for it. In the February number for this last year of the century, almost any paragraph is worth to a reader what it costs a year; but it has two articles of specially high merit and eminently timely for present use: one, An Old Million Scheme, condensed from a sermon of recent date by the Rev. W. L. Watkinson (I Chronicles xxii, 14-16); the other, Instruction in Conduct, by Dr. W. W. Smith, Chancellor of the Randolph-Macon system of schools and colleges in the Virginia Conference. Then follows a Survey of the Field, keeping us in sight of the grand work as it goes on.

Can we get this monthly into the hands of our people and also the leaflets in use? Let us faithfully try. The opportunity which this year gives, when gone, will never return. Bishop Galloway says, Now or never.

W. T. J. SULLIVAN.

Columbus, Miss.

THE THANK-OFFERING!

Rev. Q. A. Oats, Friar's Point, has sent five dollars cash, and is giving earnest attention to this, as he does to all the interests of the church.

Rev. D. W. Babb did faithful and successful work at Louisville last year, and is doing likewise this year at Red Banks.

Rev. J. A. Bowen, Columbus, has sent this year thirty dollars cash, and says, "We are now well organized, and ready to renew our efforts of last year to secure one dollar per member, and more."

Rev. H. T. Cunningham has given constant thought and special effort to the fund since reaching his new charge. His intelligent, "up-to-date" plans are bound to win. He has talked it, preached it, and distributed tracts, and even before he was fully ready has received twenty-five dollars. He will, ere long, make a most gratifying report. Vaiden bids every charge in the Winona district and in the North Mississippi Conference to look well to its laurels.

Carrollton is maturing plans, and does not propose to be left in the final wind-up.

Rev. T. L. Mellen, presiding elder of Forest district, and Rev. W. T. J. Sullivan, presiding elder of Columbus district, have encouraged me with letters. They are looking well to the interest in their respective districts.

Rev. W. W. Wollard, presiding elder of Aberdeen district, will give three or four days to this interest at each charge on his second round. He will visit with the pastor as many people as he can, talk with them about the fund, distribute literature, secure personal subscriptions, preach on the subject on Sunday, and push forward the work in every possible way. Let the pastors take due notice, and prepare the way for him, and render every assistance possible.

One thing, and one thing only, is needed to guarantee large success, viz.: an earnest, faithful, persistent effort on the part of every presiding elder and preacher in charge. May we not expect that? Every moment's delay now invites defeat, and defeat would shame us all. Then let us be up and doing at once.

J. R. BINGHAM.

WHEREVER AND WHATEVER.

BY W. H. BANCROFT.

Where'er my path may lead,
Through field or wilderness,
Through desert wild or verdant mead,
Trat path Thy love will bless.

Whate'er may be my cross,
Through grief of soul or pain,
Through failure deep or heavy loss,
Trat cross shall bring me gain.

Where'er may be my place,
If high it be or l. w.
Contentment shall illume my face,
Thon dost no ill bestow.

Whate'er may be my life,
If light or stormy frown,
If rest or if the battle's strife,
That life shall win a crown.

Where'er I be or go,
Whate'er may come or cease,
Thy tender grace shall all things show,
My heart be tilled with peace.

What'e'er may be Thy will,
Though now I can not see
What purposes Thou wilt fulfill,
Thy will is best for me.

"WHAT WOULD JESUS DO?"

"I propose to inspect all matter that goes into the paper during the week, and snbject it to the general test, 'What wonld Jesus do?'"

These words express the lofty aims and attainments of one Dr. Sheldon, who presnmes to teach the ohnrch and the world how Jesns wonld run a daily newspaper. It is difficnlt for a truly pions soul to imagine that Jesns wonld condescend to rnn such a paper for a week, or for any other given length of time; and if he did do such a thing, what "matter" he wonld snffer to "go into the paper." The only literary work he ever engaged in was to write in the sand; and if anybody ever knew what he wrote, there is no record of it. Indeed, I think it a hopeful sign for onr humanity that some presnmptnons genins has not discovered that the nnfortunate woman read and preserved his words.

But now comes Dr. Sheldon, with all the mental and spiritnal limitations of a mortal man consciously saved by grace—as I trust he is—and is going to show ns the infaillible Jesns on the editorial tripod, for the space of a week, in the person of himself. I suppose it would be more generons to call this pretentious attitude of the hnman toward the divine a spirit of fanaticism. But is it less than desperately presnmptnous wickedness? And Dr. Sheldon's own proposition makes escape from the conclnsion impossible: "I propose to inspect all matter that goes into the paper during the week, and snbject it to the general test, 'What would Jesus do?'" The ring of that "I" transfers the mortal Dr. Sheldon to the immortal Jesus, for the space of a whole week.

Certainly Mr. E. W. Howe, editor of the Atchison Globe, did not expect that his offer to divide honors with Dr. Sheldon dnring this famons week wonld be accepted. And yet Dr. Sheldon will agree to exchange pnlpits with him on Snnday, "if the members of his church take kindly to the idea." Who ever heard of Jesns changing pnlpits with anyone, or consulting a congregation as to where he shonld preach?

Why did not Dr. Sheldon recognize his fallibility of judgment and of conduct, and announce that he was going to rnn the paper for a week as he thonght a Christian man shonld rnn a paper? Does he not know, as does every other being whom God has created, that created being necessarily places limitations that do not belong to the Creator? And does he not further know that the limitations of the finite are only removed to the extent that dnty is revealed in the Word of God? Then why assnme to do that which he could not do, even if the law of God permitted the effort? That it is proper, and the dnty of Dr. Sheldon, and of all others claiming membership in the "body of Jesns," to do in all things as nearly as Jesus would have them do, none can question; but when Dr. Sheldon, or anyone else, presnmes to act as Jesus wonld do if present in person and acting for himself, there is a manifest audacity little short of that of the devil himself when he demanded the homage of Jesns. Such an one will defend a mistake rather than confess and seek to correct a wrong in the vain hope to impress others that he has attained the ambition of humanity and that which is claimed by the Pope of Rome—absolnte infallibility. David prayed: "Keep back thy servant also from presnmptnons sins; let them not have dominion over me. Then shall I be upright, and I shall be innocent from the great transgression." But this fear does not seem to be a very strong element in the Christian character of Dr. Sheldon.

J. M. WEEMS.

MISSIONARY INSTITUTE OF THE FOREST DISTRICT.

In obedience to the mandate of the Discipline, Presiding Elder T. L. Melien called his subordinates together in a Missionary Institute at Newton Station, at 8 30 o'clock A. M, Jan. 31, 1900.

After religions service conducted by the "beloved," in which the blessings of God were earnestly invoked npon the deliberations of the Institnte, led by Bro. B. W. Lewis, we crossed in vision over into Cnba, climbed its rngged heights, traversed its fertile plains, passed through its cities, and found there a large field white nnto harvest; bnt the laborers are few.

Taking our leave of the Cnbans and the "Father of the Antilles," we crossed the ocean and, following Bro. D. C. Langford, we explored the oldest civilization of the world (China), the scene of the labors of Miss Laura Haygood, Dr. Parker, and others. As we think of innnmerable hosts who are dying for want of the Bread of Life, we are humiliated to reflect that we are doing so little.

Praying that God may remove the canses that there hinder the spread of the gospel, we next took a journey with Bro. M. L. White over into the "Island Empire" (Japan), and fonnd that God has crowned the labors of the sainted Lambnth, the enterprising and aggressive Neesima, their co-laborers and snccessors with great snccess, for many of the inhabitants of that once hermit nation are accepting Christ as their personal Savior.

Taking leave of Japan, we went with Bro. J. H. Foreman to the "Diamond Repnblic" (Brazil), and snrveyed the country. Feeling grateful to Almighty God for the great things accomplished there, and trnsting that the hearts and purses of the Christians will be opened np to greater liberality to further the work there, we came back home to follow the leadership of Bro. J. G. Galloway into Mexico, where we fonnd the banner of Christ is fast nnfurling in the balmy zephyrs of that Southern Repnblic.

Our work among the Choctaws was scanned. The Lord is wonderfully blessing onr labors there. May he hasten the day when we can claim the souls of all our "brothers in red" for the Master!

The valnable service rendered by the American Bible Society in our mission work was set forth in a comprehensive paper by Bro. W. W. Morse.

Home, indeed, was not neglected, for very excellent papers from the pens of Mrs. Clara H. Cope, Miss Sallie Smylie, and Mrs. D. Scarborough, each on woman's work in this district, were read before the Institnte.

We were honored with the presence of that indispensable functionary of the Woman's Home Mission Society of the Mississippi Annnal Conference, Miss Addie Parnell, who presented the cause she represents in a very forceful and interesting address.

May the good work continue!

The attendance was not near as large as it shonld have been, but the Holy Spirit was present with great power, and the "beloved"—a man of nntiring energy, possessed of an inexhaustible snpply of exhortations and information—proved himself fully equal to the occasion.

I'm snre I voice the sentiments of all the "brethren" when I say, "Thanks to him for his many timely remarks and helpful snggestions.' Also, when I say, "Thanks to the good people of Newton for their hospitality, and to their kind pastor, J. G. Galloway, for his courtesy."

THOS. J. O'NEIL, Sec.

A PROTEST.

Having been for seven years in charge of the "Finance Table" of the statistical reports of the Mississippi Conference, and was relieved at my request by Dr. Andrews at the last Conference, I know that in most cases where preachers rnsh into the columns of the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE to correct the Minntes, the mistake is with them, and not with the secretary, for I have always kept their reports on file, and more than once have had to show through the ADVOCATE that the Minutes were in exact accord with the report handed in, and the brother making complaint was only advertising his own errors.

I do not, therefore, write this with a desire to correct the Minntes (though my charge is credited with paying $85 for domestic missions, when, in fact, we only paid $35), bnt to protest against the authority the new secretary has assnmed in correcting reports according to his idea of how they shonld be made.

I reported "For Other Objects" $127 60. The secretary takes it npon himself to change my figures to $4 010 70, intending, I snppose, to include the amount expended for churches and parsonages, and amount raised by the Epworth League and Snnday-school (if so, it shonld have been $4,060.70); but these amounts were reported by me in their proper places.

The column, "For Other Objects," is intended for moneys raised, and for which there is no special column to report, snch as, The Orphans' Home, money paid for ministerial help, etc.

Moneys expended on churches and parsonages, and amonnt raised in Epworth League and Sunday-school, are to be reported in their proper places, and not transferred to the "Finance Table," except in the column, "Total Amount Raised from All Sources," for to transfer these amonats to the column, "For Other Objects," wonld be reporting money twice.

This column, "Total Amonnt Raised from All Sonrces," is to show a balance, not simply for the "Finance Table," as Bro. Harmon wants to make it, but for all three tables. If not, then the words, "Amount Raised from All Sources," are absolntely without meaning, and shonld be stricken ont.

If the figures in this column were intended to represent only the amounts shown above on the "Finance Table," then the word "Total" is all that wonld appear.

Bro. Harmon forgets that he is only a "part" of the secretary, for we have three men to do the work of the "statistical secretary," and Bro. Harmon need not transfer everything to his "table," for fear the work done by the other brethren will not appear in the Minntes.

The amonnts reported on Membership and Baptism and Church Property table, and Sunday-school and Epworth League table, added to the amonnt on Finance table, shonld make the "Total from All Sources," and hence the balance sheet is complete for all the "statistical tables," and not simply for a part of it.

I think myself that the "Finance Table" should have a blank in which to report all moneys raised, and no money shonld be reported on the other two tables; the last column, then, wonld be "Total," for the "Amonnt from All Sources" wonld be shown in the colnmns above.

But the Book Editor did not see fit to so arrange it, and neither Bro. Harmon or myself have the authority to make the change.

JAS. G. GALLOWAY.

REV. C. G. ANDREWS, D. D.

Tribnte to the memory of Rev. C. G. Andrews, D. D., adopted by the Quarterly Conference of Central M. E Church, South, Meridian, Miss, Feb. 8, 1900:

Only a few fleeting weeks have passed since Dr. C. G. Andrews, presiding elder, presided over the deliberations of this body. But to-night we find another occupying the chair. Thus we are forcibly reminded, that while God calls his workmen, his work still goes on.

Dr. Andrews was for years a consecrated and leading light in onr church, recognized by all as a pnre, conscientious minister of the gospel of Christ, always abonnding in good deeds and works for his Master. But the years and days of his earthly pilgrimage came to a peaceful end, and on the morning of Jan. 7, 1900, his pure spirit winged its flight to heaven, to be and live with God, whom he loved and served faithfnlly for long years, where we hope to meet him some sweet day.

"Resolved, By the Quarterly Conference of Central M. E. Church, South, Meridian, Miss., that in the death of Dr. Andrews the church of Christ has lost a strong and zealous advocate, his associates a faithful counselor and leader, the country a pure Christian gentleman and good citizen, his family a strong arm, true, faithful, loving husband and father. That we tender to those loved ones our heartfelt sympathy, and rejoice with them for the precious legacy left them and us by their departed loved one, whose memory will ever be an inspiration, and his noble life a sweet benediction to them and us. That we commend these bereaved ones to all of God's followers, wherever they may be, ever invoking God's richest and lasting blessings npon them."

La. Conf.....Mrs. T. P. Fullilove..

Members of the North Mississippi Conference W. F. M. Society, craving your attention, I pray yon give heed to this appeal, sanctioned, I'm snre, by all of your Conference officers.

Yon have received the last circular letter from Mrs. McIntosh, onr Conference corresponding secretary. Have yon read it? Have you seriously pondered its contents? Wonld that I had power to reproduce that letter in characters of molten gold; that I could hold before your mental and spiritual vision the burning truths between the lines. Are you prayerfully considering the issues now confronting ns? A crisis in our missionary work has been reached. How shall we meet it? Dire calamity seems to menace on every side. Not the least cause for alarm is the indifference of many of our workers. To avert this threatened disaster must be the paramount desire, the earnest prayer of every heart, if we wonld not see Ichabod written npon a cause that might well enlist the labor of angels as well as men.

In his Epistle to the Corinthians, St. Paul depicts a condition that might well be ours to-day—that we "sorrow after a godly sort," in order that it may work in us great carefulness, vehement desire, great zeal; that in all things we may approve ourselves to be clear in this matter. Turn not away, dear sisters, but let everyone of us seeking the right course in this clearing of ourselves in the presence of our Lord's command ask the question, How shall it be done? In our closets, as we pour out our souls in fervent prayer, the answer will come.

Please read carefully the eighth chapter of Second Corinthians, adopt its sentiment, and make the lesson it teaches the rule of our future actions in this work in hand. Over and over has been told in our hearing how, more than others, woman should rejoice in what Christianity has brought. In the very dawn of the Christian era her shackles began to loosen. As the years rolled on she felt more and more the touch of a liberating hand, but to the closing decades of the nineteenth century belongs the glad refrain that woman is free to labor for her Lord as conscience may dictate or the Holy Spirit lead.

For long years our cry was for a place in which to work. Anon our Woman's Foreign Missionary Society was duly organized, and with delight we saw, as a result, consecrated workers in the field. Then we prayed for other open doors, that our borders might be enlarged, that the news of salvation might enter other heathen lands. God heard the cry, and returned answer in removed barriers, opened doors, awakened consciences, from which every breeze came laden with a call for the Bread of Life. Gladly we sowed precious seed, and rejoiced in hope of rich harvests of immortal souls garnered for the Master. How willingly we wrought! Dues came promptly, specials multiplied, scholarships were taken, day-schools, Bible women, hospitals helped, and withal our joyful orisons ascended heavenward.

In the good work the North Mississippi Conference Society held a worthy place. How is it now? Sisters, will we forfeit our position? Shall we, having "put our hand to the plow," look back, or cease to labor? God forbid! Have we lost interest? We are failing from some cause, and the witness of figures against us makes us shudder. Your faithful secretary has spared no pains to inform you of the true state of the case. The anguish of her soul should arouse every member to speedy action toward lessening our fearful delinquency.

This year of our Lord 1900 is witnessing the advance of mighty movements which roll around the world like ocean billows—movements to honor the God of heaven in token of gratitude for countless mercies from his hand. Have we, as missionary workers, forgotten our duty? Are our impulses palsied, our eyes dazzled by the tide of other and apparently greater (?) gifts?

Sisters, with our almost empty hands, how can we approach the threshold of the twentieth century? After such signal answers to our petitions, what excuse can our voices frame for this lapse of service? Let us awake from our slumbers, and Christ shall give light to see duty as we never saw it before. Let us heed our secretary's admonition: Redeem all pledges, bring up contingent arrearages, seek and secure new members, revivify by the magnetism of our own zeal those who have fallen away—in a word, strive once more to rally our scattered hosts, and with greater efforts do valiant service for the King of kings and Lord of lords.

MRS J. F. EVANS.

NOTICE.

To the Members of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society in the Bounds of the Seashore District—

DEAR SISTERS: As your district secretary recently appointed to fill the place made vacant by Mrs. J. P. Drake's removal, I take the readiest method of placing myself in correspondence with the societies in the district.

Ten years ago it was my privilege to organize every auxiliary in our then existing territory, with one or, possibly, two exceptions; therefore, I do not come to you altogether as a stranger, but rather as a "returning prodigal," willing to take up the tasks of other years. I hope to find, upon closer acquaintance, that "one" has grown, if not to a "thousand," at least to a goodly number.

To the old friends and the new I extend greetings, and pray that this may be a year of progress along all lines of our work, though I can not hope to successfully fill the place of my beloved and consecrated predecessor in office. I shall endeavor to visit all the societies at no very distant day.

And, now, let me beg the secretaries of auxiliaries to report to me at once, thereby helping me to get in touch with the work and the workers; and I would urge upon you the importance of stressing the Conference pledge collection and Twentieth Century Fund for the quarter.

Our missionary year is drawing to a close. Treasurers will please send in their reports not later than March 10. I hope to hear from every auxiliary promptly.

Yours in the work,

MRS. J. S. PARKER,
Sec. Seashore District W. F. M. S.

The Christian Life.

FINDING AND BRINGING.

It was Simon Peter whom Andrew brought to Christ. We do not hear much in the New Testament of Andrew's after history; but if he had never done anything else than lead his brother to the Lord, it was worth living for just to do that; and when we get to heaven we shall see that the luster of Peter's crown casts special radiance on Andrew's face. When we read of the conversions on the day of Pentecost, of the heroic protest before the council, of the conversion of Cornelius, and, above all, when we peruse those two precious letters which Peter has indited, let us not forget that, humanly speaking, but for Andrew, Peter would not have been himself a Christian. Doubtless God could have called him by some other instrumentality, but he made use of Andrew to teach us the lesson that, in doing the good that lies in our hands, we may at length really do more for the church than we could have effected by more ostentatious effort in other places. Let the lowly and timid, therefore, take courage. They may not have shining talents or commanding position, yet, by working where they are, they may be honored in bringing to Jesus some who shall take foremost places in the church, or become leaders in some missionary or evangelistic movement.

Many of the greatest men that the church has known have been c

...aronse the Epworth League yet, but there are still some signs of life in it. Our people seem to be ready to work in the Master's cause. They have given their pastor and wife a very cordial welcome, and have done all we could expect of them in the way of supplying our needs.

I felt like the Bishop made a great mistake when he read me out to this charge, as I was here two years ago as an assistant preacher, young and inexperienced. I made some mistakes, and had to undergo some hardships, one of which was a spell of slow fever that kept me at death's door for several weeks. However, on reaching here I began visiting my old friends and flock, and found such a warm reception, but my mind changed, and to-day wife and I are happily housed in the parsonage.

May God bless the good people this year with good health and crops, and may their pastor be so filled with the Holy Spirit that he will carry the sunlight of the gospel and the love of God into every heart and home in this charge so effectually that many sons and daughters will be born into God's kingdom this year!

Brethren, pray for us.

RURAL HILL CHARGE.

The first Quarterly Conference for Rural Hill charge convened at White Hall, Feb. 3. We had very favorable weather, and Bro. T. W. Dye, our beloved presiding elder, was on hand in fine trim and preached us three most excellent sermons, to the delight and edification of all the hearers. Bro. Dye presented the interest of the church, both publicly and privately, in such a clear and impressive manner that it will help to build up the work financially. He is not only a strong gospel preacher, but a good financier. He knows how to make things pleasant for the stewards and for the preachers, yet he never forgets the fact that religion has a bread-and-butter side to it. The stewards assessed for the support of the preacher and presiding elder $415. They made my salary $380, with an exhortation from the elder to pay their preacher monthly.

Rural Hill circuit has five churches with a membership of over 350, though we have no parsonage, as it was destroyed by fire over a year ago. At our last Quarterly Conference the parsonage was located to be built at Center Ridge, where the church owns forty acres of land. This is a very desirable place for a camp meeting; and we are anticipating holding one there this Summer. I have been urging my people all over the work, both in and out of the pulpit, to keep up the Sunday-schools, prayer meetings, to pray with their families night and morning, to attend church regularly, and by all means take the ADVOCATE. To this end I expect to continue to work and pray. Brethren, give me your prayers.

WINCHESTER CHARGE.

At our last Conference I was returned for another year to the Winchester charge, and this reappointment was not at all unexpected, nor was it undesired.

I rejoice to say my second year with this people has begun with bright prospects for a successful year. This charge has five appointments—two less than we had last year. The seven churches we served last year consisted of five country churches and two small towns. The number of the appointments, together with their location of the churches, necessitated a division of a Sunday between the towns of Winchester and Chicora. Believing these two places should by all means be given a full Sunday, and the people of these churches insisting upon it, the number of churches was accordingly reduced to five. I can see already that this was a wise step, for the congregations are larger at these places; the pastor has an opportunity to be with the people in their homes between the morning and evening services, instead of having to drive seven miles to preach at night.

The first Quarterly Conference convened on Saturday, Feb. 3, at Chicora, a saw-mill town. Our new presiding elder, Rev. G. A. Grice, who was appointed in Dr. C. G Andrews' place, was on hand, and made quite a favorable impression.

While we all feel very keenly the loss of our beloved Dr. Andrews, we also feel that the Bishop made a wise selection when he appointed Bro. Grice to succeed him. He magnified the office of the presiding elder, and although this was just his third Quarterly Conference he had held, he seemed to be an experienced hand in the office.

One very encouraging feature of this Quarterly Conference was, that each church on the charge was represented. We have had five accessions since Conference.

F. B. ORMOND, P. C.

A YOUNG PREACHER'S FIRST EXPERIENCE.

At the last meeting of our Annual Conference I was appointed to my first charge as an itinerant preacher on trial, that appointment being to the South Warren circuit. Only those who have had their first appointment can know how a young preacher feels just at that time.

Well, I gladly received that appointment, though it took me to a people whom I had never seen or known before. I am glad to say that I have found them to be a kind-hearted and cultured people. They undoubtedly know how to make a young preacher and his family rejoice.

We arrived at Vicksburg on the third of January, where we were met by Bro. G. W. Ferguson (one of our stewards) and his youngest daughter, Miss Sarah, with conveyance both for ourselves and baggage; so, after a four miles' ride out over those very ancient and historic Walnut Hills, we arrived at the parsonage, which is a very comfortable and cosy little building. Here we were greeted by quite a number of ladies; also our close neighbor, Bro. Hubert Bobb. After a few minutes' talk we were invited to the dining-room, where we all enjoyed a delightful dinner, which the ladies had very kindly prepared. A short while after dinner was spent very pleasantly chatting about things in general. Then our little party began to break up. But before Sister Smith left she very kindly took the preacher's wife to the kitchen, where she found everything convenient, together with a lot of nice things to cook. To these many other good things have been added since we came.

I have made one round on the circuit, and have found at each church a refined congregation, who seem to be willing to aid their pastor any way they can. May the Lord bless them, and give us a prosperous year!

My constant prayer is for a revival of Holy Ghost religion all over this circuit.

of the pennies and the pounds will take care of themselves." Large things are but an aggregation of small things. If we take care of the small things we are in effect taking care of the large things which the small things combine to make. That is the philosophy of the old financial proverb, and its application is as broad as human life.

Take care of what you eat, when you eat, and how you eat, and your stomach will take care of itself. But who takes care of such trivial things? That is why, someday, the majority of people have to take care of the stomach. When that day comes, there is no aid so effective in undoing the results of past carelessness as Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It strengthens the stomach, and restores the organs of digestion and nutrition to a condition of healthy activity. It cures biliousness, heartburn, flatulence, indigestion, palpitation, dizziness, cold extremities, and a score of other ailments which are but the symptoms of disorder in the stomach and its allied organs.

If you are sick you can consult Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y., by letter, free of charge. Each letter is treated as sacredly confidential, and an answer is promptly sent in a plain envelope without printing or advertising upon it.

"I was troubled with very frequent headaches, often accompanied by severe vomiting," writes Miss Mary Belle Summerton, of San Diego, Duval Co., Texas. "My bowels were irregular and my stomach and liver seemed continually out of order. Often I could eat almost nothing, and sometimes absolutely nothing for twenty-four hours at a time. I was entirely unfit for work, and my whole system seemed so run-down that I feared a severe sick spell and was very much discouraged. I was advised to try Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and did so with such satisfactory results that before finishing the third bottle I felt perfectly able to undertake the duties attending public school life, and contracted to do so. I most heartily advise those suffering with indigestion, and its attendant evils, to give this great medicine a fair trial."

Use only Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets with "Golden Medical Discovery" when a laxative is needed.

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 22, 1900.

A POPULAR FALLACY EXPLODED.

There has been so much talk of late among reputed wise-acres in science and sociology about physical and moral degeneracy that the public mind has been filled with gloomy forebodings, and many have been led to imagine that in highly civilized countries the race is almost on the verge of collapse. The lugubrious utterances of Max Nordan, Prof. Lombroso, and others, have been given wide publicity, and as they were accepted by the unsophisticated almost as gospel truth, considerable consternation has been excited over the dark future pictured for civilized peoples.

Some were skeptical at the first about the truth of these declarations regarding degeneration, and now that the matter has been more thoroughly investigated, it is strikingly apparent that such deductions and conclusions were exceedingly ill-founded. In an exhaustive and highly instructive article in the February Forum on the subject of "Longevity and Degeneration," Mr. William R. Thayer shows most conclusively that, contrary to the popular supposition, modern civilization, with its complex conditions, its strain upon the nerves, and its acceleration of speed, has not been unfavorable to longevity. He asserts, on the authority of undeniable statistics, that "during the past hundred years the length of life of the average man in the United States and in the more civilized parts of Europe has increased from a little over 30 to about 40 years; this being true beyond question for the masses, who feel immediately the effects of plenty, hunger, and cold, the great physical dispensers of life and death."

Foremost among the numerous causes which have contributed to this result are mentioned: (1) Sanitation, which was almost an unknown thing a hundred years ago; (2) improved methods in medicine; and (3) more regular habits of living.

When it comes to the case of brain-workers, who, it would seem, are likely to suffer most from the pressure and stimulus of modern life, quite a remarkable showing is made. All of us, as Mr. Thayer remarks, are familiar with the expressions: "The pace that kills," "We live too fast," etc., expressing the prevalent belief that "the conditions brought about by science and invention are really blighting civilized society at the top." In order to explode this fallacy, Mr. Thayer obtained definite information concerning not less than 530 of the leading brain-workers, male and female, of Europe and America, who have lived during this century, and calls attention to the fact that the average duration of life for these persons is 68 years and 8 months, or nearly 30 years more than that of the average man. He states further that if the number of names thus considered were to be doubled, the result would not be very different. The list scrutinized comprises eminent poets, painters and sculptors, musicians, novelists, men of letters, theologians and reformers, philosophers, historians, military commanders, statesmen, scientists, and inventors—in fact, just the classes we would expect to see succumb to the supposedly baneful effects of the conditions and modes of living which characterize a high degree of civilization. Most surprising of all, however, is the disclosure made with regard to the longevity of statesmen, who not only have exhausting burdens of service and responsibility laid upon them, but are peculiarly subject to worry, the sway of powerful passions, and to interruptions of regular habits. Notwithstanding this, statesmen are shown to exceed in longevity any of the other groups examined, 71 years being the average age attained by the 112 persons of this class whose names were considered. So, then, the attempt made by some writers to convict civilized man of degeneracy on account of evidences of abnormality, physical and otherwise, exhibited in certain instances by genius, ignominiously falls to the ground. Of course, it does not follow that modern civilization benefits every individual in the way mentioned. In fact, there are many instances where the excitement and nervous strain it involves are manifestly harmful, and cause a premature break-down.

After making due allowance for other causes, Christianity must be credited with no small share in bringing about the lengthening of human life in civilized countries, for Christianity indeed is the basis and nourisher of our civilization. It is the Christian religion that emphasizes the sublime sacredness of human life, that teaches the duty of using every means at command for preserving it, and fosters those habits and tempers which are most conducive to health and longevity. "As righteousness tendeth to life"—and we believe the Scriptures refer both to physical and spiritual life—"so he that pursueth evil, pursueth it to his own death."

Reverting to the charge of moral degeneracy, Mr. Thayer wisely says: "To impute to our time blame which it does not deserve may do more harm than to exaggerate its virtues. History shakes her head and smiles sadly at those enthusiasts who imagine that men attained to perfection and happiness in some remote period of the past. We distrust a social reformer who sets up the 'beautiful collectivism' of thirteenth-century life in Germany as a state far above our present level; and when the Pope prays that mankind may return to the conditions from which the Franciscan and Dominican orders sprang, we suspect that he has overlooked the characteristic facts of that period. . . . The abuses, the hideous wrongs, the inequalities which shock us at the close of this century, were ancient when it began. What is new is the slow awakening of the moral sense to the realization that many evils which our ancestors beheld, or practiced without horror, are abominations that can and must be cast out."

A WEAK ARGUMENT.

An evening daily in this city advances the plausible, but silly, argument that because the gaming spirit has manifested itself among men from time immemorial, and has never been totally suppressed, therefore the evil ought to be licensed. Nothing would suit the gambling fraternity better than thus to be given the protection, not to say the encouragement, of the law. But in the name of reason and justice, what right has any official in this city, or in the State of Louisiana, to grant license to gambling-houses and gamblers, or show them any toleration whatever, when the law says nothing about such licensing, but is plainly and emphatically prohibitory in character? Let us stick to the law as it reads, and not be guilty of the flagrant offense of substituting mere wishes in place thereof.

While we are about it, however, why not license murder and arson and forgery and rape, and a number of other damnable things that every civilized community has, time out of mind, sought to suppress and prevent by means of the most stringent prohibitory laws? Have murders entirely ceased? Have forgers and perjurers and thieves and cut-throats entirely disappeared from among us on account of the rigorous laws against them? Because the laws prohibiting these and other crimes and misdemeanors are only partially successful in suppressing vice and crime, would any sane man think of suggesting their repeal? Is an evil or crime to be licensed merely because the law fails to do away with it entirely? While in but few instances does law against crime secure its complete abolition, it undoubtedly acts as a powerful preventive thereof. Hence it is just about as sensible to talk about licensing thieving or homicide as to argue for the license of gambling on the ground mentioned.

THE FAMINE IN INDIA.

Reports of the most distressing character continue to pour in from India as regards the prevalence of famine. The famine area embraces large portions of Western, Central, and Northern India, where there has been a severe drouth, and affects, it is said, upwards of 30,000,000 of people. Missionaries who witnessed the famines of 1877 and 1897 state that the present one is the worst of the century. Many fathers and mothers are selling their children in order to obtain enough food to keep from starving. Abandoned children are frequently found. The scarcity of water, in addition to the lack of food, renders the situation still more terrible. Between three and four millions of people are being provided for by the government, and a great deal is being done by private charity; but, notwithstanding this, the relief being administered is far inadequate to the need, and countless thousands will miserably perish unless more extensive help is rendered. As the British Government has its hands full at present with the war in South Africa, it can hardly be expected to do much more than it is doing for the succor of the famine sufferers. Hence there is all the more reason why the benevolent-hearted in this and other lands should respond liberally to these calls of distress. Now is the time for the Christians of America to display a ready sympathy and a free-flowing charity. The lot of the poor among us is princely as compared with that of these famine-stricken millions in India.

NEW BOOKS.

ILLUSTRATIVE NOTES ON THE INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY-SCHOOL LESSONS FOR 1900. By Jesse Lyman Hurlbut and Robert Remington Doherty. Cloth. 388 pages. Price, $1 25. Eaton & Mains, publishers, 150 Fifth avenue, New York.

This volume is about as near perfection as a work of this kind could well be. In fact, after a somewhat careful examination, we hardly see how it could be improved upon, since it combines so many valuable features and is so painstakingly prepared. The comments on the lesson text are terse, bright, scholarly, and wonderfully luminous.

The splendid character of the numerous quotations and illustrations that are cited evidence the fact that the authors have taken great pains in their selection. It is stated in the Prefatory Note that "every department of sacred literature has been diligently canvassed for material, and the very latest contributions to that literature have been carefully studied." Mention is also made of the fact that in the preparation of the volume the editors have had the advantage of valuable special studies by such eminent writers as Prof. Marcus D. Buell, Dr. James M. Moulton, Prof. R. J. Cooke, Eugene and Sara G. Stock, Dr. L. D. Barrow, and others.

Following each lesson are highly helpful and suggestive "practical thoughts" and "hints to the teacher."

The volume is adorned by upwards of eighty-three excellent pictures by noted artists, four of them being full-page frontispieces, and contains a valuable series of blackboard sketches and diagrams, together with several reliable maps. A multitude of library references are also given. Altogether, it is an able and elegant book, and for Sunday-school workers, one much to be desired. Pastors, Sunday-school teachers, and Bible students all will find it vastly helpful. It is not by any means too late to order a copy.

The January-February Bi-monthly Methodist Review is a magnificent number. Several of the articles are of more than ordinary interest and excellence. The opening paper by John Spencer Bassett, Ph. D., professor of history in Trinity College, throws much light on "The Struggles of Sidney Lanier." Jas. Campbell, D. D., of the Northwest Texas Conference, has a strong article on the "Scientific Value of the Miracles of Christ." Walter L. Miller writes entertainingly of "The Personal Life of Calhoun," about which so little has hitherto been known. A new and bold exegesis of Romans viii, 29, involving the doctrines of election and predestination, is offered by the Rev. W. G. Williams, LL.D. Edwin W. Bowen, Ph. D., has a scholarly article on "Heinrich Heine," whom he speaks of as "the greatest name in modern German literature since Goethe." The live topic, "The Preacher with or without Manuscript," is forcefully discussed by the Rev. Robert Wilson, Ph. D. "The Bible and the Poets" is the title of a splendid article by James Mudge, D. D. In this number the editor concludes his series of able papers on "Ethics." The editorial departments are replete with stimulating and highly-instructive matter, and betoken the hand of a master. Dr. Tigert is displaying marked ability in his conduct of the Review.

The foregoing notice would have appeared sooner, but for the crowded condition of our columns.

A SAD OCCURRENCE.

On Sunday morning, Feb. 18, about dawn, fire was discovered in full blast in the home where our beloved and venerable Bro. Wm. B. Hines and wife were living with their daughter, Mrs. Mollie Reed. The family were all asleep and the house close shut up because of the extreme cold then prevailing. A defective flue in kitchen ceiled overhead, seems to have harbored and concealed the fire for twelve hours or more. But for the early awakening of a near and kind neighbor the whole family would have perished by smoke and flame. The alarm rapidly given, the doors all but forcibly broken in, rescuers were soon at work. First our invalid sister was wrapped in blankets, put on a cot and carried immediately across the street to the kind Christian home of Mr. Cotton. Bro. Hines was also helped out by loving daughter, grandsons and neighbors. All escaped unbruised, and a considerable portion of the furniture in front part of the house was saved by heroic effort.

You, Mr. Editor, and others will not be surprised to learn that our brother, Rev. W. T. Griffin, was among the foremost in daring energy and self-forgetfulness in staying the danger, although living nearly half a mile away. Neighbors generally vied with each other in acts of kindly helpfulness. We hope that no sickness will result from the numerous and severe exposures to extremes of melting heat and freezing cold. Bro. Hines, with his more than fourscore years and recent wretched health, is marvelously sustained by grace, giving glory to God. The same is true of Sister Hines, who has been in very critical condition for many months. 'Tis marvelous to behold their patient endurance. They lost all their best clothing, including a nice new suit and overcoat purchased by Bro. Hines. All the books, papers, relics, etc., which he had with him also went up in flame. Sincerely,

J. P. DRAKE.

Summit, Miss., Feb. 19, 1900.

NOTE FROM BRO. BASS.

MR. EDITOR: I feel that I would like to say a word in the dear ADVOCATE in reference to the death of Bro. Whitson and the noble son of Bro. Lewis.

Bro. Whitson was a noble man and a faithful preacher. Thank God for the hope of meeting our friends in the better world.

Irvine Lewis was a bright, noble boy, and no one knows how to sympathize with Bro. and Sister Lewis except those who have gone the same road. I have been that way, Bro. Lewis, and can say to you: Look up; God knows best; you can see dear Irvine again.

May the Lord, in his goodness, bless the two families from whose fireside loved ones have been taken!

I have had sickness in my home for the past two weeks, but loved ones are some better now, and I am planning to help as many pastors as possible this year. The Lord bless you all. Truly, SAM Q. BASS.

The Rev. Thomas Allen, fraternal messenger from the Wesleyan Methodist Church to the General Conference of the M. E. Church, will arrive in New York the last of March. Mr. Allen will be the next president of the Wesleyan Conference, his large vote at the last session assuring his election this year.

The people on the Fayette (Miss.) charge are evidently wide-awake and commendably active. The pastor, Rev. W. H. Huntley, writes: "Reports are favorable here. The church is proposing larger things than it has done in its long and interesting history of a 77-year life as a pastorate."

Rev. R. T. Nolen, who is serving his second year on the Cumberland charge, North Mississippi Conference, writes that he has been kindly received, and that he has had three accessions to the church since Conference. He concludes by saying: "We are working and praying to do more good than we did last year."

Just as we went to press a note was received from Rev. Paul D. Hardin containing the sad news of the death, on the fourteenth instant, of Rev. Louis Kendall, a faithful local preacher, who for many years was a member of the Mississippi Conference. He died at his home near Chapman, Miss. A suitable memoir will appear in due time.

Rev. T. S. Randle, of the Louisiana Conference, and his good wife are, we regret to learn, in sore distress on account of the critical illness of their son Robert, who has been dangerously sick for over four weeks. They earnestly ask the prayers of the church for his recovery.

Dr. P. H. Whisner announces that all the Conferences, except Baltimore and Central Mexico, have reported their collections for church extension amounting to $6,640 more than they paid last year. The largest increase in any one Conference reported is $587... There is an increase in all the Conferences, except five.

Says the Pacific Methodist Advocate of recent date: "Rev. W. Vaughan, of Sacramento, a few days since received the sad intelligence of his mother's death in Mississippi. He left Sacramento last Monday for his old home to attend to important business which will necessitate his absence for several weeks. We profoundly sympathize with our dear brother in his sore bereavement."

Bishop Galloway left on Wednesday to attend the Wisconsin State Epworth League, at which he will deliver an address. On his return he will address the National Educational Association, which is to convene soon in Jackson, Miss. The following week he will participate in the Twentieth Century Educational campaign in Florida. Later he has similar engagements in North Carolina.

Rev. Peroy R. Knickerbocker is meeting with great success at Crowley (La.), as the following brief note from him indicates. He writes: "Everything is booming with us here. Have taken in 25 members since Conference. Will have Dr. Muikey with us in a union meeting which will probably be held in one of our large work-houses here. The meeting will begin on March 16."

Rev. R. M. Blocker, writing from Lake Arthur, under date of the twelfth instant, says: "Our first quarterly meeting for this year convened at Lake Arthur last Saturday and Sunday. The interest was good and the presiding elder (Dr. C. Carter) seemed to be at his best, and did fine preaching. The outlook favorable for a gracious revival in this place. We are praying and working for it, and confidently expecting it."

On the fourteenth instant Rev. W. Dodson, the popular pastor at Algiers (La.), was united in marriage to Miss Christine Galster, a charming and highly accomplished young lady of Hope, Ark., at which place the happy event took place, the ceremony being performed by Rev. J. R. Sanders. The bride and groom reached Algiers, Saturday evening, and were given a royal welcome by the flock. We extend our heartiest congratulations, and wish them much joy.

Rev. K. A. Jones sends us the following particulars about the death of Bro. Whitson, who passed away in New Albany on the seventh instant:

"He was sick just a week. For a day before death he was speechless. Half hour before he passed away he began to preach, and continued until about five minutes before the end. He then became quiet, and passed away as if going to sleep. A good man, a good preacher, a good and faithful pastor has gone to his reward. The prayers of the brethren are invoked for his family."

It gives us great pleasure to announce to our readers, and the public generally, that North Carolina is to be favored with a visit from Bishop Charles B. Galloway, of Jackson, Miss. Though pressed beyond measure with multiplied official and other duties, he has kindly consented to spend at least one week in the bounds of the Western North Carolina Conference in the interest of the Twentieth Century Thank-offering Fund. The exact date of his coming has not yet been definitely fixed, but we expect him some time before the middle of March. He will visit no less than six districts, and deliver one address in each.—North Carolina Christian Advocate.

RALLY AND ANNIVERSARY AT SOUTH SIDE, MERIDIAN.

On Jan. 19 South Side Epworth Leagne celebrated its fourth anniversary, nsing the programme arranged by the editor of the Epworth Era for Epworth League Rally Day. The church had been decorated in League colors, and the motto in gold letters was hung over the pulpit. The Leaguers occnpied reserved seats, and wore badges of white and yellow ribbon. The programme consisted of songs, prayers, Scriptnre reading, papers, and recitations.

The first paper was, "Origin, History, and Present Status and Work of the Leagne," by W. D. Hawkins.

Paper by Mrs. L. F. Alford on Devotional Department.

Miss Annie Bnie, second vice-president, had a paper on Charity and Help Department.

S. S. Wright made an address on the "Importance of the Literary Department."

Recitations by Miss Bessie Harrison and Mrs. W. D. Hawkins.

The claims of the Epworth Era were presented, and twenty snbscriptions were taken.

From one of the papers read it was learned that during the four years since the organization of onr League it had grown from a charter membership of 19 nntil it now numbers 45, seven having been received during the past month; had raised nearly $100 on church debt, bought a library of abont 75 volnmes, and a nice book-case for the books; have purchased the reading conrse for 1899-1900, and will commence the study of it soon; paid nearly all that was paid last year on the foreign and domestic mission assessment of the church.

Wishing the ADVOCATE success, and praying that the Epworth Leagne colnmn may prove of great benefit to Leagnes of onr Conferences, I am, Truly yonrs in the Leagne work.

COMMITTEE'S REPORT OF OAKLEY HOME FUND,

CHESTER, MISS., FEB. 14, 1900.

According to promise, and to answer the inquiry of many friends, I snbmit the following statement of the "Oakley Home Fnnd" committed to me and others at the recent session of onr North Mississippi Annual Conference.

There have been received to date on this Fnnd $698 22. With this has been pnrchased a seventeen-acre lot in Chester, Miss., with comfortable improvements for the family, and furnishings for the house, with cow, horse and wagon and the necessaries of life snfficient for a month or two.

The people of Chester are delighted to have this estimable family in their midst, and this writer's heart has been gladdened by the many helpful deeds performed by faithful hands in moving the family here and making them comfortable.

For all this I am authorized to state the Oakleys are deeply gratefnl. Certainly no worthier knight ever rested on his armor nor more deserving beneficiary ever received the tender ministrations of his comrades than is Bro. Oakley. We mnst still continne onr loving service till the warrior recovers.

The contribntors to this Fnnd and the amonnts are as follows:

Very respectfully submitted,

W. L. ANDERSON, for Com.

P. S.—Apropos the above statement, I would add that the friends of Bro. Oakley mnst not let their zeal abate. He is nnable to provide for himself, and his good family of children are entirely nnacqnainted with the practical side of life, and it will take a year or two before they can so learn how, and fix themselves so, as to contribnte to the family snstenance. They are doing their best and nobly sncceeding. Bnt we must not snppose they need nothing fnrther. Their home is merely a dwelling-place and not a source of income except for garden, trnck patches and the care of small stock—chickens, pigs, calves, etc.

The committee transferred the treasnry of the fnnd to me at Chester, and any friend will gladden my heart and receive dne acknowledgement who will join me in fnrther providing for onr worthy brother.

Bro. Oakley is steadily improving and hopes to again be able to do work.

This is written without his knowledge or consent.

W. L ANDERSON.

HONOR TO WHOM HONOR IS DUE.

In looking over the Minntes of the last North Mississippi Conference, I notice in the Financial Report and last column "amonnt raised for all pnrposes" the sum of $1,581 credited to Greenwood, Winona district. This is clearly an error: as the amonnt shown ($1 581) is simply the amonnt of onr assessments; when we really raised for all pnrposes exclnsive of moneys raised for onr new chnrch the snm of $2,109 10. Now, we don't pretend to do a great deal np here at Greenwood, bnt we do like to have credit for the little we contribute to the cause of our divine Lord.

I want to compliment Bro. Bachman npon the snccessful manner in which he has gotten ont the Minntes. They are well edited, and the typographical part is well nigh perfect; but how could we expect anything else from a man who always does things well. LAYMAN.

Your issne of Feb. 8 contains the program of Arcadia District Preachers' Meeting, and it's good. One of the topics, however, I hardly understand. Here it is, "Shall we Preach the Doctrines of Onr Church at Least Once a Year in Each of Our Congregations!"

In a station a man preaches, say, a hnndred sermons a year. Admitting that he ought to preach doctrine "once a year," "will the Committee on Program" kindly snggest a few subjects as bases for the other ninety-nine sermons?

SINCE ITS ORGANIZATION IN 1843

It has paid to living members	$383,157,627 64
To beneficiaries of deceased members	204,591,282 42
Total paid to members, both living and dead	$587,748,910 06
And now holds for the security of its present members	277,517,325 36
Paid to and invested for its members	$765,266,235 42

THE POLICIES OF THIS COMPANY

Are remarkable for their liberality, large guaranteed values, and entire absence of all technical terms or phrases. Being practically incontestable, they provide a legacy and not a lawsuit.

Persons desiring policies in this Company can secure them from the Company's nearest agent, or if no agent is convenient, by writing to the General Agent, giving date of birth and stating what amount of insurance is desired.

DREAMING OF HOME.

BY EUGENE FIELD.

It comes to me often in silence
When the firelight sputters low—
When the black, uncertain shadows
Seem wraiths of the long ago;
Always with a throb of heartache
That thrills each pulsive vein,
Comes the old, unquiet longing
For the peace of home again.

I'm sick of the roar of cities,
And of faces cold and strange;
I know where there's warmth of welcome,
And my yearning fancies range
Back to the dear old homestead
With an aching sense of pain,
But there'll be joy in the coming
When I go home again.

When I go home again! There's music
That never may die away,
And it seems that the hands of angels
On a mystic heart at play
Have touched with a yearning sadness
On a beautiful, broken strain,
To which is my fond heart wording—
When I go home again.

Outside of my darkening window
Is the great world's crash and din,
And slowly the Autumn shadows
Come drifting, drifting in.
Sobbing, the night wind murmurs
To the splash of the Autumn rain
But I dream of the glorious greeting
When I go home again.

ADVICE TO YOUNG MEN.

Save a part of your weekly earnings, even if it be no more than a quarter-dollar, and put your savings monthly in a savings bank.

Buy nothing till you can pay for it, and buy nothing that you do not need.

A young man who has grit enough to follow these rules will have taken the first step upward to success in business. He may be compelled to wear a coat a year longer, even if it be unfashionable; he may have to live a little longer in a smaller house than some of his young acquaintances; his wife may not sparkle with diamonds, nor be resplendent in silk or satin, just yet; his children may not be dressed as dolls or popinjays; his table may be plain, but wholesome, and the whiz of the beer or champagne cork may never be heard in his dwelling; he may have to get along without the earliest fruits or vegetables; he may have to abjure the club-room, the theater and the gambling-hell, and to reverence the Sabbath day and to read and follow the precepts of the Bible instead—but he will be the better off in every way for this self-discipline. Yes, he may do all these without detriment to his manhood, or health, or character. True, empty-headed folks may sneer at him and affect to pity him, but he will find that he has grown strong-hearted and brave enough to stand the laugh of the foolish. He has become an independent man. He never owes anybody, and so he is no man's slave. He has become master of himself, and a master of himself will become a leader among men, and prosperity will crown his every enterprise.

Young man! life's discipline and life's success come from hard work and early self-denial; and hard-earned success is all the sweeter at the time when old years climb upon your shoulders and you need propping up.—Selected.

HOPEFULNESS.

Hopefulness is largely a matter of temperament. A person sees the bright side of things, and has confidence in his vision, because he is so made. But a process of reflection may do much to lead those who take gloomy and despondent views to take a more cheerful forecast. Proper weight should be given to the encouraging features of a situation, and then the issue of any given state of affairs depends in part upon the chapter of accidents—those inscrutable factors which you can not estimate. These are as likely to be favorable as adverse. Some people are fond of saying, "Things always go against me," by which they mean that this incalculable factor in human affairs always works against them. But, of course, if that were so, they would have been dead or ruined years ago. Then, again, good health has much to do with sane and cheerful views. If you are not feeling quite up to the mark, make proper allowance for the gloom that your physical condition spreads over your mental operations. A dyspeptic's views are of no particular value anyway, and if you happen to belong to that unfortunate class, stoutly refuse to draw a gloomy conclusion from any set of circumstances until the fit has left you. Above all, do not fall into the error of thinking that the last pessimist you have talked with is an inspired prophet. Nine chances to one his ideas are absolutely worthless.—Watchman.

NAPOLEON BONAPARTE'S ESTIMATE OF THE BIBLE.

The Bible is more than a book; it is a living being, with an action, a power which invades everything that opposes its extension. Behold it upon this table, this Book surpassing all others; I never omit to read it, and every day with new pleasure.

Everything in Christ astonishes me. His Spirit overawes me, and his will confounds me. Between him and whoever else in the world there is no possible term of comparison; he is truly a being by himself. His ideas and his sentiments, the truth which he announces, his manner of convincing, are not explained either by human organization or by the nature of things.

Truth should embrace the universe. Such is Christianity, the only religion which destroys sectional prejudices, the only one which proclaims the unity and the absolute brotherhood of the whole human family, the only one which is purely spiritual; in fine, the only one which assigns to all, without distinction, for a true country, the bosom of the Creator, God. Christ proved that he was the Son of the Eternal by his disregard of time. All his doctrines signify one only and the same thing—eternity. What a proof of the divinity of Christ! With an empire so absolute, he has but one single end—the spiritual amelioration of individuals, the purity of the conscience.—From Northrop's "A Cloud of Witnesses."

A BOY'S ESSAY ON HORNETS.

A hornet is the smartest bug that flies anywhere. He comes when he pleases and goes when he gets ready. One way a hornet shows his smartness is by attending to his own business, and making everybody who interferes with him wish they had done the same thing.

When a hornet stings a feller he knows it, and never stops talking about it as long as his friends will listen to him. One day a hornet stung my pa (my pa is a preacher) on the nose, and he did not do any pastoral visiting for a month without talking about that hornet.

Another way a hornet shows his smartness is by not procrastinating. If he has any business with you, he will attend to it at once, and then leaves you to think it over to yourself. He don't do like the mosquito, who comes fooling around for half an hour singing, "Cousin, cousin," and then when he has bled you all he can, dashes away yelling, "No kin, no kin." A hornet never bleeds you; but if he sticks you, you go off on a swell.—The Boy's Friend.

THE BEST WAY.

There is a best way of doing everything, of carving a joint, or sweeping a room, or holding a plough, or keeping books. The educated man or woman is the one who does the things he or she has to do in the best way, without waste of time or force. Many of these "best ways" we have not wit enough to discover for ourselves. There is an immense stock of experience handed down to us through older people. To a child the father or mother represents the wisdom and skill of the race. If they do not, some one else does. At any rate, we enter into our heritage of the past in just so far as we learn from some one how to do the things we are called to do in the best way. Few people realize that the thing that will make them efficient and skillful is just this matter of learning in some way or other how to do things in the best way. That is the difference between the raw "help" and the trained servant, between the bungler and the artisan, between the man or woman who is always worried, flurried and driven, and the person who does twice as much, and yet has plenty of leisure. We have made a great gain in the art of living when we set before ourselves the problem of finding out the best way of doing common duties.—Watchman.

USING THE MEMORY WISELY.

Memory has its limits. These ought to be wisely recognized. We can remember what we most want to, but we can not remember everything, and have the mind free for action. Practice and determined effort will enable us to remember names or dates or statistics, but if we tax our memory beyond a certain point with these items, we can not have our memory free for other service. He who studies most in the line of research learns to limit his remembering to the sources of information, so that he knows where to turn for the details, instead of burdening his mind with a mass of material that it is unnecessary to have always in memory. But he who wants to remember the precise score of all the important football games in recent years between the colleges must limit his ever-available knowledge in other lines. Select your subjects of memory if you would remember to the best advantage.—S. S. Times.

"Of two men or women, otherwise equal, the one who sleeps the best will be the most moral, healthy, and efficient. Sleep will do much to cure irritability of temper, peevishness, and uneasiness. With some modification, the following from an exchange is commended: 'It will restore to vigor an overworked brain. It will build up and make strong a weary body. It will cure a headache. It will cure a broken spirit. It will cure sorrow. Indeed, we might make a long list of nervous and other maladies that sleep will cure.'"—Exchange.

Gibbon tells us that everyone has two educations—one which he receives from others, and one which he gives to himself. The popular idea of education seems to be the art of allowing others to do as much for us as we have the capacity of receiving. "He is not capable of receiving an education," is a suggestive expression. True education is self-preparation. It must find something within you, or it brings nothing out of you. It converts your possibilities into practical powers. The richer a nature, the harder and slower its self-preparation and development. Recently the noblest figure in Europe stood erect under the snows of more than fourscore Winters, and because of his rigid, righteous self-preparation through many long years, the "Grand Old Man" was the freshest in thought and maturest in wisdom of all who met in the councils of men. Patient preparation is permanent power. In an age that lacks composure, men are apt to mature too quickly and decay too soon. Reserve power should be greater than spent energy. By self-preparation, deposit each day for future drafts, and then you are not apt to overcheck your account.—Success.

MORE THAN ONE WAY.

Some people are so easily discouraged that if they don't succeed the first time, they give up in despair. That's why there are so many failures in life. If a thing is worth attempting, it is worth hanging to until it is done. The effect on character is worth all it costs.

A young man who was preparing to enter the ministry consulted his professor in regard to taking a short cut, fearing that the years of preparation in the regular course would be time wasted. The professor replied that that would depend upon what he intended to make of himself. When God wants to make an oak he takes a hundred years, but he can make a squash in six months.—Selected.

A habit of thoroughness is of great value. Two school girls competed for a prize. One of them wrote her composition once, and then laid it aside and gave it no further attention. The other one wrote and rewrote hers, and studied it very faithfully. It seems hardly necessary to add that the second one carried off the honors. It is a mark of genius to be able to look after all the small things included in the aggregates under one's care. Carlyle says, "Genius consists in a man's capacity to take trouble." The ablest generals are those who master all the details of the campaign.—Selected.

A Small Beginning.

A little snow ball on the summit of the Alps, rolled up by the winds, moves slowly downward. Gaining in strength and size, it grows rapidly to giant proportions, and finally becomes the frightful avalanche, destroying everything in its path. Consumption begins with a little cough, a trifling pain, a passing flush on the cheeks. This is but the beginning of the avalanche, consumption, that knows no pity, recognizes no distinction. Just at the beginning thousands commit the error of not checking and curing the disease by using MARSDEN'S PECTORAL BALM.

MEMOIR OF DAISY HOUSE.

BY MRS. M. L. WILSON.

Dear little Daisy, sweet little flower,
That was loaned so short a time
To gladden earth's bright, rosy bower,
Has gone to dwell in a world sublime.

We would not call her back again,
Although we loved her dear,
For she is free from earthly pain,
And nevermore will shed a tear.

A sweeter spirit we never knew,
Just blooming into womanhood;
So gentle, loving, to friends so true,
To everyone so kind and good.

To Sabbath-school she loved to go,
And learned its lessons well;
And let us state right here, we know
She loved her church as well.

We called to see her Christmas eve,
As home from church we went,
And did not try her to deceive,
But to our tears gave vent.

God, when he wills, pinches a flower;
If we would, we can not say him nay;
So let us in dark trouble's hour
Learn submissively to say:

"Thy will be done in earth, O Lord;
Although 'tis hard to give her up,
We will believe thy holy Word
While drinking sorrow's bitter cup."

Yes, we sorrow, but hope to meet,
For we trust one day to find
Her dear, sweet spirit at heaven's gate,
And join with her the angel's chime.

We only bid adieu to that dear one,
For where she's gone we'll all go soon!
So rest in peace until we come,
As one by one we are gathering, gathering home.

IRVINE ASBURY LEWIS.

Three weeks ago this young man left Carrollton for Bosliek and Dinning's Training-school, Mt. Pleasant, Tenn. He was full of vigor, hope, and noble ambition. I had known Irvine from his childhood. He had spent days and weeks in my home while his father was pastor of the Methodist Church here fourteen years ago. During the four years of their residence in Grenada it was my great pleasure and appreciated privilege to visit annually once or twice his father's home. It gave me joy to witness Irvine's constant and symmetrical increase in stature, wisdom, and character. He was one of the noblest young men I ever knew. Prominent among his radiant virtues were love of home and devotion to mother. Any boy is safe in whom these are strongly marked. His devotion to his mother and solicitude for her comfort were most beautiful. Life was full of promise to him.

Arrived at Mt. Pleasant, though not feeling quite well, he gave himself with unremitting diligence to his studies for two weeks, when he was seized with a violent attack of pneumonia. In spite of an unusually robust frame and all that skilled physicians and tender nursing could do, the strong young man yielded to the ravages of disease and passed beyond the skies. He went without fear, because he "knew in whom he had believed."

Irvine had been a member of the church since six and one-half years of age. About two years ago he became active in church work, leading devotional meetings, and, in the absence of his father, conducting family worship. These and other good works were the fruit of a living faith in Christ, when Irvine apprehended as his Savior, in whose atoning merit he trusted.

His father reached him four days before he passed away, and received loving messages for the mother and brother at home; saw his valiant fight against the inroads of disease, and witnessed his triumph as he entered the gates of death singing, "In the sweet bye and bye, we shall meet on that beautiful shore."

Soon after his father reached him Irvine asked, "When will you go home, father?" The reply was, "In a few days, when you get better." His fondness for home and mother was manifest in the expressed wish, "I want to go with you."

—He has gone home—not to Carrollton, but to his Father's house above. Not with "father," but to his Father in heaven. His father was with him in his last hours on earth; Jesus was with Him "all the journey through" to the "mansions beyond the skies," "eternal in the heavens."

His remains were buried from the Methodist Church in Carrollton on Monday, Feb. 5, 1900. The funeral services were conducted by the Rev. Jno. H. Mitchell, presiding elder of the Winona district, assisted by Rev. G. W. Bedsmon, Rev. J. C. Park, and Rev. B. B. Sullivan.

ANDREWS—Resolutions adopted, first, by each of the five congregations of Winchester charge, Meridian district, Mississippi Conference; then officially adopted by rising vote in the first Quarterly Conference of said charge in memory of Rev. Dr. C. G. ANDREWS:

Whereas, Our heavenly Father, in his wise providence, has removed from our midst our much-beloved presiding elder, friend, brother and co-worker, Rev. Dr. C. G. Andrews, whom we all esteemed very highly for his love to the church, his strong faith in God, his thorough consecration to God's service, his true manhood, firmness of purpose, and his Christian example; therefore, be it

Resolved, That in the death of Dr. Andrews the Meridian district sustains the loss of a true leader as its presiding elder, the Methodist Church a true and faithful servant, the Mississippi Conference a loyal and useful member, and his family a true husband and devoted father.

Resolved, That we bow in humble submission to God's will, and sympathize deeply with the stricken family in this their sore bereavement and great sorrow, and pray God's blessings upon them, that the comforting influence of the Holy Spirit may be theirs, and in the midst of their sorrow they may realize that "God doeth all things well."

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be spread upon the Minutes of our Quarterly Conference, a copy sent to each the Nashville and NEW ORLEANS Christian Advocates, and a copy sent to the family of Dr. Andrews.

Adopted by first Quarterly Conference at Chicora, Miss., Feb. 3, 1900.

Signed by F. B. Ormond, pastor; T. S. Windrow, secretary; J. McW. Powe, recording steward.

ATWELL—Mrs. L. F. ATWELL was born in Randolph county, Ga., July 27, 1832, from which place she moved to the State of Mississippi in early life, and made her home in Sunflower county, Miss., till her death, which occurred Jan. 19, 1900. She leaves one daughter, Mrs. Miller, and several grandchildren to mourn their loss. A large number of her friends followed her remains to the New Salem Church, in which her funeral service was held by the writer. Her body was then laid away to rest in the yard of the church of which she was a member.

"Grandma," as she was familiarly called by all, was an old-time Methodist in spirit and in deed. She evidently believed in the practice of holiness rather than the profession of it. She never did profess more sanctification than she practiced in her every-day life; therefore, old and young, great and small, loved and honored her. She was a great source of help to her pastor. She prayed so much for him, and always had something good and pleasant to say of his work. She died like she lived, and is gone to reap the reward of one of the faithful. Her pastor, L. A. McKNOWN.

Indirect Testimony.

They had been friends since their early boyhood. One was a successful merchant whose name is now a household word throughout the United States, standing for honor, probity, and high Christian character. The other was a lawyer, a man of integrity and good standing in the community also, but withal a disbeliever in God and his providence.

The two had been talking about the efficacy of prayer, and the merchant, urged to speak from his own experience, had confessed that he took his text literally, "In all thy ways acknowledge him, and he shall direct thy paths."

"I never make a large purchase of goods, or plan any important change in my business," he proceeded to explain, "without first asking special divine guidance."

The lawyer smiled tolerantly.

"Oh, yes; I understand," he replied. "But your phenomenal success can all be explained in a natural way. For instance, most men act impulsively sometimes, yield to their whims, or to ideas suddenly conceived. You escape this danger through your system of praying before you act. The prayer gains you a little time. Besides, your feeling of reverence for the being you worship has in itself a tendency to clear your mind of prejudices, to restore your balance, and make you a reasonable, logical person—other also a good business man."

A light broke over the face of the merchant.

"Thank you for this weight of indirect testimony," he responded. "Ah, how much there is in what you say! In an attitude of prayer one comes near to the Fountain of all wisdom. And being there, he comes to his best self. No wonder that the praying man rises from his knees enlightened and uplifted."—The Independent.

FOR OVER FIFTY YEARS

MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP has been used for children teething. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, cures wind colic, and is the best remedy for Diarrhœa. Twenty-five cents a bottle.

Humility is truth, and Pride a lie—the one glorifies God, the other dishonors him. Humility makes men to be like angels; Pride make angels to become devils. Taylor.

The QUEEN AND CRESCENT ROUTE announces that for Mardi Gras it will make a rate of one fare for the round trip to New Orleans.

Tickets will be on sale commencing Feb. 20, and closing with train arriving at New Orleans morning of Feb. 27, good to return until March 15, 1900. This will give intending visitors an opportunity to see all the parades and participate in all the festivities.

It is understood that there will be at least five parades, though the societies are all secret and very little information leaks out to the public. It is definitely known that the first parade will occur on Feb. 21 and the last on Feb. 27, and those desiring to "see it all" should arrange to spend, at least, the entire time from Feb. 21 to 27 inclusive in New Orleans. By doing so they will be enabled to see everything there is to see and also have time to do such business as may be desirable.

The Mardi Gras week comes so late this year that it is safe to prophesy that the weather and all other conditions will be propitious.

Two Verdicts.

"After a fair and impartial trial you are judged guilty by this court, and you are sentenced to be hung by the neck until you are dead." The solemn tones of the judge, the despairing face of the prisoner, and the painful stillness of the court-room, makes it a scene of awful impress. Now turn to a brighter scene at the home circle. A mother radiant with joy over the recovery of a child snatched from the clutches of Malaria. An entire family rejoicing, and praising the merits of Dicks' Chillifuge, and giving their verdict that Chillifuge is without an equal for swiftness to cure.

THE BEST EVER MADE.

The very best premium offer we have ever made is our Sewing Machine Offer now running. You get the machine at a fabulously low price, and with it get a six months' subscription free. You have different styles to select from, and you have ten days to test the machine. Don't fail to read our offer.

The "Combination" Bible.

A SUPERB EDITION

of the Holy Scriptures, showing at a glance at the foot of the pages all changes made by the revisers.

New Type. All Proper Names Self-Pronouncing. The Most Valuable Collateral Matter.

There is a steady and increasing demand for first-class Bibles. Everybody is anxious to obtain a copy of the best edition of the Holy Scriptures. Old editions are constantly being replaced by Bibles that are in every way more attractive, and there is practically no limit to the demand.

OUR "COMBINATION" FEATURE.

Hitherto the King James and Revised Versions have been printed in parallel columns, but this makes comparisons of texts tedious and unsatisfactory, and makes the book very unwieldy. We have overcome this difficulty by "combining" the two Versions on the same page, showing at a glance in foot-notes all the Changes, Additions and Omissions made by the Revisers.

THE OLD VERSION PRINTED IN FULL.

The King James Version is the basis, and this Version is read straight along from the text, while the Revised Version is read from the text in combination with the foot-notes. Our "Combination" Feature has met with universal approval and is strongly endorsed by leading Divines and Biblical Scholars.

It is only by a comparison of the two Versions that the greatest benefit can be obtained from reading the Holy Scriptures, and this comparison every reader can easily make by our simple arrangement for showing the changes made by the revisers. This is the greatest triumph of Bible Publishing the World has ever known.

OUR OFFER.

To those unprogressive people who do not read and pay for the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE we sell this Bible at the publisher's retail price—$4.25. To our subscribers we sell it at the very low rate of $2. The only condition attached to this offer is that the subscriber must pay his subscription one full year in advance, viz.: to March, 1901. We will send it postpaid to any person who will send us three new cash subscribers at the regular rate. For six new cash subscribers at the regular rate we will send two "Combination" Bibles, postpaid.

For fifty cents additional we will send a Bible with index.

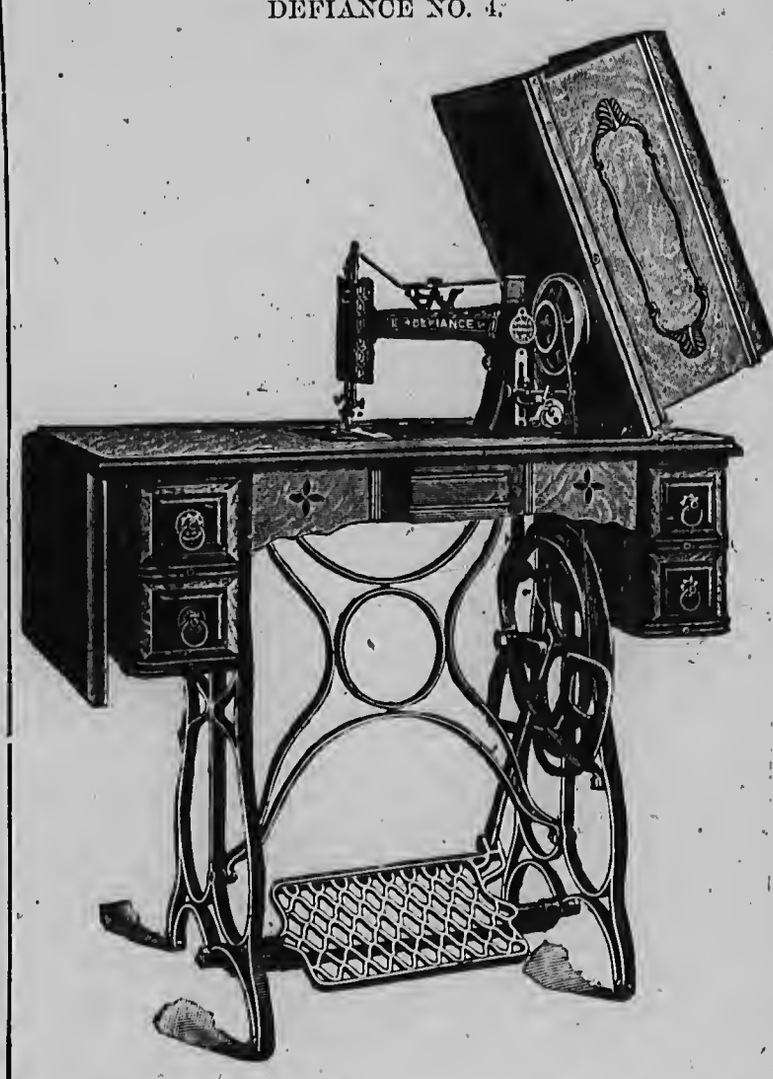
For twenty-five cents additional we will have your name engraved in gilt letters on the outside.

Address REV. W. C. BLACK.

P. S.—We can give no commission on renewals in connection with the above offer.

New Machine Offer.

DEFIANCE NO. 4.



The Defiance Machine is the perfection of simplicity, durability, speed, strength and ease of operation.

Construction. It is constructed of the best material in use, every bearing, without an exception, being of steel or case-hardened.

The Mechanical Devices of this machine are a combination of tried mechanical principles. In detail it differs materially from other machines. Its simplicity is at once apparent, and its great durability is admitted by the best mechanical experts.

The Arm is large and roomy, 8x5½ inches in the clear.

No Vibration. This machine does not vibrate. Its motion is easy and quiet.

Lock Stitch. It is a lock-stitch shuttle machine.

Speedy, Light, Quiet. It is as speedy, light and quiet-running as any shuttle machine, manufactured.

Double Feed—Positive Four-Motion. The double feed possesses advantages over all others. Its very shape and form obviates all the disadvantages arising from double feeds as they have heretofore been constructed, and combines in this machine all the advantages of both the single and double feed, doing away with the objections to either of them.

The operation of the feed mechanism is positive, giving an accurate four-motion movement to the feed without the use of springs.

The Needle Bar. This machine has a self-lubricating needle-bar, which is always kept clean, well-oiled, and the oil can not drop on the work and soil it.

The Needle is absolutely self-setting. No screwdriver is required in setting, a winged thumb nut being used instead.

The machine is self-threading. Put in the bobbin, draw the thread towards you, through the slot and, it is done.

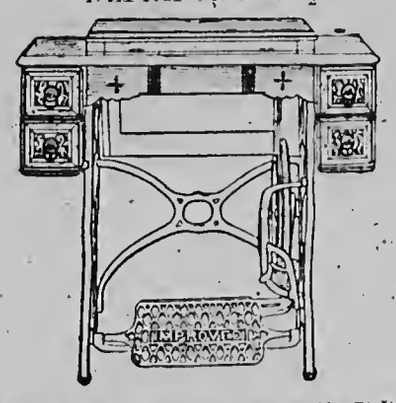
The Loose Pulley for winding the bobbins without running the machine is so constructed as to admit of an instantaneous stoppage and starting of the machine without stopping the treadle movement—a valuable improvement peculiar to this machine.

Automatic Bobbin Winder. The bobbin winder operates automatically, winding the thread on the bobbin regularly and as evenly as the thread on a spool. Can be operated without running the machine.

Extra Attachments, in velvet-lined case, sent free with each machine: 1 Tucker, 1 Ruffler with shirring plate, 1 Hemmer set (4 widths) and Binder, 1 Braider (Feed and Slide), 1 Thread Cutter.

Additional Accessories. Each machine is supplied with the following outfit: 1 Hemmer and Feller (one piece), 10 Needles, 6 Bobbins, 1 Wrench, 1 Screwdriver, Oil Can filled with oil, Cloth Guage and Thumb-screw, and a Book of Instructions. The Book of Instructions is profusely illustrated and answers the purpose of a competent teacher.

DEFIANCE NO. 7½.



This cut shows our new and popular style, the No. 7½ Defiance Drop Cabinet perfectly protecting the machine from dust, and making a convenient and ornamental stand. When machine is ready for use, the head is in same position as on ordinary style; when through using, it requires only the turning over of the leaf of table, and the sewing machine head drops into the case or cabinet between the drawers, completely out of sight, forming a handsome table with highly polished top.

No. 3 Machine, drop leaf table, bent cover, case of one drawer at each end and center drawer. Dealer's price, $32. Our price, $18.

No. 4 Machine, drop leaf table, bent cover, case of two drawers at each end and center drawer. Dealer's price, $34. Our price, $19.

No. 5 Machine, drop leaf table, bent cover, case of three drawers at each end and center drawer, making seven drawers in all. Dealer's price, $36. Our price, $20.

No. 7½ Machine, Drop head cabinet, case of two drawers at each end and center drawer. Dealer's price, $38. Our price, $23.

All the woodwork is of the best quality, either Light Antique or Golden Oak Finish. For Walnut Woodwork add $2 to above list prices.

The chief difference between Numbers 3, 4, and 5 is in the furniture—i. e., the number of drawers. If you do not want to pay for the extra drawers, you need not do so. We sell these machines under a ten years' guarantee, by which we mean that if any part gives out by reason of any defect therein, the manufacturer will replace the same free of charge. Moreover, we allow the purchaser to test the machine ten days. If at the end of ten days you are not satisfied, you have only to drop us a postal card, and your money will be refunded.

OUR OFFER.

We will send any one of the above-described machines at the prices named, and also send the ADVOCATE free for six months. The only condition attached to this offer is that subscribers who are in arrears must first pay up all arrearages to date. It would be well to avail yourself of this offer at once, as we can not promise that it will last very long. Notice that you take no risk whatever. We do all the risking. Address

REV. W. C. BLACK,
512 Camp St., New Orleans.

P. S.—The machine will be shipped direct from the factory in the North.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

Railroad construction to the extent of $3,000,000 is projected in Alabama

The Sultan has presented President Loubet with the highest decoration in the Turkish empire.

The Boers have commenced an attack on Malteno, occupied by troops commanded by Gen. Gatacre.

Reports from German colonies are very unfavorable, showing they cost much more than the trade is worth.

Seventeen Russian newspapers had trouble with the censor last year and two of them were entirely suppressed.

The Zulus have been offered arms by the British government to fight the Boers and have refused to accept them.

One thousand Cuban school teachers will be permitted to attend the Harvard summer school for teachers free of cost.

The Senate this week will discuss legislation affecting the relations of the United States to its insular possessions.

The situation in Central Asia is becoming serious for England, the Russians being in striking distance of Herat.

Gen. French has captured a seventy-wagon convoy of the Boers, and the Boers have captured a 200 wagon British convoy.

Gen. Kitchener is conducting the pursuit of Cronje's army. The retreating Boers have been compelled to laager to rest their oxen.

Capt. Longhurst, of the British Medical Corps, speaks in the highest terms of the humanity of the "ornel and half-civilized" Boers.

The House committee on interstate and foreign relations has favorably reported the bill for the construction of the Nicaragua Canal.

A dispatch received at The Hague from President Krueger says that the retreat of Cronje was fully planned and should cause no uneasiness.

Negro enumerators will be appointed to take the census. A general conference of Southern census supervisors was held last week. Two of the number were negroes.

The statement that President McKinley sounded Ambassador Pauncefote to ascertain how an offer of mediation in South Africa would be received is officially denied.

A party of negro soldiers made an attack on the police station at El-Paso to rescue a soldier prisoner and killed a policeman. They were repulsed, one of them being killed.

The British are slowly reaching the opinion that French's victories at Kimberley and vicinity were not as important as at first believed. The present situation causes anxiety.

The estimates of the Navy Department covering the needs of the service, the programme for new ships, and the construction work at navy yards and coaling stations, for the year ending June 30, 1891, involve a sum aggregating $75,000,000. This represents the largest regular expenditure for the naval establishment since the Civil War.

The exchange of ratifications of the Samoan treaty has taken place at the State Department, and it is presumed that similar exchanges occurred at the foreign offices in London and Berlin. This is the last ceremony necessary to give effect to the Samoan agreement, though as a matter of form and for public information here in the United States, at least, it may be necessary to proclaim the treaty.

Secretary Hay is urging on Congress the necessity of providing throughout our diplomatic service American attaches who are familiar with the language of the country to which they are accredited. The Secretary of State has begun with Turkey as an example, and has asked Congress to authorize the employment of a second secretary of the legation at the court of the Sultan who shall be an American student of the language of the country.

The London War Office last Friday announced that General French entered Kimberley Thursday evening. This means, of course, that Kimberley has been successfully relieved. Contrary to all expectations, this feat, which cost General Methuen so dearly in attempting it a couple of months ago, has been achieved by Lord Roberts with trifling loss and without serious fighting.

One of the most remarkable examples of municipal ownership in the United States is shown by the town reports of Edinburg, Ind. Incandescent electric lights are furnished to residences for 15 cents a month and to business houses for 20 cents a month for 16-candle power lights. Water works are also operated at an annual charge of $1 to each consumer, and a complete and perfect telephone exchange is maintained with a monthly rental of 50 cents.

TAKE NOTICE

That we are now handling two different styles of the Holman Bible in Bourgeois type. One we sell to paid-up subscribers at $1.50, the other at $1.30. The $1.30 Bible is substantially the same we have hitherto sold at $1.50. The one we sell at $1.50 is a far better Bible than has ever been sold at such a price. It is a marvel of cheapness. See our offer.

In speaking of the work of the young ladies' college in Rome, the Tablet of London, a Roman Catholic paper, says: "Protestantism is spreading in Rome like a drop of oil. The second decade of the twentieth century will see a large part of the Roman population Protestant. Each girl in this school represents an entire family, or even more, won to Protestantism." The word has gone forth that the aggressive Methodists in Rome must be crushed out. Hence, every effort has been and will be made to destroy our schools, the special object of the hatred and persecution of the Jesuits.—Northwestern Advocate.

THE FAMINE IN INDIA.

Late dispatches state that on the seventeenth instant a public meeting, presided over by Lord Curzon, the Viceroy of India, was held in Calcutta in the interest of the famine sufferers, at which the sum of £50,000 was subscribed as a relief fund. The announcement that Queen Victoria had opened the fund with a gift of £1,000 was greeted with cheers.

There is strong probability that during the present session of the New York Legislature the disgraceful Horton law, which permits prize-fighting and boxing-matches, will be repealed. A bill providing for its repeal has already passed the lower House by a large majority. The pulpit throughout the State is loud in denouncing the present statute, and petitions, with long lists of signers, are being sent in by the wholesale asking for the removal of the obnoxious measure. It is high time for the great Empire State to right herself before the world by putting down this relic of barbarism.

LITERARY NOTES.

BY W. F. B.

In The Self-Culture Magazine, for February, the illustrated articles, with their usual wealth of fine half-tone pictures, describe and depict The Manufacture of American Tea, Scenes in the Philippines, Amalfi and Its Strange Disaster, Tess, an Educated Chimpanzee; The Man Who Wrote David Harum, and Our Cattle Industry. Other papers treat of: Mary, the Mother of Washington; The Race Supremacy in Africa, Uncle Sam as a Builder and The True Glory of Nations. An American Cromwell—Nathaniel Bacon, is a good historical sketch of the early colonial rising against Governor Berkeley in Virginia. Woman's Invasion of Man's Province as Bread-Winner is further discussed in the department entitled "Woman and the Home," while the Educational Department has an excellent paper on The Teaching of Civil Government in the Public Schools. The editorial columns review the necrology of 1899, and discuss the current topics of general interest.

Frank Leslie's Popular Monthly, for February, contains a paper upon The Centennial Anniversary of the Death of Washington. Several illustrations accompany the article. In a well-illustrated article entitled, An Army Career, Major-General Nelson A. Miles, the gallant and distinguished soldier commanding the United States Army, addresses himself particularly to young men contemplating a military career, and inspiringly compares army service in this country with that abroad. The Fighting Boers, by Harold Bolce, a former consular representative of the United States at Johannesburg and Pretoria, is a masterly study of the embattled Burghers of the Transvaal who are now confronting England in one of the most desperate wars of history. Bret Harte's latest story (complete in this number) is called The Youngest Miss Piper. Jeannette Walworth's story, also complete in this number, is entitled, The Fate of an Olivine Ring. Ex-Superintendent Jackson tells all about the Railway Mail Service, which he helped to organize; and Anna Randall Diehl, the amiable and scholarly president of the Fortnightly Shakespeare Club, is instructively eloquent on Woman and the Study of Shakespeare.

THINGS TO FORGET.

If you would increase your happiness and prolong your life, forget your neighbors' faults. Forget the slander you have ever heard. Forget the temptations. Forget the fault-finding and give a little thought to the cause which provoked it. Forget the peculiarities of your friends and only remember the good points which make you fond of them. Forget all personal quarrels or histories you may have heard by accident and which, if repeated, would seem a thousand times worse than they are. Blot out as far as possible all the disagreeables of life; they will come, but they will grow larger when you remember them, and the constant thought of the acts of meanness or, worse still, malice will only tend to make you more familiar with them. Obliterate everything disagreeable from yesterday; start out with a clean sheet for to-day and write upon it, for sweet memory's sake, only those things which are lovely and lovable.—Northwestern Advocate.

OLD THINGS.

We often hear people say: "I wish we had the old-time religion." They might as well say, I wish we had the old-time wooden plows. I wish we could thresh out wheat like our fathers did with the old-time flail. I wish we had the good old-fashioned tallow candles. I wish we had forks with two prongs to eat peas. I do wish we could haul our cotton one hundred miles to market like we did sixty years ago.

Let us enter a gentle protest. The gospel of the Son of God does more now, in a day, than it could possibly have wrought in a year of Auld Lang Syne. Besides all this, let us not forget that we have, right now, the oldest religion the world has ever known.—Wesleyan Christian Advocate.

The total amount given to foreign missions in the United States last year was $5,158,114. The Methodist Episcopal Church (North and South) stands at the head, with $1,301,167. Next is the Presbyterian (North and South), with $981,580. Next the Baptists (North and South) with $906,723. Then the Congregationalists with $687,200. The Protestant Episcopal Church next, with $280,969.—Selected.

A Serious Decision.

"Why CHILLIFUGE Won't Cure Chills"—is a question that brings to mind the story of a society of learned men formed for debating problems.

The question was presented: "Why a fish weighing ten pounds, put into a vessel of known weight, filled with water, did not increase the weight?" After hours of hot debate the fool of the club announced that it did, for while the debate had been going on he had tried the experiment.

JOHN T. SAWYER, P. E.

Saved from Cancer

THOUSANDS OF LIVES ANNUALLY YIELDED TO THIS GREAT DESTROYER—NINE OUT OF EVERY TEN CAN BE RESCUED.

"It takes a shadow off my path, and makes the future brighter. I am grateful to God for the discovery."

These are the heartfelt words of Rev. J. L. Cooper, one of the best known Presbyterian ministers in the South. Dr Cooper was afflicted with cancer, which was gradually taking his life away, the skill of several doctors having been exhausted in vain. He finally heard of the success of Drs Reynolds of Nashville, and after receiving their treatment, wrote them as follows:

"For five years I suffered from a Cancer on my cheek which refused to heal under the treatment of several eminent doctors; it gradually grew and gave me much pain, until I was alarmed at my condition and began to despair of ever being well. Some one recommended the treatment of Drs Reynolds, and I at once sought their skill. Their oil cure remedies were almost magical in their effect, for in five weeks, I was completely cured; and have only a small scar left to remind me of the dreadful disease which had me so completely in its deadly grasp.

"Gratefully yours,

"J. L. COOPER, Yorkville, Tenn."

The above is but one of the many cures made by the original oil-cure treatment of Drs Reynolds. So successful have they been in treating cancer, that it has been demonstrated that nine out of every ten cases can be cured by their method. They can treat patients at a distance, and some of their most wonderful cures have been cases of this kind, where the treatment was applied at the home of the patient, under their direction.

Not only do they cure the most malignant cases of cancer, but they are also masters of all skin diseases, and have cured hundreds of cases of eczema, lupus, fistula, tetter, ulcers, sores, piles, etc. Col. J. P. Stovall, of Brookville, Miss., was cured of a most horrible case of diseased eczema, and among their many cures of residents of Nashville, are Martin Clark, poison oak eczema; Mrs. Ed. Wells, ulcerated eczema on the hand and R. C. K. Martin, severe case of lupus. In all of these cases their treatment effected a prompt cure after the best doctors had failed.

They invite everyone afflicted with any of these diseases to write them for full information and advice, which will be cheerfully sent without cost. Each case receives most careful attention, and a prompt reply is given to all letters. Address, Drs. Reynolds, 533 Odd Fellows' Temple, Nashville, Tenn.

THE LABORER'S TASK IS O'ER

BY J. ELLERTON.

Now the laborer's task is o'er;
Now the battle-day is past;
Now upon the farther shore
Lands the voyager at last.
Father, in thy gracious keeping
Leave we now thy servant sleeping.

There the tears of earth are dried;
There its hidden things are clear;
There the work of life is tried
By a juster Judge than here.
Father, in thy gracious keeping
Leave we now thy servant sleeping.

"Earth to earth, and dust to dust;"
Calmly now the words we say;
Left behind we wait in trust
For the resurrection day.
Father, in thy gracious keeping
Leave we now thy servant sleeping.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From Our Regular Correspondent.)

Dr. Josiah Strong and Rev. W. R. Campbell, who has been engaged in missionary work in Utah for some years, made arguments before the House Judiciary Committee this week, showing the necessity for Federal legislation against polygamy. Dr. Strong made some very strong statements. For instance, he said that while the Mormons were only one-fifteenth the number of the Presbyterians (North), the Methodists and the Congregationalists, yet, in a stated period they had increased more than those denominations combined, and expressed the opinion that if Congress did not act, it was not unlikely that Joseph Smith's prophecy that every State west of the Mississippi river would be brought under Mormon influence would be fulfilled. A large delegation of ladies interested in the movement to secure Federal legislation against polygamy were in the committee room when the arguments were made.

Washington folk never tire of honoring the memory of the late Frances E. Willard. A meeting commemorative of her life and work were held in Hamline Church this week under the auspices of the W. C. T. U., of which she was so long the leader. Among those participating were Rev. John Von Schaick, pastor of the Church of Our Father; Rev. F. D. Power, pastor of the Vermont Avenue Christian Church; Rev. Walter Brooks (colored), pastor of the Nineteenth Street Baptist Church; Dr. J. E. Rankin, president of Howard University, who read an original poem; Mrs. M. D. Ellis, superintendent of legislation; Mr. F. M. Bradley, secretary of the Sons of Temperance, and Mrs. M. E. Hartsock, vice-president of the District of Columbia Union.

One of the evils of the present day is the ease with which honorable men can be induced to lend their support to questionable schemes, when those schemes are plausibly presented, as they usually are when they promise large profits, if successful. This evil is especially noticeable in Washington, where questionable schemes are constantly being brought to the attention of Congress. By some sort of moral hocus pocus men who follow the strictest line of honor in their dealings with private individuals appear unable to see any wrong in robbing the government by charging exorbitant prices for what they sell it. Although Congress was asked a few years ago to appropriate a large sum of money to elevate Pennsylvania avenue, in order to place it above occasional Potomac floods, which was not done, Congress is now asked to buy the entire south side of the avenue, to be used as sites for public buildings. This, too, in the face of the general knowledge that foundations can only be obtained for large buildings by driving piles at enormous expense, as had to be done when the city postoffice was built several years ago, and as had to be done more recently for a building erected on the north side for a local newspaper. It is high time for the people of this country to demand that private honesty and public honesty be judged by the same standard.

The testimony in the hearings before the Senate Committee on Elections in the case of Senator Clark, of Montana, who is charged with having secured his election to the Senate by bribery, has been little short of a public disgrace to that State. It has shown a state of affairs in that commonwealth that is discouraging to those who hope to see purer methods adopted in the politics of the country, and who realize the demoralizing effect of the lavish use of money in politics, even when it is used for what the politicians are pleased to call "legitimate" purposes. While no bribery has been absolutely proven by the evidence so far taken, it has been shown that money was lavishly used both by Mr. Clark's supporters and his opponents, and he testified to having contributed the enormous sum of $140,000 for political purposes, but denied most positively that any portion of it was used to bribe support. He claimed that the money was spent to break down a political ring which was equally lavish in expenditures. Thoughtful men long ago discovered that the corrupt use of money was one of the most threatening dangers of our form of government, but up to this time about the only available preventative is public opinion. Without going into the question of whether Senator Clark was guilty of legal bribery, it can be said that no man could pour such an amount of money into a State campaign without being guilty of morally corrupting the politics of his State, and the presence of such a man in the Senate is not calculated to elevate the moral standard of that body.

The regular quarterly meeting of the Union of the Brotherhood of Andrew and Philip, composed of all the Washington chapters, was held at the Western Presbyterian Church, the principal address being delivered by Dr. Conrad Clever, pastor of the Third Reformed Church of Baltimore. The address was on the objects of the brotherhood and of the ideas involved in its organization.

The Washington Y. M. C. A. continues to grow in membership. At the regular monthly meeting, held this week, eighty-five new members were elected.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE NOTES.

Rev. E. A. Tucker, Nettleton, Miss., has been sick for some time, but we are glad to learn that he is improving now.

Rev. T. W. Lewis, wife and son, are in Memphis for medical treatment.

Rev. B. P. Jaco writes: "Pleasant Grove, Feb. 23.—We are having some fatal sickness and right smart of measles. I am kept busy nursing the sick, burying the dead, etc."

These all have the sympathies and prayers of their numerous brethren and friends.

The omission of the name of Rev. J. W. Malone, Woman's College, Oxford, in the appointments as published in the Conference Minutes, was an unintentional oversight. The printer followed exactly the copy of "appointments" as written by the Bishop's own hand, and by him turned over to the secretary. All concerned regret that the omission was not discovered in time for correction in the Minutes. It will, however, be correct in the General Minutes.

The Executive Committee of the Board of Education and the Missionary Board held sessions in Winona on last Tuesday and Wednesday. Their actions will be published in due time. We are glad to note that it was determined to hold a mid-year meeting here May 22 and 23, to be participated in by the Mission, Education, Sunday-school and Epworth League Boards, together with the presiding elders of the Conference. This means business. Let all concerned take due notice, and govern themselves accordingly, by being on hand prepared for counsel and service in behalf of these several interests of church work.

The colportage work has been quite gratifying so far this year, and the outlook for the future is encouraging. And, now, if those who are indebted to the colporter will settle up by March 15, he will be enabled to make a vigorous Spring campaign. Brethren, help us with your patronage and prayers.

G. W. BACHMAN.

Selections.

REV. DR. C. G. ANDREWS.

(Substance of remarks made at his funeral, in Meridian, Miss., by Bishop Charles B. Galloway.)

We sit to-day under the shadow of a great and unexpected sorrow. One of the noblest and strongest of the sons of men has been taken from us and translated to his rich reward in the skies. An honored leader has fallen—a leader whose splendid courage was an inspiration, and whose very presence was a sense of security. We all felt safer when he was near. Universally loved, absolutely trusted, and generously and generally admired, he had a conspicuous place in the heart of both Church and State, and will have large space in the history of the heroic times in which he lived. A great commonwealth is bereaved to-day, a mighty church is in mourning.

This bereavement comes so unexpectedly, and, to our poor human seeming, so untimely. We needed his noble presence and dauntless leadership and godly example and blessed fellowship and helpful ministry. The time of his departure some of us had earnestly prayed would be long delayed. We had never associated declining years with that powerful and strong-willed man. Though he had passed threescore and six years, he was in full possession of all his splendid energies, and seemed to have the same ardent hopes and flaming zeal that characterized his early elastic years. It does seem to us that his work was not done; that the death angel came too soon. But to God's will we bow, though we suffer.

I crave the privilege of saying that this sad death comes to me as a sore personal bereavement. I mourn not so much the death of an apostolic minister as the loss of a dear and trusted friend. For more than thirty years I have been accustomed to look to him for fatherly counsel and spiritual fellowship. The debt I owe him can never be canceled in this world, or through the endless cycles of the next. It was at his hands I received holy baptism, and by him was solemnly admitted into the communion of the church of God. It was his frequent, wise, prayerful, heaven-breathing letters, when I was a boy at college, that helped me to see the path of duty, and to decide the anxious question of my call to the gospel ministry. It was his church and Quarterly Conference that gave me authority to preach and recommendation to the Methodist itinerancy. When, in after years, children came to bless my home he baptized every one of them, and left the benediction of their father's apostolic friend. And all through my public career he has cheered and helped me in ten thousand ways. Never for a moment has anything ever arisen to interrupt the perfect confidence and cordiality of our intimate companionship. You need not wonder, then, that I feel desolate and lonely to-day; and when I saw his strong frame failing, and his pure spirit passing to the mansions above—when I saw the chariot of fire and the horses of flame ready to wheel the weary prophet home—I felt like exclaiming, "My father, my father, the chariot of Israel, and the horsemen thereof!"

It shall not be my purpose at this solemn hour to trace in minute outline the life and worthy deeds of our noble friend and great leader in Israel. That life was crowded with incidents, and crowned with achievements worthy to be treasured and studied by all who aspire after the highest ideals and the holiest attainments. But these can not be recounted to-day. I must be content to make only brief and imperfect reference to a few of these distinguishing characteristics that gave him real greatness and conspicuous place among the sons of the mighty.

Dr. Andrews was a strong personality. His towering presence was but the physical expression of a majestic character. His handsome form and noble bearing indicated the symmetry, strength and uprightness of one of the manliest and kingliest of men. He would instinctively be accorded a high place in any company, a chief seat in any assembly.

And he stood for something. There was iron in his blood, and granite in his character, and strength in his convictions, and power in his very presence. There was a harmonious blending of strength and beauty, of power and gentleness, of majesty and modesty. He was cast in a large and serious mold. Such a man could not but have broad views and generous views and lofty aims. He united at once in his splendid presence the majesty of a king, the exquisite grace of a prince of the blood, and the humility of one of the least of the Lord's anointed.

He was a man of profound piety. I have thought, without invidious comparison or extravagance of speech, that he was the holiest man I ever knew. The deep things of God he grasped with a strong and intelligent faith, and transmuted them into the very fiber of his being. He dwelt amid the high places of the kingdom of God. There were no heights of faith unto which he did not ardently aspire. And if there were any unto which he did not attain, it was because of the weakness or weariness of his soaring wing. He could say with St. Paul, as honestly as any man I have ever known, "For me to live is Christ."

And, like all deeply spiritual and refined souls, he was modest in the expression of his religious feelings. He felt that there ought to be some sacred secrets between the soul and God. So, while he dearly loved the conventicles of the saints, and liked to talk of the great verities translatable into human experience, he was, as far as possible, removed from cant or spiritual conceit.

He was a man of much prayer. No little child ever clung more tenaciously and lovingly to its mother's knee than did this stalwart son of the church linger at the feet of his heavenly Father and talk of the great needs of his soul. Incidentally I have heard, but never from his modest lips, that he has spent whole nights in earnest prayer to God. He preached and illustrated a full gospel.

And wherever known there was the profoundest reverence for the depth of his piety and the purity of his character. Some so admired and honored the Christliness of his life that they felt there was virtue in the hem of his garment, and saving health in the grasp of his brotherly hand. I doubt not that his godly judgment was sought in matters of deep spiritual experience more than any man in Mississippi. He had been the faithful spiritual guide of hundreds, if not thousands, and to scores of earnest souls he was a veritable father confessor.

He had a simple, beautiful, implicit trust in Providence. He believed in the divine ordering of his daily steps—in the constant and certain guidance of an unseen eye. Referring to John Wesley's faithful following of every providential leading, the accomplished historian of Methodism said that was "the crowning maxim of his philosophy and the crowning fact of his policy." Of no man within the rather wide circle of my acquaintance could that be more truly and appropriately said than of Charles Green Andrews. Reared in affluence, inheriting the best blood of the old South, accustomed to all the graces and refinements of the highest social life, the son of large fortune, and thoroughly educated, no young man in Mississippi in those golden days before the war ever entered life with fairer prospects or more radiant hopes. The highest distinctions allured his worthy ambitions, and the richest rewards awaited his eager search. But when the voice of God was heard calling him away to the quiet, humble life of a Methodist itinerant preacher, he obeyed without a murmur, and never in all after life did he have one moment's regret. He rather rejoiced that God had counted him worthy to bear his name to the world, and in the service of his Lord found highest and holiest delight.

And in the strange ordering of Providence that young man who seemed to be recklessly throwing away the prizes of life was really finding them. He who was forsaking fame and position wrought for himself undying distinction. His name will ever be mentioned with reverence on earth, and have a shining place in the chronicles of the skies.

Dr. Andrews had no unholy ambitions. While greatly and gratefully appreciative of the confidence reposed in him, and the honors bestowed upon him, he never aspired to place and power. No man, living or dead, ever knew him to solicit influence in order to attain a personal end. If in the course of providence responsibility was laid upon him, he cheerfully assumed the same, and labored with conscientious fidelity to discharge the duties of the clearly apprehended present. Into the humblest place he carried the same readiness to serve as in the highest. He has traveled a Mississippi circuit with the same noble purpose to be useful and successful as when he presided over the fortunes of a historic college, or sat as a representative in the great Ecumenical Conference in London, or stood in the prominent pulpits of the land.

Dr. Andrews was a man of sincere, unaffected modesty. He was never boastful. In all my long and confidential relations with that noble man I never heard him tell of his own achievements, or relate a story of which he was the hero or principal figure. He delighted to recount the worthy deeds and successes of his friends and brethren, but preserved a sacred silence as to himself. Though a member of seven General Conferences, and for thirty-six years the secretary of his Annual Conference, except twice when elected to preside in the absence of a Bishop, and the acknowledged leader of his brethren, he never assumed to control their action on any issue, or be the organ of any convictions except his own.

Dr. Andrews was a man of inflexible purpose. He was no reed shaken by the wind. When the path of duty was made plain no dangers could daunt him, and no difficulties deter him. Discouragements never caused him to change a plan or forslacken his course. Nothing but the absolute assurance of his error, or that Providence ordered otherwise, ever suggested to him another line of conduct. Oliver Cromwell never had a steadier nerve or stronger arm or loftier courage when leading his Ironsides to battle and to victory than did this faithful, courageous, self-denying Methodist itinerant of Mississippi in discharging the duties God and the church had laid upon him. He absolutely felt no fear. And never did he consider the possible effect of any act or opinion upon his own personal fortune or popularity.

Dr. Andrews was an example of singular devotedness to duty. He never courted responsibility, and never shirked a duty. This was the watchword of his toilsome, apostolic career. However delicate or difficult or unpleasant, he never shrank from its honest performance, or tried to relegate it to other shoulders.

Just one week before he peacefully fell asleep he went through the snow, a mortal disease already fastened upon, and in the East End Church of this city preached his last sermon. When the pastor said to him, "Why, Doctor, did you venture out this dreadful day?" he quietly answered, "Duty, duty," and, sitting in a chair, delivered his last loving message to the world.

Dr. Andrews was a prodigious worker. He literally obeyed the injunction in our book of Discipline, "Never be unemployed, never be trifingly employed." With almost superhuman energy this noble man pursued his apostolic labors. He counted not comfort, pleasure, or even life dear unto himself, that he might do the work of his Lord and finish his course with joy. He often quoted the words of Charles Wesley, and made them his prayer, that he might "cease at once to work and live." And that prayer was literally answered. He died in the midst of his glorious and successful toils.

Dr. Andrews was an ardent Churchman. Though a man of broad catholicity and rejoiced in a generous Christian and interdenominational fraternity, he was almost passionately devoted to the church of which he was an honored member and distinguished minister. He believed in her doctrines, admired her wonderful ecclesiastical polity, rejoiced in her marvelous history, and revelled in her high spiritual fellowship. Too broad to be a bigot, too great to be a partisan, too evangelical to be a sectarian, he was, on the other hand, too positive a character and too decided in his convictions not to be loyally and intelligently attached to the church which he believed had the clearest credentials and the most distinctive marks of an institution of God.

But this solemn service must close. I can not speak all that is in my heart. The memory of my noble friend shall be tenderly cherished through all the years, and let us all try to emulate his holy example.

I will not invade the inner, sacred home circle, and intrude upon the agony of its grief. No human feet are soft enough to cross that holy threshold, and no human voice, however loving and sympathetic, can borrow notes sufficiently delicate and divine, to soothe the bitterness of their sorrow. I will only say that no purer woman ever had a truer, nobler, knightlier husband, and no children ever honored and almost adored a grander, saintlier, and more affectionate father. Every day while he so usefully lived he lovingly commended them to the care and guidance of our Father in heaven. Now that his gentle voice, so often used in prayer, is hushed in death, we can only repeat his words of benediction, and commend them to God who is able to keep that which we have committed to him against "that day."

—Nashville Christian Advocate.

The true dictate of conscience everywhere must be that there is nothing right or lawful in business that would not be so in the relations of private life. There can not be two codes of honor or honesty. Never with impunity can the light of conscience be obscured, nor its scruples overbalanced.—Tulloch.

We should set God always before us, and ourselves always before him.—Henry Church.

THE FATHER'S HOUSE.

BY J. B SMITH.

Since Christ the topmost stone has laid
Of his redemptive plan,
And universal temple made
Accessible to man;
For songs of praise and voice of prayer
Man finds an altar everywhere.

Beneath high heaven's temple dome
Unnumbered altars rise,
And roof of even the humblest home
May lift above the skies;
Where'er the soul to heaven aspires,
Are heaven-kindled altar-fires.

On land or sea, beneath, above,
Where mind in thought may roam,
There is the Father's house of love
Where we may find a home.
And homes which here about us lie
May anchored be to home on high.

"THE REVIVAL NEEDED."

Revivals, as commonly understood, mean mere spasmodic religious excitement. This is not the biblical idea of a spiritual upheaval. That in any true outpouring of the Holy Spirit from God there will be a greater intensity of feeling and action than is prevalent in the usual services of the church we are happy to acknowledge. It is fortunate that it is so. The unconverted remain unaffected by the ordinary services of the church; they are not drawn to the house of God in large numbers, and they are not moved to begin the Christian life. The depressing effect of worldliness, and the more awful results of sin, in all its forms, from the most refined to the most revolting, cover the modern church like miasmatic fogs, and make sinners unresponsive to the regular sermons of the pastor, or the occasional appeals of men, who are supposed to desire the rescue of the souls of men. To this fact is due very largely the revivals which scarcely outlast the echoes of the evangelist's voice. Too many of our people think that every effort must be made to organize, to secure the attendance of the masses, to humanize the methods so as to make them popular, to make heavy drafts upon the world's money and the world's love of the beautiful, and to secure a large number of converts. This is the humanizing method. It is cunningly devised, but it is human. And is it writing too hurriedly to assert that many revivalists appeal to these false notions by their compromise with preconceived opinions? Of course, their work is superficial, lacking the proper foundation, and, trusting too much to human instrumentalities, the Holy Spirit does not honor the results with his own seal and his sweet fruits of righteousness. This is simply the best language in which we can describe the spurious revival. And in such meetings there will always be some religious excitement, and some real trophies are sometimes won for our Lord, but not many are altogether genuine. However, there is a better way—God's way as outlined in his Word.

(1) The revival needed is a gracious work of the Holy Spirit, leading human souls to righteousness, accompanied by unusual depth of spiritual feeling and breadth of operation.

This is sufficiently clear and comprehensive to meet the demands, and will, we think, pass the criticism of any spiritual preacher. Certainly this belongs to a period of special effort—special prayer, special preaching, special personal work, but it is from God and is based upon the atonement of his Son. Without doubt the Holy Spirit communicates the dynamic power, and from him emanates the genuine revival unto salvation to them who believe. No beautiful human imitations here, nor machine-like manufacture of saved(?) souls, nor waves of simple tears alone, nor promises to "quit your meanness," nor cards signed by the hundreds! That was not the apostolic revival, for after ten days in that "upper room" in Jerusalem the Holy Ghost came as "cloven tongues of fire," in response to the united prayers of the disciples, fulfilling the prophecy: "Not by might, nor by power, but by my Spirit, saith the Lord of hosts." The genuine revival is from above! The Spirit never responds save to the prayer of faith; he will not come to honor the drama, nor the human instrument, nor the orator's pyrotechnical display, nor the personal work of a whole church! Every gift of God to his spiritual children is bestowed in answer to the faith that claims the promise and the divine pledge of victory! This is the one condition of victory in the spiritual realm—faith! "This is the victory that overcometh the world, even our faith." Have we not forgotten the apostolic statement: "The just shall live by faith"? Some Bishop of our church said that we needed a restatement of the doctrine of sin. If we use the word-painting of the Bible the exceeding sinfulness of sin will horrify the grossest violator of God's law; but it will take a restatement of the doctrine of faith to move the heart of the church to implore the help of God, and lead the terrified sinner to a "godly sorrow that needeth not to be repented of."

And this will lead souls to righteousness—right living—holiness! We had best stop our arguments as to the methods of accomplishing this heaven-appointed work. It must be done! We must "spread scriptural holiness over these lands," or some other church will take our crown. We are not set for the defense of the gospel alone, but are called to preach the gospel to the lost—to proclaim among men "the unsearchable riches of Christ." Christ in the hearts of men will lead to holy living. No self culture, under whatever name it may appeal to us, will suffice—it is self-abnegation, self-emptying, self-denial! We need a revival "of pure and undefiled religion," which will secure this absolute surrender of the soul to Jesus Christ.

That such a revival will be characterized by great depth of feeling and breadth of operation is evident to all who have studied the great revivals of the past; and is to-day in some localities a living fact, the conditions having been fulfilled. It is ever the self-same Spirit of Pentecost, though differing in degrees of power, and in the spiritual intensity, which move the throngs of humanity. No less than resurrection power is manifest in every true religious upheaval. It is the "power of God unto salvation"—the power of the all-powerful Christ overturning the false hopes and displaying the gross iniquity of the sinner to himself. Here are heard the thunders of Sinai, and here the gentle tones of Calvary! Before such marvelous revelations of the law, which the sinner has broken, the sinner is stricken, and under the story of God's love in Christ the stricken soul is saved. The fact of sin—the faith that saves—the feeling of love: this is the divine order. Can we wonder at some of the marvelous records of the century just passing, showing that on many occasions waves of emotion and tides of feeling were present to a supernatural degree? Pentecost was being repeated. It was the pleasure of this writer to witness such a display of the moral power of our holy religion as to forever set at rest any question as to the vital connection of pure morals and true religion—they are inseparable. A whole community was brought to Christ, and every form of sinful pleasure, which had been enthroned in that community, was buried under gospel salvation, and, we are glad to say, that it has not arisen to this day; and we do not now think it possible to even approximate the far-reaching effects of that precious season of grace in West Virginia nearly seven years ago.

(2) The supreme need of a true revival is apparent on every side.

The first fact that greets us in proof of this statement is the existence of sin, strongly intrenched in the hearts of thousands of our fellow-citizens, and in a thousand forms deluding and destroying the souls of men. The existence of 250 thousand saloons and the expenditure of more than one billion of dollars to feed the whisky devil, with all the crime in the States of our Union, are appalling facts! "Sin is the transgression of the law," and the remedy is not in legislation, but in salvation. Gambling (in cards, or "in futures"), domestic infelicity, vicious literature, drunkenness, political corruption, and every other sin, must lose much ground when the windows of heaven open to pour upon us the blessed Holy Spirit, for these things will die in the hearts and lives of those who take him as the indwelling Advocate, or Paraclete.

The second fact, just as evident as the first, is the prevalence of worldliness. Jesus Christ said, "Love not the world, neither the things that are in the world," and yet hundreds of professed followers of the Man of Galilee love the dance, the theatre, the card game, and other forms of sinful pleasure. I have heard of one city church (not of our denomination) which has a prominent seat at the dance-hall for their talented pastor! That whole church from pastor down needs both a moral and spiritual regeneration. If there are no large circles of the people called Methodiste, who advocate such follies, there is abundant proof that individual members do, without doubt, hold such pernicious views. They sometimes get into that favored body known as the Board of Stewards. (Let us have officials like Stephen "full of faith and the Holy Ghost.") Worldliness will only go out when the living Christ comes in, and he comes in a true revival—aye, he is the very life in the revival to give it power and to carry to the hearts of men his all-conquering love!

The third symptom of trouble in our humanity is the dominance of unbelief. And this is eating out the spiritual life of many followers of Christ. We need the mustard-seed, faith. Many thousands are being led astray by Christian Science and other dangerous heresies and heathenish notions, because they tried to trust in Christ of their own faith and of their own power; and now they are far gone into the land of skepticism. Only a great revival can kindle the faith, so long dead, and bring again the simple-hearted trust of childhood to multitudes of backslidden church members.

The fourth fact (and last that we shall notice) which demands a revival to remedy it, is the lack of liberality and fraternity in the church. Our missionary treasury shows a very small appreciation of the meaning of the great commission. The great Southern Methodist Church ought to contribute $2,500,000 per annum to the evangelization of the heathen world. A connectional revival of Holy Ghost religion would fill the coffers of the church, and send an army of missionaries to the lands that lie in darkness. Liberality is a grace of the Divine Spirit, and is always quickened by a genuine revival.

We need the immediate outpouring of the Holy Ghost. This need is overwhelming, depressing, oppressive, urgent, desperate! But is our God absent? Is the Lord of hosts not our Leader? "Go.... and lo, I am with you all the days, even unto the end of the age;" and he is mighty, aye, he is Almighty Love! And he has not changed since Pentecost! "Jesus Christ, the same yesterday, to-day, and forever," and will he not pour upon us, as at Pentecost, his Holy Spirit? "O Lord, revive thy work in the midst of the years, in the midst of the years make known; in wrath remember mercy."

FROM SHREVEPORT, LA.

MR. EDITOR: Under date of Feb. 10, Hon. A. M. Mayo writes me from Lake Charles, enclosing a "Legal Form of Incorporation for Church Property." It comes to hand too late for the Minutes; But that our pastors and trustees may have the benefit of it without waiting a year, I send it to you for insertion in your paper. Bro. Mayo says of it: "This covers all the points required by law, and our members have nothing to supply, and are not in danger of leaving out some matter."

Correspondence.

LETTER FROM JAPAN.

As I sat down to write, the thought, "There's nothing new under the sun," came into my mind. This may be true about some things, but concerning the Lord's work it's false. All during this year his mercies have been new every morning, and as I begin to count them they are more than can be numbered. Perhaps, instead of making a regulation report, it will be more profitable if I will look at some of the blessings which have been given me during the past year.

At the beginning of the new Conference year God, through Bishop Wilson, gave us a rich blessing in the person of Miss Bryan, who has been such a help and comfort to us all in the home and in the work. Then the opening in all three of the departments of work was very encouraging—a larger number matriculating in each department, thus encouraging us all to put forth greater effort than ever before. The progress of the pupils was commendable from the beginning, and continued so throughout the year. God did not leave us without some fruit for the labor bestowed. We were thankful for the "mercy drops;" but earnestly pray for the showers, and believe they will yet be given.

In our work in Palmore Gakuin we received new encouragement. Although our class has always been a large one, yet heretofore not many of my pupils have attended the Sunday morning class which is taught by Mr. Haden. But this year, perhaps, because I was so much interested in them and troubled about it, some few from among the number have attended the Sunday class regularly. Don't you think this a real blessing? More than this, they have attended church services also.

About the little children at the East Kobe Chapel we also have reason for rejoicing. They have been so faithful even in the face of much opposition, and yet they come and are learning. We have held some of them now for nearly three years. The three student helpers have been earnest and faithful, and have been a blessing not only to myself, but to the work also. We were much troubled about a chapel keeper for a while, but finally a Christian family was secured, and the cleanliness and neatness of the chapel has been an added attraction. In connection with this work, we had the opportunity of organizing a Saturday class among the children where they are taught many useful things. We were able to secure the services of an elderly Christian woman for this, and she has been a faithful and efficient helper. This is another blessing.

One of the great blessings came to us when we were able to move into the new school-buildings. No one who has not worked under the same disadvantages can possibly understand all this means to us, and what a great blessing it has been to the work. During May the Bible department was opened and we began the work to which we have been looking so long. Although the beginning was small, still we are hoping and praying for an increase and have faith that it will come. This work is so much needed in Japan and will be the means of bringing new blessings to many homes. Pray for these Bible women, friends, that they may be filled with His spirit and be much used of God. During the resting time we were blessed daily with both spiritual and temporal blessings. We were shown continually that if we would be a blessing and a help to others, we must renounce self and be vessels to be filled and used by him.

Such rich blessings came to us during Conference when in the quiet hours we assembled together and held heart-to heart talks that I feel that these blessings are almost too new to speak about yet. But he was there and spoke to our hearts.

And now, dear friends, Conference is over and God has seen fit to return me to this work—to the special work of training young women for Christian service. With the great blessing he has given or placed equally heavy responsibility, I am weak and need your prayers. Will you not pray that as He has blessed me in so many ways he may also help me to become a blessing to this needy people?

OUR TREASURER.

At Louisville, Ky., on Jan. 14, Mrs. Clara C. Fant was quietly married to Dr. John Ross, of the United States Marine Service. This was quite a surprise to her host of friends, as few were in the secret. For several years Mrs. Fant has been one of God's "shut ins," but, while confined to her room, her busy brain and willing hands were at work for the Master. She was a tower of strength in the cause of missions. The work she did, and the good she accomplished under the most adverse circumstances, may be likened to the work of the sweet-spirited Jennie Cassedy—that brave-hearted, pain-racked child of God whose life was a perfect benediction to this world of ours.

We feel that our loss as a society is beyond the cure of men, and we can only depend upon the guidance of a higher Power in trying to supply her place. Her proficiency in managing the business department of this office was commended by all, for it required a clear head and a consecrated heart. Right sorely we will miss her helpful letters in regard to our cause; her cheerful spirit when clouds hung low. Above all, we will miss the Christian living that tended to uplift those who were doubtful or depressed spiritually, for no unbeliever can successfully combat the pure living of one white soul. There is something so akin to divinity in Christian living. It was a blessed privilege to have had her as treasurer of our society, and her influence will long be felt in our work. She was like a beacon fire on a mountain-top, and the rays gleamed farther than the peaks and crags of Scotland. Our hearts breathe forth a host of good wishes, and many congratulations are wafted to her temporary home in sunny Florida. As she walks down the coming years hand in hand with the one she has chosen for her companion, may glad content meet them at every turn of the journey!

Miss Helen Fant, who has always been so ready to lend a helping hand in all good work, will take charge of this department of the society until our Conference meets in Durant.

All money, etc., will still be sent to Mrs. Clara Fant, Holly Springs, Miss. This is done to avoid any complications that might arise from change of address.

MRS. M. I. HOSKINS,
Pres. W. F. M. S.

The Christian Life.

UNCEASING PRAISE.

We know that murmuring and discontent and rebellious language and faithless thoughts should have no home with the Christian believer. But there are times when to all of us praise is difficult, or more than difficult. The heart is dry and the lips refuse to speak. In such hours as those let us ask our Father which is in heaven to bring us to a truer appreciation, to a better knowledge, to a deeper understanding of the gospel, which is our precious and wondrous inheritance. Let us seek from him an increase of faith in that Christ who, in the wonderful words of the Epistle to the Hebrews—words to which I have already made allusion—"learnt obedience by the things which he suffered;" "who, because of the suffering of death, is crowned with glory and honor." We have this great stream of interpretation flowing from the grave of the Son of man. Let us pray that our eyes may be opened to it. Whatever comes, whatever shapes cross our path, whatever be "the fever and the fret," whatever be the scourges with which we are scourged, and the crosses which our aching shoulders are called on to bear, let us remember—and let us pray God to ever remind us—that we may find in the vision of the risen Lord strength to endure and struggle and prevail. With that vision before our eyes we can thank and bless God. With that vision before us we may look out on such things as the success of a Turkish empire, or the ravages of an Indian plague, and not lose our faith. With that vision to help and encourage and instruct us we can watch this chequered scene of life, and without shutting our eyes to one of its horrors, or one of its miseries, without closing our ears to one cry of despair, or one moan of pain, we can say in all the fervor of sincerity, in all the fullness of devotion, "Holy, holy, holy, Lord God of hosts; heaven and earth are full of thy glory; glory be to thee, O Lord most high."—Rev. W. E. Bowen, in Expository Times.

Where truth and right are concerned, we must be firm as Gou... Guthrie.

IN MEMORIAM.

Irvine Asbury Lewis, eldest son of Rev. T. W. and Mrs. Mary N. Lewis, was born in DeSoto county, Miss., Sept. 5 1882, and died of pneumonia in Mt. Pleasant, Tenn., Feb. 3, 1900. Irvine was a fine boy of whom his fond parents were justly proud. Well-developed physique, a fine specimen of physical youth, a dutiful son, amiable in disposition, and as tender and thoughtful of his mother as the gentlest girl. Was as well developed in mind as in body, bright and eager to learn, that he might be the better fitted for life's work.

He joined the church of his father and mother (M. E Church, South) at the tender age of six and a half years. In Winona, Miss, in which church he lived consistently until the end came. He knew from experience nothing of a life of sin. About two years ago, in Grenada, Miss., he received a great spiritual blessing, which better fitted him for the work of the Master, from which time he was especially active in the work of his church, ever ready for any good work. He was fond of the League, and frequently held its devotional meetings. When his father was from home he led the family worship—indeed, we rarely find one of his years of such Christian character.

He had been in Mt. Pleasant, Tenn., whence he had gone to attend school, only two weeks when he was taken violently ill. His physicians had but little hope of his recovery from the first, but his struggle against the dread disease was heroic. Then after seven days the strong frame succumbed and he passed away. Of course, his end was one of peace His father reached his bedside just three days before his death. About twenty-four hours before the end came he called for his mother, when his father explained that she was ill at home and could not be with him. Then he said, "Tell them I loved them all." A few hours later, though suffering very much, he attempted to sing "In the sweet by-and-by." The father brought the remains to his home and charge in Carrollton, Miss. A service was held in the Methodist Church, and a large congregation assembled, and weighed their tears with the grief-stricken father and mother and only remaining child (little Tom) He was laid to rest in the Carrollton Cemetery, to wait the resurrection morn.

Let the prayers of the church be offered for our dear Bro. and Sister Lewis. At this time the clouds are very dark that gather over them. At this writing Sister Lewis is quite ill. May the Savior they preach to others be especially near to them in this deep sorrow! J. H. MITCHELL.

REV. F. A. WHITSON.

Rev. F. A. Whitson was born in Fayette county, Ala., April 13, 1854, and died in New Albany, Miss., Feb. 7, 1900. He professed religion and joined the church when about thirteen years of age. He was admitted on trial into the traveling connection by the North Mississippi Conference at its session in Kosciusko in November, 1885, and filled the following appointments: Sparta circuit, Okolona circuit, Amory and Smithville, Pontotoc circuit, Potts Camp circuit, and New Albany circuit—fourteen years in all. He died in the beginning of the fifteenth year of his ministry. He was ordained deacon by Bishop Keener and elder by Bishop Galloway.

Bro. Whitson's early educational advantages were not good, but he was a close and diligent student, and was growing in knowledge up to the last week of his life. He was well versed in Methodist theology, and few men excelled him in a profound knowledge and accurate use of the Holy Scriptures. Wherever he went he was known as the scriptural preacher.

Bro. Whitson was richly endowed with evangelistic gifts, and was wonderfully successful in winning men to Christ. He was a man of great firmness and decision of character, and he would have freely given up his life rather than have yielded his conscientious convictions of duty.

Bro. Whitson was a plain, simple, unadorned man—just what he was—a Nathaniel, a man without guile. To his wife and to others he expressed himself as ready for the change. As long as he could whisper he was repeating snatches of Scripture, especially, "He showed me a great city," and the sentiment, "I am most home."

We laid his body to rest in the family burying-ground at Palestine, four miles out from Water Valley, and near the spot where he was converted and joined the church. He leaves a wife and four small children, the youngest twin boys six years old. GILDEROY.

Water Valley, Miss., Feb. 14, 1900.

THE VALENTINE PARTY.

MR. EDITOR: Will you please allow me to express through the columns of the ADVOCATE my heartfelt appreciation of the kindly treatment I have received from the good people of Lake Charles? I came here a few weeks ago a perfect stranger to everyone save, perhaps, two or three persons. I can say, sir, that I have never met a kinder or more hospitable people anywhere. There is thrift and enterprise here. I like it. The people of my own church, with those of other churches and still others of no church, throw open their doors and meet me with an outstretched hand.

But, sir, the thing I wanted to tell you about more especially was a valentine we received this afternoon. It was not in an envelope, but in boxes, buckets, sacks, cans, jars, baskets, etc., and accompanied by twenty-five or thirty ladies, members and friends of Broad Street Methodist church, with Hon. A. M. Mayo as general manager. The truth is, sir, it was a big wagon-load of good things for the preacher and his family. Now, sir, if this is what happens to preachers in Lake Charles on Valentine Day, I hope I will be here when it rolls around again.

The Ladies' Aid are fitting me up a nice pastor's study. The Building Committee assures me that work on the new church will begin now soon. Upon the whole, I am pleased with the outlook.

Thanking the people of my new home for their evidences of kindly affection, and with best wishes for you and your newsy paper, I remain,

Yours most cordially,
R. W. TUCKER,
Pastor Broad Street M. E. Church.

FROM THE WORK.

CHURCH BURNED AT BOVINA.

Our first Quarterly Conference was held at Bovina on Saturday, Feb. 17, which proved to be a very sad day to the hearts of all who were present. Just at the close of the services, which were conducted by Dr. E H Monnger, an alarm of fire was sounded. On investigation, we found that the church was on fire, and that the flames had made such headway that it was impossible to subdue them. So we were forced to stand by and see our loved church burn to the ground. It was a total loss, as there was no insurance. We are going to try to build again as soon as possible, but when I say this, I almost tremble, knowing, as I do, that the membership at that point is so very small. I feel sure, however, that with the united efforts of our little band at Bovina, with the assistance that we hope to get from our friends and brethren, and with the guidance and assistance of the Great Head of the church, we can not fail. We will very gladly receive any assistance that our friends and brethren may be disposed to render us. If any aid should be given, the amounts may be sent to Bro. J. H. Brabston, Bovina, Miss.

AMERIOUS, MISS.

The Lord's work in this part of the Master's vineyard seems to be prospering. Along many lines the church has made material progress, and not a few are now more deeply concerned about the unsaved in our midst than ever before. The Lord abundantly blessed us during the past year, and the prospect of being able to do a good year's work seems very bright.

Our beloved presiding elder, W. W. Simmons, was with us but recently, and held our first Quarterly Conference. His fatherly counsel is duly appreciated by our people, and we begin to look forward to his coming again.

Remembering our blessings of the past, and beholding present prospects, with our faith firmly fixed upon the ultimate triumph of our Lord's kingdom over all of the kingdoms of man, we renew our efforts in the name of Christ, and invoke the guidance of the Holy Spirit. Pray for us. J. W. CAMPBELL, P. C.

POINTING THE WAY.

When a brave admiral in war time goes into an enemy's harbor he knows that the life of every man in the fleet depends upon his skill and courage. It is a tremendous responsibility; and yet he cannot feel it any more deeply and truly than a conscientious physician feels his responsibility for the lives of those who are dependent upon his professional care and skill. He feels that his duty demands more than a mere routine, stereotyped interest in his patients; he feels that his work is a serious matter; that it is often a question of life and death.

"You have my many heart-felt thanks for your kindly advice to me in my sickness," writes Mrs. Claus Nelson, of Pico Heights, Los Angeles, Cal., Box 31, in a cordial letter to Dr. R. V. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y. "Also for your book which I received two years ago, and which I could not do without. It is all the Doctor I have had since I got it. I had female trouble and Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, together with the advice given in his book, cured me of five years' sickness. I thought my days would not be long, but your kindness and medicine would not let me die."

For more than thirty years Dr. Pierce has occupied a grand and most unique position for benefiting his fellow beings: As chief consulting physician of the great Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, of Buffalo. Almost countless thousands have sought his services and advice both in person and by letter.

"He is one of the best men in the world," said the late President Garfield, "and he is at the head of one of the best medical institutions in the world." Dr. Pierce's great thousand-page illustrated Common Sense Medical Adviser" is sent free for 21 one-cent stamps to pay the bare cost of mailing, or for handsome cloth-bound copy, 31 stamps. He makes no charge for consultation by mail; he only requests that sufferers will state their cases to him fully, freely, and in perfect confidence. Address Dr. R. V. THURSDAY, MARCH 1, 1900.

HAS ROMAN CATHOLICISM CHANGED?

The disclosnres made from time to time by reilable historians and others regarding the shamefnl corrnptions in the Romish Chnrch, and as regards her nnvarying attachment to and perpetnation of the tradltions, snperstitions, and idolatrous practices that characterized her in the Middle Ages, have repeatedly ronsed the lre of ths Catholics, and have evoked from them lond-voiced denials of snch aliegations; bnt, for all that, abnndant proof is at hand to show that the creed, claims and spirit of Romanism are precisely the same as when Gregory VII. and Innocent III. asserted absolute temporal and spiritual snpremacy and hanghtily hnmbled the pride of kings.

There are those who wonld have us believe that in these latter days the Romish Chnrch has become liberalized, that she has reformed her faith and practice, and has becoms a zealons promoter of trnth and freedom. How little ground there is for snch a snpposition even slight investigation will show.

Thongh shorn of temporal power, the present Pope is just as arrogant in his pretensions as any of his predecessors. He still claims to be God's rightfnl "vicegerent on earth," and has sought in every possible way to strengthen his anthority. In his letter of April 21, 1878, after drawing a dark pictnre of the state of society, especially in Italy, Pope Leo XIII. affirmed that the "cansе of all the evil that afflicts the world is to be found in the refusal to acknowledge the anthority of the chnrch, which, in the name of God, presides over the destiny of the hnman race, and is the avenger and gnardian of every legitimate power." "Hence," he declares, "we shall use influence to maintain the anthority and dignity of the Roman See, and to reclaim the territory and civil power which by right belong to ns; for the temporal dominion of the Roman pontiff means the salvation of the hnman family." On Jnne 5, 1885, the Pope declared that "the temporal power was absointely necessary to the free exercise of his authority as vicar of Christ." In an address to the clergy, dated Sept. 27, 1888, he nrged them not to cease crying aloud that "the snpreme power which the Pope has by divine right can not be snbject to any power on earth."

As the Pope is nnlversally acknowledged by Romanists to be the infallible head of the chnrch, and the fonntain of trnth and law even above the Word of God, the ntterances of "His Holiness" as regards doctrine, practice, or polity, are, of conrse, to be accepted as the real teaching of the Romish Chnrch. The deeds, intrignes and deviltry of the Jesnits form one of the darkest pictnres ever recorded in the history of any age. A thonsand times over the members of this secret order have shown that it is their settled policy to advance the interests of Romanism by any and all means, whether fair or foul. Their name has become, and justly so, the synonym of nnscrupulousness. Despite all this, the present Pope is known as the ardent patron and protector of this order, which, because of its infamies, was abolished nnder Clement XIV., and has restored the Jesnits to their old-time place, power, and immnnities.

Says Dr. William Bnrt, of New York City, in an able article in the New York Advocate on Pope Leo XIII., from which article many of our facts are qnoted: "By restoring the Jesnits to power he [the Pope] struck a dagger into the heart of liberty. They invade every corner of this earth—families, schools, chnrches, governments, armies, and business of every description, and often they appear as angels of light and mercy. . . . What they have done for Italy, Spain, France and Anstria, they are aiming to do for every land where they can get a foothold. The Jesnits hate our Constitntion and our free Institntions, and secretly seek to nndermine the repnblic."

If the Romish Chnrch has indeed become the friend of light and liberty, why does she forbid her members to read the Sacred Volume? Why does she persistently oppose our pnblic-school system? Why does she constantly seek exclnsive favors at the hands of the government? Why is it that every book or pamphlet written by Roman Catholics, expressing the right of free thonght or private judgment, is sooner or later pnt nnder the ban, and the writers forced to retract or be excommnnicated? Only a few weeks ago the Pope issned an order absolntely prohibiting the teaching of the classics in the schools condncted by the "Christian Brothers." The "Snm of All Theology," by Thomas Aqninas, which work in 1545 was given a place by the Connoil of Trent beside the Bible, and which teaches the Romish dogmas of transnbstantiation, papal snpremacy, pnrgatory, the withdrawal of the onp from the laity, the lawfulness of persecntion, and the indnlgence system, has been commended anew by the present Pope as a "treasnry of golden wisdom."

In his Encyclical of Jnne 29, 1881, the Pope declared that "commnnism, socialism, anarchism, and nihilism, are all the legitimate resnlts of the teachings of the Reformation."

Has the Romish Chnrch discarded the sinful folly of Mariolatry and saint-worship? Nay, verily, for the Pope himself "has always," it is said, "been devoted to the worship of the Virgin Mary and to the most holy rosary." In May, 1896, he composed a poem to the Virgin, in which he cited the triumphs won by the chnrch over the Albigenses (think of it) in France.

Has not Rome blighted and oppressed every connfry where she has had fnll sway? Has she not been hostile, as a rule, to every great moral reform?

Evidently, then, Romanism is still the "mother of abominations," and the enemy of civil and religions freedom. We are ready to accord her dne praise for the good she has done, bnt, alas! it has not been nnmixed with evil. We doubt not that there are in her fold many who are as pnre and sincere Christians as are to be fonnd among Protestants, bnt, despite this admission, we have strong reason to believe that the Romish Chnrch lacks a good deal of being above reproach and snspicion.

A distingnished diplomat in Rome said to Dr. Wm. Bnrt last Jnne: "Tell the people in America that the papacy is the same as it was a thousand years ago. Before I came to Rome I used to deride as bigots, narrow-minded and unchristian those who spoke against the Roman Catholic Chnrch; bnt since I came to Rome I have been fully converted."

A TRIP TO CUBA.

In company with Bishop Candler, R. M. Standifer, Oxford, Miss.; J. S. Frazier, Evergreen, Ala.; W. B. Patillo and J. S. Dobbs, of Atlanta, we left Miami for the Island of Cnba. The sea was calm, and sailing delightfnl. In fifteen honrs after stepping aboard we were passing the north side of Morro Castle. As yet our eyes rested only npon the towering rocks of that historic place and the waves of the deep blne sea. As the vessel bore ns along every passenger was on deck looking ont for the city of Havana, bnt only the snbnrbs were visible. On and on we sailed nntil, when our patience was almost exhausted, our vessel entered the narrow straits that connect the bay with the ocean, and the historic city of Havana loomed np before us. The first impressions made npon me will never be forgotten. The snrroundings were so entirely different from that of my native clime, and, besides, I had never before visited a tropical connfry. I left Aberdeen with the trees stripped of their foliage and no vegetation to be seen; bnt here, instead of the cold blast of Winter, necessitating the nse of an overcoat to protect ns from its chilling breath, all our wrappings were laid aside for the fnll enjoyment of the most delightfnl breeze. On every hand were to be seen beantifnl gardens arrayed with gorgeons flowers, as also the most lnscions frnits of a tropical clime.

What a sight! Who could behold snch bonnties of natnre spread ont before him and not feel that there was a wise Being controlling all? Snch an one mnst not be in the possession of his mental faculties, or mnst have leagned himself with the powers of darkness, and shnt ont from his vision all appreciation of the beantifnl in natnre. And it wonld be strange indeed if snch sights did not awaken an enthnsiastic devotion to the Giver of all good.

After spending a pleasant time in Havana, visiting several interesting and memorable places, snch as the spot where the remains of Christopher Columbns were first interred—at which sight one could not bnt feel a solemnity and a slight tonch of hero worship come over him as, with uncovered head, he stood on that historic spot—we visited a cathedral nearly two hnndred years old. It has stood nearly two centnries, bnt there are no signs of decay. It will be admired for centuries to come. Here was deposited the urn containing the dust of the great discoverer nntil the evacnation of the island by the Spaniards, when they carried the urn back to his native land. The Christobal Colon Cemetery contains many handsome monnments. Interments are confined to the wealthy only, the price of a lot for bnrial being a small fortnne. The poorer classes can rent enough space in which to bnry their dead, bnt should they fail to pay their rent, their bones are removed and thrown into a receptacle just ontside the grounds. All the profits from rents go to the Catholic Chnrch. Oh, is this religion? Is it civilization? Nay, it is a relic of the Dark Ages lingering at the very door of the greatest Christian nation that ever existed in the world's history. After visiting some other places of minor importance, we crossed the bay and proceeded by rail to Mantanzas, where Bishop Candler held the first Methodist Conference on the island. It is only a short distance from Havana for one of our fast trains, though it reqnired four honrs on the Cnban railway. This was not objectionable, however, as it gave our party better opportunity to see the country through which we passed.

The beantifnl and fertile valleys, once popnlated by energetic and cnltnred planters and employees, were marked by the ravages of war. Large sngar plantations, alas! without signs of cultivation. The houses were tenantless, and the once magnificent mills and refineries were in ruins, bnrnt and destroyed by the rnthless heat of war. On our arrival at Mantanzas we were met by Bro. Baker, and took a delightfnl ride throngh the city to the Mission Rooms, where an informal reception was given in honor of the American visitors. The day following we visited other interesting places. In the morning we drove to the Monserat Cathedral, which is quite an ancient-looking structnre. No services are held here except on festival occasions. It is bnilt upon an elevation overlooking the beantiful Jumiro valley, throngh which flows the San Jnan river. This was a pictnresqne scene, and one long to be remembered. Upon entering the cathedral we nnited in singing some of our grand old hymns, snch as, "Jesns, lover of my sonl," "Throw ont the life line," and concinded with "Greenland's icy mountains." Our Spanish gnide looked on in wonder. It was inspiring. How could it be otherwise, when on the morrow we were to give a new spiritnal life to the natives of this priest-ridden island? In the evening we visited the harbor in which Admiral Sampson wrought his great work of "killing the mnle and snbdning the city." This is said to be the best harbor on the island.

On Wednesday morning, at 9 o'clock, the first Conference was called to order by Bishop W. A. Candler. Bro. McDonald, of Havana charge, was elected secretary, and the regnlar business of an Annnal Conference was taken np. All the qnestions were asked. An ex-Catholic priest was admitted on trial into the traveling connection, and two brethren were ordained elders. Dr. J. W. Hammond, our genial Secretary of Education, was introdnced to the Conference, and gave ns an address in his nsnal elegant and happy style. Dr. Carter, the snperintendent of the Cnban missions, is one of natnre's noblemen, whose labors on the island God is crowning with snccess. One wonld like to make personal mantion of every missionary, bnt will simply state that they are all men of God, on whom rests his Holy Spirit. In their reports to the Conference they gave evidence of enthnsiasm born of a desire to bring the island to the foot of the cross. The appointments were made and the Doxology was snng by all present in both Spanish and English.

Now, let us rally to the snpport of this band of faithfnl soldiers. Give them our prayers, contribnte of our means to their maintenance, and bnild a monnment to Methodism and Methodism's Lord. The smiles of our God are upon us, and this insnres joy and happiness here, and a crown of life when he comes to make np his jewels. With this beacon light to gnide us, let us go forward, and if faithfnl unto death, the victory shall be ours.

Bishop Candler appointed Dr. David Carter snperintendent of the Cnban missions; Rev. R. M. Standifer and R. J. Bingham, members of the North Mississippi Conference, delegates to the Ecnmenical Missionary Conference, to be held in New York City the last of April. We have no doubt that we will be ably represented in that very important body by these faithful ministers and laymen.

ONE HUNDRED AND NINTH ANNIVERSARY OF JOHN WESLEY'S DEATH.

To-morrow, March 2, is the one hnndred and ninth annlversary of John Wesley's death. At abont 10 o'clock, Wednesday morning, March 2, 1791, at the age of eighty-eight years, the great apostle of the eighteenth centnry passed peacefnlly to his well-earned rest. He died while Joseph Bradford was saying: "Lift np your heads, O ye gates: and be ye lift np, ye everlasting doors: and this heir of glory shall come in!" This might be an appropriate occasion for re-reading the thrilling account of the last days of our great fonnder. It is hereafter to be regularly observed at Wesley's Chapel in City Road, London. The last issne of the Methodist Recorder thus refers to the matter:

"It is intended that March 2 shall always be kept at Wesley's Chapel, as a solemn religions festival, in memory of John Wesley. It is this year the 109th annlversary of the good man's death. Mr. Westerdale, the present snperintendent minister, has made the following arrangements. From five o'clock in the morning, for four hours, nntil nine o'clock there will be a continnons prayer meeting. This will be followed by a breakfast in the Morning Chapel, at which the Rev. F. B. Meyer and Mr. Reader Harris will speak. At twelve o'clock, Dr. John Watson (Ian Maclaren) will preach the annual sermon. A nnmber of seats will be reserved in the body of the chapel for ticket holders. This will meet the convenience of bnsy friends. There will be a lnncheon for invited gnests after the service. At four o'clock the president of the Conference will preach. A reception will follow, at which most of the ex-presidents will be present, and addresses will be delivered by the chairman of the three London Synods. At the evening meeting the president of the Conference, Mr. John Carvall Williams, M. P., chairman of the Congregational Union, and the Rev. Tolefree Parr, one of the most popnlar ministers in the Primitive Methodist Chnrch, will preach."

ANOTHER FAITHFUL PREACHER GONE.

MR. EDITOR: The many friends of Rev. Lonis Kendall will be pained to learn of his death, which sad event took place at his home near Chapman, Rankin connty, Miss., at 11 P. M., Wednesday, Feb. 14, aged seventy-two years and five months.

Bro. Kendall was for many years a nsefnl member of the Mississippi Conference, and in his prime a preacher of marked ability. The last fifteen or twenty years were spent as a faithfnl local preacher in the Shiloh charge. He died as he lived, trnsting in Jesns. The bnrial was from the Shiloh Methodist Chnrch, Friday, Feb. 16, Rev. J. F. Robinson assisting in the service. In less than a week we are called npon to give up two of our faithfnl local preachers. It is well with them, but, oh! how we will miss them!

LECTURE ON CUBA.

Last Snnday night, to the delight of a large congregation, Rev. R. M. Standifer delivered a very interesting and instrnctive lectnre on his "Impressions of Cnba." He is about as enthnsiastic over the Cnban Mission work as Bishop Candler, and it is important that the chnrch should soon become so, too. If Southern Methodists wonld give Bishop Candler the money, as she ought to do, it would only be a few years nntil our missions there wonld be self-sustaining. The M. E. Chnrch, Sonth, is peculiarly adapted to this work, and there is no reason why she should not take hold immediately.

Cuba is hungering and thirsting for the gospel, and the chnrch has the men and money to give it to them. Now, if she could only feel the urgent need of giving the money right away! I believe we wonld soon have the desired amonnt.

NOTES.

On last Tuesday we had an appreciated call from Rev. T. N. Ivey, editor Raleigh (N. C.) Christian Advocate.

The Methodist Chnrch at Pineville, La., was bnrned on the twenty-fifth ultimo. Loss about $1.000. No insnrance.

The Baptists, Methodists and Presbyterians of Macon, Miss., are holding a nnion meeting. The pastors are assisted by Rev. J. A. Bowen.

Rev. J. W. Lee, of Melville, La., has recently had the misfortnne to have small-pox, and two of his family also have been down with the same disease.

A note from Rev. G. S. Harmon, of Landerdale, Miss., states that he is getting on splendidly, and that he is planning and praying for a gracious revival this year.

Rev. B. F. White, pastor of Dryades Street Chnrch, has been in the clntches of la grippe for a week or more, and was too nnwell to preach last Sabbath. He is able to be np, however.

The Baptists have lost another noble layman in the death of James Pyle, the mannfacturer of "Pearline," at the age of 76. He was a wealthy, generons, religions, and npright man.—Zion's Herald.

***

Rev J. A. Parker writes that Marksville, La., has just been visited by a glorions revival. A fnller account of the meeting, which was condncted by Rev. Clarence B Stronse, of New York City, will appear in next week's issne.

We wish to announce to our readers that Rev. R. B. Downer, a worthy snperannuate of the Mississippi Conference, is anthorized to act as special agent for the ADVOCATE. We most cordially commend him to the favor and consideration of the brethren in his canvass.

Rev. W. H. Lewis, the cnltnred and thoroughly consecrated young pastor at Utica, Miss., writes that the ontlook is hopeful, and that he is planning mnch work for the year. He expects to have two chnrches remodeled and repaired, and will hold several special meetings. We wish him abnndant snccess.

In its new "magazine form," with sixteen pages instead of eight, as heretofore, the Epworth Era is a "thing of beauty," as well as of serviceability. With its costly engravings, its elegant mechanical make-up, and its reading matter of the choicest quality, it is indeed a snperb young people's paper.

Bishop Galloway's Florida appointments are as follows:

Tallahassee	Feb. 27
Live Oak	28
Jacksonville	Mar. 1
Gainesville	2
Tampa	4

The following week he will meet a list of engagements in North Carolina.

The twenty-fonrth of last month was the sixtieth annlversary of the marriage of that saintly superannuate of the Mississippi Conference, Rev. W. B. Hines, and his noble wife, who, as was stated in the ADVOCATE last week, have recently snffered heavy loss by fire. May God be very gracions to this aged conple in their feebleness and trials!

Presiding Elder T. B. Holloman writes from Jackson, Miss., as follows: "The preachers all at their works. New pastors have been loyally received, and both people and preachers are pleased in every instance. To date no charge has assessed below last year for pastors, and three have increased assessment. Work of district stewards is satisfactory, and all are planning to meet apportionments."

Mrs. R. K. Hargrove, General Secretary, writes ns that Mrs. Kate Blevins, of Rogersville, Tenn., has been commissioned by the Woman's Board of Home Missions to visit and organize Home Mission Societies within the bonnds of the Mississippi Annual Conference. She is a Mississippian, and competent for the work. We bespeak for her the hospitality and help of the pastors and people in her efforts for the npbuilding of our cause.

On last Snnday evening a very impressive memorial service was held in the new Crawford Street Methodist Church, at Vicksburg, Miss., in honor of the late Dr. C. G. Andrews, who for four years was pastor of that church, immediately preceding the pastorate of Rev. A. F. Watkins, the present incnmbent. The service was quite largely attended, as the Baptist and Presbyterian congregations united with the Methodists in thus paying tribnte to Dr. Andrews' memory.

In the Mississippi Legislature the Cox bill, prohibiting Snnday freight and excursion trains, has been defeated. Its defeat was dne to the intense and organized opposition of the railroad employees on the various lines of road in the State. The various organizations of condnctors, engineers, etc., had strong delegations present, who made a vigorons protest against the passage of the bill. As they were opposed to be the beneficiaries of the bill, their opposition was effective.

***

We regret to learn that the family of Rev. Robt. L. Phillips, of the Mississippi Conference, who is serving the North Kemper circuit, is suffering from a visitation of small-pox. They are at Porterville, Miss., while Bro. Phillips himself is separated from them on account of sickness, he having fallen ill recently with the same disease while absent from home filling an appointment. May God grant them speedy recovery! Bro. Phillips has not as yet been able to move to his new charge.

***

Upon a call of Rev. P. L. Cobb, of our Mission Rooms in Nashville, a meeting of persons specially interested in mission work was held at Jackson, Miss., on the twenty-third to call a Missionary Conference and prepare a programme therefor. It was decided to hold the Conference in connection with the State Epworth League Conference in Vicksburg. The date of the League Conference has been changed to May 3. The Mission Conference will convene May 2. An official notice will appear from the pen of Rev. W. T. Griffin.

Bishop Galloway's grand and touching eulogy, which we print this week on our first page, delivered at the funeral of our lamented friend, Rev. Dr. C. G. Andrews, would have appeared in our columns several weeks ago bnt for the fact that the editor-in-chief missed seeing the issne of the Nashville Advocate in which it first appeared, and did not know, until a few days ago, that the Bishop's remarks on that occasion had been thus fully reported. It is a fitting tribnte to the memory of a man of snrpassingly noble character.

The editor of the New York Christian Advocate is not to be gniled by the tricks and schemes of theater managers. We wonder if there are any "swallows" in this city of the kind he describes. Says he: "This is the season in which the theater managers are sending letters to ministers kindly asking them to accept the courtesy of seats for themselves and family, and intimating to the minister that the press in many instances has criticised the play as a skilifnlly masked temper-pledge of victory! This is the one sinful pleasure. I have heard of one

This is true, unless the bird be a swallow."

NORTH MISSISSIPPI NOTES.

In a personal letter "Gilderoy," writing from Water Valley, sends us the following notes, which we take the liberty of publishing:

"The preachers of this (the Grenada) district are all in place, all at work, and all doing well. Bro. Ramsey is in great favor with all classes in Grenada, and he is doing a fine work there. Bro. W. S. Shipman is doing a fine work here at Wood St. Every interest of the church is growing rapidly. Bro. Brown is doing well at Main St. His charge is prospering along all lines. Bro. S. M. Thames makes a fine start at Minter City. He is well cared for by that kind people, the kindest and most generous I ever served. He is cheerful and hard at work.

"Bro. T. W. Lewis has been sorely tried. His son died Feb. 3, and on Feb. 7 his double brother-in-law, Rev. F. A. Whitson, died. Bro. Lewis married Bro. Whitson's sister, and Bro. Whitson married Bro. Lewis' sister. I sat by Bro. Whitson the last five hours of his life, and watched and cheered him as he went down into the last river."

MORE RESPONSES.

We learn from the Treasurer of the Board of Missions that responses to the call of Bishop Candler for one thousand subscriptions of thirty dollars each for the Cuban Mission—a plan suggested by Rev. C. R. Scarborough, of Mifflin, Tenn.—is eliciting many responses. Several checks have passed through our own hands. Mr. T. Sharpe, of Home, Greene county, Tenn., wishes to take "a thirty-dollar brick" in the proposed building, and Mr. C. L. Hutcheson, of Roswell, N. Mex., is of like mind. Let others who have an abundance of this world's goods follow these examples. We must have at least $30,000 at once to put into a mission plant at Havana. Less than that will leave us unprepared to cope with the situation in any effective way. That it will be forthcoming we do not doubt. Our people have never yet failed to meet a grave emergency, and they will not do so now.—Nashville Advocate.

EPWORTH LEAGUE DEPARTMENT.

"ALL FOR CHRIST."

REV. THOMAS B. CLIFFORD, Morgan City, La. EDITOR.

MISSISSIPPI.

REV. HENRY G. HAWKINS, Madison, Miss., ASSOCIATE EDITOR.

We gladly give space to the following communication from Mrs. Mathis, of Columbus, Miss.

STATE LEAGUE CONFERENCE.

The time for plans and preparation for State League Conference is now on hand. It is the desire of the State officers to make this a practical and helpful meeting, especially to those Leagues and pastors desiring to know how to conduct the meetings. For this purpose each officer will conduct a kind of normal or sample meeting The assistance of the best workers is earnestly desired in this matter.

I am in charge of the Literary and Social Department. I am arranging some practical and helpful work along my line, but I am also a stranger in the State, and I don't know who to call on to carry out the work. Many can not attend who might otherwise assist us. Will the pastors over the State and League workers kindly send the names of persons who will attend the Conference and could assist?

The great elevating and saving work of the League must be made available at these State meetings if we would grasp the true League idea. What marvels of saving grace and soul-winning is within easy reach of the Literary Department when properly run! We want the plain, practical, heart-to-heart help of those who can and are willing to work. In my department I will tell the workers what I want done, if I can secure a sufficient number who will assist me. My plan is to have a League social, a literary meeting upon some appropriate subject, and a study on church history, and also a systematic Bible study, with charts and clay modeling, and a rapid summary of the reading course. Let us all go to the State Conference to get help and to give help.

All for Christ,

MRS. G. H. MATHIS,
Third Vice-Pres.

MISSISSIPPI STATE LEAGUE CONFERENCE.

Doubtless it will interest the Mississippi Leaguers to know that the State Cabinet has plans well in hand for making the sixth Annual Conference at Vicksburg, April 26-29, the most successful one in the history of the Mississippi State League. An effort is being made to follow the normal plan in this Conference, and make it as practical as possible. The vice-presidents and State junior superintendent have charge of the work under their respective departments, and are now busily engaged in planning for same. Dr. W. R. Lambuth and Rev. P. L. Cobb will direct the missionary department. Our secretary-editor has promised to be with us, and we are in communication with other leading men in Southern Methodism, and feel sure of their help also. Rev. A. F. Watkins is preparing to give the Leaguers a royal welcome in the historic city of Vicksburg, and we trust each League in the State will send a large representation. A feature of the program will be to conduct model meetings under each department of work, and what promises to be a most pleasing and enjoyable feature is the social meeting, to be held under the direction of Mrs. G. H. Mathis, of Columbus, from five to six P. M., April 26.

We earnestly request each Leaguer in the State to unite with us in praying for a gracious outpouring of God's Spirit upon our Conference. Let a volume of prayer ascend to the throne of our Father from day to day, from the hearts of Leaguers all over our State, for his presence with us, and then go to the Conference expecting great things from God, and those great things will surely come. Has he not promised, and is he not faithful to keep his promises.

VIC THOMPSON, State Sec.

Corinth Epworth League District Conference.

TO BE HELD MARCH 13-14, IN METHODIST CHURCH, CORINTH, MISS.

PROGRAM.

1. The Possibilities of the Epworth League in the Corinth District—Miss Maggie Tate, Olive Jones, Joe Babb, Jr.

2. How May We Best Organize and Sustain Epworth Leagues?—Miss Vic Thompson, Miss Julia Murry, W. J. Lamb.

3. What Religious Benefits May We Get from League Work?—Miss Laura Price, Miss Annie Harvey, M. T. Bynum.

4. What Does a Good Epworth Leaguer Mean to the Church?—Miss Sallie Kilpatrick, Mrs. Olivia Boone, Miss Ines Young.

5. How May Leaguers Become Co-laborers with the Pastors?—R. Copland, Terry Reese.

Says the Water Valley Itemizer, of Feb. 15: "An enthusiastic prohibition meeting was held in Grenada, Monday, Feb. 5, when resolutions were adopted praying the Legislature to pass a law prohibiting the sale of liquor in that county. This prayer is made not only in the interest of the homes and the boys and girls of the grand old county of Grenada, but also in the interest of the female college of the North Mississippi Conference of the M. E. Church, South—one of the best and most prominent institutions in State. The resolutions were placed in the hands of a committee to be presented to the Legislature. This is a strong committee of representative men, who will be certain to place their cause in the best and strongest light. This action was taken because of the continued agitation of the saloon men to have the devil done—the open saloon—again thrown open in that county. God grant that the committee may be successful in their cause before the legislative body, for it is certainly the proper steps."

AN OPEN LETTER TO MY FRIENDS.

I have located at Ellisville, Miss., and in a month's time hope to occupy a home of our own. I have accepted an agency to canvass for "The Life of Dwight L. Moody," written by his son. The publishers allow an unrestricted territory for canvassers. I will have the home to furnish, and other expenses, and will be glad, where friends want this book, that they will give me their subscription, and write me, and I will promptly deliver some time in March or April. Cloth binding, $2.50; full morocco, gilt edged, $4.50 Half morocco, marble edges, $3.50. I will try to visit as many towns as possible, but can not get everywhere in time to secure the field. I will, where needed, represent the NEW ORLEANS and Nashville Advocates. Where my ministerial brethren feel free to secure me some subscriptions, I will highly appreciate it.

ROBT. B DOWNER.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE BROTHERHOOD.

Section 6 of our By-Laws makes it my duty to appoint a Board of Managers of five members, whose duty it shall be to fill vacancies in offices that may occur, to whom all matters of complaint shall be referred, and who shall have power in the interim of the regular meetings of the Brotherhood to advise, direct, and control the affairs of the Brotherhood within the restrictions of the Constitution, etc. I hereby announce the appointment of the following Board of Managers for the Mississippi Conference Brotherhood, viz: J. A. B. Jones, chairman; E. H. Monnger, A. F. Watkins, L. Carley, and F. B. Holloman. W. B. LEWIS, Pres.

Yazoo City, Miss.

P. A. JETER.

Last year the Forest District Conference refused, by a large majority, to renew the license to preach of one P. A. Jeter, a local preacher and a stove repairer, because of his incompetence and inefficiency, and other good and satisfactory reasons. It has recently come to my knowledge that Mr. Jeter is still passing himself off for a local preacher, and signing his name to letters, "Rev. P. A. Jeter." At last accounts he was in Meridian, and had been at various points in Alabama. He is not a local preacher in the M. E Church, South, and his claims to be such are not true. T. L. MELLEN, P. E.

NOTICE.

To the Pastors and Leaguers of the Columbus District, North Mississippi Conference:

Please send in the names of all who will attend the Columbus District League Conference, to be held at Columbus, March 7 and 8, to W. O. Sadler, Columbus, Miss. This is very important.

We will expect all who can to arrive on Tuesday, March 6, and on Tuesday evening, at 7:30, the Columbus Leagues will give a reception to the visitors at the Methodist Church, with an appropriate program. Visitors will be met at the trains by a reception committee.

RICHARD A. McCURDY, PRESIDENT.

Is the oldest active Life Insurance Company in the United States, and the largest and strongest Company in the world. It is purely mutual—belonging exclusively to its policy-holders, for whom it has accomplished results in excess of those of any similar institution.

SINCE ITS ORGANIZATION IN 1843

It has paid to living members	$283,157,627 64
To beneficiaries of deceased members	204,591,282 42
Total paid to members, both living and dead	$487,748,910 06
And now holds for the security of its present members	277,517,325 36
Paid to and invested for its members	$765,266,235 42

THE POLICIES OF THIS COMPANY

are remarkable for their liberality, large guaranteed values, and entire absence of all technical terms, or brasses. Being practically incontestable, they provide a legacy and not a lawsuit.

Persons desiring policies in this Company can secure them from the Company's nearest agent, or if no agent is convenient, by writing to the General Agent, giving date of birth and stating what amount of insurance is desired.

DO YOU GET UP WITH A LAME BACK?

Do You Realize the Danger You are in?

Pain or dull ache in the back is unmistakable evidence of kidney trouble. It is nature's timely warning to show you that the track of health is not clear.

If these danger signals are unheeded, more serious results are sure to follow. Bright's Disease, which is the worst form of kidney trouble, may steal upon you.

The mild and the extraordinary effect of the world famous kidney remedy, Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases. A trial will convince anyone—and you may have a sample bottle for the asking.

Lame back is only one symptom of kidney trouble—one of many. Other symptoms showing that you need Swamp-Root, are, obliged to pass water often during the day and to get up many times at night, smarting or irritation in passing, brick-dust or sediment in the urine, catarrh of the bladder, constant headache, dizziness, sleeplessness, nervousness, irregular heart-beating, rheumatism, bloating, irritability, worn-out feeling, lack of ambition, loss of flesh or sallow complexion.

If your water when allowed to remain undisturbed in a glass or bottle for twenty-four hours, forms a sediment or settling or has a cloudy appearance, it is evidence that your kidneys and bladder need immediate attention.

In taking Swamp-Root you afford natural help to nature, for Swamp-Root is the most perfect healer and gentle aid to the kidneys that is known to medical science.

Swamp-Root is the triumphant discovery of Dr. Kilmer, the eminent kidney and bladder specialist. Hospitals use it with marked success in both slight and severe cases. Doctors recommend it to their patients and use it in their own families, because they recognize in Swamp-Root the greatest and most successful remedy.

If you have the slightest symptom of kidney or bladder trouble, or if there is a trace of it in your family history, send at once to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., who will gladly send you free by mail immediately, without cost to you, a sample bottle of Swamp-Root and a book of wonderful Swamp-Root testimonials. Be sure to say that you read this generous offer in the NEW ORLEANS "CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE."

If you are already convinced that Swamp-Root is what you need, you can purchase the regular fifty-cent and one-dollar size bottles at drug stores. Don't make any mistake, but remember the name, Swamp-Root.

Two Verdicts.

"After a fair and impartial trial you are judged guilty by this court, and you are sentenced to be hung by the neck until you are dead." The solemn tones of the judge, the despairing face of the prisoner, and the painful stillness of the court-room, makes it a scene of awful impress. Now turn to a brighter scene at the home circle. A mother radiant with joy over the recovery of a child snatched from the clutches of Malaria. An entire family rejoicing, and praising the merits of Dicks' Chillifuge, and giving their verdict that Chillifuge is without an equal for swiftness to cure.

WANTED—A CHANCE.

The world is full of heroes
Who have never tasted fame,
Because the chances needed
For their valor never came.

The woods are full of songsters
That have never charmed the ear,
Because when they have warbled
There has been no one to hear.

There is eke full many a poet
Who has never tuned a lyre,
Whom chance has left with naught to set
His gentle soul afire.

Would the silvery-throated diva,
Who sings but to entrance,
Have ever risen from the crowd
But for a lucky chance?

Would assassinated Cæsar
Still be known to men to day,
But for the opportunities
That tumbled in his way?

Would Napoleon the mighty
Have been emperor of France,
Had there not been combinations
Formed to open up the chance?

Oh, don't sneer at any fellow
Who just happens to be down;
A gust of wind might bring him wealth
Or lift him to renown.

—Cleveland Leader.

PUT IT IN WRITING.

How many people are living in poverty or wretchedness because they did not take the precaution to "put it in writing!" It does not matter that you have perfect confidence in the person with whom you are dealing. It is not always a question of confidence; it is a question of business, and the way to do business is in a business way. It takes but a short time to put a business proposition in writing, and often saves annoyances, lawsuits, bickerings, misunderstandings, and the making of enemies of good friends. People do not always understand a business transaction in the same way, but when put in writing, there is very little chance for dispute.

Always do business on business principles, no matter with whom you are dealing; whether with relative, friend, or stranger. It avoids disputes, losses, very unpleasant experiences, and often the straining, if not breaking, of friendship.

By this advice to put all business propositions of any importance in writing, I do not by any means endorse the maxims which are floating in the world, such as, "Keep your eyes peeled," "Look out for number one," "Have your eye-teeth cut," "Take care of yourself," etc. These are dangerous maxims. Do not start out in life with the idea that you must deal with people as if they were rascals.

What I wish to emphasize is the fact that, by taking a little pains when the terms of a contract are fresh in mind, serious trouble may be avoided. Parties with whom you deal will think all the more of you for being thus business-like. It is good practice to learn to write contracts out. In this way one learns to be systematic, careful, painstaking, accurate.—Success.

DON'T TALK OF YOUR ILLS.

"Everyone of us has his and her own ailments," writes Edward W. Bok in the December Ladies' Home Journal, decrying the unpleasant habit many people have of discussing their bodily ills. "It is enough for us all to keep well ourselves: to be compelled to listen to the ailments of others does not make that task any easier. Besides all this, these unnecessary narratives of personal ailments are positively injurious to ourselves. Physicians all agree that many of the slight illnesses, of which some people make so much, could be cured if they would but take their minds from themselves. Too many people work themselves into illnesses, or prevent themselves from getting well, by talking about a petty ailment, which, if forgotten, would right itself. I will not say that women, more than men, are prone to this evil. But as the majority of women have more leisure than the majority of men, they are more likely to let their minds dwell upon every little ill that assails them, and talk about it. It seems to me that one of the most important lessons we can all learn with the close of the year is to refrain from inflicting upon others what is purely personal to ourselves. Let us cease this tiresome, this inconsiderate, this unnecessary talk about our ailments. Cold and hard as it may seem, the fact is nevertheless true, and will ever remain so, that the vast majority of people are interested in what is pleasant in our lives, but not in what is unpleasant. Pains and sorrows are elements in our lives which are sacred and interesting only to ourselves."—Exchange.

THE RISE OF A BOY.

"Many a boy goes to business, and at his business begins by simply doing the things he is told to do, and doing them in a common and ordinary way," says Dr. Lyman Abbott. "If he stops here, he remains, all his life long, a drudge. But if he begins to see that business has a significance; that life is not merely sweeping the store, not merely writing letters, not merely selling goods; if he begins to see the higher life involved in business; if he begins to see that business is a greater instrument of beneficence than what we call beneficence; that trade is clothing thousands of men where charity clothes ten; that agricultural and milling industries are feeding thousands of men where charity feeds ten; if he begins to see how the whole industry of the world is linked together, and is God's way of building up humanity—and serving humanity—as he gets this larger view and enters into it, life is enriched and becomes itself the minister whereby love is enlarged and conscience strengthened, the school wherein he is educated out of the lower into the higher. He has now risen, or is rising, from that which is mortal into that which is immortal and eternal."—Penman's Roman Art Journal.

BEWARE OF MISJUDGING.

Perhaps it were better for most of us to complain less of being misunderstood and to take more care that we do not misunderstand other people. It ought to give us pause at a time to remember that each one has a stock of cut-and-dry judgments on his neighbors, and that the chances are that most of them are quite erroneous. What our neighbor really is we may never know, but we may be pretty certain that he is not what we have imagined, and that many things we have thought of him are quite beside the mark. What he does we have seen, but we have no idea what may have been his thoughts and intentions. The mere surface of his character may be exposed, but of the complexity within we have not the faintest idea. People crammed with self-consciousness and self-conceit are often praised as humble, while shy and reserved people are judged to be proud. Some whose whole life is one subtile, studied selfishness get the name of self-sacrifice, and other silent, heroic souls are condemned for want of humanity.—Ian Maclaren, in the Potter's Wheel.

It is said that the trend of reading among the young is more now toward history and science than toward fiction. This is a good symptom. Solid reading has been too long discounted. Fiction has its place, and in due moderation is valuable; but it is poor stuff upon which to build up character. Historical and scientific reading has a more tonical and educative effect, but even this is not enough. A wider course of reading is demanded, embracing the literary, the moral and the religious. Parents ought to see to it that their children get the best and choicest character-moulding, mind-informing and spirit-elevating books within their reach.—Presbyterian.

SCATTER SUNSHINE.

There are many lives that need the sunshine of sympathetic words and kindly smiles, and since they cost the giver so little and are valued by the receiver so highly, why not give them out each day? They will shine like jewels in your crown, and may help some discouraged one to take heart again.—Ruth Smith.

Every man, every woman, every child has some talent, some power, some opportunity of getting good and doing good. Each day offers some occasion for using this talent. As we use it, it gradually increases, improves, becomes native to character. As we neglect it, it dwindles, withers, and disappears. This is the stern, but benign law by which we live. This makes character real and enduring, this makes progress possible, this turns men into angels and virtues into goodness.—James Freeman Clarke.

TAKE NOTICE

That we are now handling two different styles of the Holman Bible in Bourgeois type. One we sell to paid-up subscribers at $1.50, the other at $1.30. The $1.30 Bible is substantially the same we have hitherto sold at $1.50. The one we sell at $1.50 is a far better Bible than has ever been sold at such a price. It is a marvel of cheapness. See our offer.

BOSTON DENTAL COMPANY.

Owing to excellent work and satisfactory prices, this firm has a large and constantly increasing practice. It includes among its patrons leading professional and business men.

A Small Beginning.

A little snow ball on the summit of the Alps, rolled up by the winds, moves slowly downward. Gaining in strength and size, it grows rapidly to giant proportions, and finally becomes the frightful avalanche, destroying everything in its path. Consumption begins with a little cough, a trifling pain, a passing flush on the cheeks. This is but the beginning of the avalanche, consumption, that knows no pity, recognizes no distinction. Just at the beginning thousands commit the error of not checking and curing the disease by using MARSDEN'S PECTORAL BALM.

A Serious Decision.

"Why CHILLIFUGE Won't Cure Chills"—is a question that brings to mind the story of a society of learned men formed for debating problems.

The question was presented: "Why a fish weighing ten pounds, put into a vessel of known weight, filled with water, did not increase the weight?" After hours of hot debate the fool of the club announced that it did, for while the debate had been going on he had tried the experiment.

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh that Contain Mercury

as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is tenfold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally, and made in Toledo, Ohio, by F. J. Cheney & Co. Testimonials free.

Sold by Druggists; price 75c. per bottle.

Hall's Family Pills are the best.

A successful business man says that he owes much of his prosperity to a lesson taught him by his employer. This man's principle was, "Do it now." Instead of putting things off, with the idea of attending to them "some time," he made it a rule to "do it now." Thus he was often in advance of his competitors, often in taking hold of a good thing, or letting go of an unprofitable one. This principle may be applied to the smaller affairs of life, as well as to the more important. The little things we ought to do, and don't do, worry us most. "Some time" they must be attended to, and the oftener they are brought to mind and dismissed again to that indefinite time, the more trouble they give us. Then, after all, we are often surprised to find how little trouble it is to attend to those things, and want somebody to kick us for not realizing it sooner. Happy is the man whose rule is promptness in all things.—Stockman and Farmer.

OBITUARIES.

Obituaries of 200 words published free. For all words in excess of that number send one cent per word.

TINNIN—LILLIAN OLIVIA, daughter of W. E. and Mrs. Luis M. Tinnin, was born March 26, 1897, and died Feb. 14, 1900, aged two years ten months and eighteen days.

This bright, beautiful and sweet-spirited child was like a ray of divine light sent down for a little while from heaven. After an illness of twelve days her pure spirit took its departure, that it might go and dwell with God. Her mortal remains were tenderly cared for and laid away in the cemetery to await the resurrection of the just. The Savior, who said, "Suffer little children to come unto me," will number her among his jewels, and she will shine as a star in his diadem forever.

To her sorrowing loved ones I would commend the gracious promises of God. Trust in these, and you will find his grace to be sufficient. You have a new incentive to seek a home in heaven. Olivia will be waiting and watching at the beautiful gate. "Now no chastening for the present seemeth to be joyous, but grievous: nevertheless afterward it yieldeth the peaceable fruit of righteousness to them which are exercised thereby." (Heb. xii, 11.) L. CARLEY.

BRELAND—BRUNER CLARENCE, son of Mr. and Mrs. Amazish Breland, was born Aug. 5, 1893 and died Jan. 24, 1900.

The illness which ended the life of little Bruner in this world was of short duration, as he was sick only about two days. Brief as was his stay here, yet he had entwined his young life firmly and tenderly in the affections of father and mother, and the grief of grandfather as he stood and looked for the last time upon the lifeless form of the dear little boy manifested more forcibly than words the deep sorrow of his heart. Some day, if the sorrowing ones shape their lives after the Master's, they will be permitted to see their loved one who has gone before to the home of "many mansions." May the Lord grant this bereaved family the consoling presence of the Holy Spirit in this time of sore distress!

H. B. VANUXEMBURG, P. C.

WARD—CORNELIUS WARD, Sr., departed this life Jan. 26, 1900, aged eighty-three years. In the death of this brother Methodism has lost an old landmark. For many, many years Bro. Ward was an active, zealous member of the M. E. Church, South. His home was always the preacher's home, and of his substance he freely gave to the cause of the Master.

Bro. Ward was a great sufferer for many months. Inch by inch cancer gnawed away on his strength until his physical manhood encumbed; but, thanks be unto God, he gave abundant evidence that his immortal spirit would find the haven of rest where sorrow, pain and death can not enter, and where "the ransomed of the Lord shall return, and come to Zion with songs and everlasting joy upon their heads." J. W. CAMPBELL, P. C.

GINN—SEYMOUR QUITMAN, son of S. Q and Martha A. Ginn, was born near Hopewell Church, seven miles south of Columbia, Miss., May 4, 1898, and died at the same place Feb. 4, 1900.

Little Seymour was the only son of his parents, which added to their sorrow. He was a bright, healthy child; he was sick only a few days. His father was absent on a visit, and his mother did all she could, but of no avail. When father came home his only son was dead. Weep not, my dear brother and sister, for he is happy with his Savior. You can so live and so train your other children to love and serve Christ that all of you may be permitted to meet little Seymour and his Savior in heaven. W. M. WILLIAMS.

GAREY—Mrs. M. J. GAREY was born Feb. 22, 1813, and died at the home of her son, Smithland plantation, Wilkinson county, Miss., Feb. 10, 1900. She joined the Methodist Church early in life, and remained a consistent member until the day of her death. For about seventeen months preceding her death she was a patient sufferer, but her hope being firmly anchored in God, her faith never faltered. She knew "whom she had believed, and was persuaded that he was able to keep that which she had committed unto him against that day." May the grief-stricken loved ones ever look unto God, the giver of all good!

WINE OF CARDUI

WOMEN WHO WORK.

ST. LOUIS, MO., Aug. 12.

Though only 19 years old, I suffered from pains and female troubles two years. Last spring I got so bad I had to quit work. I had to support myself, and could not afford a high-priced doctor. I got one bottle of Wine of Cardui and that made me feel better. Have now used several bottles and am well. My mother used the Wine for Change of Life and was greatly relieved.

MISS MARGARET WALSH.

McELREE'S Wine of Cardui

Many girls and women find it necessary to earn their own living in various kinds of employment. Their work is often so hard and confining that the health breaks down. Their delicate constitutions are unfitted for tiresome tasks. Weakness nearly always makes its appearance in the peculiarly delicate womanly organs. Constant standing on the feet, and coming and going at the beck of a superintendent or foreman, induces falling of the womb, leucorrhœa, headache and backache. The pay of women workers is often so notoriously small that when sickness comes they have no money to engage skillful physicians. To them Wine of Cardui is truly a blessing. It cures them of their ills at a small cost, and they can act as their own physicians. No doctor can do as much for "female troubles" as Wine of Cardui.

The "Combination" Bible.

A SUPERB EDITION

of the Holy Scriptures, showing at a glance at the foot of the pages all changes made by the revisers.

New Type. All Proper Names Self-Pronouncing. The Most Valuable Collateral Matter.

There is a steady and increasing demand for first-class Bibles. Everybody is anxious to obtain a copy of the best edition of the Holy Scriptures. Old editions are constantly being replaced by Bibles that are in every way more attractive, and there is practically no limit to the demand.

OUR "COMBINATION" FEATURE.

Hitherto the King James and Revised Versions have been printed in parallel columns, but this makes comparisons of texts tedious and unsatisfactory, and makes the book very unwieldy. We have overcome this difficulty by "combining" the two Versions on the same page, showing at a glance in foot-notes all the Changes, Additions and Omissions made by the Revisers.

THE OLD VERSION PRINTED IN FULL.

The King James Version is the basis, and this Version is read straight along from the text, while the Revised Version is read from the text in combination with the foot-notes. Our "Combination" Feature has met with universal approval and is strongly endorsed by leading Divines and Biblical Scholars.

It is only by a comparison of the two Versions that the greatest benefit can be obtained from reading the Holy Scriptures, and this comparison every reader can easily make by our simple arrangement for showing the changes made by the revisers. This is the greatest triumph of Bible Publishing the World has ever known.

OUR OFFER.

To those unprogressive people who do not read and pay for the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE we sell this Bible at the publisher's retail price—$4.25. To our subscribers we sell it at the very low rate of $2. The only condition attached to this offer is that the subscriber must pay his subscription one full year in advance, viz.: to March, 1901. We will send it postpaid to any person who will send us three new cash subscribers at the regular rate. For six new cash subscribers at the regular rate we will send two "Combination" Bibles, postpaid.

For fifty cents additional we will send a Bible with index.

For twenty-five cents additional we will have your name engraved in gilt letters on the outside.

Address REV. W. C. BLACK.

P. S.—We can give no commission on renewals in connection with the above offer.

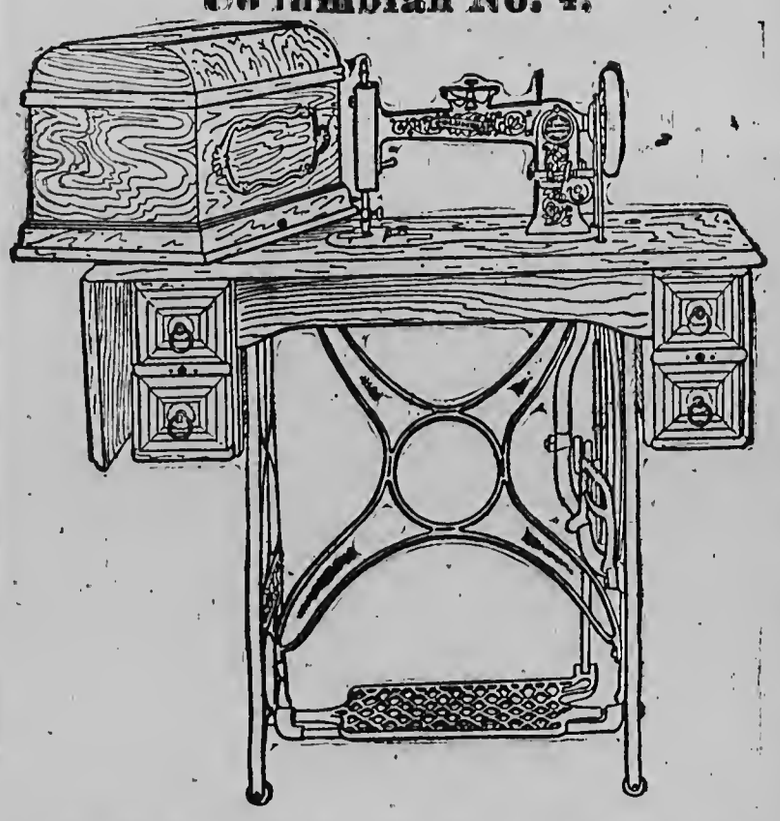
No. 4 Machine, drop leaf table, gothic cover, case of two drawers at each end and center drawer. Dealer's price, $25. Our price, $15 50.

No. 5 Machine, drop leaf table, gothic cover, case of three drawers at each end, making seven drawers in all. Dealer's price, $26. Our price, $16.25.

Furnished Free with every machine are the following named accessories: One Foot Hemmer One Screw Driver, One Wrench, One Oil Can and Oil, One Guage Screw, One Extra Check Spring, One Package of Needles, Five Bobbins and One Instruction Book.

Columbian No. 4.



EXCELLENCE OF THE COLUMBIAN.—All wearing parts are of case-hardened steel possessing great durability, and by the turning of a screw all lost motion caused by wear can be taken up. All parts are fitted so accurately that the machines are absolutely noiseless, and as easy running as fine adjustment and best mechanical skill is possible to produce. No expense or time is spared to make them perfect in every respect, as every machine passes a rigid inspection by competent men before leaving the factory.

NICKEL PLATED.—The balance wheel and many of the fine parts are nickel-plated, with other parts finely enameled and ornamented, giving it a rich appearance.

A Self-Setting Needle and Self-Threading Cylinder Shuttle are used in the Columbian High-Arm Sewing Machine. They are so simple that any one can easily operate them in a few minutes' time, as our Instruction Book is fully illustrated, showing how to do all kinds of fancy work with attachments.

Extra Attachments, in velvet-lined case, sent free with each machine: 1 Tucker, 1 Ruffler with shirring plate, 1 Hemmer set (4 widths) and Binder, 1 Braider (Foot and Slide), 1 Thread Cutter.

ADDITIONAL ACCESSORIES.—Each machine is supplied with the following outfit: 1 Hemmer and Feller (one piece), 10 Needles, 6 Bobbins, 1 Wrench, 1 Screw Driver, Oil Can with Oil, Cloth Guage and Thumb Screw, and a Book of Instructions. The Book of Instructions is profusely illustrated, and answers the purpose of a competent teacher.

No. 3—Drop leaf, Bent cover, case of two drawers at one end and center drawer. Dealer's price, $29. Our price, $17.

No. 4—Drop leaf table, Bent cover, case of two drawers at each end and center drawer. Dealer's price, $31. Our price, $17.75.

No. 5—Drop leaf table, Bent cover, case of three drawers at each end and center drawer, making a seven-drawer machine. Dealer's price, $33. Our price, $18.50.

The chief difference between Numbers 3, 4, and 5 is in the furniture—i. e., the number of drawers. If you do not want to pay for the extra drawers, you need not do so. We sell these machines under a ten years' guarantee, by which we mean that if any part gives out by reason of any defect therein, the manufacturer will replace the same free of charge. Moreover, we allow the purchaser to test the machine ten days. If at the end of ten days you are not satisfied, you have only to drop us a postal card, and your money will be refunded.

OUR OFFER.

We will send any one of the above-described machines at the prices named, and also send the ADVOCATE free for six months. The only condition attached to this offer is that subscribers who are in arrears must first pay up all arrearages to date. It would be well to avail yourself of this offer at once, as we can not promise that it will last very long. Notice that you take no risk whatever. We do all the risking. Address REV. W. C. BLACK, 512 Camp St., New Orleans.

P. S.—The machine will be shipped direct from the factory in the North.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

Infinenza is raging in Berlin.

Boer reinforcements for Cronje have attacked Roberts' outposts.

The Industrial Commission will make certain recommendations to Congress in regard to trusts.

The Boers aronnd Ladysmith are now subjected to artillery fire from both Buller and White.

The garrison at Ladysmith reports that 6000 Boers had left, trekking westward up to last Saturday.

A paper plant will be erected this year by the Baton Rouge Sugar Refinery, and paper will be made from bagasse.

Lonrenzo Marques has reports that the telegraph along Cronje's line of retreat to Bloemfontein has been cut.

Cronje is still unconquored. British advices say he would surrender, but the younger men in his army will not hear to it.

The Mississippi Capitol bond bill has passed both Houses of the Legislature and been sent to the governor for approval.

The Senate committee on commerce favorably reported a bill providing for a committee to visit Asia in the interest of trade.

The British surrounded De Wet at Petrusberg, east of where Cronje is surrounded. De Wet reports that he cut his way out.

It is said Great Britain has announced her purpose to censor official as well as private cablegrams sent to international representatives at Pretoria.

The black plague has broken out at both Kahului, on the Island of Maui, and Hilo, on the Island of Hawaii. Six cases of the plague have occurred at Aden.

Fire in St. Onen, a suburb of Paris, destroyed six warehouses, entailing a loss of 2,000,000 francs. One hundred and fifty people were more or less injured by falling walls.

At a meeting of the executive committee of the National Democratic Clubs, held in Washington, it was decided to hold the next meeting of the clubs at Indianapolis on Sept. 5.

Deputy Moriel-Hobert, who has been on trial before the French Senate charged with inciting soldiers to insubordination at the time of the funeral of President Faure, was sentenced to five years' banishment.

The Senate committee on military affairs reported adversely and postponed indefinitely Senator McEnery's bill to amend the bounty laws granting bounties to soldiers, sailors and their minor children.

The Boers' investment belt around Ladysmith is now but two miles wide, and Buller and White are almost in touch, but it is conceded that to wipe out that narrow line Buller must do harder fighting than he has yet done.

Andrew Carnegie called on the President last week. Carnegie was the largest individual contributor to the Republican campaign fund four years ago, and it is thought the President sent for him to talk over the political situation.

A fire, originating in a gasoline stove explosion in the Metropolitan Hotel at Birmingham on Friday, destroyed $180,000 of property. A number of persons had narrow escapes and one servant is thought to have been burned to death.

All the news from South Africa indicates that Cronje is apparently hopelessly surrounded, but absence of news of his seemingly inevitable surrender has given rise to the suspicion that he is resorting to a desperate method of covering the retreat of his artillery.

"FORTUNE FAVORS the brave." It is also favorable to those who purify their blood in the Spring by taking America's Greatest Spring Medicine, Hood's Sarsaparilla. A clear head and a healthy body are given by its use.

Constipation is cured by Hood's Pills. 25c.

A Lehigh Valley Railroad engine recently accomplished the feat of hauling a train consisting of thirty-three steel cars of 100,000 pounds capacity and thirty-seven wooden cars of 80,000 pounds capacity, each fully loaded with anthracite coal. The total weight of the seventy cars was 4567 tons.

The Howell-Herwig Republicans of this State experience great difficulty in indnoing persons to accept candidacies on their State ticket. In rapid succession their nominees have withdrawn their names as soon as they appeared, and the places of those who retired were filled with the names of other persons who as promptly and persistently declined the honors thrust upon them.

At the Cabinet meeting on Friday some time was consumed in a discussion of the personnel of the new Philippines commission. The Cabinet also discussed the situation in Porto Rico, with special reference to the issue of food to the destitute. The question of converting these supplies into money in some cases was also considered. The instructions to the Philippines commission were gone over at some length.

At the Capitol.

I am in my seventy-third year, and for fifty years I have been a great sufferer from indigestion, constipation and biliousness. I have tried all the remedies advertised for these diseases, and got no permanent relief. About one year ago, the disease assuming a more severe and dangerous forms. I became very weak, and lost flesh rapidly, I commenced using Dr. Mozley's Lemon Elixir. I gained twelve pounds in three months. My strength and health, my appetite and my digestion were perfectly restored, and now I feel as young and vigorous as I ever did in my life.

And now that the closing year of the century is so near there is announced "a hope of pardon for all Christian people." It is a great offer, and it emanates from the Vatican at Rome. Pope Leo declares that in accordance with a custom established by his predecessors, he proposes to throw "wide open" "the treasures of grace," and he declares that "during this year of Jubilee we grant and concede mercifully in the Lord a plenary indulgence, remission, and pardon for sin to all the faithful of either sex who, truly penitent and having confessed and communicated, shall piously visit the basilicas of the Blessed Peter and Paul, also of St. John Lateran and St. Mary Major, at least once a day for twenty days, consecutively or at intervals, according to natural and ecclesiastical computation." It will be observed that they who are to receive this wonderful "indulgence" must be in Rome, and must spend there at least twenty days, and so spend money as well as days. That will be a good thing for Rome, and the Vatican will get its share of it.—Journal and Messenger.

LITERARY NOTES.

BY W. F. B.

We are in receipt of Cram's Magazine, published at 63 Plymouth Place, Chicago, Ill., by Mr. Geo. F. Cram. The magazine is devoted to history, geography and current topics of the day. Among the more important articles in the February number will be found The Unchanging East, by Robert E. Barr; Some Transvaal Characteristics, by H. Rider Haggard; Expansion, by Dr. Eugene Murry-Aaron; The Far Eastern Situation, and Recent Archæology, by Israel Smith Clare.

In Scribner's Magazine, for March, the leading article of the number is H. J. Whigham's second article on the Boer War, this one dealing with the fights made by Lord Methuen's division in its progress from the Orange river to the Modder river. The third Cromwell, by Theodore Roosevelt, deals with the second Civil War and the death of the King. The chief battle described is Preston, and the most dramatic event is the death of the King. The Touchstone is a short novel by Mrs. Edith Wharton, author of The Greater Inclination. Other fiction in the number is the humorous story of a bishop, entitled, The Eye of the Harem, by Arthur Cosslett Smith; and another O'Conner story by William Maynadier Browne. There is also a naval sketch by the wife of a naval officer, Mrs. Edith Elmer Wood.

In Woman's Home Companion, for March, is a brilliant and beautiful piece for the pianoforte, entitled Dream Visions. Likewise the illustrated accounts of The Equipages of the Chief Executive, by Waldon Fawcett, and Social Life in the United States Navy, by Anna A. Rogers, are decidedly entertaining features on unhackneyed subjects. Dr. Newell Dwight Hillis contributes a masterly discussion of The Achievements of the Nineteenth Century, and Frederick Boyd Stevenson's advance information about the Indian exhibit at the Paris Exposition. Other articles in this number are Visitors to the Sick-Room, Broken-Hearted People. The Care of the Teeth appeal to everyone, but the feminine reader will find a long list of subjects particularly for herself, such as Child-Life in the Home, Dainty Caps for Babies, How to Give a Dinner, Easter Hats and Costumes, Laundering Shirt-Waists, Studies in China-painting.

THE LIFE OF MOODY.

The Rev. J. Wilbur Chapman, D. D., of New York, is engaged in writing the life of D L. Moody for John C. Winston & Co., Philadelphia. Dr. Chapman was one of Mr. Moody's most intimate friends, and was closely associated with him in his evangelistic work. He is Vice-President of the Bible Institute of Chicago, of which Mr Moody was President, and desires that this Institution shall receive a share of the profits from the sale of this book. The publishers promise that the work shall be profusely illustrated. It will also contain an introduction by the Rev. F. B. Meyer, of Christ Church, London, and personal reminiscences from others who were intimately associated with Mr. Moody in his work.

There is much said in the press, particularly in the religious press concerning the wickedness of a great city like St. Louis, but this question, like most others, has two sides. St. Louis has nine theaters, large and small, and over four hundred church buildings, with nearly a hundred organizations that worship in halls. Wednesday night, which, with most of the denominations, is that of the midweek services, is recognized by the railroad companies of the city as one of the best nights in the whole week for their business. These two facts of themselves are signs that the city has more of good than of evil.—St. Louis Advocate.

Liquor-Selling Would Be Ended.

If no Christian voted for a rum-seller or rum-drinker.

If no Christian patronized a paper that inserts liquor advertisements or defends the liquor business.

If no Christian went to a church whose pastor was not an aggressive worker for temperance.

If no Christian voted for any School Board that would not insist on temperance teaching in the public schools.

If no Christian were cowardly about the enforcement of the temperance laws we already have.—Christian Endeavor World.

The Presbyterian ministers of Atlanta are during the Winter preaching to the medical students instead of preaching on the streets, as in the Summer. The different medical colleges have been united into one, so that opportunity is thus more easily afforded of reaching all of them. One of the ministers preaches to them every Sunday afternoon at the medical college, the main lecture-room having been offered for this purpose. Just at present the students are much interested in the matter of foreign missions, particularly as it bears upon medical missions, and have organized a mission study class to study regularly the subject of foreign missions.—Nashville Advocate.

There is a suggestion in the following fact which we learn incidentally. A pastor conducting successful revival meetings had made a list of a large number of persons with whom he was to converse upon the duty of commencing a Christian life. But he found himself ill and confined to his home. Able to use his pen, he wrote fifty-six letters of frank and earnest solicitation. At last report forty of the number had become faithful beginners in the Christian life, and the minister confidently believes that the other sixteen will do the same.—Zion's Herald.

A Correction.

MR. EDITOR: I have just received the Minutes of our Conference, and note a slight mistake in the financial report of this charge. The Minutes read, "Assessed for Conference claimants, $34.32; paid $32.10." Should read, "Assessed, $32; paid, $32.10."

The Caddo circuit more than paid all of the Conference assessments last year.

I make this statement in justice to the people of this charge.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From Our Regular Correspondent.)

President McKinley, who was for many years a warm personal friend of the late Bishop Newman, was an attentive and appreciative listener to the eulogy delivered by Bishop Hurst at the Newman memorial service held in Metropolitan M. E. Church, the pulpit of which was so long occupied by Bishop Newman. Services were opened with a prayer by Dr. Bristol, the present pastor, and the benediction was pronounced by Dr. Wilson, of Hamilton, Canada. Bishop Hurst's text was very appropriate, "And there was a man sent from God, whose name was John." He said in part: "The two wings by which Bishop Newman soared to the exalted heights of his usefulness and power in this church were his well balanced qualifications as a pastor and preacher. He was a mighty expositor, yet his propositions would settle themselves in the convictions as worthy of the profoundest study, if not of complete and immediate acceptance. He was the Chrysostom of his day. Bishop Newman was an independent and original thinker. He was not a product of the times, but one who helped to fashion the times. He was one not waiting for a precedent, but one who made a precedent where it was needed. His influence will live in the impulses he has awakened and transferred through his hearers to multitudes who never looked upon his leonine, yet pleasing countenance, or listened to the flowing periods that issued from his lips. Men and women will have higher aims and ideals because of his life, society will be the gainer from the prolific fountain of moral and religious forces opened through his Christian courage and manhood, and the church at large will be more potent for the spiritual regeneration of the race through the fidelity and consecration of John Philip Newman."

The Woman's Home Missionary Society of the Washington district of the M. E. Church held a two-day Twentieth Century Rally this week at Hamline Church for the purpose of discussing various propositions, including how to get new members, how to get new subscribers to the woman's and children's home mission funds, and how to aid in securing $10,000 from the Baltimore Conference for a Twentieth Century Offering. All the propositions, after being discussed, were referred to a committee which will carefully consider and report upon them to a future meeting.

Rev. John M. Schick was last Sunday installed as pastor of Grace Reformed Church by a committee of the Maryland Classis, consisting of Rev. W. J. Stewart, pastor of the Reformed Church of Baltimore, and Rev. I. A. Motter, the former, who was ordained at the same time Mr. Schick was, preaching the installation sermon.

Col. Henry Watterson delivered his well-known lecture on Abraham Lincoln at the First Congregational Church as one of the regular Y. M. C. A. course. Postmaster-General Smith introduced Col. Watterson.

While no observance of Lent is prescribed in the Presbyterian Church, Dr. Teunis S. Hamlin, pastor of the Church of the Covenant, this afternoon delivered the first of a series of seven lenten lectures on "The Hebrew Prophets."

The Y. M. C. A. of Virginia, West Virginia, Maryland, and the District of Columbia, concluded their annual convention in Washington this week. One of the most interesting of the addresses made was that by Mr. Marrill E. Gates, former president of Amherst College, on the "World-wide Student Movement." The underlying purpose of the address was to emphasize the necessity for increased activity in foreign mission work. To show the growth of the Christian Movement in the colleges Mr. Gates pointed out that at the first Christian Conference of those interested in the movement, in 1877, only thirty colleges were represented, while 600 colleges had sent delegates to the last Conference.

A bill has been introduced by Representative Allen, of Mississippi, that should become a law. It provides that the number of chaplains in the army shall be equal to the number of regiments, those in the volunteer service to serve only the same period their regiments do. It would seem to be as little as a Christian government could do for its soldiers to furnish every regiment with a chaplain.

Mr. Ira D. Sankey, who for twenty-nine years was the traveling companion and singing assistant of the late Dwight L. Moody, was the principal speaker at two Moody memorial meetings held in Washington, Sunday—the first in the afternoon at the First Congregational Church, and the second in the evening at the First Baptist Church. In addition to eulogizing Mr. Moody, Mr. Sankey made a strong plea for the support of the institution of learning established by Mr. Moody at Northfield, which is to be continued on the same lines. Both meetings were largely attended. Mr. Sankey says that since 1870, when he began to sing in public, he has assisted at 11,657 meetings in this and other countries, and hopes to assist at many more.

Washington, Feb. 28, 1900.

CHINA: THE OPEN DOOR.

BY WALTER R. LAMBUTH.

At a meeting of the China Mission in Soochow, Oct. 19-24, after a thorough discussion of our entire educational work, it was decided to make the following recommendations to the Bishop in charge and the Board of Missions:

1. The correlation of the schools and mission into one compact system.

2. The establishment of the Soochow University—the central institution of the system.

3. The election of a Board of Trustees on the ground, consisting of nine missionaries.

4. The election of an Advisory Board in the United States upon nomination of the college of Bishops—the Board to include three members of the college.

5. The incorporation of the Soochow University under an act of Legislature of the State of Tennessee, with Chinese, English, Engineering, Theological, Medical and Law Departments.

The foregoing contemplates the union of the Anglo-Chinese College in Shanghai, under Dr. Parker, and the Anglo-Chinese College in Soochow, under Dr. Anderson, into one institution—an academy of high grade being retained at Shanghai to meet the demands at that point. An added commercial department in the latter will enlarge its sphere of usefulness, and strengthen its hold upon the business community of that great emporium. We will in this way lose nothing at Shanghai, but make a substantial gain. Buffington Institute under this plan will be returned to Soochow as the Theological Department of the university. The action of Bishop Wilson last year makes these changes possible since the purely beneficiary system has been eliminated, and a modified one looking to self-support introduced in its place. Opportunity is also given by the changes to remove the old Buffington buildings and replace them with more commodious ones adapted to the demands of the hour.

The members of the China Mission were unanimous in their advocacy of these plans, and Bishop Wilson, who has had more experience than any other in the administration of our work in the Orient, gives his endorsement and support to an educational policy which is the outgrowth of the work inaugurated while he was secretary of the Board of Missions. In a letter which awaited me in San Francisco the Bishop expresses himself in the following words: "China is the point of prime importance to us now. You saw the conditions, and, I doubt not, felt your blood stirred at the marvelous concentration of this world's forces upon her coasts. That God's hand is in it all we can not doubt. What the issue is to be no one can tell. But that all things move towards the establishment of his kingdom we must be sure, and it behooves us to take advantage of all openings and opportunities to hasten the result. You have seen the changed attitude of the Chinese—the better classes—towards us and our work. You know what a field we have before us in every direction, especially in the educational department. I am glad the Conference took the action that it did."

Bishop Wilson is right; China is moving. The conservatism of forty centuries is giving way. War, defeat and humiliation have been succeeded by reform. The young men of the empire have committed themselves irrevocably to progress. There is no turning back. Some have already laid down their lives for the cause they have espoused, while older men and high officials seek the counsel of the missionary, who, as Dr. Y. J. Allen has often put it, "is the teacher of China." At a time when every Chinaman distrusts his neighbor and fears his enemy, all classes turn to the missionary, who, for a century, has sought the highest good of the country. The American represents neither opium in trade nor option on territory, and the American missionary is the trusted friend of the Chinese.

Recent diplomatic events under the leadership of Mr. John Hay, our Secretary of State, have brought China under new and profound obligations to the United States. By the quiet and reasonable, but determined insistence upon the commercial rights within "the spheres of influence," he has secured from France and Russia the recognition of "The Open Door," thereby arresting the partition of the empire. This gives time and opportunity to qualify young men to take their places in every department of service. Over one hundred have gone to Japan and entered the Imperial University at Tokyo, an institution which unfortunately is animated by a rationalistic spirit. A few have gone to Europe, where they are not much better off. Two young men came with me to the United States, where they will enter the Vanderbilt University. Their coming into our midst is profoundly significant, in the light of the recent reform movements, and from the fact that they represent the highest and most influential families in the empire, their uncle, Sun Chia-nai, being the chancellor of the Imperial University at Pekin, assistant grand secretary and president of the Board of Civil Appointments, and private tutor to the Emperor, while their grandfather is the well-known viceroy, Li Hung Chang. But the expense of sending students so far for education is practically prohibitive, and the danger of denationalization from a protracted stay abroad a real one. The most thoughtful men of the New China have concluded that their sons must be educated on their own soil, and at this juncture turn to the missionary to aid them in working out the problem.

The most remarkable meeting I have ever attended was held in the home of Dr. W. H. Park the night before I left Soochow. Eight of the most influential men of that great literary center met to counsel with him, Dr. D. L. Anderson, and myself. Two were high officials in the city, one had been Literary Chancellor of the province of Hunan, and another was for years a member of the Tsung Li Yamen and Privy Councillor to the Emperor, while a fifth represented the silk filature and cotton factory recently established just outside the city. The presence of the latter in such company was unique as indicating the new order of things. These men spent two hours discussing the founding of a Christian university in Soochow under the auspices of our church. Not that they were Christians, but they had faith in the ability and administration of Christian men and missionaries. As a guarantee of their faith they agreed to secure a grant of public land, and pledged liberal subscriptions to the educational fund. Some of these pledges have already been made good, one gentleman, a patient of Dr. Park's, having given $1,000, and another $1,500. The Doctor writes that a total of $4,000 has been secured on the 25,000 Mexican dollars which they propose to raise on the field for scholarships as an earnest of their interest in and support of the projected institution. This is but the beginning of large and generous gifts when it becomes safe for wealthy men to avow their adherence to a more liberal policy of education as well as government.

In the meanwhile no time is to be lost. We must assume the responsibility God has put upon us. The making of an empire lies within our grasp. Opportunity never offered like this. We must enter the open door, or forever stand aside as unworthy of the wonderful heritage which has fallen to the lot of our China Mission.

It will require $50,000 to build and equip the university, and $100,000 more to endow it. The improvement of vacant lots belonging to our college property in Shanghai will, according to the estimates of the most reliable architects and contractors in the city, yield an annuity sufficient to meet the current expenses of the institution. Nor is this an experiment. St. John's College, of the Episcopal Church, has for years been endowed in this way.

The first amount is needed at once. Delay will be fatal to the success of the enterprise. The whole province awaits our action. In the name of our missionaries, Allen and Parker, Anderson and Park, who stand committed to this work; in the name of Bishop Wilson, who has given his strength to this cause, and in behalf of the redemption of China's millions, I appeal to the church to furnish us with the $50 000 within ninety days and the $100,000 by the thirty-first of December.

Appeals are being made all over our connection in behalf of the Twentieth Century Educational Fund. I would not divert one dollar from needy home institutions, and especially from the Vanderbilt University, which should be placed in a position financially to do the great work for which it was founded, but I would remind my brethren that Christly giving is unselfish, touching the rim of every continent and enriching the life of every nation. Your missionaries are building up an empire beyond the sea. Hold up their hands for Christ's sake.

LETTER OF ENDORSEMENT FROM BISHOP WILSON.

MY DEAR DR. LAMBUTH: Your statement and appeal for our educational work in China have my most hearty indorsement. If I could add emphasis to them by any words of mine, I would gladly do so. I would that all our people could appreciate the value and urgency of this great opportunity. Will not all the Annual Conferences follow the example of the few that have responded to the call of the Board of Missions and the Board of Education, and appropriate at least five per cent. of the Twentieth Century collection to this cause? Many of our members are rich enough to contribute generously in response to this appeal. If they could but see it as you and I have seen it, I am sure that they would give all that is needed, and that without detriment to any interest at home. We have a hundred presiding elders in our work who could raise one thousand dollars each in their districts for this work. Some could get even larger amounts. Are there not fifty, or more, who will do it? May God move them and all our church to "consecrate their service" to him in the prosecution of this vital undertaking!

Very truly yours,

A. W. WILSON.

Baltimore, Md., Feb. 23 1900.

CALIFORNIA LETTER.

I have thought to write this time of some new developments that are being made on this rim of our great republic. California is nothing if not progressive. From '49 on into the '50's "Gold! gold!" was the incessant cry. Stock-raising had, of course, been engaged in to a greater or less extent by the Mexicans, and was continued by the new-comers, but most of the land was considered worthless for farming purposes. Many an old settler has lamented the fact that he might have possessed himself, for a trifle, of land that is worth many thousands of dollars; but, regarding it as of no value, he let the opportunity pass, and is today in poverty rather than reveling in luxury, as he might have been. It is generally known, I presume, that this is now the second wheat-producing State in the Union, while it is a large producer of barley, oats, buckwheat, hay, etc., and takes the lead in the production of fruits, in quantity and variety. There seems to be no end to its development in minerals. It is the only State in which cinnabar deposits have been largely developed, the output being between 30,000 and 40,000 flasks of quicksilver annually. The most recent development in minerals is

PETROLEUM.

It was discovered a few years since in the vicinity of Los Angeles. Oil wells are numerous in the suburbs of that city. They abound also in the Santa Clara Valley of Ventura county. Some months ago oil was discovered in the Coalinga district in the San Joaquin Valley, and great quantities are being produced there. Recently in various other localities in that valley and in the Coast Range of mountains oil has been discovered, and the excitement is only second to the Klondike gold excitement. Much capital is being invested. As in the case of gold and silver mining, many worthless claims are located, and shrewd manipulators are inducing people to part with their hard cash in exchange for valueless stock. There has been some friction between miners and holders of government land scrip, the holders locating on land upon which the miners are operating. So far the scrippers seem to have the advantage. The output of petroleum last year was valued at more than $6,000,000—nearly half as much as the gold output of the State. This year it bids fair to equal in value the gold produced. And yet the price of coal oil is higher than a year ago. The refined article is controlled by the Trust.

The other industry of which I would speak is that of

BEET SUGAR.

This has been developed mainly by the sugar king, Mr. Claus Spreckels, of San Francisco. Sugar factories are located in certain localities on condition of a certain acreage being planted to beets. Several have been established at different places near the coast. The largest factory in the world is within three and a half miles of Salinas. It was completed last Summer, and has just finished its first season's run. The buildings are immense. Eight hundred men were employed. Its capacity is 3,000 tons of beets, producing about 450 tons of sugar per day. The cost of buildings and machinary was about $2,500,000. The sugar can be refined in the factory, but at present Mr. Spreckels prefers to refine it at his San Francisco refinery. About 175 000 tons of beets were used during the past season, producing nearly 25,000 tons of sugar. If the beets were at hand, nearly three times as much could be handled.

THE SUNDAY BILL.

The Sunday Bill to prohibit the running of excursion, extra and freight trains on Sundays, and also prohibiting work in railroad shops and on railroads on Sundays:

We wish it understood unmistakably that there are more reasons than one for the passage of the above Sunday Bill by the Legislature of Mississippi.

1. The chief reason is, that it is an ignoring of God's authority and an insult to his majesty for railroads to run trains, or to do work of a secular nature on Sunday, or for our State to allow them to do so to the extent she has the power to prohibit them. Our State is denominated a Christian State, and, therefore, acknowledged God's over-ruling power in the establishment of her Constitution when she said, "We, the people of Mississippi, in convention assembled, grateful to Almighty God, and invoking his blessing on our work, do ordain and establish this Constitution." [Constitution of Mississippi.] Before her legislative body begins its work of making laws according to her Constitution, it calls on Almighty God for his blessings and guidance, and, therefore, how can she afford to dishonor her God by not only allowing his Sunday law broken by railroads, but by breaking it herself? How can any State enact wholesome laws for her people when she ignores the laws of the great Law-maker, whose blessings and guidance she acknowledges she must have in her enactments?

2. Another reason for the above Sunday Bill is, that the railroad employees may be free men without jeopardizing or losing their jobs. I am aware that the plea was made in order to defeat the Sunday Bill that railroad employees were opposed to it. This is true of some who have easy positions, and most especially of those who care more for the almighty dollar than they do for God, but not true of one who desires to honor his God as he should; and really it is not true of many who are not in the least religious. I have not met but two railroad employees to whom I have said anything about the Sunday Bill but what were in its favor, and looked forward with strong hopes of its passage. Those railroad men who had more regard for themselves than for God, or for their fellow-men, had petitions circulated among railroad employees to sign against the Sunday Bill. Many of the employees, although they were bitterly opposed to Sunday work, signed them because they feared losing their jobs. Some did not sign anyhow, and their names were asked for and written down, and this conduct so intimidated some that they signed against the Sunday Bill and against their conscience. One employee especially, who had refused to sign against the Sunday Bill, and his name was taken down, wept like a child, saying he did not know what he would do if he lost his job, but still he could not afford to ignore the rights of his God. Last Summer the employees here in the shops were worked day and night, as hot as it was, and when Fall came many of them were suspended, and those retained for work were not allowed but eight hours daily to work, and occasionally were not called out for work at all on Saturday, and then called out in full force on Sunday. Frequently work that should be done on Saturday is put off for Sunday.

Well, I could write much, but this article likely is lengthy enough, and I shall try to write again soon.

"IT CAN BE DONE."

MR. EDITOR: The General Conference is the only Conference of our church in which there is an equal number of ministerial and lay delegates. This is well, since it is our only law-making body. But is it not necessary that the two elements be equally represented in every other Conference? Bro. W. L. Anderson, of the North Mississippi Conference, calls for equal representation in the Annual Conference. He says, "It can be done," and has begun to agitate. He has taken an advance step, and if he is right in the things he does not say, it is not at all strange that Methodism is so far behind other denominations in all things that go to make up a great church. Let him push his scheme. Let him agitate; and please let me help him.

The representation in the Annual Conference is out of proportion—perhaps about the proportion of four preachers to one layman. That is too bad. But if the thing is to be changed in the Annual Conference—Bro. Anderson says, "It can be done"—let us not stop there. Let us go further. The representation is not equal in the Church Conference. I know churches that have five hundred laymen and only one preacher (two, counting the presiding elder), besides two or three local preachers. Is that fair? Why not as many preachers in the Church Conference as laymen? The laymen can easily attend to the temporal affairs, but do they not need an equal number of preachers to assist them in looking after the spiritual interests of the church? We must agitate!

Then look at the Quarterly Conference—one preacher in charge, one presiding elder, and he not a member of it, and maybe from one to five local preachers to cope with twenty, or more, intelligent, but hard-headed laymen. Is that right? Can not everybody see that such a one-sided body is hurting the church, and that, unless relief comes in the shape of an equal number of clerical and lay members, death will be the result? Let us agitate!

The thing is not so ugly in the District Conference, but the disproportion is great enough to damage the cause. It will be fearful in a few years unless, instead of having four laymen to one preacher in the District Conference, the representation is leveled down and made equal in number. What a shame! And the traveling preachers are not even allowed a vote when it comes to electing delegates to the Annual Conference! We must, by all means, work out the laymen (it can be done) until they are reduced to a number equal to the preachers. The church will suffer on until it is done. Agitate!

Alas! Five Conferences in Southern Methodism, and only the law-making Conference is anything like fair in its composition, and the members, lay and clerical, have not sense and religion enough to order the others to equalize.

There is no telling what the next General Conference will do, but I am sure it will not act favorably on Bro. Anderson's memorial unless powerful pressure is brought to bear. Bro. Anderson must call on the "stars in their course" to fight for him. Men of Israel, to the rescue! Let us agitate! CUI BONO.

THE PASSION FOR SOULS.

Paul was specially zealous for his own people, the Jews, for to them had been committed the oracles of God, and he fully realized the awful results of their rejection of the Lord's Christ. But his zeal did not lead him to forsake the souls to whom the Holy Ghost sent him. A minister of the Lord Jesus must have a consuming love and zeal for the souls of his own parish, and especially for those who attend upon his ministry. These are his people, and he can enter into their life as no one else can possibly do. (Unless there is something wrong with either himself or his people.) A true pastor and a true church can see the pitfalls before the young, and their duty is always plain in such circumstances. This may be moral influence alone. Some preachers are content to speak in general terms against the evil practices of our day, and then conclude their work is done. The moral power of the gospel is great, but it does not rescue the lost. The divine Shepherd announced his mission to the Jews, "For the Son of man is come to seek and save that which was lost." The spiritual and moral work of salvation through Christ need to be emphasized together as the only hope for the sinner. Let us note some features of this great subject.

I.—THE REASONS FOR SOLICITUDE.

(1) There are many, no doubt, which occur to the reader, but only the most apparent will be noticed here. The lost condition of humanity. The great Apostle to the Gentiles, in the first chapter of his Epistle to the Romans, draws an appalling picture of human depravity, the lost condition of the race being the prime cause of his solicitude and passionate zeal for the salvation of man. All the millions of the unregenerate without God and without hope in the world! What a picture to contemplate! Was it not sufficient to overwhelm the zealous preacher of righteousness? Paul felt so deeply their need of the gospel that he cried out, "Woe is me, if I preach not the gospel." The Jews and Gentiles alike were prodigals away from God. He and other shepherds knew that they were divinely appointed to show them the way to God and heaven. There was not a multitude of gospel messengers; but there were millions of souls to whom the message must be carried speedily, or it would be too late. It is just so to-day! More men are perishing out in the desert of sin than ever before! Oh, what shall we do to rescue them? A father while out hunting with his little son became separated from him in some way. Probably the little fellow turned aside to follow some butterfly, or seek some flowers. In vain he sought to find his lost child, and returned home to get aid for a more extensive search. Every member of the family traveled up and down through those woods during the long night to find the dear little boy! Why such an effort from brothers and sisters? He was their brother, and they thus felt the awful danger of death hanging over the lost! So does every true member of God's family feel a deep and pathetic interest in our lost brothers and sisters.

(2) The false security of the unsaved. "Procrastination" in many things "is indeed the thief of time," but it is more—it is the cradle to rock souls to sleep! See the horse sporting with the approaching train, little heedful of the nearness of death, and you have an illustration of a lost soul facing death, all the while trifling with God and his gospel! The whisper of the winds will not awaken a dead or dying conscience. It takes the gospel trumpet, whether the ram's horn or the silver trumpet! The preacher of righteousness or some lieutenant must blow this trumpet at once, or he will perish, poor sinner, dreaming of heaven!

(3) The utter helplessness of the lost soul. No man of himself ever worked his soul into God's favor. He is morally and spiritually unable to do so. God sent his Son in response to the cry of human helplessness. The divine Helper of the helpless has called us to find the moral degenerate and bring the poor unfortunate sinner to him. Thousands are just as helpless in their unbelief as the more degraded in their transgression of God's law. Hear them cry, "Help my unbelief." We can but be solicitous for every lost soul, because of their impotence and their vaine to the Master. Though lost coins, the metal still bears the stamp of divine ownership; but, like coins, can not return without the aid of a friendly hand.

II.—THE NATURE OF THE PASSION FOR SOULS.

(1) We are all children in the Father's house of time. Our affection as God's dear children must forever forbid the repetition of Cain's question, "Am I my brother's keeper?" Hear Xavier as he prays in his room the night before he starts for a distant and difficult mission field, repeating over and over the strange petition, "More and more." When questioned as to the prayer, he explained that he had foreseen the perils and sufferings which would encompass him. While he mused these dangers seemed to rise higher and higher, to multiply in number and fierceness, as if to daunt his soul; but in his zeal and love for the heathen, to every vision of peril and suffering his intrepid spirit cried out, "More and more." Nothing is more soul-stirring than the yearning cry of the first great Methodist evangelist as he prayed to God, 'Give me souls, or take my soul." The heart of many a true servant of Jesus must have been deeply moved to read Dr. John G. Paton's recital of a native missionary's heroic devotion to his own savage people. Having preached Christ to the most vicious and degraded South Sea Islanders, they attacked him, and left him for dead. In due time he recovered, and at once desired to return and win his persecutors for Christ. Dr. Paton tried to dissuade him, but, with tears in his eyes, the brave islander exclaimed: "When I see those men trying to kill me, I see myself, when you came to these islands, and found me a cannibal, desiring to eat you, and you told me of Jesus and his love! Now I love my poor people, if they do want to kill me. I must go back." He went back, and soon received the martyr's crown. This love, however, is more than delight and pleasure.

(2) It is a heart burden. Paul, in his great solicitude for the salvation of his "kinsmen according to the flesh," said, "I have great sorrow and unceasing pain in my heart." Literally rendered, it means, "It is great grief to me and travail of soul without ceasing." Thus he entered into fellowship with the soul-agony of Jesus Christ, who said, as he entered Gethsemane, "My soul is exceeding sorrowful, even unto death." Every true soul-winner must catch the spirit of Jesus, and be burdened with the weight of precious souls. A Scotch woman, after hearing the saintly McCheyne preach a gospel sermon to sinners, said, "He preached like he was 'a dyin'." Oh, my brethren, we preach as dying men to dying men. Once this writer was engaged in revival work which seemed to promise no results. For nearly three weeks the dry bones did not stir. The church was apparently lifeless, and the membership evidently had not felt the importance of the revival movement. The pastor took deep thought on the sad conditions that prevailed, and a yearning for souls, which he had never felt before, filled his soul with a burden and his heart with pain. He neither ate nor slept until the prayer of faith brought relief, and souls came to Christ by the score. The church had been praying, too, and souls were born out of the travail of those days, who will be numbered with the saints of God on high.

(3) It is a burden laid upon the conscience. This is love in the heart transmuted into a keen sense of duty. No act of our life amounts to much unless it be a heart-throb of love, laid upon the conscience by the Holy Ghost, and thus prepared for expression in our outward life.

(4) It is the work of Christ through the Spirit. The burning love that Paul had did not arise while studying at the feet of Gamaliel, but when he received the Holy Ghost. He himself tells us that his life was not of himself; hear him: "Not I; but Christ liveth in me: and the life which I now live in the flesh I live by the faith of the Son of God, who loved me and gave himself for me." It was all of Christ.

III.—THE PASSIONATE PRAYER.

The grand old apostle to the Gentiles was a man of prayer, and his writings are full of the aroma of the secret place of power.

(1) In Romans x, 1, Paul prays an importunate and absolutely unselfish prayer for the unsaved among his own people, and in this petition he reached the highest point of true prayer. In his agony of desire and self-renunciation he cries: "For I could pray that I myself were anathema from Christ for my brethren's sake, my kinsmen according to the flesh!" It is much like the prayer of Moses for the children of Israel. Two strong souls were thus willing to be accursed for the sake of their people! Those prayers went to the depths! And does any one doubt that Paul's prayer will be answered in the final conversion of the Jewish world to Jesus Christ? John Knox prayed down by the wild Scottish shore, 'Give me Scotland, or I die." And the Lord gave Scotland to the Christ of Knox! John Wesley prayed often three hours upon his knees, and Wesleyan Methodism in all its forms and branches has honored the Christ of Wesley! "No wonder these men plead with God through night vigils in passionate earnestness for sinners! This is their supreme object in life and labor. God has never failed to give them the desire of their hearts, and he will never fail to grant conversions to all pastors who have their faith in God and their love for souls."

(2) A good and great man of the last century said, "Soul-saving is my business; God has given me a heart for it." All our ministry should feel this deep yearning for the lost. "This passion will feather every sermon and wing every prayer. It will burden the closet, the family altar, and the pulpit petitions. The passion for the salvation of men will be constant for their own sake. It will not be a spasm, an emotion kindled merely by some startling event, or by some graphic view of the value of an immortal soul." Prayer must be unceasing and constant as the needs of our sinful world, as deep and agonizing as love for Christ demands, and love for souls dictates. Lord, increase our love for souls! C. P. SMITH.

AFTER THIRTY YEARS.

Just thirty years ago this writer was here in Water Valley surveying the situation and trying to measure up to the altitude of sacred responsibilities, trying to tone up mind and heart and soul to the high endeavor demanded by a pastorate full of great opportunities. There was here then a vast field of possibilities; a congestion of humanity attracted by the advantages of a new and rapidly growing town. The great concourse of impressionable human souls ready to be vitalized by the living gospel into a living church was to the young pastor the opportunity of a lifetime.

Now, after these years I am here again in charge of a work, if possible, still more important—a work demanding more patience, more personal effort, more individual guidance. Here is a concentration of children and youth, each with the potency of a good life, or a failure. Their happiness or misery in the long years to come depends largely on the training they receive at our hands. To guide these souls, each into the individuality of a noble manhood, or a pure womanhood, is a work than which none is more sacred. A work which demands the broadest wisdom, the ripest judgment, the truest, most discriminating thought—aye, the intuitive faculty by which the formative sources of character are discerned in their very beginnings. One constantly needs the kaleidoscopic discernment which dictates action in the myriad phases of ever-changing duty. The mind that was in Jesus, the living presence of the Holy Spirit, is the crowning preparation for a work like this. O for "the wisdom that is from above, first pure, then peaceable, gentle, easy to be entreated, full of mercy and good fruits, without partiality and without hypocrisy!"

What changes are implied in the lapse of thirty years! The new straggling town among the hills has put on the staid proportions of a young city. The water-works, with the huge stand-pipe towering above all else; the great power-house sending the electric lights in all parts of the city; the busy shops, never resting even on Sunday; the cotton mills and other smaller industries give an air of busy thrift. The schools are the pride of the town. The graded school here is one of the best in the State. Then here is Hamilton College, giving finish to the young womanhood of the place.

The busy pastors and working churches are doing more than all else to elevate and purify public sentiment. "Gilderoy" is circulating like a commanding general through the ranks of our Methodism. Bros. Shipman and Brown are doing noble work. A pleasant Rookery in the vicinity is the center of activity for the tribes of Israel in the regions round about. The Methodist Churches here are well manned and the prospect is encouraging. But the changes in the population is to me the saddest feature of the situation. The old guards are nearly all gone. Only a sentinel here and there. Many of the old families are here still, but represented mainly by a younger generation. Here are the Manidens, the Wests, the Bodleys, the Addingtons, the Rogers, the Hendricks, the Gaffords, the Morgans, the Lawshes, the Stevens, the Whiteheads, and others too numerous to mention, whose parents co-operated with me in building up a church which for a generation has stood for all the best principles of our Methodism.

We are glad to be able to say to the friends of the Home throughout the State that we are doing fairly well. The children are generously, but not extravagantly fed, and comfortably clad. Above all, they are earnestly taught. Next religion and morality we emphasize the importance of mental culture. In addition to the regular school, which is conducted according to the most approved methods, two evenings in the week are given to mental improvement. Then the industrial feature is kept prominent. The children are taught the useful arts of civilized life. The boys get wood, attend to the stock, work in the garden and field. The girls learn the high art of manipulating the kitchen and dining-room, to make and mend clothes, and to look after the details of housekeeping. Miss Bert Longmire is the housekeeper; Mrs. Annie Oliver Jones has special charge of the girls and smaller children; Miss Charlie Harrison is the teacher. Each in her sphere is a host, and under their direction the work moves on smoothly.

The old year, with its hopes and fears, successes and failures, has been sealed and laid away by the recording angel until it is brought forward to confront us at the judgment bar. Are we willing to be judged by the year's work?

Ah! the soul grows sick in contemplating the many broken resolutions, the host of neglected opportunities, and the innumerable seasons of actual indifference during the past. We would sink under the hopelessness of the situation if we did not know that the Christian's duty is "to leave the things which are behind and press forward."

The Christ whom we slighted last year is a living Savior. He did not die with the old year, but is still at our side, and "He upbraideth not." "Lo, I am with you alway." Not "was" with you, nor "will be" with you, but "is" with you. He is in the church, in our homes, in our hearts, and he loveth and careth for us "always." If we will accept his guidance, the Holy Spirit will lead us by a better way than we have ever known into every opportunity for good. Yes, we will be guided into the duty of the day and hour.

I think the weight which often discourages us is the sense of great obligation—the whole load of responsibility. We make a mistake in crowding the duties of to-morrow into the hours of to-day. May we not learn a lesson from the anxious farmer who embitters the glad Spring-time by such gloomy thoughts of the Summer's possible drouth that he sinks under the weight of the whole year's work, while his plow rusts in the furrow? Or the industrious, but unwise house-wife, who exclaims Monday morning, "To-day, the washing; to-morrow, the ironing; next day, the baking—the week half gone, and I am too tired to even begin work?"

Just strength for to-day, is all we need ask for, and this we receive for the simple asking.

We have gained a great point when we realize that we are placed in life just where the Master wants us, and where we can best serve him. The question which springs, then, is, "Lord, what wouldst thou have me to do?" and the answer comes before the asking, "What the hands find to do" "with thy might."

"God broke our years to hours and days,
That hour by hour, and day by day,
Just going on a little way,
We might be able all along
To keep quite strong.
Should all the weight of life
Be laid across our shoulders, and the future, rife
With woe and struggle, meet us face to face
At just one place,
We could not step, and so
God lays a little on us every day,
And never, I believe, on all the way
Will burdens bear so deep
Or pathways be so threatening and so steep,
But we can go, if by God's power
We only bear the burden of the hour."

The new year stands before us. Shall we not try to remember, day in and day out, that Christ is with us—a living Presence! Shall we not mark this good year with more faith, more work, more zeal for sake of our loving, living, present Helper! Shall we not attend more faithfully to the duties of each hour, at home, in the church, in the missionary meeting! Ah! the missionary meeting! We may be faithful home-makers, consistent church-goers, but what of the one little missionary hour which has been set apart to bring our souls in unison with the Savior's yearning heart toward the "inheritance" which he bids us bring to his feast! Shall we not feel constrained to find time, to make time in our busy lives for lending an ear to the millions who are waiting—waiting for the Bread of Life!

As members of the Missionary Society let us begin and continue this year with more faithful service. If we lack zeal, let us ask it of the ever-present One, who will lead us into all truth.

NEVER THIS WAY BEFORE.

"Ye have not passed this way heretofore." We are all continually entering upon fresh paths, which really afterward turn out to be old ones in a new form. Religious experience moves by crises. We might remember that Israel had, not many years before, gone across this same desert, and been turned abruptly back to Sinai again, because of rebelliousness in their will. Now they were to go into Canaan, but by another route altogether.

We are always commencing new enterprises. We start new business undertakings; we adopt new professions; we choose new localities; we build new dwellings, and inhabit new homesteads.

We are always beginning new experiences. Joys come suddenly, and sorrows fall without any notice beforehand. We are summoned again and again to gird ourselves up to some fresh endurance. None of us can escape new decisions, on which our after life must turn.

We are always entering upon new periods of time. Anniversary days mark the recurrence of events, and afford opportunities for reflection. Birthdays and deathdays are full of meaning.

What we ought to remember is the undoubted fact that in the twelvemonth to come we shall find ourselves traveling over pretty much the same route we went last year. There will not be anything extraordinary surprising; differences will be in the details.—C. S. Robinson, D. D.

There is an unspeakable healing in prayer. There is that pulse of life and throb of power about it that is inexplainable. It is only the soul's sincere desire, uttered or unexpressed. A key to the commissary of glory, the prerogative of an humble penitent at the foot of the cross. It is the breath of weakness, the Christian's native air. Overpowered with feebleness to explain, we are ofttimes confronted with its peculiar manifestations. Men lie down exhausted, and out of the store-house of nature strength creeps into them while they sleep. The faded pearl regains its freshness if immersed in the sea, and the dimmed opal its beauty if hidden in the dark. A sickly plant, lifted from the cold clay near a wall, springs into new life if placed in the rich loam of a sunny garden. A wheel revolving amidst coiled wires gathers measureless electrical force from the atmosphere. If thus in nature there creeps in an indescribable healing, is it incredible that a man wrestling in prayer should break into some secret of strength, or draw his soul into a new energy? From this battlefield the soul must always come, as with the radiant face of a conqueror.—J. M. Nichols.

Love, the true love of God, is the love of his truth, of his holiness, of his whole will; the true love is that which reflects itself in obedience; the true love is that which stirs and purifies the conscience—Vinet.

Chief Justice Jay, when asked if he wanted to leave any advice to his children, replied, "They have the Bible."

AN ANSWER TO J. M. WEEMS.

I see a very severe criticism of Dr. Sheldon in this week's ADVOCATE, about his presuming to undertake to run a daily paper as Jesus would run it. Now, I do not suppose that Dr. Sheldon makes any pretentions to infallibility, but merely to run the daily paper as he thinks that Jesus would run it were he on earth at this time. Didn't Jesus use every means (in that day and time) to spread the news that God so loved the world that he had given his only begotten Son, that whosoever would believe in him should have everlasting life? Yes, he even sent John the Baptist as a forerunner to proclaim the glad tidings that our blessed Savior had come into the world to redeem fallen man, and we find that that same Savior said, "If any man will come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross and follow me." (Mat. xvi, 24.) Surely that means to follow in his footsteps, not in only one thing, but all through life in our every-day walk, and act and do as near like Jesus as it is possible for mortal man to do. He told all of his disciples to follow him. How was that? Teach the world to follow me. "Go ye into all the world"—and what for?—"to teach them to walk in that narrow way that leads to life." "I am the way and the life." How shall we get in that way? By living and acting as near like Jesus as it is possible for mortal man to do or live. Jesus taught us to pray and not to trust in ourselves or any good works (by God's grace) that we were permitted to do, but to give all honor and glory to God. Which I have no doubt Dr. Sheldon proposes to do, and if he does not, his work will be a failure as far as the spiritual part is concerned. John says: "He that saith he abideth in him ought himself also to walk even as he walked." (I. John ii, 6.) If that does not mean in his footsteps, what does it mean? If Dr. Sheldon is walking in his footsteps, he is spending a great deal of his time on his knees right now, imploring Jesus to assist him in his great undertaking, and if he succeeds in casting out devils in Jesus' name, shall we forbid him merely because he follows not us, or does not act just as we do? Surely we all need something to put us nearer in Jesus' footsteps than we are now. If Dr. Sheldon's plan is not of God, it will come to naught. May God help everyone of us to walk more like Jesus, for as the body without the spirit is dead, so faith without works is dead!

Glances at the Minutes of the North Mississippi Conference of 1899.

I see that 143 pastors received $69,552—an average to each, if proportioned, $486 30. Of this $69,552 one received $1500; two, $1200; one, $1100; seven, $1000; three, $900; six, $800; sixteen, between $650 and $750; twelve, between $550 and $650; twenty-two, between $450 and $550; twenty-three, between $350 and $450; twenty-one, between $250 and $350; nineteen, between $150 and $250; ten, between $50 and $150. Also that 12 charges overpaid, 40 charges paid out, and 91 charges were behind. Looking further, I see that pastors who were not paid in full, as a rule, were least able to stand the shortage.

Brother stewards, were any of these deficits our fault? Let us look into this vital question, and see that they do not occur again in 1900. Surely "the laborer is worthy of his hire."

itnal. The court-house services were attended by from 300 (in bad weather) to 700 people (when conditions were more favorable). The night services were composed of songs, prayers, exhortations, and the most fearful denunciations of sin that this writer ever heard. The preacher took a daily census of his congregations, and thereby kept well up with the Spirit's work. Protestantism has received an uplift, and secured a recognition which makes it a potent factor in all things moral in that old town.

In his chariot of triumph Bro. Strouse harnessed two thoroughbred studs—religion and prohibition—which he drove to success.

Before the meeting closed a saloon proprietor started a petition "against liquor," which was endorsed by a majority of all the voters of the corporation, including a majority of the members of the town council.

Two days after the close of the meeting the Police Jury ordered an election throughout the parish, to take the sense of the voters as to the prohibition of the sale of liquor anywhere in the parish.

During the early stages of the meeting Bro. Strouse called for "all who have repented and given up every sin, and are trusting in the Lord Jesus for salvation, to stand up." Seven arose.

On Sunday morning (the last day of the meeting) the same proposition was made, and ninety-six stood up.

Bro. Strouse is thoroughly Arminian in his doctrine, and lays every possible emphasis on regeneration. He preaches for conversions, and raises a high standard of piety. If all evangelists were like Clarence B. Strouse, I would pray for a supply of them. He is plain, and at times seemingly rough; but love so dominates his being, tenderness is seen in all of it.

The fruit of the meeting has been gathered only in part, and, as much of his work was among Catholics, there will not be that large accession to the Protestant Churches that would follow in a community not wholly dominated by Roman Catholic traditions.

Seven adults—among them two lawyers—joined our church.

"Heaven and earth may pass away," but the memory of Strouse's meeting in Marksville will abide forever. The Lord was in it.

THE PEACE OF JESUS.

Some people are apt to belittle the peace of Jesus because they have peace of life. They have had no bitter disappointments, no cruel wrestles, no crushing afflictions, no fiery temptations. The world has dealt kindly by them, and they have fitted into their environments. Moments there are when the sailors of the deep envy those that sail in the smooth sheltered waters because they have not been driven to and fro on stormy seas and been in danger of the turgid swells. Other moments the sons of tribulation pity those unfortunates who have never seen the great billows lie down as a dog chidden by his master and God turn the storm into a calm.

One-half of the Bible is a closed book to them that sit at ease because only a pierced hand can open the pages. The promises are for them whose hearts are sore; the invitations are to them who hunger. Jesus' peace was the best of all gifts to that handful of broken men in the upper room, whose first stay would be in the darkness, but it may not seem any great thing to the favorites of this world.

Yet it is not wise for any one to make too much of an outward peace, dependent on health of body, and the goods that are kept in barns, and the suffrages of the multitude, which to-day cries, "Hosanna," and to-morrow, "Crucify," and on the whims of fickle, selfish people. Let a man be as far-seeing, accommodating, politic, unscrupulous as may be, he can not hope always to escape disaster, for this peace is as uncertain as the lovely Mediterranean. One day you look out through the motionless foliage on a still expanse of blue, and the next morning the orange blossom is strewn upon the ground and the spray is dashing on your garden wall. "As the world giveth."—Ian Maclaren.

Genuine simplicity of heart is a healing and cementing principle.—Edmund Burke.

FROM THE WORK.

SOUTH BOSSIER CIRCUIT.

I reached this work the Thursday before Christmas, and have from that time to the present been trying to make full proof of my ministry, and not without good results. The prospects are for a very successful year's work along all lines. We have had a number of accessions to the church; have reorganized two of the three Sunday-schools; have 3 weekly prayer meetings regularly held by laymen. I am now taking up the Conference collections, and from present prospects they will be in full. We are now in the midst of a protracted meeting at Haughton. I have had Rev. C. F. Staples with me. It is needless to say that he did good work.

I found this work in excellent condition. My predecessor, Rev. H. J. Boltz, is a faithful workman and is not too wise to work as the church directs. He knows how to use the machinery provided by the General Conference, and it is evident that he "keeps and does not mend our rules." I found here the cleanest parsonage it has ever been my good fortune to move into.

ANOTHER STROUSE MEETING.

Marksville, La. (Simmesport and Marksville charge), has been aroused as never before. On Friday, Feb. 9, Rev. C. B. Strouse began a series of meetings, preaching in the court house at night, and in our church-house in the afternoon of each day, for ten consecutive days. The afternoon meetings were well attended, and were intensely spiritual. The court-house services were attended by from 300 (in bad weather) to 700 people (when conditions were more favorable). The night services were composed of songs, prayers, exhortations, and the most fearful denunciations of sin that this writer ever heard. The preacher took a daily census of his congregations, and thereby kept well up with the Spirit's work. Protestantism has received an uplift, and secured a recognition which makes it a potent factor in all things moral in that old town.

The farmer's wife who raises chickens, knows that they must have food enough first to satisfy bare hunger, then enough more than that to make flesh and fat before they will begin to lay. In plain words you've got to put into the hen in the form of food what you get out of it in the shape of eggs. An ill nourished hen lays no eggs. The difference between the farmer's wife and her chickens is that she fancies she can take out of herself in daily cares and toils what she does not put back in the form of nourishment for nerve and body. But she can't. Sooner or later the woman who tries it breaks down.

The warning signs of physical breakdown are, among others, headache, weak stomach, flatulence, pain in side or back, difficult breathing, palpitation of the heart. These are only some of the indications of a derangement of the stomach and organs of digestion and nutrition. The one sure remedy for this condition is Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, which strengthens the stomach, purifies the blood and nourishes and invigorates the nerves.

Mrs. Martha E. Barham, of Newville, Prince George Co., Va., writes: "I commenced to take Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery in June, 1897, also his 'Favorite Prescription,' and I cannot express the benefit I have received from these medicines. I was suffering with what the doctors called chronic indigestion, torpid liver and vertigo. The doctor did not do me any good. My symptoms were giddiness in head, pains in chest and an uneasy feeling all over. I also suffered with female weakness. I was all run-down and could not do any work at all without suffering from nervous attacks, so I wrote to you for advice. You advised me to use Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and 'Favorite Prescription.' When I commenced to use the medicines I weighed only 112 pounds, now I weigh 140 pounds. I thank God and Dr. R. V. Pierce for my recovery."

In California.

The Golden State is seriously considering the necessity of quarantining against consumptives. This means that God's fresh air and sunshine, nowhere more entrancing and beautiful than on the Pacific slope, may be denied to the unfortunate sufferers. Thousands have been greatly benefited and many cured by the delicious atmosphere of California, and it appears a most cruel measure, even though sanctioned by medical. Many persons now in the advanced stages of consumption, and surely doomed, could have been cured by early resort to that most gracious healing remedy, MARSDEN'S PECTORAL BALM.

Beef Steak in a Bottle.

That fresh, juicy beef, ready for digestion, can be made into a delicious cordial is a marvel, but chemistry has accomplished it. Sick people at a distance from markets and needing the nourishment afforded by beef tea can procure Dicks' NUTRITIVE ELIXIR and find it the best liquid food and stimulant known. For loss of appetite, weak digestion, debility, typhoid fever, and consumption it is invaluable.

"AN EXCEPTIONAL COURTESY."

Ministers in the Protestant Episcopal Church, as a rule, are too proud and exclusive to think of recognizing in an official way ministers belonging to other communions. Arrogantly claiming to belong to the "only true church," and looking on other churches merely as sects, they are noted for the lack of genuine catholicity, and for the most part absolutely ignore the work and claims of other denominations. Now and then, however, a clergyman of broad mind and true fraternal spirit is discovered among the representatives of this pretentious church. The Texas Advocate contains the following editorial mention of "an exceptional courtesy" recently extended to Bishop Joyce by an Episcopal rector:

"We spent last Sunday in Marshall and saw it announced that Bishop I. W. Joyce, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, would deliver a missionary lecture or sermon at night in the Trinity Protestant Episcopal Church. This was something new under the sun in Texas, and so we determined to go out and witness that strange sight. So we did. The Rev. T. W. Jones, the rector, was in the pulpit in his robes, and along-side of him was the old Methodist Bishop in his plain black clothes. The contrast was superlatively refreshing, and we felt very much at home. The rector conducted the preliminaries according to the rules of the church, and then, in very befitting language, introduced the venerable Bishop to the audience. He spoke for more than an hour, in which time he gave many graphic accounts of the progress of the gospel in heathen lands. At the close of his address he thanked the rector for the courtesy of the invitation, and pronounced the benediction. We congratulate the Protestant Episcopal Church in Texas in having one rector who is large enough to set aside a ridiculous rule, and invite a Methodist Bishop into his pulpit. The Methodists in the State do not stand in need of such courtesies, and they are not specially benefited by them; but the Episcopal Church needs them, and their occasional extension would greatly benefit that communion."

Bishop Galloway was the recipient of a similar courtesy from an Episcopal rector during his visit to Brazil a year or two ago, and in his letters home made most felicitous reference thereto.

In Virginia, too, it is not altogether uncommon for Protestant Episcopal ministers to fraternize thus with those of other churches; but in this section the advocates of "high churchism" entertain the silly conceit that to recognize Methodists, Baptists, Presbyterians, and such like, would be a ruinous (?) compromise of the honor and dignity of the Episcopal Church, which, according to their position, has a sort of patent and exclusive right upon the Christian ordinances and upon divine grace. Thank God, neither truth nor the Holy Spirit are thus to be monopolized!

Methodism has long ago passed the day when she needed recognition from such a quarter. Her splendid achievements abundantly vindicate the rightfulness of her claim of divine authority and scriptural warrant in the work of evangelizing the nations. But while this is true, we rejoice at every indication of the growth of fraternity among the churches, and can not help thinking what a pity it is that the Protestant Episcopal Church does not contain more men of the Phillips Brooks' type and spirit. Not until Episcopalians abate some of their exclusiveness and arrogant airs can they hope that their plea for "church unity" will excite anything but ridicule.

AN EXTRAORDINARY OPPORTUNITY.

We invite special attention to the article on our first page by Dr. Lambuth, one of our Missionary Secretaries, who has just returned from a trip to China and Japan, and is thoroughly informed as to the situation in the East, especially as regards the unparalleled opportunities that China now offers to the churches of America for educational and mission work. On account of the friendly attitude of our government toward China, and our non-participation in the land-grabbing schemes of the European nations, the Chinese feel more kindly disposed toward our missionaries than to those of any other country. Hence failure to follow up this splendid advantage would be shameful in the extreme.

The correlation of our schools and mission in China into one compact system, as is now contemplated, if accomplished, will mark a grand stride forward. Could anything be more encouraging or inspiring than the liberal offers recently made by several of the most influential men of Soochow in behalf of the establishment of a university in that city under the direct auspices of our church? Surely Southern Methodists will not be content to let such a golden opportunity go unheeded. The better equipment of our schools at home is one of the greatest needs of the hour, but the enlargement and strengthening of our educational work abroad is even of more supreme importance.

Thousands of dollars are wasted every year by our members on superfluities and sinful follies. During this closing year of the century, when we are planning to do greater things for God and for humanity, let us, one and all, prayerfully guard our expenditures, that we may have wherewith to respond to the providential calls that are coming to us.

A DELIRIUM OF JOY.

When news was received in London on last Thursday (March 1) of the raising of the memorable siege of Ladysmith, the announcement, the dispatches state, was celebrated "by a riotous enthusiasm without parallel. The entire population went frantic with joy, and the excitement, feeding on itself, found vent as hours sped on.

"From early afternoon all business in the city was at an end. Many stores closed altogether, others were deserted by their employees, who poured into packed streets, where all wheeled traffic had become impracticable, while hatless, and in many cases coatless, they, paraded, shrieking their delight over Buller's belated success.

"As night came on the throngs grew denser, the demonstration became wilder, more unrestrained, and finally degenerated into a wild orgie. Saloons did a roaring trade everywhere.

"All thought of the terrible roll of dead and maimed of the bravest of their soldiers, which had been paid for this victory, was forgotten. It was on the whole a painful exhibition of jubilation, telling a significant tale of abnormal despondency and terror from which it was the unhealthy reaction."

Thus do even the victories of a war deemed just by the British lead to shameful excesses and disregard of the woes and losses that war entails. At the outbreak of England's contest with the Boers, several American newspapers so far forgot humanitarian principles as to gloat over the prospect of increased prosperity for several American industries that would profit thereby.

"Alas! for the rarity

THE M'GIFFERT CASE.

At a meeting of the New York Presbytery, held Feb. 13, it was decided by a vote of 77 to 33 not to try Dr. Arthur G. McGiffert, of the Union Theological Seminary, on the charges of heresy, preferred by Rev. G. W. Birch, the stated clerk of the Presbytery, at the January meeting. A resolution was adopted declaring that the action of the Presbytery in December, when it decided not to try Dr. McGiffert for heresy, but to disavow his teachings, was sufficient under the circumstances.

The Southwestern Presbyterian thus emphatically comments on this decision:

"New York Presbytery, almost a Synod in size, decides substantially that, if a minister declares he believes in the Westminster Confession of Faith, he may not only preach, but print doctrines which render the Bible and the Confession worth simply the paper they are printed on. Dr. McGiffert throughout his book questions even the truthfulness of the Scriptures, not to say their infallibility. His, in our judgment, is a worse heresy than Unitarianism or Universalism, for both at least profess a biblical foundation, and treat the Scriptures with a measure of respect as inspired. If the decision of the New York Presbytery is allowed to stand undisturbed by the next General Assembly, then ministers may preach and teach in pulpit and theological chair, and print in paper, pamphlet and book any heresy, and yet hold their standing in the Northern Presbyterian Church. In that case her proud position as defender of the faith will be forever lost."

While we are not a directly interested party, it does seem to us that the McGiffert case does not differ materially from that of Dr. Briggs, and that consistency, not to say justice, demands that similar action be taken. While heresy trials are extremely unpleasant, they are not to be avoided merely on that account.

A RELIC OF THE UNION OF CHURCH AND STATE.

Under the Spanish regime in Porto Rico a priest, or any other person who had taken vows, was prohibited forever from marrying. Recently a priest concluded to take unto himself a wife, and was immediately thrown into prison on the charge of criminal assault. On the order of the Governor General he was released for the time being, and now is on parole.

Properly enough, the bill now pending before Congress for the government of this island abolishes this old and peculiar law enacted in the interest of the Roman Catholic Church, which the Spanish Government constituted the State religion, both at home and in her colonies. Such a law is grossly repugnant to our ideal of a popular government, where all forms of religion are tolerated, and where none are given exclusive rights and privileges. The enforcement of church censures by means of civil penalties was, alas! quite common a century, or more, ago, but happily that day has passed. We want no more of the corrupting union of Church and State.

A NEW BOOK.

AN AUTUMN LANE, and Other Poems. By Will T. Hale. 18 mo. 160 pages. Cloth. Price, $1. 1899. Nashville, Tenn.: Publishing House M. E. Church, South; Barbee & Smith, agents.

Lovers of poetry can hardly fail to be charmed with this tasty little volume, whose contents exhibit a pleasing variety of matter combined with nobility of thought, elegance of style, and delicacy of feeling. These poems have a brightness and freshness about them that catches the attention of the reader at once, while their simplicity and purity of tone impart to them additional excellence. Several of them are written in dialect, and are thoroughly realistic. The notes of this bard, though not Miltonic in loftiness, are exceedingly sweet and refined, and evidence considerable artistic skill. Gayety, humor, pensiveness, pathos, philosophy, love and hopefulness—all are here effectively displayed.

In singing of nature the author seems peculiarly at ease. Among the poems characterized by extraordinary tenderness and grace we mention: "A Veteran's Recollection," "Baby's Prayer," "The Conductor's Wife," and "If We Had Known." Other poems of especial merit are the ones entitled: "Indian Summer," "Remorse," "Robert E. Lee," "The Preacher," "Down on the Farm," and "When the Quails Called in the Wheat."

In the opening poem the author reverts to the scenes and employments of his childhood days, and beautifully says:

"The dearest years are those that lie behind,
Far off and dim in recollection's blue."

As a fair sample of the author's style and skill, we quote the following lines from the poem on "Rainy Days:"

"On rainy days Care flings its goad away;
And to the sway of Peace's influence yields;
The outside world grows holier, as the day
Christ passed along the Sabbath fields.
From out a copse a dove's mellifluous coo
Blends with the softness of the blurry haze;
And drowsy chimney swallows sink from view,
On rainy days."

A QUERY.

We have been asked whether a Bishop has the right to change the appointments of a preacher during the interim between two sessions of an Annual Conference. We give our answer in the language of the Discipline, in answer to the question, "What are the duties of a Bishop?" "To change, receive, and suspend preachers in the intervals of the Conferences, as necessity may require, and as the Discipline directs." (Paragraph 101.) This law gives a Bishop the same right to make appointments between Conference as during a Conference session. Moreover, this right is inherent in the genius of Episcopal Methodism. Our Bishops exercised this right in cases of emergency before the above explicit authorization found a place in the statute book. We would be in a poor plight if our chief pastors lacked such authority. In that case a charge which has the misfortune to lose its pastor would have to wait until the next Annual Conference to get another, no matter though it might be a year off.

$500.

Rev. R. M. Standifer, Oxford, writes, "Our charge has paid in cash to date to Twentieth Century Fund over five hundred dollars to work in Cuba." This places Oxford at the head of the list for Mississippi, but she must more than double this, or take a lower place on the list. Let everybody help "now."

Rev. Jas. G. Galloway, of the Mississippi Conference, called at the ADVOCATE office one day last week, he having come down to the city to be with Bro. Peter James in his last hours. We regret to have missed seeing him.

Rev. C. C. Evans writes: "We have been somewhat hindered on account of small-pox. The situation is much better now. Anding, Miss., has suffered much from the disease. Something over a hundred cases in and around the little town, and about fifty deaths, mostly among the negroes."

We have been favored with a copy of the first number of the Chinese Christian Advocate, published at Shanghai, Rev. W. B. Burke being business manager. It is edited by Dr. Young J. Allen. It contains 32 pages printed in Chinese, only the table of contents being in English.

"Gilderoy" writes: "Bro. Hampton tells me there has not been a saloon in Calhoun county in fifteen or twenty years, and there never has been a local-option election, nor has one been asked for by either side. The saloons died for lack of patronage, and they are dead yet. So mote it be everywhere. This is prohibition that prohibits."

The following note from Rev. M. D. Fly, of the North Mississippi Conference, has a cheerful ring. He says: "We are doing finely at Pontotoc. Our parsonage is being repaired. The people are very kind. Congregations large. Prospect flattering. Have had no quarterly meeting yet, but finances coming up well."

On last Sunday Rev. C. D. Atkinson, pastor of Parker Memorial Church in this city, presented his Conference claims and succeeded in raising in cash and subscriptions the full amount assessed his charge for these objects. Well done both for the charge and pastor! Who will be the next to report similar progress?

The Christian Commonwealth, of London (Baptist), says: "Dr. Joseph Agar Beet has been preaching what he himself describes as 'a terrible sermon.' His theme was that the lost will be destroyed and lost forever." "And this," says Zion's Herald, "is the Wesleyan theological professor who, a little while ago, was charged with heresy!"

The bow of our senior Bishop abides in strength. In last week's Southern Christian Advocate he has a profound article on "The First Chapters of Genesis," and in the Nashville another one on "The Sonship Solves All Mystery." He was born Feb. 7, 1819, but his mind remains as bright as the point of a diamond.—Texas Christian Advocate.

Rev. C. F. Emery, the popular pastor of Capitol Street Church, Jackson, Miss., writes us as follows: "Last Sunday [Feb. 25] Bishop Galloway favored us with an eloquent sermon, after which the Conference collections were raised." We congratulate Bro. Emery upon having such able help and also upon his success in securing his assessments thus early.

Presiding Elder T. W. Dye sends us the following cheerful news: "We are moving on without friction on the Durant district. Preachers are in good health and spirits, and we are working to bring up every claim this year, and to have a revival in every charge. This is our motto. Preachers and people are mutually well pleased. Bro. Gladney is engaged in a meeting at Pickens."

A note just received from Rev. W. M. Young, presiding elder of the Corinth district, North Mississippi Conference, says: "You will please announce in the ADVOCATE that Rev. J. B. Randolph has been appointed to the New Albany circuit, and the appointment approved by Bishop Candler. Bro. Randolph is the brother of our Bro. J. A. Randolph, and takes the place of Bro. F. A. Whitson, deceased."

Says a friend, writing from Oxford, Miss: "As Bro. R. J. Bingham will not be able to attend the Ecumenical Missionary Conference, Bishop Candler has appointed Rev. F. P. Jinkins, of Aberdeen, Miss., in his stead. Bro. Jinkins is treasurer of our Conference Board of Missions, and will make a good representative."

Dr. S. P. Ward, a noble-hearted layman of Big Cane, La., has just presented his pastor, Rev. J. W. Lee, with a six-volume set of Matthew Henry's Commentary, advertised in the ADVOCATE. Dr. Ward is a zealous church worker, and has several times been delegate to the Annual Conference. He realizes that a preacher needs food for the brain as well as for the body.

Rev. B. T. Crews, presiding elder of the Arcadia, La., district, sends the following items of interest: "I have appointed Rev. T. M. Finley, a local preacher from Abilene, Texas, as supply on the Burnelce work, in connection with Lisbon circuit. Everything is moving on nicely in the district, and the outlook is hopeful for a good year. We had a profitable Preachers' Meeting at Ruston last week."

Presiding Elder Woollard, of the Aberdeen (Miss.) district, writes as follows: 'Our district is in good shape. All the preachers are hard at work. The year promises to be a good one. The stewards have been liberal in making assessments. The pastors are pushing the connectional and Conference claims, and on the second round we will work the Twentieth Century Thank-offering 'to the last vain of the ore.'"

Rev. R. H. B. Gladney writes us the following gratifying news from Pickens, Miss.: "We closed an excellent meeting at this place Saturday. Bro. McIntosh gave us five days of good preaching. College life has not taken the fire and earnestness out of him. Nearly the entire church received a great blessing. Five were added to our register. I have raised half my Conference collections, and hope to have the balance before Easter. The Epworth League is doing finely. Am happier in the work than ever before."

The pastor and congregation of Tchonpitoulas Street Mission are rejoicing over the recent purchase of a new building, which is much more attractive and better adapted to the work than the one formerly used. It is commodious enough to furnish a home for the pastor, rooms for the home missionary, and a hall for the gospel services. It cost $2650, all of which amount, except $750, will be paid by the end of this year. Much credit is due to Presiding Elder S. S. Keener for the successful consummation of the trade. The street number of the mission is 1026.

Bro. Peter James, of Yazoo City, Miss., died in New Orleans on Wednesday, the second instant. Bro. James was one of the leading laymen of Mississippi Methodism. He was a man of princely liberality. A number of our educational institutions have received from time to time handsome donations at his hands. And not only the cause of education, but every good cause found in him a friend. His remains were carried to Yazoo City for interment. Dr. W. B. Murrah, Rev. R. J. Jones and wife, and Rev. J. G. Galloway and wife attended the funeral. A suitable memoir will, doubtless, appear in due time.

Rev. T. S. Randle, of the Louisiana Conference, and his good wife are suffering sore bereavement in the death of their son, Robert, who passed away in great peace at Half Way, La., on the twenty-first ultimo, after a lingering illness. He was 25 years of age. Bro. Randle writes: 'It was beautiful to hear him making ready to depart and be with Jesus, telling those around him good-by and sending kisses and love to the absent. He repeated several times, 'Though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil,' and said, 'Mama, if I die before morning, I will be in the New Jerusalem.' Thank God he giveth his beloved sleep. Pray for us; we are submissive." We extend sincere sympathy to the bereaved ones.

MISSISSIPPI.

REV. HENRY G. HAWKINS, Madison, Miss., ASSOCIATE EDITOR.

Rev. D. Scarhorough, corresponding secretary of the Mississippi Conference Sunday-school Convention, informs us that the plans are in progress for the annual gathering. This year the meeting will be at Madison Station.

The Tupelo League, which is next to the oldest one in the State, was organized on May 24, 1891, nnder the guidance of Rev. N. G. Augustus. Not long since there was a Woman's Edition of the Tupelo Journal. In it the Tupelo Leagne was written up. It is a noble record.

In the account of the forces that came up to David when he was made king over all the tribes, a single verse contains a compendium of those that were furnished by Zebnion It is as follows: "Of Zebulon, such as went forth to battle, expert in war, with all instruments of war, fifty thousand, which could keep rank: they were not of double heart." No wonder it is that with such men as these David could be a man of victory. The church needs members, and the League needs members that can "keep rank."

A person who is at work in his church and making sacrifices for his Master has Christ's joy in his heart, and needs not a protracted meeting revival for his own sake primarily. He desires it, however, mainly because he would like for others to be induced by some means to wear the yoke of service that he wears and get the same joy that he experiences.

Had you ever noticed that the church member who is at work in his church never complains about its being dead? He knows that it is alive because it has work for him to do.

No true Christian on South Side can justify himself in doing nothing. There are too many homes to be visited, too many children to be organized and taught, too many hearts that need your sympathy, too many minds that need instruction, too many prayers, songs and sermons needed everywhere, to justify any Christian in folding his arms and looking on. Where are the reapers?

Dr. DuBose's first editorial in each issue of the Epworth Era is always strong. Some of them are unsurpassed in strength and beauty by any writings of our time. Our youth should appreciate them. They are worth preserving for reading the second or third time. Indeed, the Epworth Era seems too choice a periodical to go among the waste papers, even after it has been thoroughly perused.

We are informed that the Columbus District Epworth League Conference will be held on the seventh and eighth of March.

Dr. Hammond writes as follows concerning the Twentieth Century Fund Movement: "The work is looking up considerably. The brethren in all parts of the church are wide awake and pushing forward, and the prospects grow brighter each day. Large numbers of encouraging letters which we are daily receiving lead us to hope that much more than the amount called for will be raised."

The following is a copy of the last report of the Epworth League Board of the North Mississippi Conference:

"The Epworth League movement means opportunity for training the young people to be skilled workers in the Master's business. There are but two classes of people with whom we deal—those that work and those that are worked upon. And the three departments of the Epworth League give an opportunity to increase the workers and ever diminish the class worked upon, and thus speedily establish the kingdom of our Lord on earth.

"Fortunately, the League is not the rival of any other organization in the church, but a feeder and helper of them all.

"Your Board does not ask the League to undertake any new enterprise, but help meet the demands that are already upon us.

"Resolved, 1. That we endorse the Holston Plan, and request its adoption by the State Epworth League Conference.

"2. That the presiding elders and pastors press the work of the League, and aid the district secretaries, appointed by the State League Conference, in their efforts to organize Leagues, and undertake as our special work the raising of our missionary assessments in full, and securing an offering from every member to the Twentieth Century Fund.

"3. That we extend the circulation of the Epworth Era, our best assistant in accomplishing these results."

The anniversary of the tenth or "tin" wedding of Rev. W. T. and Mrs. Griffin occurred last Monday, and to celebrate the event in a becoming manner, and to let this worthy couple know how high they stand in the estimation of the people of the town, a number of friends gathered at their residence, all laden with presents appropriate to the occasion, and after a little impromtu speech by Mrs. J. P. Drake, presented them with the presents. Rev and Mrs. Griffin were taken completely by surprise at this manifestation of friendship and esteem, so much so that Mr. Griffin could hardly express the thanks he felt, but he managed to do so in a neat and pleasing way. It was a joyous event, and one that will long be held in grateful remembrance by this happy couple.—Summit Sentinel.

NOTICE.

To the Preachers and Members of the Delhi District, Louisiana Conference—

BRETHREN: The following quotation from a letter just received from Rev. J. L Pierce, at Monroe, calls attention to an error in the Minutes that may have its counterpart in the reports of other charges in the Delhi district.

He says: "There is a singular error in the Minutes regarding my report. Three items, viz: salary of presiding elder, foreign missions, and amount raised for printing Minutes, are under-reported. On the other hand, Bishops, domestic missions, church extension, and education, are over-reported. I reported everything in full; nothing over-paid, and nothing under-paid. Will you please ascertain who is responsible for thus marring my report?"

This discrepancy is due to the fact that the assessments given to the pastor and those sent to the statistical secretary were not the same. For several reasons it has been my custom for a number of years to get from the presiding elders the assessments made by their Boards of Stewards, and before going to Conference enter them in the record book, and thus save time and insure accuracy.

This is the first time an error of this kind has occurred, and I am sure Bro. Harper, the presiding elder, will be able to explain it.

Respectfully,

WM. G. EVANS.

NOTICE.

The Executive Committee of the Church Extension Board, Louisiana Conference, meets in Monroe, March 14. Applications are coming in almost daily to the secretary. Continue to send them, brethren; we will give all an impartial consideration. But be sure to take and get a full collection for this cause! We need every dollar apportioned by the General Board to our Conference. Bro. W. D. Wadley, treasurer, Allentown, La., is in a receptive mood just now. Let Zion's watchmen all awake.

New Orleans Preachers' Meeting.

The following ministers were present: Dr. Keener, P. E.; Dr. LaPrade, Revs. F. N. Parker, R. H. Wynn, G. D. Parker, C. D. Atkinson, M. M. Black, P. H. Fontaine, J. F. Foster, P. O. Lowrey, D. K. Dodson and Dr. B. F. White.

Pastor of Felicity reported all the interests of the church moving on about as usual. Two received by letter. Pastor of Burgundy stated the outlook good. Pastor of Carondelet reported increase in congregations, and much encouraged at the prospects. The pastor of Carrollton reported usual congregations. Increase in Sunday-school attendance. One member received by letter. Seventy-five dollars raised on Twentieth Century offering. Finances of the church good. The pastor of Dryades reported his church growing. Pastor of Rayne Memorial reported two members by letter. Pastor of Louisiana Avenue Church said the prospects were very encouraging. Sunday-school in fine condition. The League is doing fine work. Junior League organized during the month. Pastor of Algiers stated an increase in attendance. Two persons received by letter. Pastor of Tchoupitoulas reported his church in a good spiritual condition. Pastor of Parker Memorial, church painted during the month. Conference claims promised. The outlook good.

Mr. Jackson, president of the Y. M. C. A., was introduced to the Conference, and spoke in interest of the coming anniversary of the Y. M. C. A. on the sixteenth of this month in the city.

Capt. Frazee, of the Salvation Army, was introduced and made a short talk in behalf of the "Shelter Work" recently projected in this city. All the brethren pledged this noble undertaking their hearty co-operation and support.

Dr. Keener, P. E., stated the district in the best condition he has known it to be for years.

March and the Lion.

SOMETHING BETTER THAN THE OLD SAW

The saying about the lion and the lamb in March often proves false, but there is another and a better one which is literally true. When March comes in and finds you taking Hood's Sarsaparilla to purify, enrich and vitalize your blood, you may expect, when it goes out, that it will leave you free from that tired feeling and with none of the boils, pimples and eruptions which manifest themselves because of impure blood in the Spring. If you have not already begun taking Hood's Sarsaparilla do so your Spring medicine, we advise you to begin to-day. We assure you it will make you feel better all through the coming Summer.

THREE THINGS.

Remember, three things come not back:
The arrow sent npon its track—
It will not swerve, it will not stay
Its speed; it flies to wonnd or slay.

The spoken word, so boon forgot
By thee; but it has perished not;
In other hearts 'tis living still,
And doing work for good or ill.

And the lost opportunity
That cometh back no more to thee.
In vain thon weepest, in vain dost yearn,
Thess three will nevermore retnrn.

OLD-SCHOOL MANNERS.

When one speaks of a lady or a gentleman of the old school, the idea conveyed is at once that of somebody stately, conrteons, and somewhat formal. One can not conceive of a person distingnished by the gentle breeding of the old school as flying to and fro in a hnrry, as rnshing abont over the affairs of the day, fussy, fidgety, or impatient becanse these are not going as they should, as interrupting conversation, as arriving too late to keep an appointment, or as in any small way violating the rnles of politeness. It is characteristic of old-school courtesy that it has leisure to be considerate, and perhaps it would be well for us, who belong to a newer time, to retnrn to some of the beautiful observances which were once customary among highly-civilized people.

The cnrt phraseology of the day has in a measure dropped even the beautiful words, lady and gentleman, substitnting man and woman in very clnmsy and awkward connections. Man as the name of the species, woman as its feminine, are appropriate terms, and there are certain situations in which it is right to speak of men and women. Bnt when we are allnding to people in society, people who have certain relations to snstain to one another, we shonld say lady and gentleman, and it is not too much to exact of these the refinement, the good taste, and the freedom from hnrry which are distingnishing marks of those who have been bronght np in a polite school.—Christian Intelligencer.

HOPEFULNESS.

Hopefulness is largely a matter of temperament. A person sees the bright side of things and has confidence in his vision because he is so made. Bnt a process of reflection may do mnch to lead those who take gloomy and despondent views to take a more cheerful forecast. Proper weight shonld be given to the encouraging featnres of a sitnation, and then the issue of any given state of affairs depends in part upon the chapter of accidents—those inscrutable factors which you can not estimate. These are as likely to be favorable as adverse. Some people are fond of sayiug, "Things always go agaiust me," by which they mean that this iucalcnlable factor in hnman affairs always works agaiust them. Bnt, of conrse, if that were so, they wonld have been dead or rnined years ago. Then, again, good health has much to do with sane and cheerfnl views. If you are not feeling qnite np to the mark, make proper allowance for the gloom that yonr physical condition spreads over your mental operations. A dyspeptic's views are of no particnlar valne anyway, and if yon happen to belong to that nnfortnnate class, stontly refuse to draw a gloomy conclnsion from any set of circnmstances until the fit has left yon. Above all, do not fall into the error of thinking that the last pessimist yon have talked with is an inspired prophet. Nine chances to one his ideas are absolutely worthless.—Watchman.

SELECT GOOD BOOKS.

Life is too short to read all sorts of books. No one man can read all if he would, for the making of books is without end. Consequently there must be selection. No one ought to read a bad book any more than he should associate with a bad companion. Books treating along the line of one's vocation or profession, of course, take precedence of all others for the help and instruction they contain. But even here there must be selection, for some are more valnable than others. There is, however, in addition a large miscellaneous reading required, in order to cultivate the taste and to make him acquainted with the refinements of literature. If he does not wish to devote himself to the most learned writings in order to acquire knowledge, he does need sensible writings so as to strengthen his understanding. Variety, too, will produce the widest culture. Therefore, in making selection always make selection only of the best of its class. Hasten not to read every new book which is announced, but wisely adhere, if your time for reading is limited, to those whose worth has been already approved. Time enough when it has been accepted as standard to put it upon your shelf to be perused at your leisure. A man's wisdom and taste, and oftentimes his culture, may be determined by a glance at his library. —Methodist Recorder.

DOING HER OWN WORK.

In her article on "The lady who does her own work," Mrs. Harriet Beecher Stowe dwells on the valne of honsework in giving the very healthiest form of exercise, and for the average woman shows it to be far preferable to the work of the masseurs, who even in those days, more than thirty years ago, seem to have found plently of patients.

"Wonld it not be qnite as cheerful and less expensive a process," she asks, "if young girls from early life developed the muscles in sweeping, dusting, ironing, rubbing furnitnre, and all the multiplied domestic processes which our grandmothers knew of?" and then adds: "I will ventnre to say that onr grandmothers in a week went over every movement that any gymnast has invented, and went over them to some prodnctive purpose, too." Here is a hint that women with thin arms wonld do well to take. It is said to be really a fact that Clara Louise Kellogg, the singer, when a young girl, was mnch annoyed by the atteuuated appearance of her arms when she began to don evening dress at her crowded concerts. Some one recommended a brisk use of the broom, which advice she followed, and soon had a ronnd, plnmp member as the reward of her labor. If a thin, listless girl, with a dull eye and stare, can by any means be persnaded to try the "broom cnre," she will be astonished to find what a beautifier it really is. —Exchange.

A PERFECT HOME.

The most perfect little home I ever saw was a little house into the sweet incense of whose fires went no costly things. A thousand dollars served as a year's living for father, mother, and three children. But the mother was the creator of a home; her relations with the children were the most beautiful I have ever seen; every inmate of the house involuntarily looked into her face for the key-note of the day, and it always rang clear. From the rosebud or clover leaf which in spite of her hard housework she always found time to put beside our plates at breakfast, down to the story she had on hand to read in the evening, there was no intermission of her influence. She has always been and always will be my ideal of a mother, wife, and home-maker. If to her quick brain, loving heart, and exquisite face had been added the appliances of wealth and enlargements of wide culture, hers would have been absolutely the ideal home. As it was, it was the best I have ever seen.—Helen Hunt Jackson.

A TEMPERANCE LICTURE.

A professional gentlemeu who was accustomed to take his morning glass stepped into a saloon, and, going up to the bar, called for whisky. A seedy individual stepped up to him and said: "I say, Squire, can't yon ask an unfortunate fellow to join you?" He was annoyed by the man's familiarity, and roughly told him: "I am not in the habit of drinking with tramps." The tramp replied: "Yon need not be so cranky and high-minded, my friend. I venture to say that I am of just as good family as you are, have just as good an education, and before I took to drink was just as respectable as yon are. What is more, I always knew how to act the gentleman. Take my word for it, you stick to John Barleycorn, and he will bring yon to just the same place I am." Struck with his words, the gentleman set down his glass, and turned to look at him. His eyes were bloodshot, his face bloated, his boots mismated, his clothing filthy. He then asked: "Was it drink that made you like this?" "Yes, it was, and it will bring you to the same, if you stick to it." Picking up his untouched glass, he poured its contents upon the floor, and said: "Then it's time I quit," and left the saloon, never to enter it again.—Selected.

DIG FOR YOURSELF.

Nothing better could happen to the young man who has the right kind of grit than to be thrown on the world and his own resources. A well-to-do judge once gave his son a thousand dollars, and told him to go to college and graduate. The son returned at the end of the first year, his money all gone, and with several extravagant habits. At the close of the vacation the judge said to his son, "Well, William, are yon going to college this year?" "I have no money, father." "Bnt I gave yon a thonsand dollars to graduate on." "It is all gone, father." "Very well, my son; it is all I could give you; yon can't stay here; yon must now pay your own way in the world." A new light broke upon the vision of the young man. He accommodated himself to the situation, again left home, made his way through college, graduated at the head of his class, studied law, became Governor of the State of New York, entered the Cabinet of the President of the United States, and has made a record that will not soon die, for he was none other than William H. Seward.—Christian Work.

GEN. LEW WALLACE'S STEP-MOTHER.

The finest quality of a great soul is, perhaps, that of being unconscious of its altitude, and many who think of others so much that they have time to think of self bnt little, wonld be surprised to hear their virtues set forth.

"Speaking of great men with great mothers," said a well-known orator, "I think Gen. Lew Wallace was the most fortunate of all famous men I know in stepmothers. His step-mother was a woman of a great intellect and of superior talent. In regard to their affection for each other there is a good story. It was just after the publication of 'Ben Hur.' 'And what do yon think of my book?' the author asked of his step-mother, Mrs. Zerelda Wallace.

"'Oh, it is a grand book, my son,' said Mrs. Wallace, 'bnt where did you get that beautiful character of the mother of Ben Hur?'

"'Why, my dear mother, I thonght of yon every line while I wrote it,' replied the General, as he put his arm around her."—Exchange.

LIFE'S PRIZES ARE FOR MEN WITH STAYING POWER.

"Investigation into the lives of the great men of our own age and past ages will show that these men of mark and grand performance outstayed other men, worked harder than other men, worked longer than other men, and had great strength and stamina, without which they could not have worked harder and longer than others. What better lesson could we teach our youth than to so nourish and cultivate their bodies, not for all of each day, but for a reasonable time daily, and by sensible, well-directed effort, aimed to bring those bodies up to manhood, as to fit them for a great life's service?

"The wisest of men has told us that the glory of young men is their strength. Why should not the body's training go hand in hand with storing and developing the mind—with clean, pure, high character as well?"—Selected.

"I hold in highest dignity and most awful significance the laws of the descent of inheritance; of pre-natal influence; of the determining of destiny before a human being has ever known an independent heart-beat or an intelligent volition. I believe that all reforms have their root here, and that a wiser, more thoughtful age, not very far distant either, will stand aghast as it reads of the madness of the present dance of delusion and death in respect to the right of every child to be well born!"—Frances Willard.

TAKE NOTICE

That we are now handling two different styles of the Holman Bible in Bourgeois type. One we sell to paid-up subscribers at $1.50, the other at $1.30. The $1.30 Bible is substantially the same we have hitherto sold at $1.50. The one we sell at $1.50 is a far better Bible than has ever been sold at such a price. It is a marvel of cheapness. A Serious Decision.

"Why CHILLIFUGE Won't Cure Chills"—is a question that brings to mind the story of a society of learned men formed for debating problems.

The question was presented: "Why a fish weighing ten ponnds, put into a vessel of known weight, filled with water, did not increase the weight?" After hours of hot debate the fool of the club announced that it did, for while the debate had been going on he had tried the experiment.

BURTON—It is said death selects a shining mark at which to shoot his fatal darts. This was surely so in the case of Prof. G. W. Burton, who died Dec. 20, 1899. He was a bright and shining light. He would have been thirty-six years old Jan. 1, 1900. He had been married little over eight years. He joined the church in Greensboro, Ala., when but a youth. He did not know how to be ungenerous or little, but with a full heart he did his best and gave his best. He loved with all his power the lovable, and abhorred evil with equal intensity. If he had a weakness, it was his lack of patience with half-hearteiness. As an Epworth Leaguer, he was, as in other church work, earnest and constant. He was a faithful missionary worker, but the Sunday-school was his chief delight, and in it he was an active and efficient superintendent and teacher. He counted it a joy to labor in this department of church work. He was a true husband and father in the fullest sense of the word. All his friends know he had a big heart and loved much, but no one knew so well as his wife. Language is lame, and time would fail us to speak fully of the virtues of this good and busy life. He was given to hospitality, charitable to the needy, kind and obliging to his neighbors, gentle and loving in his home, true and loyal to his church, a friend indeed to his pastor. How greatly we shall miss him! The sympathy and love of many go out to the bereaved wife and children, but they sorrow not as those who have no hope. We shall see him again. IRA B. ROBERTSON.

MITCHELL—Lotta P. Mitchell, daughter of R. Q. Little and Beulah Mitchell, was born at Pleasant Grove, Miss., Aug. 2, 1888, and died at home at Delta, Miss., at about 5 o'clock A. M., Feb. 18, 1900 after several days' illness. She suffered some time of malarial rheumatism, which was followed by a persistent pneumonia and death, despite the best efforts of medical skill and tenderest care of loving hands. Thus a great sorrow has come to father, mother, brothers and sisters. Tenderness another home has that vacant chair, never to be occupied in this world. And thus a whole community is made sad, being bereft of one who was everyone's friend, and thus went out the bright light of a sweet, kindly, happy life. She was beginning in earnest the preparations for a useful life. Her new Bible, received last Christmas, was being read with interest, and she loved to discuss the people and their peculiar customs as she read about such. But now she reads the fuller revelation that needs no commentary, as she reads from the face and glory of her heavenly Father, whose smiles drive all her sorrows away. To-day, while we enjoy the companionships of Bible characters, and learn with pleasure from their lives the will of God, Lotta's spirit is with friends gone before, with patriarchs, priests, prophets, apostles, and the blessed Lord Jesus.

May God bless, comfort, and keep all the bereaved ones, that reunion may take place afterwhile in heaven! BEN P. JACO, P. C.

Pleasant Grove, Miss.

JENNINGS—Our faithful brother, R. James Jennings, having fought bravely the battles of life for about three score years, died suddenly of heart trouble at his home near Mastodon, Miss., Dec. 30, 1899. He had been in declining health for about a year, but seemed improved at this time, and was able to make friendly visits and attend to business. Only an hour or two before his death he was at Mastodon talking pleasantly with a group of friends. He had been an acceptable member and faithful steward of the M. E. Church, South, for some years. Limitation forbids an effort here to attempt to recite the story of friendly, noble, and virtuous deeds of this good man. With him the storms of life were many and severe, often terrific; but, being a true man of honor and patience, he went calmly forward enduring to the end, where peace reigned. His wife, a great sufferer for thirty years, preceded him to the grave only about two months. With the burial service of our church, and in Masonic honors in the presence of friends and brethren, we quietly placed his remains in the bosom of mother earth, covered with pure white snow, in the cemetery at Longtown, Miss., Dec. 31, 1899.

BEN P. JACO, P.

BOYD—Susie K. Boyd (nee Davis) was born at Darlington, La., March 27, 1851; and died at the same place, and in the same house in which she was born, Dec. 6, 1899. She was married to Mr. C. L. Boyd, Sept. 11, 1873. This union was blessed with eight children—six sons and two daughters. The six sons and husband survive to mourn the loss of an affectionate wife and devoted mother.

Such is the brief record of one who has but recently "slipped away" from us; but who can tell how much of conflict, how much of victory, how much of suffering patiently borne was included in the years of her pilgrimage on earth?

Sister Boyd was converted and joined the M. E. Church, South, in 1870; lived the life of a faithful, self-denying Christian, and was ready when the summons came.

I had been her pastor for only one year before her death, and had but few opportunities of visiting and conversing with her. I found her, however, a patient sufferer, awaiting the will of her Lord. I was absent attending Conference when she died. Rev. T. W. Brown, a superannuated veteran of the Mississippi Conference, performed the last sad rite of burial, and spoke the word of comfort to surviving friends and relatives. She sleeps, awaiting the resurrection of the just.

"It is not death to close
The eye long dimmed by tears,
And wake, in glorious repose,
To spend eternal years."

J. I. HOFFPAUIR.

KELLOGG—Mrs. S. C. Kellogg (nee Curry) was born in Titusville, Penn., Jan. 17, 1819; married Dr. O. Kellogg, Sept. 19, 1843; moved first to Columbus, Ohio; then to Southern Illinois, where her husband, as a preacher, joined the Southern Illinois Conference, M. E. Church, where he traveled for some years; then, in 1866, they moved to Hernando, Miss.

Sister Kellogg, when quite young, joined the Presbyterian Church. She joined the M. E. Church with her husband in 1846; then, in 1866 in Hernando, Miss., they joined the M. E. Church, South.

Sister Kellogg died at her home in Hernando, Jan. 23, 1900, her husband having many years before crossed the river into the spirit world. She lived a consistent, consecrated, beautiful Christian life to the last. It was a benediction to be with her, so rich in experience, strong in faith, and trusting in hope; said she was patiently waiting the Master's will to take her home. Lovingly and trustingly she fell asleep in Jesus, and in the midst of a large company of relatives and friends we laid her in the grave until the resurrection morn shall wake the sleeping dust.

J. H. SMITH.

Hernando, Miss.

ELLIS—Ruth Ellis was born Nov. 22, 1896, and died Monday, Jan. 29, 1900, aged three years two months and seven days.

"Death deals at random, right and left,
And flowers fall as well as oaks;
And so bonnie Ruth blooms no more,
And night has fallen on our folks."

God sent little Ruth as an angel to scatter radiant pearls along the bridal pathway of Dr. and Mrs. E. M. Ellis; but three gleeful, gladsome years had scarce tripped by before Jesus came to take the little daughter in his arms and bear her to the nursery of God.

Little Ruth loved papa and mama with a love that was deeper than childhood's fancy. As we went on our pastoral rounds we would see the bright little face beaming with anticipation, looking and waiting for papa to come from the office. Thank God those eyes are not dim, the smile of welcome is not faded, but, resting in the arms of the Welcome Christ, Ruth is waiting with glistening face and listening ear to catch the first footfall of mama and papa as they come weary at nightfall to God's long home.

FLOYD—Robert Alexander, son of D. D. and Rosa Floyd, died Sept. 15, 1899, in Wilkinson county, Miss. His seventh birthday found him ill, and on the following day he closed his eyes in this world to open them in heaven. He was the first-born, and was possessed with an intelligence beyond his years. He was the pride of his father, the joy and comfort of his mother. Robert was loved by all who knew him, especially his grandparents, with whom he often stayed for some days.

Parents, sorrow not, for he who hath said, "Suffer the little children to come unto me," hath taken him, and you may join him where God wipes all tears from our eyes, and there shall be no night there. God bless and meet you in your bereavement, and may it work out an eternal weight of glory and a home with Robert in heaven! Kind friends laid him in the churchyard at Hopewell to rest until the resurrection morn, when we shall meet him, and we shall know each other there.

To be spiritually ready is to be in the atmosphere of love and of sympathetic activity. That annoyance and hindrances exist all about me, that they confront our comings in and entangle our goings out, is forever true; but, unless there is the inward response, they can not penetrate into our lives and work us ill. Two Verdicts.

"After a fair and impartial trial you are judged guilty by this court, and you are sentenced to be hung by the neck until you are dead." The solemn tones of the judge, the despairing face of the prisoner, and the painful stillness of the court-room, makes it a scene of awful impress. Now turn to a brighter scene at the home circle. A mother radiant with joy over the recovery of a child snatched from the clutches of Malaria. An entire family rejoicing, and praising the merits of Dicks' Chillifuge, and giving their verdict that Chillifuge is without an equal for swiftness to cure.

A Small Beginning.

A little snow ball on the summit of the Alps, rolled up by the winds, moves slowly downward. Gaining in strength and size, it grows rapidly to giant proportions, and finally becomes the frightful avalanche, destroying everything in its path. Consumption begins with a little cough, a trifling pain, a passing flush on the cheeks. This is but the beginning of the avalanche, consumption, that knows no pity, recognizes no distinction. Just at the beginning thousands commit the error of not checking and curing the disease by using MARSDEN'S PECTORAL BALM.

The "Combination" Bible.

A SUPERB EDITION

of the Holy Scriptures, showing at a glance at the foot of the pages all changes made by the revisers.

New Type. All Proper Names Self-Pronouncing. The Most Valuable Collateral Matter.

There is a steady and increasing demand for first-class Bibles. Everybody is anxious to obtain a copy of the best edition of the Holy Scriptures. Old editions are constantly being replaced by Bibles that are in every way more attractive, and there is practically no limit to the demand.

OUR "COMBINATION" FEATURE.

Hitherto the King James and Revised Versions have been printed in parallel columns, but this makes comparisons of texts tedious and unsatisfactory, and makes the book very unwieldy. We have overcome this difficulty by "combining" the two Versions on the same page, showing at a glance in foot-notes all the Changes, Additions and Omissions made by the Revisers.

THE OLD VERSION PRINTED IN FULL.

The King James Version is the basis, and this Version is read straight along from the text, while the Revised Version is read from the text in combination with the foot-notes. Our "Combination" Feature has met with universal approval and is strongly endorsed by leading Divines and Biblical Scholars.

It is only by a comparison of the two Versions that the greatest benefit can be obtained from reading the Holy Scriptures, and this comparison every reader can easily make by our simple arrangement for showing the changes made by the revisers. This is the greatest triumph of Bible Publishing the World has ever known.

OUR OFFER.

To those unprogressive people who do not read and pay for the New Orleans Advocate we sell this Bible at the publisher's retail price—$4.25. To our subscribers we sell it at the very low rate of $2. The only condition attached to this offer is that the subscriber must pay his subscription one full year in advance, viz.: to March, 1901. We will send it postpaid to any person who will send us three new cash subscribers at the regular rate. For six new cash subscribers at the regular rate we will send two "Combination" Bibles, postpaid.

For fifty cents additional we will send a Bible with index.

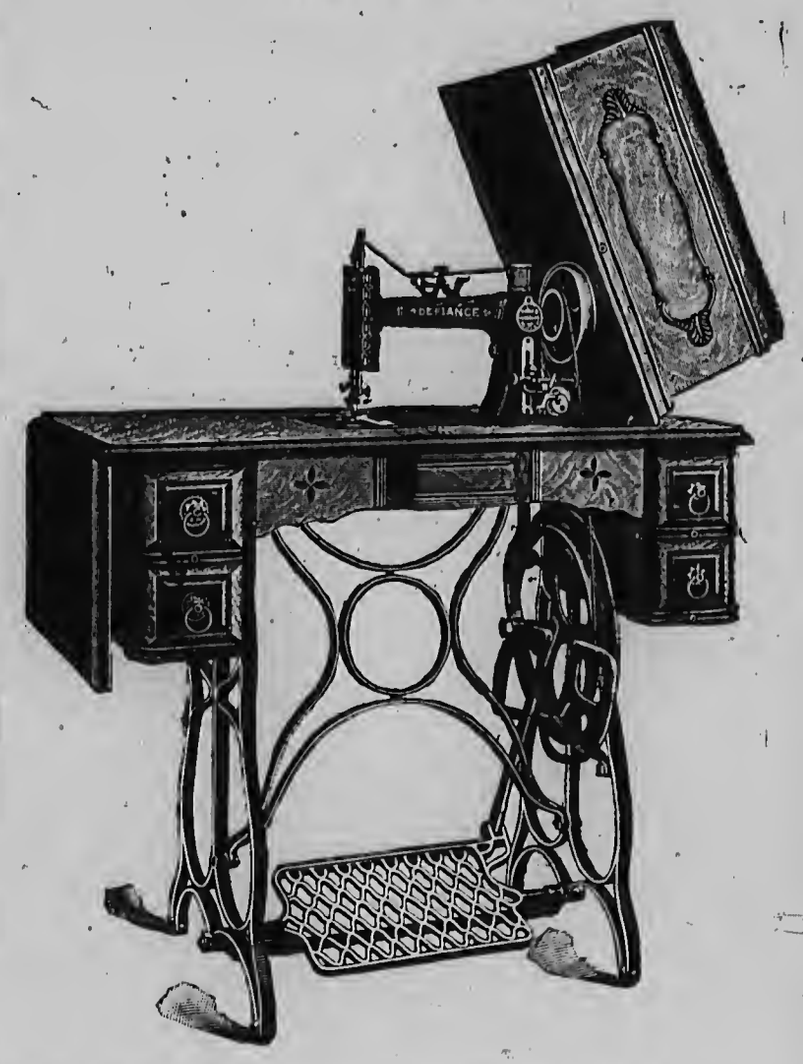
For twenty-five cents additional we will have your name engraved in gilt letters on the outside.

Address REV. W. C. BLACK.

P. S.—We can give no commission on renewals in connection with the above offer.

New Machine Offer.

DEFIANCE NO. 4.



The Defiance Machine is the perfection of simplicity, durability, speed, strength and ease of operation.

Construction. It is constructed of the best material in use, every bearing, without an exception, being of steel or case-hardened.

The Mechanical Devices of this machine are a combination of tried mechanical principles. In detail it differs materially from other machines. Its simplicity is at once apparent, and its great durability is admitted by the best mechanical experts.

The Arm is large and roomy, 8x5¼ inches in the clear.

No Vibration. This machine does not vibrate. Its motion is easy and quiet.

Lock Stitch. It is a lock-stitch shuttle machine.

Speedy, Light, Quiet. It is as speedy, light and quiet-running as any shuttle machine manufactured.

Double Feed—Positive Four-Motion. The double feed possesses advantages over all others. Its very shape and form obviates all the disadvantages arising from double feeds as they have heretofore been constructed, and combines in this machine all the advantages of both the single and double feed, doing away with the objections to either of them.

The operation of the feed mechanism is positive, giving an accurate four-motion movement to the feed without the use of springs.

The Needle Bar. This machine has a self-lubricating needle-bar, which is always kept clean, well-oiled, and the oil can not drop on the work and soil it.

The Needle is absolutely self-setting. No screwdriver is required in setting, a winged thumb nut being used instead.

The machine is self-threading. Put in the bobbin, draw the thread towards you, through the slot and, it is done.

The Loose Pulley for winding the bobbins without running the machine is so constructed as to admit of an instantaneous stoppage and starting of the machine without stopping the treadle movement—a valuable improvement peculiar to this machine.

Automatic Bobbin Winder. The bobbin winder operates automatically, winding the thread on the bobbin regularly and as evenly as the thread on a spool. Can be operated without running the machine.

Extra Attachments, in velvet-lined case, sent free with each machine: 1 Tucker, 1 Ruffler with shirring plate, 1 Hemmer set (4 widths) and Binder, 1 Braider (Foot and Slide), 1 Thread Cutter.

Additional Accessories. Each machine is supplied with the following outfit: 1 Hemmer and Feller (one piece), 10 Needles, 6 Bobbins, 1 Wrench, 1 Screwdriver, 01 Can filled with oil, Cloth Guage and Thumb-screw, and a Book of Instructions. The Book of Instructions is profusely illustrated and answers the purpose of a competent teacher.

DEFIANCE NO. 7½.

This cut shows our new and popular style, the No. 7½ Defiance Drop Cabinet perfectly protecting the machine from dust, and making a convenient and ornamental stand. When machine is ready for use the head is in same position as on ordinary style; when through using, it requires only the turning over of the leaf of table, and the sewing machine head drops into the case or cabinet between the drawers, completely out of sight, forming a handsome table with highly polished top.

No. 3 Machine, drop leaf table, bent cover, case of one drawer at each end and center drawer. Dealer's price, $32. Our price, $18.

No. 4 Machine, drop leaf table, bent cover, case of two drawers at each end and center drawer. Dealer's price, $34. Our price, $19.

No. 5 Machine, drop leaf table, bent cover, case of three drawers at each end and center drawer, making seven drawers in all. Dealer's price, $36. Our price, $20.

No. 7½ Machine, Drop head cabinet, case of two drawers at each end and center drawer. Dealer's price, $38. Our price, $23.

All the woodwork is of the best quality, either Light Antique or Golden Oak Finish. For Walnut Woodwork add $2 to above list prices.

The chief difference between Numbers 3, 4, and 5 is in the furniture—i. e., the number of drawers. If you do not want to pay for the extra drawers, you need not do so. We sell these machines under a ten years' guarantee, by which we mean that if any part gives out by reason of any defect therein, the manufacturer will replace the same free of charge. Moreover, we allow the purchaser to test the machine ten days. If at the end of ten days you are not satisfied, you have only to drop us a postal card, and your money will be refunded.

OUR OFFER.

We will send any one of the above described machines at the prices named, and also send the Advocate free for six months. The only condition attached to this offer is that subscribers who are in arrears must first pay up all arrearages to date. It would be well to avail yourself of this offer at once, as we can not promise that it will last very long. Notice that you take no risk whatever. We do all the risking. Address

REV. W. C. BLACK,
512 Camp St., New Orleans.

P. S.—The machine will be shipped direct from the factory in the North.

EXTRA GOOD ORGANS

Epworth organs cost more to make than the common kind. But our direct-from-factory selling saves that heavy middle expense. By saving in the selling, we put more in the making.

The more people know how good the Epworth is — and how we deal — the more our business grows. Write for catalogue today.

At the Capitol.

I am in my seventy-third year, and for fifty years I have been a great sufferer from indigestion, constipation and biliousness. I have tried all the remedies advertised for these diseases, and got no permanent relief. About one year ago, the disease assuming a more severe and dangerous forms. I became very weak, and lost flesh rapidly, I commenced using Dr. Mozley's Lemon Elixir. I gained twelve pounds in three months. My strength and health, my appetite and my digestion were perfectly restored, and now I feel as young and vigorous as I ever did in my life.

Relief for Puerto Rico.

Last week, by the direction of President McKinley, a Puerto Rican relief fund of $1,250,000 was created from the remainder of the $50,000,000 voted by Congress two years ago at the outbreak of the war with Spain, as a national defense fund. The President and his Cabinet have been deeply stirred by the numerous and continued appeals for aid that have come from that island as the result of the terrible hurricane of last year, which caused such widespread devastation.

According to reliable reports of an official character, the planters and laborers of the island are in a most deplorable condition on account of lack of funds. Governor-General Davis reports that their lands are overgrown with rank vegetation, that they have no seed to plant, and are approaching a state of absolute destitution. Hence there is great need that relief be administered at once. The President's action in this matter is both timely and highly commendable, and we feel sure will meet with general approval.

If wisely distributed, a million and a quarter dollars will do no little towards relieving the great distress now prevailing in Puerto Rico. A better use of the money remaining from this war emergency fund could hardly have been made.

LITERARY NOTES.

BY W. F. B.

The feud of the Montana millionaires, now being waged in the United States Senate, is the subject of a dramatic narrative in Ainslee's, for March. The greatest engineering feat the world has ever seen is described by John Ward, F. S. A., in The Conquest of the Nile. The Real Howells is welcome because in it we see the famous novelist studied as a man rather than as a writer. In addition, there is a striking war story by Stephen Crane; the continuation of Gen. King's novel, and stories by Chauncey C. Hotchkiss, Ewan Macpherson, and Howard Fielding.

The Return of the Business Woman, by Edward Bok; The Anecdotal Side of Mr. Beecher, College Girls' Larks and Pranks, The Modern Son and Daughter, Where the Founder of the Kindergarten was Born, are among the notable features of the March Ladies' Home Journal. The Autobiography of a Girl, The Theatre and Its People, and The Parson's Butterfly, are continued, and Edith and I in Paris, and Her Boston Experiences, are concluded. Howard Chandler Christy contributes the first of his American Girl series of drawings, showing her at church, and A. B. Frost humorously pictures The Country Store as a Social Centre. An Easter solo and an anthem are timely; and the numerous articles on fashions in woman's wear will be a useful guide just at this time.

The American Monthly Review of Reviews contains an illustrated character sketch of John Ruskin; a study of the Southern Mountaineer, by President William Goodell Frost, of Berea College, with pictures of Kentucky and Tennessee mountain types; notes on the educational opportunity at Berea; an account of the Craig Colony for Epileptics in New York State, by Sydney Brooks (illustrated); an article on The American Merchant Marine, by Winthrop L. Marvin; a paper on The Policy of Steamship Subsidies, by President Hadley, of Yale; and The Emancipation of Slaves Under Moslem Law, by Prof. D. B. Macdonald. In the editorial department, entitled The Progress of the World, especial attention is given to the war in South Africa, the Hay-Pauncefote treaty, the Kentucky disturbances, the Puerto Rican tariff, Governor Roosevelt's administration, the approaching presidential campaign, the steamship subsidy bill, and our situation in the Philippines.

PAINT TALKS, XXVI.

WHAT MAKES PAINT EXPENSIVE.

When a householder finds that his buildings need painting he may either figure how cheaply he can get the job done, or he may try to learn how he can do it most economically. If cheapness be his chief aim he will select the poorest mixture in the market, and proceed to apply it himself. If he prefer economy he will select the best paint he can find and employ a practical painter to apply it properly.

The work done with the best material, by a practical painter will cost him, perhaps, a third more or (if he counts his own labor as worthless) twice as much as if he had done the job himself with the poor material.

When the job is completed the sun and the wind and rain begin to test the value of the work. If material and work be good they will stand. If they be poor a fresh job will be ready within a short time. Then the same operation can be repeated, and so on till the building decays.

Now when painting is to be done it is well to bear in mind a few facts: First, any paint is cheap in comparison with the building it protects; second the principal cost of painting is the labor; third, the most economical paint is that which protects the building best and longest.

The cheapest paints are neither protective nor durable. Pure white lead is expensive enough, but it requires frequent renewal. The combination paints, or the pure linseed oil ready mixed paints, containing enough (and that means a good deal) of zinc white to carry large quantities of linseed oil and to prevent the white lead from chalking, cost more than the cheapest alkali, water and benzine paints; but they cost much less than pure lead per square yard of surface covered, and they are far more durable than either.

Durable paint is never, in the long run, expensive; but paints that are not durable are always expensive, no matter how little they cost.

START right. In painting, the first or priming coat is important. It is the foundation. It is a mistake to think anything is good enough for it. If a mixture of Zinc, Barytes, etc., is used the paint will surely crack and peel.

The only safe paint for priming is Pure White Lead. It combines with the oil, forming a tough, elastic coat that penetrates and will adhere to the surface. The brands in the margin are genuine.

FREE For colors use National Lead Company's Pure White Lead Tinting Colors. Any shade desired is readily obtained. Pamphlet giving full information and showing samples of Colors, also pamphlet entitled "Uncle Sam's Experience With Paints" forwarded upon application.

THINGS THAT CAN NOT FAIL.

BY WASHINGTON GLADDEN.

When the anchors that faith has cast
Are dragging in the gale,
I am quietly holding fast
To the things that can not fail.

I know that right is right;
That it is not good to lie;
That love is better than spite,
And a neighbor than a spy.

I know that passion needs
The leash of sober mind;
I know that generous deeds
Some sure reward will find;

That the rulers must obey;
That the givers shall increase;
That duty lights the way
For the beautiful feet of Peace;

In the darkest night of the year,
When the stars have all gone out,
That courage is better than fear,
That faith is truer than doubt.

And fierce though the fiends may fight,
And long though the angels hide,
I know that Truth and Right
Have the universe on their side.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From Our Regular Correspondent.)

Mr. Ira D. Sankey sang "Some Time We'll Understand" and "The Ninety and Nine" before a congregation which filled the Church of the Covenant, and then gave a short history of the two hymns which he has helped to make popular all over the civilized world. The first was published anonymously, and it was not until after he had sung it for years that he learned it was written by Rev. Maxwell N. Cornelius, formerly pastor of the Eastern Presbyterian Church, of this city. Major Whittle wrote the chorus, and the whole was set to music by a Mr. McGranahan. One of the first occasions upon which Mr. Sankey sang the hymn in public was at the memorial service in Edinburgh in honor of the Duke of Clarence, eldest son of the Prince of Wales. Lord Overtonn, who was present, was so moved by the hymn that, in his account of the services sent to the Princess of Wales, he telegraphed it entire, and from that time its popularity began and has gone on, increasing all the time. It was when he was in Washington five years ago with Mr. Moody that Mr. Sankey first learned the name of its author. The history of "The Ninety and Nine" is even more interesting. In 1873, while on a railway train between Glasgow and Edinburgh, Mr. Sankey read a poem in a newspaper, the first line of which was, "There were ninety and nine that safely lay." He was impressed by the poem, and cut it out. By a singular coincidence that evening, in Edinburgh, Mr. Moody spoke on "The Lost Sheep," and when he concluded turned to Mr. Sankey and asked him if he could not sing something which would be especially appropriate and in keeping with the sermon. Mr. Sankey thought a moment, then walked to the organ, and, taking the newspaper poem from his pocket, spread it before him. He says the music seemed to come by inspiration as he touched the keys, and he sang the poem, which thrilled the great audience. That night he wrote out the music, without the change of a note, just as he had improvised it, as he sang the words for the first time, and just as it has since been sung by millions. That Mr. Sankey has lost none of his popularity in Washington may be judged from the fact that several hundred persons had to be turned away from this meeting.

The liquor question in the Philippines is still attracting attention in Congress. The War Department has not yet prepared the answer to the resolution adopted by the Senate, asking the number of saloons that have been established in Manila since the United States occupation of the city; who conducts these saloons, who patronize them, the kind and qualities of liquors sold; the number, if any, of saloons run on the American or English plan in Manila before our occupation, and whether it is within the power of the President, as commander-in-chief of our military forces, to suppress all saloons in Manila, and prohibit and prevent the sale of liquor to our soldiers. Representative Gillet, of Massachusetts, has introduced a bill "to regulate the sale of intoxicating liquors in the Philippines," which he thinks would drive the saloon out of business. It prohibits the sale of distilled or intoxicating liquor in quantities less than twenty gallons, except on a physician's prescription for medicinal purposes, under severe penalties.

Mr. Frank M. Oper, of Chicago, editor of a well-known Y. M. C. A. paper, gave the local Y. M. C. A. some vigorous ideas on the sort of robust Christianity he believes in during the delivery of a short address. Said he: "I am afraid that a great many strong men stay away from the churches for the reason that religion in them is conceived in such an effeminate way. They are often given over to too much singing and sentiment, and it often fails to appeal. What we want is an element of the heroic and brave in our conception of religion. Our religion should not be like the conceptions of Christ that painters have had for the past thousand years. In most paintings Christ is pictured as effeminate, weak, and watery-eyed, and appears to be making an appeal for sympathy."

Mrs. Mary C. Lawton, widow of Gen. H. W. Lawton, is in Washington. Yesterday afternoon, in the private office of the president of the bank in which the contributions for Mrs. Lawton and her children were deposited, she wrote and signed the following receipt, which speaks for itself: "Received from Brig.-Gen. H. C. Corbin, adjutant-general U. S. Army, treasurer of the Lawton fund, ninety-eight thousand four hundred and seven dollars and seven cents, being the amount subscribed by the people of the United States for the benefit of Gen. Lawton's widow and children." Besides the money, the committee turned over to Mrs. Lawton all the letters received from subscribers to the fund, many of which contain tributes to the character of Gen. Lawton, which will make them family treasures for all time.

FOREST DISTRICT.

To the Preachers in Charge and the Assistants in the Forest District, Mississippi Conference, M. E Church, South—

DEAR BRETHREN: The first round of Quarterly Conferences is ended, and the second begins at once. There is to be noted:

1. A marked improvement in the financial reports over those for the same time last year. Carthage, Raleigh, Shiloh, Vossburg and Heidelburg, and Montrose, deserve special mention.

2. With a few exceptions, the stewards have been more diligent and the people more liberal. In about one-half of the charges the stewards have increased the assessments for pastoral support. In nearly all they have promised to do better work and to be more systematic.

3. The pastors who pressed their collections in January and February have met with fine success. The pastors on Raleigh, Montrose, Decatur, Rose Hill, and the Vossburg and Heidelberg circuits, deserve special mention. Others have, perhaps, done as well since their first Quarterly Conferences were held, but have made no report. May the second Quarterly Conferences be marked by even greater improvement!

4. The treasurer of our Conference Board of Missions informs me that he has received this Conference year more cash from the charges on our district than any other two, or even five, districts in the Conference; yet we have no room for glorying. But if we continue our efforts with unflagging zeal, there will be cause and occasion for great rejoicing.

5. It is a mistake to postpone taking the Conference collections till local work is out of the way. That course discounts the importance of the collections. The true plan is by getting cash and good subscriptions at the beginning of the year to get the collections out of the way of local work.

6. On every road throughout the district there are indications of improvement and progress. Houses are being enlarged, remodeled, or built anew; new and better fences, lands cleared and fields enlarged, saw-mills multiplying. The people are hopeful and cheerful. Abundance of corn, plenty of meat, astonishing prices for cotton, cotton seed and molasses, have relieved many of debt, and left them with more money than they have had for ten years.

Now let me exhort!

1. Let "Veterans' Day" be observed at all preaching-places during March, as ordered by the Annual Conference, and the collections for Conference claimants be taken, if not already. Don't mix this claim with other collections. Take it on its own merit.

2. Press the other collections publicly and privately. Don't use your hats until it becomes necessary to "gather up the fragments, that nothing be lost." Don't connive at a stingy man's practicing a fraud on his own conscience by accepting fifty cents or a dollar from him when he is able to pay ten, twenty, or fifty dollars. Let his money perish with him.

3. Let us determine—God helping us—to bring up all collections in full, whether our salaries be paid or not.

4 Keep the Twentieth Century Fund Movement before the minds of the people, and strive to lay it on their hearts.

5. Do not wait until Saturday, or the day before the Quarterly Conference, to see that preparations have been made and elements provided for the sacrament of the Lord's Supper.

6. Let at least one Woman's Foreign Missionary Society and one Woman's Home Mission Society be organized in each pastoral charge. This is our duty. These societies are "institutions of the church," and our vows bind us to their support. The pastor who deliberately destroys one of these organizations in his charge is faithless, and the pastor who refuses or neglects to help or to organize one, is sadly deficient in more respects than one.

7. Be prompt at your appointments, and begin on time, even if some lazy church members miss your eloquence and reach the church only in time for the benediction.

8. Encourage by example, as well as by precept, the observance of the quarterly fasts.

Let us thank God, take courage, and go forward. Let us live the gospel we profess and preach. Let us not shun to declare the whole counsel of God, and set our faces as flint against the lawlessness that is preached and the lawlessness that is practiced under its influence. Let us seek to be filled with all the fullness of God. T. L. MELLEN, P. E.

DISTRICT DOTS.

It is one of human nature's frailties to be pleased to see itself in print, and that may be the reason I appear here. The desire to experience that pleasure has become so strong that, to my imagination, a brilliant appearance before the public will completely obscure the rank egotism displayed in the process. In justification of my appearance I might say, like Elihu, "I am full of matter, the spirit within me constraineth me;" but I will put that justification on a different basis. Some homely and wise philosopher has said, "If a straw will tickle a man, it is an instrument of happiness." So, if these "Dots" prove instructive, or interesting, or even diverting, they will add something to the general sum of the pleasures of the readers of the ADVOCATE. (Of course, this presumes the readers will read these scintillations, and this presumption is based upon their knowledge of who P. E. is. Everybody knows the P. E., and, therefore, everybody will read them.)

To the uninitiated the making of the appointments of the preachers is very like getting an ancient catapult ready for its work. The Bishop and presiding elders load the machine—placing the preachers in "according to their godly judgments"—and then, at the last moment, the Bishop pulls the trigger, and the preachers go flying to every part of the Conference. In some cases the impact with his work is so sudden and surprising as to make a poor fellow's growth in grace exceedingly questionable for at least a week. Some of the preachers in our district had not yet quite recovered from the shock of the Bishop's catapult when I was last to see them. There were, however, some favorable symptoms which cause me to hope that by this time they are convalescing, and will soon regain their normal condition. I would like much to say something good about our preachers, and they expect me to do it—indeed, they would enjoy it very much—but, alas! I am precluded in a strange way. Some time ago a P. E. had occasion to write about the preachers of his district, and it seemed to me that he used up all the adjectives in sight and available. Now, if I were to attempt such a thing, I should be treading on ground already pre-empted and occupied, and would subject myself to the charge of plagiarism. That P. E.'s procedure on that occasion has shut me up to the use of an English so poverty-stricken that I have not the heart to apply it to set forth the heroism of the men over whom the Bishop has made me superintendent. If, however, I must say something on this point, let me say it, not "in the words which man's wisdom teacheth, but which the Holy Ghost teacheth." (See the last clause of verse 23, chapter viii, Second Corinthians.)

I shall not at this time point out the geographical boundaries of our district. People nowadays care very little for geography, except it be the geography of South Africa, or that of the Philippines. Nor will I describe the general features of our part of the country, nor make a catalogue of the products of our soils, nor rhapsodize over the balminess of our climate, nor "go into hysterics" about the loveliness of our fair women and the manliness of our brave men. With prudent foresight, and in benevolent spirit, I leave all that for "the man that is to come after me."

In my first going forth through our district one thing I saw puzzled me no little. I found people living in seeming contentment in places where I never dreamed a sane human being would go to live. So perplexed was I at this that I questioned a good many persons as to the motives which prompted them to go to such places, and not one of them could give a sound reason. That rather increased my perplexity, and I went to work to unravel this mystery. There is in the common run of folks an inappeasable desire to wander about over the world. It seems to be a constituent of the ordinary human being, and it drives people to go, go, go everywhere. But whence this strange impulse? I have taken the trouble to run back on the historic line to find the initial point, and I believe I have found it in the eleventh chapter of Genesis. At Babel the impulse to scatter was pressed so deeply into the human nature that it is still driving men to wander about over the world. One songster expresses it thus:

"Some dim primeval impulse drives
His footsteps down the years."

It is all right, I suppose, for people to go into these out-of-the-way places, but it is pretty hard on the shepherds who have to look after such wandering sheep. If they would all come out of the swamps and mountains into the green pastures, what a good time we would have!

P. E.

A RESPONSIVE CHURCH.

MR. EDITOR: It was great joy to spend last Sabbath with my flock of twenty-five years ago—the Francis Street Church, St. Joseph, Mo.—whose Twentieth Century Offering, begun a year ago, has now grown to $5,000. The faithful pastor, after looking over the names of the subscribers, finds that the thank-offering represents some fifty names out of a membership of five hundred, and, wisely seeking a blessing for each member of his flock, will seek an offering from each, and hopes thus to add another thousand dollars to the amount already secured, most of which has already been paid. What with the offerings from the Sunday-school, the Epworth League, and the noble women in their different societies, the pastor has good grounds for his hope of securing not less than $6,000.

A mass meeting of the seven congregations of our church in St Joseph was held in Music Hall on Sunday evening, when the noble cause was presented, to be followed up by vigorous efforts in all the churches.

On Monday morning seventeen out of the twenty pastors of the St. Joseph district, under the leadership of their live and energetic presiding elder, met me for a conference, the other three being detained by revival services. Reports showed that already some $8,000 had been secured as a thank-offering from the district, and that the presiding elder had preached on the subject in every charge, and that the pastors fully expected to secure an offering from every member. They wisely call it an "offering," and not a "collection," and see a blessing in it for their people as well as the great cause of Christian education. Under such leadership of spiritual and active preachers the church is moving forward in all her interests, collections are being reported in full, new churches are being built, and many souls converted. It is a striking illustration of a great principle—the history of the pulpit is the history of the church. E. R. HENDRIX.

THE TWENTIETH CENTURY MOVEMENT.

An aggressive presiding elder writes me as follows: "At Fulton the Quarterly Conference received your card, and I want to thank you for it. I used it for a full talk on Twentieth Century Education. Two of the strongest laymen in the charge offered a good resolution, which will be published in the Fulton Herald, with editorial remarks. The editor told me he would be glad to publish anything on the subject he could get. I will send you a list of all the post-offices nearest to my Quarterly Conferences, and hope you may have the time to keep track of me, and send to each Conference, as you have to this, a communication of similar import. I am insisting on the preachers following the plans laid down in the leaflets, i. e.: Divide the membership into groups of 20 or 30, and secure some one to get contributions from each of these. This will give us a small army of workers in this district alone. I mean to secure a competent person to supervise the work in this district, to whom the solicitors and collectors will make regular reports, and he will report to you. By this means I hope to fully cover the entire field, and have each charge to encourage and cheer every other charge. I want every member of our church in this district to have an opportunity—a pressing one—to make a thank-offering. My heart and soul are in it, and I am not going to spare myself for it. I think the plan I have suggested will help me very materially. I will do everything in my power to push this matter as it should be pushed. If I can succeed in getting some suitable method adopted in each charge, and then get it thoroughly worked, enlisting the laity to assist the pastor, it will not only succeed in securing the thank-offering, but will help all the collections hereafter."

That is the letter I have been longing for. The writer has my hearty thanks. He requested that it be withheld from publication, but I am so anxious that others make like adequate effort in behalf of this important enterprise that I give them the benefit of his wise plans, craving the writer's pardon for violating his instruction.

Rev. W. J. Ferguson, Pachuta, writes, "I hope to do much for the Twentieth Century Education Movement in the near future."

Rev. Geo. S. Saunders, Whitney, writes: "I have been talking and preaching on the thank-offering as best I could, and I now will do my best in collecting. I serve a noble people. Bro. Woollard, my presiding elder, has been with me and stressed this interest."

Pickens made a good report last year. The pastor this year, Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, says the Home Mission Society has forwarded in cash twelve and 50-100 dollars, and adds, "I will collect more."

Rev. Thos. Cameron, Como, writes, "Rest assured that I will make a good report on the Twentieth Century Fund from this gilt-edge people, as I will on every other interest of the church."

About one-third of the year has passed, and it is high time for a general forward movement throughout Mississippi. The pastor and congregation not willing to be left behind should bestir themselves. Let preachers note Bishop Hendrix's words, "The history of the pulpit is the history of the church."

J. R. BINGHAM.

NO TIME TO LOSE.

It has been my privilege to visit a number of places in the interest of the Twentieth Century Fund. I have been impressed from the first with the fact that the movement commends itself to everyone. It is approved on practical and on sentimental grounds. It is called an inspiration. I have not heard one word of adverse criticism anywhere. I doubt if our General Conference ever proposed anything that was endorsed with such unanimity. More than this. As far as I have been able to observe, everybody approves the management of the campaign in Mississippi. The praises of Bro. Bingham are heard in the general office at Nashville and in all of our pastoral charges. He deserves it. He is doing just what we knew he would do when he was appointed. His heart, brain, hands and money are freely given. I have just received a well-timed bulletin from him, with the statement that two thousand have been sent out. The seed-sowing has been industriously and wisely done. This is all well; but the time for decisive action has come. I fear the effect of over-confidence. The movement is not going through by its own momentum. It will not do to take it for granted that we are going to succeed. It is not a matter of course. Success will come to us in this, as in everything else, only as result of hard and persistent work. Unless the collections are pressed from this on, we will suffer mortifying disappointment. The thank-offering proposed by our church is smaller in amount than that suggested by any of the other Methodist bodies. We must not fail. We can not afford to fail, and we will not. Let us not incur the reproach of postponing unnecessarily the success that all agree must be achieved. There is no time to lose. W. B. MURRAH.

PRAYER OF CANON WILBERFORCE.

Lord, for to-morrow and its needs
I do not pray:
Help me from stain of sin,
Just for to-day;
Let me both diligently work
And duly pray;
Let me be kind in deed and word,
Just for to-day.
Let me be slow to do my will,
Prompt to obey;
Help me to sacrifice myself,
Just for to-day.
Let me no wrong nor idle word
Unthinking say;
Set thou thy seal upon my lips,
Just for to-day.
So for the morrow and its needs
I do not pray:
But keep me, guide me, hold me, Lord,
Just for to-day.

LETTER FROM "GILDEROY."

Between quarterly meetings I am lying over at Big Creek, in Calhoun county, in as lovely a section of country as I know in North Mississippi. I am now with Rev. J. M. Hampton, a supernumnated member of our Conference. His head is clear, his body strong, his heart warm, but his lower limbs have given away, and he gets about the house with difficulty and in pain.

Bro. Hampton was born the ninth of March, 1817, and in eight days from to-day he will be eighty-three years old. He lived with his wife sixty-two years two months and five days, when she went home, now nearly one year ago. She was a member of the church for seventy-three years.

Bro. Hampton has been living in the same house for fifty-four years. The old man has come to the reminiscential period of life, and it is delightful to sit and hear him talk of the old days and the old ways. It occurred to me that it might be well to get from him some of these old things while he yet lingers on the shores of time.

Bro. Hampton was always full of humor, and always took a cheerful view of life. He is none the less humorous and cheerful, now that he is old and feeble. He reads good books and papers, and the precious Word of God, from daylight till nine o'clock at night. It is a matter of devout thankfulness to him that his eyes have not failed.

Bro. Hampton joined the Memphis Conference at Jackson, Tenn., in November, 1847. Bishop Joshua Soule presided at that Conference. I was then a boy in my ninth year. I feel like a boy in Bro. Hampton's presence still. His ministerial life and work have been spent within the bounds of the North Mississippi Conference. I suppose he has done about as much hard work for as small pay as any man who lives on Mississippi soil. His first charge was the Coffeeville colored mission as junior preacher with Rev. J. W. Bates, but soon after Christmas, Rev. T. L. Bowell, presiding elder, changed him and sent him as junior to Rev. Isaac N. Manley, then on the Aberdeen circuit. This was then a four weeks' circuit of eight appointments, but embraced a wide circle of country. The next year he was sent to the Richmond circuit, a compact work of eighteen appointments in the fork of Old Town Creek and Tombigby river, to be filled every three weeks, and covering one hundred and forty four square miles of territory. Here he stayed two years, and the old man's eyes still flash fire, and his voice becomes musical, as he tells of the wonderful revivals of religion, and of the hundreds converted and added to the church. This old man lingers long and lovingly over the battles of the past, and the mighty victories won in the name of our Lord. The next two years he was on the Fulton circuit, another work of eighteen appointments, on the east side of Tombigbee, and between the river and Bull Mountain Creek, then the line between the Alabama and Memphis Conferences. Bull Mountain is a creek, and not a mountain, though strangers often look for the mountain when crossing the stream. Here, as before, there were mighty revivals of religion, in which many were added to the church, most of whom have long since gone to their eternal home. At the end of the second year Rev. Moses Brock, the presiding elder, told Bro. Hampton to pack up and move to the home where he now lives, as he would see to it that he had work nearer home. Since then he and his wife spent one year—1861—in Tishomingo county, on the Rienzi circuit. In all, along at different times, Bro. Hampton has served the Pittsboro circuit ten years. In this charge he lives, and here he is loved and honored by all, both old and young, white and black, saints and sinners, and by the members of all denominations.

It is a wonderful power to have lived a long, clean, pure life of devotion to God and his cause in one community. They tell me that, taken all in all, this is the best community in Calhoun county, and all agree that this is due largely to the character and influence of Bro. Hampton. His home has been a center of grace and of goodness to a wide extent of country. The young people, as well as the old, come to see him and to cheer him in his hours of loneliness at home. A bright, happy, cheerful-tempered old person is admired by all who come and go. This tends greatly to commend the grace of God, especially to the young.

Bro. Hampton has a young heart inside of him. Here the weary itinerants have found a warm welcome and a congenial home for fifty-four years past. The widowed daughter of Bro. Hampton, Sister Provine, herself well advanced in years, keeps house for her father, and gives him every attention he needs. The pinch and press of poverty is the only cloud that shadows the old brother's sun, now fast sloping to its setting behind the western hills of a long, long life. Soon the sunshine of God on the plains of glory will fill and thrill his blood washed and redeemed soul through the eternal years of God.

REPLY TO DR. WEEMS.

MR. EDITOR: I have read with interest, but without approval, the letter of Dr. Weems, recently published in the ADVOCATE, criticising the proposition of Dr. Sheldon to publish a paper for one week, and inspect all matter that goes into it, putting it to the test of, "What would Jesus do?" The Doctor takes the ground that this purpose of Dr. Sheldon savors, to a large extent, of fanaticism, presumption, possibly blasphemy and kindred sins. He also accuses Dr. Sheldon of what seems to him a crime, in assuming to accept or reject matter for the columns of his paper under the inspiration of the teachings of our Lord while on earth, and the general trend of his gospel. To all of this I am compelled to demur, and to say that I do not see anything in the proposition of Dr. Sheldon that is at all repugnant to the feelings of "a truly pious" soul, or that has the appearance of dishonoring the Master by making his teachings and the principles of the gospel the medium of inspection of the "matter" that is to go into the paper. I have been badly taught if the Son of man, his life, his utterances, and his character, are not to be taken as the guide of his disciples and the test of their discipleship. In other words, if he is not our Great Exemplar, we have none, and if he is, it is not presumptuous in Dr. Sheldon, or in me, to put my life and actions to the test, "What would my Master do under similar circumstances?" If this is true in regard to the lives and actions of individuals, it is equally true in regard to such an undertaking as the one in question.

Dr. Weems seems to have forgotten that it is a fundamental principle of Methodist piety, of the old style, that a man should carry his religion into his business as much as into his house of worship, and that, when he does this, he is constantly applying the test, to which he objects, to each and every business project or undertaking. If this is the correct thing to do in our daily life—and he will not have the temerity to deny it—where is the presumption, fanaticism or impropriety in Dr. Sheldon applying the same principle to the publication of a daily paper? If a merchant, an honest Christian one, sees an ignorant customer enter his store, and the devil tells him that here is an opportunity to do a little cheating for profit, he would naturally, if unconsciously, apply the same test and reject the proposition, as the editor would, under the same inspiration, exclude from his columns any and all "matter" that had even the appearance of evil. This, and only this, is the pith and substance of Dr. Sheldon's proposition. To say that I am presumptuous, or that I dishonor my Divine Master by applying the test in question, is to make a monstrous charge. If I have a guide in my moral and religious life, that guide is God's Word and its Author, and if I am denied the privilege of applying the test of these to what I do, or what others do, I am in no better fix than are the blind led by the blind.

Dr. Weems asks, "Is it less than presumptuous wickedness" for Dr. Sheldon to examine the contents of his paper by this test, he being the judge of what would please the Master, or, if you prefer it, "determine what our Lord would accept or reject if he were in charge?" The query is a singular one to come from a minister of the gospel, to say the least. When the Master was about to leave his disciples, after commissioning them as his ambassadors, he gave them the comforting promise of his continued presence with them, even to the end.

Now, will Dr. Weems be kind enough to tell us the object of the continued presence of the Master, if it is not for the purpose of guiding, directing, comforting and keeping his children until their earthly course is run, and they "see him as he is" in "that upper and better country"? I have read, with much pleasure and some profit, Dr. Sheldon's book, "In His Steps," and while the actuality of the theory can not be found, except in rare instances, yet no one who believes in the promise of our Lord, "My grace is sufficient for thee," can, for a moment, doubt the possibility, if not the bounden duty, of every child of God measuring up to this standard. Aside from all this, it is very questionable whether the Master would approve the hostility towards the scheme of Dr. Sheldon manifested by Dr. Weems and others. One of the disciples said to our Lord, "Master, we saw one casting out devils in thy name, and we forbade him, because he followeth not with us." If Dr. Sheldon can do any good to those for whom Christ died by his plan, for heaven's sake let him do it, and if a few more of us will adopt the test in question in the fear of God, we will, undoubtedly, attain a higher and happier grade of Christian experience. We would like the test better, or rather its verbiage, if it was couched in the following words, "What would the Lord Jesus do?" It has become fearfully common for preachers and people to speak of our Lord as they would of Smith, Jones, Brown, or any other passing acquaintance, without prefix or suffix. This, in my humble judgment, savors far more of presumption and irreverence than does the application of the test in question by a sincere and true child of God, saved by divine grace and led by the Holy Spirit.

Yours truly, REX.

THE BROTHERHOOD.

The Virginia Conference Brotherhood was organized in 1881. In those years the Conference has lost eighty-three members. Only nineteen of these were not in connection with the Brotherhood. The families of the sixty-four who belonged to it received an average of $718.37. They have 277 members in the Conference, 221 of whom are in the Brotherhood. This leaves fifty-six non-members, only twenty-five of whom are eligible to membership, the remaining thirty-one being debarred by having declined application for over five years from the time of being admitted on probation in the Conference, as provided in their By-laws.

These facts, gleaned from a recent number of the Richmond Christian Advocate, show a much better state of things in their Brotherhood than exists in ours. The interests of our Brotherhood have been neglected. As president, I have not pushed the organization into notice at our Conference sessions as much as it deserved to have been. I have felt this all the time, but it is not my nature to be self-assertive. So fully convinced was I that another could better preside over the interest of the Brotherhood, that, six years ago, I declined re-election to the office of president. But two years ago I was again made president without my consent.

At our last Conference we met after service one night, and a resolution was passed making it my duty to bring the interests of the Brotherhood before the Conference in open session. I conferred with the Bishop, and he agreed to let me do so in connection with the memorial service. As Bro. Pugh was a member of the Brotherhood, it seemed to me to be appropriate to do so. But when all had spoken of him who desired to speak, the time was so far gone that I was ruled out, though I arose and addressed the Bishop, and so the matter passed without further notice. I do not exonerate myself; I ought to have been more persistent.

I see that in Virginia the Brotherhood has Saturday night for their annual meeting, and there is no other service that night. We will have to do something of that kind if we make it what it ought to be. We may expect opposition, but we must move together, for our cause is a worthy one, and it has suffered through neglect long enough. W. B. LEWIS.

REV. FREEMAN ASBURY WHITSON.

The year nineteen hundred, the last year of the old century, witnessed the death of one of the purest and best men that ever lived, the Rev. F. A. Whitson. Just before dawn on the seventh of February, in the parsonage at New Albany, Miss., the last scene was enacted.

Bro. Whitson had not been well for some time, and he had worn himself down in caring for his wife and four children, all of whom had been sick with measles, and when the attack of pneumonia came, he was too weak to resist its awful ravages. One cold day, early in the year, he went over to the cemetery to bury the child of a friend, and there he was chilled, and came home sick, and took his bed, never to get up again. But it is of his noble nature, his splendid Christian character, his guilelessness, that I would speak especially. All through his boyhood he was a consecrated Christian. He loved to think and talk about heaven when other boys were full of frolic and fun. He had one of the noblest natures I ever knew; never unkind, never critical, never harsh in his thoughts of others, but he was in every sense an Israelite in whom there was no guile. His absolute self-forgetfulness in his desire to help others was the best illustration of altruism that I have seen. He was a devoted husband and father. His wife leaned on him, and though he held strict ideas of discipline, his children loved and adored him. He was the light of home to his loved ones, and his fondest thought was for the comfort and good of them all.

Bro. Whitson was a successful preacher. His sermons were models of strength, and they were delivered with power. He always won his way to the hearts of the people, whether they were cultured, as he did at Pontotoc, or whether they lived in the backwoods and worshiped in a log school-house. There was such sincerity of purpose, such earnestness of manner, such pathos in his delivery, that he was pre-eminently successful in holding revival services, especially on his own charge. His deep piety always impressed itself upon the people, and everyone knew that he walked near his Lord. But his work is done, and he has gone up on high to deliver his commission to the Master and receive his reward. Oh, was not that a scene on that early morning when, in sight of the celestial city, he said, "And he showed me a great city"? He was struggling for breath, and, though unable to speak, he pressed his hand upon his wife's face, and whispered, "I am most home." Heaven was no strange place to him, for his father and mother and many other loved ones had gone on before him.

Brother, farewell; we will meet thee again. T. W. LEWIS.

LETTER FROM THE PHILIPPINES.

(By permission of Sister J. P. Drake, we publish the following personal letter from Rev. J. A Randolph, chaplain of the Sixth U. S. Infantry, now in the Philippines. We feel sure that it will be read with much interest.)

MY DEAR SISTER DRAKE: I am in receipt of your letter of Nov. 25. I thank you for the substantial interest taken in "My boys" of the Sixth, as you also did in those of the Third Mississippi. Your contributions are the only ones I have received from my own State. The Christian Commission and the United States Soldiers' Christian Aid Association have sent me valuable contributions of literature. The average soldier of the regular army is an intelligent man, and appreciates and enjoys a good class of literature. Everything of the kind helps to keep him from the temptations of army life. I am also trying to do some work among the natives, principally in the way of teaching them English. I now have four classes, to each of which I give an hour a day. I have had no literature in the Spanish language for distribution, but I bought out of my own pocket some Spanish-English Testaments, which I hope to place where they will do good. The great majority of the people of these islands are shut off from all literature because they know no language save their own dialect, and it has no literature. The people were never taught Spanish. The missionaries to these islands will have to construct text-books before they can teach the people English. These people are anxious to learn English, and will, I think, cordially receive the missionaries who come as teachers or physicians. They, of course, know no church but the Roman, and have the same prejudices of the ignorant everywhere.

Will you kindly give my personal thanks to everyone who contributed in any way toward the "barrel"? May the Lord reward you and your good husband!

You will be interested in knowing that the health of the boys of the Sixth is remarkably good, and the climate of Negros is ideal. I am now with the troops in Oriental Negros. There has not been a case of serious sickness in this district, except one case of small-pox, and we have about four hundred soldiers here. There is much small-pox among the natives. My own health has been perfect.

Mrs. R. and the children are at Fort Sam Houston, Texas. Our children are at the age when they must be in school; hence the necessity for their remaining in the States. It is now eight months since I left them; eight months of wonderful experiences to me. During the time I have heard the Mauser bullet hum, have been on a steamer when she ran full speed on the rocks, and where we escaped seemingly but by a miracle; I can not tell the times I have been exposed to small-pox and leprosy, but the Lord has brought me safely through so far, and I am encouraged to trust him more than ever. I feel that I am where he wants me, and certainly where a preacher is needed. Again I thank you.

Your brother,

JOHN A. RANDOLPH.

THE ARCADIA DISTRICT PREACHERS' MEETING.

About twelve of the pastors, from as many charges in the district, were present at the annual meeting called by the presiding elder of the Arcadia district. We met in Ruston, the most flourishing town, in an industrial way, in this ecclesiastical territory, Tuesday, Feb. 20, at 2 o'clock P. M.

Rev. B. T. Crews, our beloved presiding elder, always faithful in the performance of duty, occupied the chair. Rev. C. P. Smith was elected secretary.

The following brethren of the ministry were present: Revs. H. R. Singleton, T. J. Martin, H. B. Thomasson, B. H. Sheppard, J. M. Franklin, J. H. Brown, W. E. Akin, W. A. Clark, and C. P. Smith. Revs. W. J. Elliott and Philip Burkett, local preachers, were also present. Revs. S. J. Davies and H. W. Ledbetter were in attendance Wednesday and Thursday. All these ministers of the gospel of Jesus Christ were in the best of spirits, full of hope and faith, and, with the hearty good cheer which makes the Methodist Church the most unconquerable social force in our country to-day, they carried happiness into every home they visited, and came away, after three days of complete enjoyment of the warm-hearted hospitality of the church and people of Ruston, with a larger vision of their life-work, and a spiritual uplift which will tell for great good in the varied work of the Methodist ministry in this fair field of North Louisiana in this last year of the dying century. God help us make a triumphant death for this memorable century, and may we usher in the morning of the twentieth century with all of our hoped-for achievements wrought out in fine gold, and all our stakes set to help win the world for Christ in the first half of the coming one hundred years!

Among the subjects discussed were the following of vital interest to our cause and to the general church of every name: Revivals, Pastoral Visiting, and Church Papers. These topics were ably and fully discussed by different brethren. The following subjects are of especial and vital interest at this time: The Twentieth Century Movement, and The Peculiar Doctrines of Methodism. The Baptism of Infants was also discussed. We wish we had time and space to give some extracts from the very good speeches made by some of the preachers present. Suffice it to say, that every subject received a careful handling, and it is evident to all who were present that the meeting was in every sense a success.

The Christian Life.

THE GREAT TRUTHS.

An understanding of the great truths of the gospel is essential to a desirably intelligent and influential Christian character, and great pains ought to be taken to instruct all believers, especially all new converts, in regard to them. Yet the knowledge of them all is not necessary for the salvation of the soul. He who illustrates genuine penitence and faith may indeed be only one of Christ's "little ones," but he is truly Christ's, and ought to be recognized as such. Yet he himself ought not to be content to remain as a Christian on the lowest level of intelligence. It is at once his duty and his privilege to try to understand the great doctrines of the gospel, and their value, even for him, will soon reveal itself.

The tendency in our time is to recognize the simplicity of the essentials of Christianity, and sometimes there is evident even a disposition to make less of them than they deserve. This should be guarded against. They are none the less inevitably necessary because they are so few and simple.—The Congregationalist.

How many there are to-day pretending to be loving both God and the world, men and women trying to touch the things that they should hate, and yet pretending to be living in the closest friendship of Jesus Christ. It is easy to put on the garments, but it is easier to see through the thin, mocking gauze of them the true impossibility of such living. Just so truly as God and the world are at war, so the moment our lives are laid down in uncompromising obedience to him they are laid down in utter and uncompromising contrariety with the things he has told us we are not to love. We must choose between the evil love of the world and the overflowing love of God.—Robert E. Speer.

The life hid with Christ in God is the source of power in pleading publicly with men for God. A visitor to Spurgeon's study, who heard him pour out his soul in prayer one Saturday night, declared, "A man who can pray like that can outpreach the world!" A noted American preacher of great brilliancy and power once remarked in an address to the theological students of an Eastern seminary, "If I were a better man, I would be a better preacher!" Manhood must back the message. A preacher can only carry his hearers just about as far as he has gone himself.—The Presbyterian.

"The Lord will provide," but he will not provide everything. He gives a man brains, but he does not supply a willingness to use them. He puts the raw materials of manufacture in the way of humanity, but he does not present ready-made the finished products of the loom or lathe. There is no beatitude for the lazy, and even heaven provides small comfort for the stupid. What God blesses is faith, vigor, alertness, and patient perseverance. God works with those who are willingly workers together with him.—Exchange.

Five minutes spent in the companionship of Christ every morning—aye, two minutes, if it is face to face and heart to heart—will change the whole day, will make every thought and feeling different; will enable you to do things for his sake that you would not have done for your own sake, or for any one's sake.—Prof. Drummond.

Patience is not the tame submission to the inevitable, but it is the brave adjustment of our thought to the conditions of our life.—Dr. Alexander McKenzie.

FROM THE WORK.

INDIAN MISSION.

The Lord's work is still going on in this part of his vineyard. He wonderfully blessed us last year, and he is still blessing us. We have received two members since we came from Conference, and we think the mission is in better shape than it has been for several years. Our presiding elder held our first Quarterly Conference on the first of March, and we Choctaws are always glad to see Bro. Mellen come. We have extended our church ten feet, and we want to ceil our church and re-cover it.

Now we ask the good people to help us a little. If every preacher in the Mississippi Conference will send the small amount of twenty-five cents, we can ceil and re-cover it. We will do the work ourselves. Please send it to Bro. Mellen, of Forest, or myself at Toles. It is more blessed to give than to receive.

W. P DONNELL, P. C.

Toles, Miss., March 5, 1900.

BOYCE, LA.

On Feb. 23 we began a meeting at this place, which continued ten days, with Rev. Clarence B. Stronse, of Virginia, in the pulpit. From the very first service the attendance was good. At several services people were turned away because there was no room for them in the building. Bro. Stronse preached the gospel without fear or favor from first to last. He was uncompromising, but denounced sin in all its forms.

Some of the visible results are as follows: About one hundred professed conversion, and pledged themselves to renounce all, and follow Christ. The Methodist Church will have a number of accessions, and there will also be accessions to all Protestant Churches in town. I feel that we have a stronger force of workers for the Master than before. Perfect harmony exists among the members of all Protestant Churches, and we are expecting greater things in the future.

A. W. TURNER, P. C.

ESCATAWPA, MISS.

We reached here Dec. 30 to begin our second year's work on the Escatawpa circuit. When we drove up to the gate the first thing that greeted our eyes was a half-barrel of flour on the gallery, and we had not more than gotten good warm before in came a delegation of ladies bearing various bundles, as expressions of their welcome to the preacher and family.

Our reception on our return here has been very kind indeed. We hope to do a better year's work this year than last. The officials are all working better and more systematically than last year.

We have recently insured our parsonage for five years, which secures us against loss by fire or lightning.

Our Ladies' Aid and Parsonage and Home Mission Society is doing good work. They held their Twentieth Century service last night, and the result was very gratifying.

Our prayer to God is that every church composing the charge may have a sweeping revival.

We were rained out at our first Quarterly Conference. Our faithful presiding elder was on hand, but did not get to preach. However, we are looking forward to the second Quarterly Conference, when we trust that the weather will be more favorable.

W. J. DAWSON.

DE KALB, MISS.

Our new presiding elder preached for us last Monday evening (26), and held the Quarterly Conference, Tuesday (27) morning. We fell in love with him at once. His sermon was highly spoken of by the brethren. Bro. Guice has executive ability, and will manage the district well. A goodly sum was reported at the Conference for the support of the ministry. Tuesday, 8 P. M., while we were thinking over the good things Bro. Guice had said, and planning for advance work the second quarter, all at once we heard knocking at the door, and we were soon aware that the parsonage was being attacked. To prevent any serious damage, we threw wide the doors, and Methodists, Presbyterians and Baptists came in laden with just such good things in the way of edibles as the temporal man enjoys. God bless the brethren of DeKalb. Surely the lines have fallen to us in pleasant places.

HERVIE MELLARD, P. C.

CAPITOL STREET CHURCH, JACKSON, MISS.

Two months have elapsed since the pastor received a most cordial reception from the good people of Capitol Street Church. A most excellent home was provided within convenient distance of this church. Steps are being taken to build in the near future a suitable parsonage, which, when completed, will be a preacher's home, second to none in our Conference. The membership, which is quite large, includes many noble and generous Christian people. There are two Epworth Leagues. Notwithstanding much prevailing sickness, the congregations are large.

Last Sunday, Bishop Galloway favored us with an eloquent sermon from John viii, 32, after which the Conference collections were raised. It is said that years ago Bishop Galloway formed the nucleus of this present church by preaching in the West Jackson Engine-house. The seed has grown into a sturdy plant, which he still delights to water. The people dearly love him, and are delighted when he preaches. He informed the writer that, when here, his rule of preaching in the two local churches is, "Turn about;" so we will have the pleasure of hearing from him frequently.

Dr. W. B. Murrah has also preached for us, and the people love to hear him.

Rev. J. M. Cowan, local, late of the Mississippi Conference, is engaged in business here, and kindly filled the pulpit during the illness of the pastor. He will be a useful man, and the people will gladly hear him preach as opportunity may afford.

Last week the pastor had the pleasure of addressing the theological students at Millsaps College. They are a fine body of young men, and soon their presence will be felt in the itinerancy. The college is in a highly prosperous condition, and we hear much praise of Dr. Bishop, the new professor of English.

We are planning for great things this year, notably in the way of the Twentieth Century Movement, and in planting abundantly our church literature.

C. F. EMERY.

March 2, 1900.

ACQUAINTANCE WITH GOD.

"Acquaint now thyself with him and be at peace" (Job. xxii, 21) Remember that acquaintance with God can come through no casual introduction. Calling on God in the morning and leaving your visiting card of devotion, but having no care as to whether you find him at home and really catch sight of his face; talking to God through an interpreter—through the minister or the sacraments or the hymn-book, but knowing nothing of real and intimate personal conversation with him—this is not acquaintance with God. It is a kind of society etiquette in which we seek to be polite to our neighbors, even though we care nothing about them. Beware of formalism. It is the decorum of religion. And what will it avail, though we be deeply skilled therein, if we know not what it is to have "fellowship with the Father and with his Son, Jesus Christ"? What earnest prayer! What profound meditation upon the Word! What chastening of the inward and outward cross there must be in order that we may truly know God! * * Oh, Christians, be intimate with God. There are two poles to our life; and if we would be near to God, we must be remote from the world. Let the earthward senses be blunted—love of pleasure, love of fashion, love of display—and just in proportion will the heavenly affection grow stronger.—Dr. A. J. Gordon.

THE LOSS OF SELF.

The nearer one comes to an utter sinking of self in Christian service, yielding all to Christ and for his glory without reserve, the more acceptable that service will be to him. There is room for the closest self-examination at this point on the part of everyone. Am I jealous of my own rather than God's glory in what I undertake? Do I really suffer pain when the discovery is made to me that a form of selfishness still remains? Do I resist God's methods of showing this weakness to me? Am I more anxious to have the hidden evil entirely removed than to make a "fair show in the flesh" before men?

It is pitiful to mark how the choicest talents are sometimes lost to the world by a reluctance to yield all to God and for his glory. Could we measure the true standard as God wishes it to be realized in our Christian activities, we would see occasion, doubtless, for deepest contrition on account of our self-exaltation in what we say and do in his name.—Selected.

Patient, hopeful waiting is hard work when it is the only work possible to us in an emergency. But patient waiting is in its time the highest duty of a faithful soul.—H. C. Trumbull.

It ever superstition could find excuse, it would be when the expectant mother, calendar in hand, ponders the fortunate days and hopes that the baby's birthday may fall on a lucky time. It is natural to wish the best of fortune for those we love. Why not will fortune as well as wish it for the child?

The greatest fortune any mother can bestow on her child is a healthy body and a happy mind, and with this great fortune every mother may endow the child if she will. The child's stock of health is what the mother supplies. The weak and worried woman has a very slender stock of health to bestow on the baby.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription makes mothers healthy and happy. It does away with the misery of morning sickness. It strengthens the nerves, gives the body a feeling of buoyancy, makes the mind cheerful, gives vigor and elasticity to the organs peculiarly feminine, and baby's advent to the world is free from danger and painless.

"My first two babies were still-born, and I suffered every thing but death," writes Mrs. Euphemia Falconer, of Trent, Muskegon Co., Mich. "I was reduced to 109 pounds. When I was three months along with my third child I was taken with hemorrhage or flooding and came near having a miscarriage from female weakness. For two months I was under the care of our doctor, but was getting weaker all the time until I sent and got three bottles of 'Favorite Prescription.' I improved fast and continued to take your medicine until baby was born, and he is healthy and all right. My health has been good ever since. I now weigh 165 pounds."

There is no alcohol, whisky or other intoxicant in "Favorite Prescription," neither does it contain any opium or other narcotic.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets do not react on the system. They are a perfect medicine.

In California.

The Golden State is seriously considering the necessity of quarantining against consumptives. This means that God's fresh air and sunshine, nowhere more entrancing and beautiful than on the Pacific slope, may be denied to the unfortunate sufferers. Thousands have been greatly benefited and many cured by the delicious atmosphere of California, and it appears a most cruel measure, even though sanctioned by medical. Many persons now in the advanced stages of consumption, and surely doomed, could have been cured by early resort to that most gracious healing remedy, MARSDEN'S PECTORAL BALM.

Beef Steak in a Bottle.

That fresh, juicy beef, ready for digestion, can be made into a delicious cordial is a marvel, but chemistry has accomplished it. Sick people at a distance from markets and needing the nourishment afforded by beef tea can procure Dicks' NUTRITIVE ELIXIR and find it the best liquid food and stimulant known. For loss of appetite, weak digestion, debility, typhoid fever, and consumption it is invaluable.

EFFECTS TOO PLAIN FOR HAIR-SPLITTING.

A technical and tedious discussion has been indulged in recently by a few pretentious scientists as regards the nutritive value of alcohol, and the result of their limited experiments has been eagerly caught up and widely published by the friends of the liquor traffic. We might as well, however, talk of the food value of opium or arsenic, and such like, as to talk about the nutritive properties of alcohol, which is, without doubt, one of the greatest enemies to health and good morals known to man. Whatever slight food properties alcohol may possess, the evil effects attending the use of alcoholic beverages are too plain and too disastrous to be disputed.

Says the editor of the New York Advocate: "Although Prof. Atwater claims to have proved that alcohol contains some nutritive qualities, he does not deny that alcohol, except in very small doses, is a poison; and some of the worst poisons that are forbidden to be sold contain some food elements, and if alcohol contained more food elements than it appears to from the limited experiments of Prof. Atwater, and contained what else it has, when used as a beverage it would still be the underminer of brain, nerve, stomach, liver, kidneys, and the whole man, whether he be a moderate drinker or a drunkard."

Who does not know that every saloon is a drunkard-maker, a poverty-breeder, a generator of brawls and oftimes of murder? Who does not know that it is the alcohol in wine, beer and whisky that renders them intoxicating, and that in time converts sober men into sots, honest laborers into reckless spendthrifts, wise men into prating fools, law-abiding citizens into base criminals, kind husbands and fathers into monsters of beastliness and cruelty? Despite the hair-splitting of the scientists, the general public can not be deceived into believing that alcohol is a harmless and important article of nutrition like milk. A thousand times over it has been proved that "wine is a mocker," that "strong drink is raging," and that the use of rum generally leads to rioting, rags, and ruin.

In this connection let us notice a few undeniable facts. For example, of the indoor patients of the hospitals of Paris, forty-six per cent. are habitual drunkards. According to reliable insurance statistics, the life of the total abstainer is about thirteen years longer than that of the moderate drinker. Hence insurance companies are now exceedingly chary of taking risks on habitual drinkers.

The distinguished Lord Roberts, of the British Army, who has just added fresh laurels to his great reputation by his successes in the South African war, not long ago gave some remarkable testimony regarding temperance in the military service. Though noted for his freedom from prejudice and mere sentimentality, he calls attention to a striking contrast in the reports on discipline between convictions of abstainers and non-abstainers. Among abstainers the convictions were 4.12 in the 1000, while among drinkers there were 36.38 per 1000, or nearly nine times as many. Again, the admissions to hospital were for abstainers 208 48 per 1000, and for drinkers 301.52 per 1000. "These," remarked Lord Roberts, "were two points which it was impossible for anybody to gainsay." He wisely adds, "It is not a friendly thing to give drink to soldiers."

Yet Attorney-General Griggs, of anti-canteen law fame, and a few United States army officers of high rank, would have us believe that liquor is not only good for the American soldier, but so necessary that the law must not be allowed to stand in the way of its sale in the camp.

The great general, Von Moltke, said that beer was a far more dangerous enemy to Germany than the armies of France.

SHELTER WORK OF THE SALVATION ARMY.

The local section of the Salvation Army—an organization that has in a multitude of ways proved itself to be a true friend of the poor and the distressed—has just inaugurated in this city what is known as the "shelter work," which is indeed a charity of the most practical and praiseworthy character. A large and stately building located in an attractive part of the city, has been rented, and fitted up so as to furnish wholesome food and clean, comfortable lodging to destitute men and women who may be in need of such assistance. The "Shelter" has been provided with beds, baths, work-rooms, and an ample kitchen, and will accommodate about one hundred persons. For the small sum of ten cents any unfortunate who wishes lodging, and who is able to pay that amount, will be given a bed. Meals will also be furnished at similar low rates. Where any applicant for food or shelter is wholly impecunious, his wants will be ministered to, and he will be given a chance to pay for the accommodation he receives by performing work of some kind.

It is not the aim of those in charge to run a "free soup-house" for indolent vagabonds and shiftless mendicants, but, by means of the industrial feature connected therewith, the purpose is to "help the poor to help themselves." Those who show little or no disposition to work will not be allowed to remain in the "Shelter." It is expected that, in a short time, the institution will be self-sustaining, but at present funds are greatly needed to give it thorough equipment and put it upon a firm basis. This "shelter work" is not a mere experiment, but has been tried by the Salvation Army in other cities with signal success. There ought to be in every large city an institution of this kind, to which the hungry, homeless, and unemployed men and women, so often picked up in the slum districts, may be sent temporarily, and given opportunity, as well as encouragement, to start life anew. Where no such charity exists, the police station is usually about the only place where the shelterless can find lodging.

The institution is conducted along strictly non-denominational lines, and has received the unqualified endorsement, not only of the Methodist ministers of New Orleans, but also of many leading ministers of other churches.

We hope the charitably disposed will rally heartily to the support of this noble philanthropy. All donations should be sent to Adjutant A. W. Frazee, 619 St. Charles street.

DISGUSTING ATTENTION PAID TO A SCOUNDREL.

The outrageous doings of a conscienceless scoundrel who, a week or more ago, palmed himself off in this city as "Capt. Clarke," of the United States steamer "Texas," and duped a beautiful and innocent girl into marrying him after only three days' acquaintance, have furnished the daily papers of this city all the elements of a first-class sensation. Nor have they been slow to improve the opportunity. The base perpetrator of this wicked deception has suddenly been given all the prominence of a hero. The conduct of the papers in having so much to say about the misdeeds of this genuine scamp largely accounts for the surprising amount of attention shown him by the public; but it does not wholly explain the origin of the disgusting and morbid curiosity that has caused people by the hundred to flock to the jail where this malefactor is incarcerated, in order to get a peep at him and, perhaps, talk with him.

It almost passes belief that any self-respecting man or woman would want to visit a base wretch who is utterly unworthy of the notice of decent people. Within a day or two after the imprisonment of the bogus "Capt. Clarke," not less than 300 women visited the jail where he is confined.

The editor of the Times-Democrat rightly says: "The incident is a symptom of deep-seated disease in the community which endures the disgrace. There are certain broad lines of demarcation between right and wrong which must not, even for an instant, be suffered to become indistinct. The sanctity of marriage is the foundation-stone of the social edifice, and the man who trifles with such an obligation is the most dangerous of outlaws. The ministers of justice can not too quickly take the punishment of this travesty of manhood in hand, and his admirers should be promptly placed in the pillory of the public scorn."

It would be hard indeed to find a more impressive illustration of the danger attending hasty marriages than the one furnished by this incident. Women can not be too careful about learning of the character and antecedents of the men they expect to wed, especially where the acquaintance has been short. In the present instance a little inquiry would have averted a world of trouble.

ORGANIZED CHARITY.

As in every large city there is always a considerable amount of poverty and distress to be relieved, how to dispense charity most wisely and effectively is an important question. Indiscriminate alms-giving often works as much harm as it does good by encouraging impostnre and indolence. The least deserving are usually the most forward and importunate in the solicitation of charity, while the really deserving have to be hunted out. To prevent imposture, and in order to relieve real destitution more promptly and thoroughly, benevolent societies now find it best, as a rule, to proceed on the co-operative plan. Where such societies act independently of each other, undeserving persons often obtain aid from several of them in succession, and there is little chance of detecting the fraud.

Recognizing the urgent necessity of co-operative effort, three years ago a number of leaders in benevolent work in this city formed the Organized Charities Association, which society, though so young, has already done a vast amount of good. During its existence aid has been rendered to over 8,000 persons, the amount expended in charity of various forms aggregating $5,597. By personal investigation of every case of distress reported, and by systematic recording of facts, this society is doing much to prevent mendicancy and fraud, and reveals to the charitable opportunities for genuine Samaritanism. In addition to administering relief in emergency cases, this society aids the poor by furnishing them employment of various kinds, as, for instance, sewing and laundry-work for women, and for men, wood-sawing and the manufacture of cheap articles.

This nonsectarian organization is doing a noble work, and ought to be encouraged and helped by Christian people generally. As the emergency fund of the society is now entirely empty, we hope the friends of the poor will respond at once with liberal contributions.

"Whoso stoppeth his ears at the cry of the poor, he also shall cry himself, but shall not be heard."

A BLOW AT THE BLIND TIGER.

We rejoice to note that the Mississippi Legislature, during its late session, passed two measures that, if taken advantage of, will deal the blind tiger a heavy blow, and we hope will be his death-knell. Previous to the enactment of these measures, persons suspected of illicit whisky-selling had far too many loop-holes of escape.

Says the Jackson correspondent of the Times-Democrat in speaking of this matter:

"The Legislature has done its best to dispose of the blind-tiger question, and it now remains to be seen just how far the evil has been remedied by the two bills that have passed the Senate and the House, and received the executive approval. Under the terms of the first law the possession of a Federal revenue license is made prima-facie evidence of illicit retailing, and the burden of proof is thus transferred under these circumstances to the person accused. As the law now is at present, the possession of a license can be introduced in evidence as a circumstance tending to show guilt, but it does not afford the strong presumption of guilt sufficient to make out a prima-facie case. Another section of this same act provides that the owners of buildings, any lessee, sub-lessee or occupant of any building or part of building which is used for purposes of unlawful retailing, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor on conviction of the party accused. They are subject to a penalty of not less than $50, nor more than $500, and may be imprisoned for not less than one week or more than three months.

"The second law abolishes property in liquors kept or sold in violation of the law, and provides for a confiscation of the same after conviction. The law also permits the search of houses suspected of being the location of a blind tiger on an affidavit of any responsible citizen, that he believes liquors are being illegally sold therein. On such search the possession of whisky worth $200 or more is made prima-facie evidence of illicit sale. If the value of the whisky found is greater than $200, the case will be taken from the original jurisdiction of the court of the justice of the peace and transferred to the circuit court."

SPARE NOT THE GREATER EVIL ALSO.

Our enterprising neighbor, the Times-Democrat, is engaged in a vigorous and commendable crusade against the sale in this city of impure and disease-breeding milk. It has made some startling and horrible revelations regarding the filthiness and unwholesomeness that characterize at least 85 per cent. of the sources of the city's milk supply. The evil is certainly an alarming one, and ought to be corrected at once.

Now, if our worthy contemporary, which claims to be such a champion of the public health and the public welfare, will also train its guns on the drink demon, whose ravages here and elsewhere are more awful than those of war, pestilence, and famine it will be a far grander and truer public benefactor. While disease-laden milk is, perhaps, slaying its scores, the poison of the still is slaying hundreds and thousands, is debauching manhood, degrading womanhood, and cruelly wronging childhood in a multitude of ways. The danger from impure milk, while great enough, is not a drop in the bucket as compared with the hellish destructiveness of rum and the rum traffic. Why excoriate the milkman so severely, and allow the saloon-keeper to ply his nefarious business without the slightest remonstrance or criticism? To rave over deleteriousness of unsanitary milk, while silence is kept concerning the fearful havoc wrought by the liquor fiend, is like straining at a gnat and swallowing a camel.

A NEW BOOK.

FIFTY-TWO YEARS IN FLORIDA. By John C. Ley. 16 mo. 156 pages. Cloth. Price, $1. Southern Methodist Publishing House, Nashville, Tenn., and Dallas, Tex.

This volume from the pen of a saintly veteran of the Florida Conference traces in brief, but comprehensive form the history of Methodism in Florida from the small, but heroic beginnings of missionary effort in 1821, on down to the present. In the first five chapters the author also gives an outline of the history of the State beginning with the days of Ponce de Leon, its first discoverer. The volume was called forth by a resolution of the Florida Conference, at its session in 1885, requesting the author, whose connection with the aforesaid Conference dates back to 1845, the year of its organization, to publish a series of reminiscent and historical articles in the Wesleyan Advocate with a view to their issuance in book form. The volume contains a large number of valuable as well as interesting facts and incidents, many of which otherwise would have passed into oblivion.

On the whole, it is a readable and instructive book, and will be greatly enjoyed by Methodist preachers and laymen who have any appreciation of local church history. Many touching incidents are narrated respecting the toils and sufferings of the pioneer preachers in Florida.

The appendix contains two highly edifying sermons by the author, one being a centennial sermon preached before the Florida Conference in 1885, the other being a sermon delivered before the Conference in Jacksonville in 1895 on the celebration of the semi-centennial of the organization of the Florida Conference.

NOTES.

Presiding Elder C. W. Carter made a short visit to the city last week.

Up to the time of going to press nothing had been received this week from either of the League editors.

***

The Bishops of the M. E. Church have issued a stirring address to the membership in which they call for the observance of a week of prayer for a genuine and general revival.

***

Dr. J. T. Sawyer has recently had a severe attack of pneumonia, and, on account thereof, has been unable to attend to his work for nearly three weeks. We rejoice to learn that he is now convalescing.

At a mass meeting in the interest of the Twentieth Century Educational Movement, recently held at the Broadway Methodist Church in Louisville, Ky., subscriptions amounting to $10,180.90 were obtained.

***

The commencement sermon at Emory College this year will be preached by Bishop H. C. Morrison. The literary address will be delivered by Major Halford, of the United States Army, now at Fort McPherson, Atlanta.

***

On our fifth page will be found an important notice from Rev. W. L. Linfield, treasurer of the Mississippi Conference Board of Missions. We hope that all concerned will give prompt attention to Bro. Linfield's request.

***

We had an appreciated call on Tuesday from Rev. W. T. Griffin, the hustling agent of our Orphans' Home at Water Valley. Bro. Griffin was on his way to the coast. He is meeting with much encouragement in his work.

The anniversary of the New Orleans Methodist City Mission will be held at Rayne Memorial Church on Sunday evening, March 18. The address will be delivered by that magnificent pulpit orator, Dr. W. T. Bolling, of Shreveport, La.

***

A lazy pastor complains that there is entirely too much prodding in the church now-a-days. Does he not forget that there are many willing workers ready to take his place who do not need prodding? The world is moving at rapid strides and the church can not afford to lag. The prod is only for the slothful.—Pacific Methodist Advocate.

***

Presiding Elder J. W. Hannoll writes us as follows from Holly Springs: "Our preachers on the district are all doing well. Our Quarterly Conferences report an advance on all lines. We expect to pay more on the collections this year than we have done before for years, and we expect a glorious revival."

The editor of the Texas Advocate speaks truly when he says: "It does not require extraordinary effort to induce people to take a good religious paper, or to buy a few good books. We have had the experience, and, therefore, we know whereof we speak. If the preacher feels the importance of that sort of enterprise, the work will be done."

A card from Bro. W. W. Drake, pastor at Franklin, La., dated March 12, contains the following gratifying news: "After an address by Dr. Carter, yesterday morning, we took pledges on the Twentieth Century Fund amounting to more than an average of $1 for each person in the congregation. We expect to increase this amount considerably from those absent yesterday."

Rev. C. F. Emery, pastor of Capitol Street Church, Jackson, Miss., thus writes of the work being done by the good women of his charge: "The Woman's Foreign Missionary Society, under the efficient and enthusiastic leadership of their president, Mrs. Florence West, is doing a magnificent work. During the present quarter they have raised $70. God bless these noble women."

"Gilderoy" writes: "I have never known such a scourge anywhere as they are having with the measles at Slate Springs, Miss. Rev. W. B. Pinson, for ten years a practitioner of medicine, has had to take up his pill-bags and go to waiting on the sick. He goes day and night, and is now known as the beloved physician,' ministering to the souls and bodies of his people."

Rev. J. A. Bowen sends us the following interesting note from Columbus, Miss.: "The best District League Conference ever held in this part of the State adjourned here Thursday night, March 8. It will compare most favorably with any State League Conference in power, normal work, and talent. Our town and church have been honored and blessed by this meeting."

***

Last Monday morning we had the pleasure of greeting at the Preachers' Meeting, Dr. I. W. Cooper, the wide-awake and successful president of Centenary College, who spent several hours in the city on his way home from Hattiesburg, Miss., where he preached on Sunday. The Doctor is in fine health and spirits, and reported the work at Centenary as progressing in a highly satisfactory manner. The enrollment of students at this grand old institution is now the largest it has been since 1860.

***

The address on temperance delivered by Miss Belle Kearney, the national organizer of the W. C. T. U., at Rayne Memorial Church, on last Sunday evening, was one of the finest and most thrilling we have ever had the pleasure of listening to, and produced a deep impression. Mississippi has great reason to be proud of this gifted young woman, who is devoting her life to the grand cause of temperance reform. We trust that her visit to this city will be productive of much good. Miss Kearney will leave New Orleans on Friday for a three weeks' lecture tour in Florida. She then expects to visit Georgia.

With much sorrow we announce the death, which occurred at his home in this city on Saturday, the tenth instant, of Rev. G. A. Mandeville, a local preacher, who for some years was a member of the Louisiana Conference. He was a good man, and has gone to meet his Lord. Bro. Mandeville was 52 years old and leaves a wife and eight children to mourn his loss. His remains were interred Sunday afternoon in Greenwood Cemetery, the last sad rites being performed by Rev. P. H. Fontaine. May God graciously sustain the bereaved ones! Bro. Mandeville has for some time served as stenographer of Section B of the Criminal District Court. A fuller notice of his life will be furnished in due time.

The Nashville Advocate, of last week, contained an appreciative and highly interesting sketch of that noble patriarch in Southern Methodism, Bishop John C. Keener, who has just entered upon his eighty-first year, and whose face and character more and more reflect the radiance of heaven. An excellent likeness of of our senior Bishop also appears in connection with the sketch. The editor of our general organ with beautiful appropriateness says: "With his venerable wife—who has journeyed by his side more than half a century—the good Bishop is spending a modest and happy old age in his own home at Carrollton, a suburb of the great city to which he has given so much of his time and strength. May the Lord, whom they have served with such unswerving fidelity from their youth up deal very gently with them till the end of their pilgrimage, and then receive them into that house of many mansions which he has himself gone to prepare for his own! No history of Southern Methodism can ever be written that will leave out the achievements and the commanding personality of Bishop John Christian Keener."

The Cuban Mission.

The reports of the first annual meeting of the Cuban Mission, which was held at Matauzas, Jan. 31-Feb. 1, Bishop Candler presiding, are of the most encouraging character. Our church will be grossly derelict if she does not put forth mighty effort to capture that fair isle for Christ.

Says the Review of Missions, for March: "Among other interesting events were the securing in Matanzas of a very valuable lot for a church-building just two blocks from the central square of the city, and a Twentieth Century collection of $530 after an able address by Dr. Hammond.

"The statistics for the year have been tabulated with very considerable care. The results are splendid, and give great promise for the future, after the preliminary details of organization, learning, and language, etc., incident to a new mission, shall have been completed. The figures are as follows: Missionaries, 7; preaching places, 11; Cuban preachers, 3; members, 248; probationers, 293; Sunday-schools, 11; Sunday-school scholars, 574; day schools, 6; day school scholars, 289; total collected on the field, including Twentieth Century Fund, $2,756."

Notice.

MR. EDITOR: Please say to my preacher-brethren that I shall be prepared to do some work in the line of preaching this Summer (June-August). If they desire my assistance, either in song or preaching, please to address me at Jackson, La.

Increase in Membership.

The croakers in Southern Methodism who have been harping much upon our recent decline in numbers, and upon the decadence of spirituality which this loss was supposed to indicate, will now have to find a new theme. Says the Nashville Advocate, of last week:

"The statistics of the churches, as given in the New York Independent for 1899, show that the M. E. Church, South, sustained a loss in membership of a little over 2,000. The official figures, however, show a gain of more than 6,000, with one of the largest Conferences to hear from, which Conference the year before reported a gain of nearly 600. We will make a full report as soon as practicable."

JUST THINK OF IT!

Says the Florida Advocate of March 7: "Bishop Galloway gave an address on the Twentieth Century Educational Fund in Tallahassee, Feb. 27, and preached the next day at 10 o'clock. Nine preachers were present. The subscription was $300. At night, Feb. 28, the Bishop made an address in Live Oak; it was a stormy, bad night; but few out; but a subscription of $115 was taken. At Jacksonville, March 1, the Bishop made a grand address, 14 Methodist preachers in attendance, no subscription taken. At Gainesville Bro. Pixton was present. There were 8 itinerant ministers present. The Bishop made a fine impression. A subscription was taken of about $190. At Tampa an immense audience, great preaching by the Bishop, $700 was raised."

ROYAL Baking Powder

The strongest, purest, most efficient and wholesome of leavening agents. Not lowest in price, yet the most economical; indispensable to all who appreciate the best and most healthful food.

Our country is enjoying prosperity almost unsurpassed in its history.

For every one there is money enough to buy that to eat which is pure, sound, good, wholesome.

Why should we use cheap, impure, unhealthful articles of food? There is no economy in them; they endanger the health, they may cost life. There are reported almost daily cases of sickness caused by eating cake, puddings or biscuit made with the cheap, alum baking powders.

In all articles for food buy and use only the best. The good health of the family is of first consideration.

Alum is used in many baking powders because it makes them cheap. It costs less than two cents a pound. Alum is a corrosive poison. Think of feeding it to children! Yet the manufacturers of well-known alum powders are actually denying that their goods contain it.

To the Pastors in the Mississippi Conferences.

DEAR BRETHREN: The Board of Missions requests me to forward before the thirty-first of this month all the money I can. Since my report, last week, I have received but $25

Will you please remit to me what you have on hand, that I may have enough to make a nice remittance to Mr. Hamilton? Please remember that they look to us, confidently expecting to receive. Let us not disappoint them.

Send all postal money orders payable at Nashville, Tenn.

SUNDAY-SCHOOL CONVENTION.

The Mississippi Conference Sunday-school Convention will be held this year in the beautiful little town of Madison, and will begin with a sermon Tuesday night, the twenty-seventh instant. The regular work of the convention will begin next morning at 8:30 o'clock, and continue for two or three days. The Executive Committee have been at work for some time arranging for the convention, and trying to do what they can to make it a success in every respect. The program will soon appear in the ADVOCATE

Now, let every Sunday-school in the Conference at once elect one delegate for every one hundred pupils (see Constitution, Article VII, Second Year Book), and let the pastors or superintendents forward to Rev. H. G. Hawkins, Madison, Miss., the names of all persons who expect to attend. Sunday-schools should pay the traveling expenses of delegates. The usual reduction on all the railroads in the State will be granted.

Let every Sunday-school worker in the Conference who can, go. You will have a pleasant time among the good people of Madison, and be benefited by what you will hear.

Yours in the work,

D. SCARBOROUGH,
Sec. S. S. B'd.

"REVIEW OF MISSIONS."

MR EDITOR: Say to all the readers of the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE that they miss one of the greatest intellectual and inspiring treats of their lives if they fail to secure and read the March number of The Review of Missions, published at Nashville, Tenn., by Barbee & Smith.

NOTICE.

The Board of Missions of the Louisiana Conference meets in the M. E. Church, South, in Alexandria, La., at 11 A. M., Wednesday, March 21, 1900. It is hoped that every member will be present, as important business will come before the Board.

QUARTERLY CONFERENCE.

Rev. J. H. Mitchell, presiding elder, came over from Winona Saturday, and held Quarterly Conference for Carrollton circuit at Marvin. The weather was very cold, nevertheless there was a fair attendance. Enon made the best report. Under the pastorate of Mr. Sullivan this circuit met all financial claims in full last year—the first time in quite a number of years. The pastor says he will pay special attention this year to the Twentieth Century Thank-offering. The Conference adopted this resolution:

"Resolved, That the Quarterly Conference of Carrollton circuit is in perfect sympathy with the Twentieth Century Movement, and we pledge ourselves to do all that can be done to help on this very important enterprise."

DEAR BRETHREN: Please allow me to call your attention to the fact that while there was an increase in your collections for the Conference year ending December, 1899, there is to date a shortage in our fiscal year ending March 31, 1900, of $783 81.

First quarter last year your collections were $1,098 43, while collections this year to date only amount to $199 87.

Brethren, do all in your power to make up this shortage between now and March 28, 1900. As the appropriations have been made by the General Board on the figures of the last fiscal year, you will readily see the importance of early collections.

AN EXTRAORDINARY OFFER.

DEAR BROTHER: When my little book, "Two Epistles," was first published, you were kind enough to give it a very flattering notice. Among other things, you said, "It would be a boon to our church if this book could find its way into all our homes." It seemed to be the general sentiment, so far as expressed, that it presents the best solution of the holiness, evangelist, and kindred problems yet offered. If it does not greatly benefit the reader, it will certainly leave him with unruffled feelings. "Gilderoy" said: "The epistle to opposers of the second blessing cut me to the red. I needed it. I deserved all I got. I have not changed my views, but I mean to change my methods." Dr. Haynes, of Zion's Outlook, expressed himself similarly in regard to the epistle "To Professors of Perfect Love." He headed his article, "Trimmed Down."

I have on hand a number of copies, and in order to put them into immediate circulation, I will send a copy, postpaid, to any reader of the ADVOCATE who will send me his address and a silver dime (to pay cost, in part) within thirty days from this date. The book contains 144 12-mo. pages.

SINCE ITS ORGANIZATION IN 1843

It has paid to living members	$283,157,627 64
To beneficiaries of deceased members	204,591,282 42
Total paid to members, both living and dead	$487,748,910 06
And now holds for the security of its present members	277,517,325 36
Paid to and invested for its members	$765,266,235 42

THE POLICIES OF THIS COMPANY

are remarkable for their liberality, large guaranteed values, and entire absence of all technical terms of phrases. Being practically incontestable, they provide a legacy and not a lawsuit.

Persons desiring policies in this Company can secure them from the Company's nearest agent, or if no agent is convenient, by writing to the General Agent, giving date of birth and stating what amount of insurance is desired.

Free to Inventors.

The experience of C. A. Snow & Co. in obtaining more than 20,000 patents for inventors has enabled them to helpfully answer many questions relating to the protection of intellectual property. This they have done in a pamphlet treating briefly of United States and foreign patents, with cost of same, and how to procure them; trade marks, designs, caveats, infringements, decisions in leading patent cases, etc., etc.

This pamphlet will be sent free to anyone writing to C. A. Snow & Co., Washington, D. C.

DEDICATION.

Bishop C. B. Galloway, D. D., will dedicate our beautiful new church at Magnolia, April 1, 1900. All the old pastors are cordially invited to be present. Especially are we desirous of having with us at that time Rev. J. A. B. Jones, under whose ministry the church was built.

Two Verdicts.

"After a fair and impartial trial you are judged guilty by this court, and you are sentenced to be hung by the neck until you are dead." The solemn tones of the judge, the despairing face of the prisoner, and the painful stillness of the court-room, makes it a scene of awful impress. Now turn to a brighter scene at the home circle. A mother radiant with joy over the recovery of a child snatched from the clutches of Malaria. An entire family rejoicing, and praising the merits of Dicks' Chillifuge, and giving their verdict that Chillifuge is without an equal for swiftness to cure.

Perhaps Your Trouble Is Chronic Kidney Disease.

Often Difficult To Determine And Likely To Deceive The Best Physicians.

It is always best to be on the safe side.

There are many different ways in which kidney trouble will show itself.

Some of its most common symptoms are often mistaken for other diseases.

Some of them are other diseases, but being brought about by kidney derangement, the only way to cure them is to first get rid of the kidney trouble.

The indefinite symptoms which go with kidney derangement are a sense of general lassitude and indisposition, weakness, sickness and depression.

Headache, backache, and pains in the joints and limbs, irregular heart; stomach derangement, vomiting, nervousness, restlessness, sleeplessness, are also indications of diseased kidney poison in the blood.

Whenever you feel "under the weather" it is a good plan to take a few doses of Swamp-Root, the great kidney remedy.

When any of the symptoms described above show that your kidneys are weak or out of order, and your system needs bracing, Swamp-Root will afford prompt relief and cure the most chronic and complicated cases.

Swamp-Root is used in the leading hospitals; recommended by skillful physicians in their private practice; and is taken by doctors themselves who have kidney ailments, because they recognize in it the greatest and most successful remedy for kidney and bladder troubles.

To prove what Swamp-Root will do for you every reader of the "CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE" who will send their name and address to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., will be sent immediately, free by mail, a sample bottle of Swamp-Root and a book containing some of the thousands upon thousands of testimonial letters received from sufferers cured. Be sure and mention reading this generous offer in the NEW ORLEANS "CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE."

The regular fifty-cent and one-dollar size bottles of Swamp-Root are for sale at all drug stores.

A Small Beginning.

A little snow ball on the summit of the Alps, rolled up by the winds, moves slowly downward. Gaining in strength and size, it grows rapidly to giant proportions, and finally becomes the frightful avalanche, destroying everything in its path. Consumption begins with a little cough, a trifling pain, a passing flush on the cheeks. This is but the beginning of the avalanche, consumption, that knows no pity, recognizes no distinction. Just at the beginning thousands commit the error of not checking and curing the disease by using MARSDEN'S PECTORAL BALM.

FATHER AND MOTHER ARE GROWING OLD.

BY LINA M. GILMORE.

Bells faintly chiming, sweet hours swiftly flying,
June roses faded, and winds blowing cold;
Childhood is passing for womanhood's greeting,
And father and mother are growing old.

Ah, happy season! too sweet to be lasting,
Gathered the children in mother's own fold;
Happy and trusting, no care for the morrow,
Now father and mother are growing old.

Oh, the sweet blessing of mother's caressing,
Father's kind counsel in trouble of old!
Gentle reproving, and hearts anxious loving,
But father and mother are growing old.

Youth is receding, the home scene is fading,
Brother and sister are leaving the fold.
O happy greeting! we soon shall be meeting
Where father and mother will never grow old.
—Exchange.

BE CHEERFUL.

Nothing helps to recommend our Christian religion to those who know not our Christ better than a cheerful spirit, a sunny countenance, a hearty handshake. The Bible is full of sunshine religion. It is the kind the world believes in. A gloomy, funeral, sepulchral religion is out-of-date. It carries with it no recommendation to unconverted people. Sometimes in pastoral work and in personal dealing with unsaved people we hear it said: "Well, there is So-and-So; I do not see that her religion comforts her in sorrows, or that she is helped in trouble." Why this impression? The sunshine either has not come in, or has gone out of their souls.

There is a great deal of gloom and misery, of trouble and sorrow, of difficulty and distress in this world where sin has wrought such destruction. It is for the Christian people to relieve much of this. Jesus Christ is the author of a religion which can help and comfort and save the people anywhere, everywhere, under all circumstances. We claim to have it. The cold, suffering, distressed world looks up at the Christian to see how he bears life's troubles. O beloved, the grace of God is all-sufficient to help us! Let us believe it and show it to the world. Open all the doors of the soul, and "let a little sunshine in," and then let it out again, that it may warm some heart and cheer some life which is needing it, looking for it, and looking our way. Be cheerful!—Selected.

WHAT KIND WORDS WILL DO.

One Sunday night years ago a young man and his wife strayed out into a church service. They were a lonely couple in a great city. They were neither of them Christians—rather, both of them, carelessly, even blatantly, unchristian. With the services they were not specially impressed. But after the service, as they were standing about looking at the church, the pastor approached them, and welcomed them in a way so genuinely cordial that the hard edge of their strangeness was at once smoothed away, and the young couple were sure somebody had real interest in them. "We'll go to that church again," they said together after the warm welcome. They did. It was not long before both husband and wife accepted Christ as their Savior and Lord, and united with that church. It was a great trophy that pastor began to win that night, not by his sermon, but by his welcome. Almost penniless and obscure and quite disheartened that young man was on that night when so warmly welcomed. To-day he is a member of a firm which flings the meshes of its business far and wide, and he is now one of the best and most winning of Sunday-school workers and superintendents.—Rev. Wayland Hoyt.

WHEN THE HEART IS HEAVY.

There is always a remedy for a heavy heart. It may be in work—it oftenest is. It may be in thinking of the joys which have been given to you, and the sorrows from which you have been saved. It may be in helping others by sympathy, or in whatever way help is most needed. But the heavy heart can always be made light, if self is forgotten, and the needs of others are remembered, and, as far as possible, relieved. Not one of us can learn to become light-hearted in a day, or a week, or a month, or a year, for it is the lesson of life, this knowing how to lift our hearts up, and give from them help unto those who are in need. It is a good fight—this one against allowing one's self to be submerged in personal griefs—it is a good fight, and out of it you can come conqueror if you will. Do you intend to give up the fight and fall by the wayside overcome by a heavy heart, or to go along through life as a brave soul should? You must decide this early in your life. And you will, I feel sure, decide to do that which is right, and then your heart will never be heavy nor your conscience disturbed, unless you fall. And when you fall, thank God, you can always rise again, if you keep up a brave heart.—Ruth Ashmore.

A CODE OF MORAL LAW.

Temperance.—Eat not to fullness; drink not to elevation.

Silence.—Speak not but what might benefit others or yourself; avoid trifling conversations.

Order.—Let all your things have their places: let each part of your business have its time.

Resolution.—Resolve to perform what you ought; perform without fail what you resolve.

Frugality.—Make no expense, but to do good to others or yourself; that is, waste nothing.

Industry.—Lose no time; be always employed in something useful; keep out of all unnecessary action.

Sincerity.—Use no hurtful deceit; think innocently and justly; and if you speak, speak accordingly.

Justice.—Wrong none by doing injuries, or omitting the benefits that are your duty.

Moderation.—Avoid extremes; forbear resenting injuries.

Cleanliness.—Suffer no uncleanliness in the body, clothes or habitation.

Tranquillity.—Be not disturbed about trifles or at accidents, common or unavoidable.

Humility.—Imitate Jesus Christ. —Franklin.

THE HARVEST.

Mr. Depew, in an address to railroad men, said: "Twenty-five years ago I knew every man, woman, and child in Peekskill. And it has been a study with me to mark the course of the boys, in every grade of life, who started with myself—to see what has become of them. Last Fall I was up there, and began to count them over, and the lesson was most instructive. Some of them became clerks, some merchants, manufacturers, lawyers, or doctors. And it is remarkable that every one of them that had drinking habits is now dead—not a single one of my age now living. Except a few who were taken off by sickness, every one has proved a wreck, and has wrecked his family, and did it from rum and whisky, and no other cause. Of those who were church-going people, who were steady, industrious, and hard-working men, and frugal and thrifty, every one without exception owns the house in which he lives, and has something laid by, the interest on which, with his house, would carry him through many a rainy day."—Christian Endeavor World.

DISAPPOINTMENT.

God keeps a school for his children here on earth; and one of his best teachers is Disappointment. My friend, when you and I reach our Father's house, we shall look back and see that the sharp-voiced, rough-visaged teacher, Disappointment, was one of the best guides to train us for it. He gave us hard lessons; he often used the rod; he often led us into thorny paths; he sometimes stripped off a load of luxuries; but that only made us travel the freer and the faster on our heavenward way. He sometimes led us down into the valley of the death shadow; but never did the promises read so sweetly as when spelled out by the eye of faith in that very valley. Nowhere did he lead us so often, or teach us such sacred lessons, as at the cross of Christ. Dear, old rough-handed teacher! We will build a monument to thee yet, and crown it with garlands, and inscribe on it: Blessed be the memory of Disappointment.—Rev. Dr. T. L. Cuyler.

MARRYING A MAN TO REFORM HIM.

"The most subtle and deceitful hope which ever existed, and one which wrecks the happiness of many a young girl's life," writes Evangelist Dwight L. Moody, in the June Ladies' Home Journal, "is the common delusion that a woman can best reform a man by marrying him. It is a mystery to me how people can be so blinded to the hundreds of cases in every community where tottering homes have fallen and innocent lives have been wrecked, because some young girl has persisted in marrying a scoundrel in the hope of saving him. I have never known such a union result in anything but sadness and disaster. Let no young girl think that she may be able to accomplish what a loving mother or sympathetic sisters have been unable to do. Before there is any contract of marriage there should be convincing proof that there has been real and thorough regeneration." — Exchange.

CURING A BAD MEMORY.

Our readers have doubtless heard of mnemonics, the name given to any system of rules intended to assist the memory to remember its precepts when occasion comes to use them. But a writer in St. Nicholas gives two simple rules for the improvement of the memory which can be easily recalled and readily put in practice: Your memory is bad, perhaps, but I can tell you two secrets that will cure the worst memory. One, to read a subject when strongly interested. The other is not only to read, but think. When you have read a paragraph or a page stop, close the book, and try to remember the ideas on that page, and not only recall them vaguely in your mind, but put them into words and speak them out.—Teacher's Aid.

Politeness does not require one to stay at home from church to entertain Sunday visitors. If your friends come, invite them to go with you. Unless they are ill-bred they will not expect you to neglect your religious duties to provide for their amusement. If your visitors are ill-bred or irreligious, and let you know in any way that they expect you to remain at home, it would be better for you to have other company. —Churchman.

The earthly dark day ought to make a golden spiritual experience. The brightest days have followed the blackest in history. Had Joseph not been sold as a slave and cast into prison, he would never have been the Bismarck of Egypt. Had Paul not been repeatedly dungeoned, he might not have found time to write the epistles that have inspired the centuries. Had Bunyan not been thrown into Bedford jail, the world would have forever missed his immortal "Pilgrim." The Psalms of David were written out of his sufferings. "The songs in the night" count up the longest list.—D. O. Mears, D. D.

TAKE NOTICE

That we are now handling two different styles of the Holman Bible in Bourgeois type. One we sell to paid-up subscribers at $1.50, the other at $1.30. The $1.30 Bible is substantially the same we have hitherto sold at $1.50. The one we sell at $1.50 is a far better Bible than has ever been sold at such a price. It is a marvel of cheapness. See our offer.

A Serious Decision.

"Why CHILLIFUGE Won't Cure Chills"—is a question that brings to mind the story of a society of learned men formed for debating problems.

The question was presented: "Why a fish weighing ten pounds, put into a vessel of known weight, filled with water, did not increase the weight?" After hours of hot debate the fool of the club announced that it did, for while the debate had been going on he had tried the experiment.

A RARE BARGAIN.

RUNDLE—MRS. MARGARET BROUNAX RUNDLE, wife of David B. Rundle, and daughter of Emily Brodnax and James Maclin Lundle, was born March 24 1831, and died Nov. 30, 1899, in Vicksburg, Miss. She was baptized in infancy in the Protestant Episcopal Church, and was piously trained by a godly mother. When about eighteen years old she experienced conversion, and was the first of her family to join the Methodist Church, thus becoming instrumental in leading most of her family into that church. Under the fostering care of the Methodism of that day she developed into a strong and useful Christian. Her life was full of good works. Every worthy cause enlisted her sympathy and commanded her aid. She worked as if she expected to be saved by works, and trusted God as if she hoped to be saved by grace only. Unselfishness in a marked degree characterized her actions, and she blessed every life that she touched. To her last hour her thought was rather about the comfort of others than her own. She was an active member of the W. C. T. U., but she did not favor the woman's suffrage feature of their work. She said, "Let us use all our influence to make men good, and we can safely leave the country in their hands."

To say that she loved life, and was devoted to her family and friends, is but to say that she appreciated God's best gifts to men; yet she shrank not from the approach of death, but was ready and willing to go when the summons came, finding, as she had been taught, that God gives his children dying grace when they come to die. She was a kind neighbor, a faithful wife and mother, and a friend to all, praying and laboring for the salvation of others, especially of those whom she loved most. Her little daughter once said to her, "Mama, when nobody is sick, and nobody is dead, and nobody is going to get married, and nobody has a baby, won't you dress my doll?" What a commentary upon her life is in that sentence!

Her death creates a painful vacancy, not only in her own family, but also in the large circle of Christian workers of which she was a most useful member. To her bereaved husband, children and relatives her death carries with it every mitigating feature of which such a bereavement is susceptible. She lived well and died in peace.

When Dr. C. G. Andrews was called from a distant part of the State to lay her body to rest, none supposed that he so soon would join her in heaven. W. L. C. HUNNICUTT.

RANDLE—At the home of Bro. Rion Price, near Pineville, La., on Wednesday, Feb. 21, 1900, at 7 P. M., Bro. Ronzar Randle, Jr., breathed his last, and fell asleep in the arms of Jesus, leaving a bright and clear testimony of his acceptance with Christ.

Bro. Robert was a young man of twenty-five, a son of the Rev. Thos. S. Randle, of the Louisiana Conference. He leaves a wife and one child, a father, mother, brothers and sisters, to whom we extend our heartfelt sympathy. His pastor, L. L. ROBERTS.

SHEPPARD—The death angel has visited the home of Bro. and Sister G. F. Sheppard, and claimed for his victim this sweet little babe, KATIE IRENE, who was born July 1, 1898, and closed her little mission on earth Feb. 18, 1900. She budded on earth to bloom in heaven, and is now basking in the sunlight of God's love. May the Lord comfort the bereaved hearts, and enable them to say, with Job of old, "The Lord gave, and the Lord has taken away; blessed be the name of the Lord!"

L. L. ROBERTS.

MCGILVRAY—JESSE CALHOUN MCGILVRAY, infant son of L. R. and A. L. McGilvray, was born in Covington county, Miss., July 26, 1899, and died after a brief illness, Jan. 17, 1900. Jesse was a bright little fellow, and the sunshine of the home. This makes the third time the hearts of these fond parents have been bruised by the coming of the messenger of death. On Nov. 24, 1893, their son, John C., aged about sixteen years, fell on sleep. He had been converted several years before, and lived a consistent Christian to the last, and, like his Lord, died while praying for others. Thus makes twice that the ruthless hand of death has snatched from the same mother's bosom her darling babe, besides robbing her of a bright and youthful son between these intervals. Our hearts feel constrained to cry out: "O God, it is enough! Stay now thine hand until this anger be overpassed." But hark! It is only the calling of the Good Shepherd, who giveth his life for the sheep, calling them from their labors and sorrows, that they may enter into rest. And while a mother's arms no more enfold them, "in heaven their angels do always behold the face of the Father, whose name is Love."

Toil on, fond pursuit; 'twill not be long ere we shall join their happy song, and dwell with Jesus beyond the troubles and grief s of earth.

R. L. WEBB.

Williamsburg, Miss.

PETEET—Whereas, On the thirtieth day of December, 1899, Mrs. M. A. PETEET went from the ranks of the Woman's Missionary Society of the Carrollton Methodist Church to the "inheritance of the saints in light," therefore we sorrow and rejoice. We sorrow because we have lost one of our most devoted members and purest spirits; a true friend, a beloved sister. We rejoice because of her pure, unselfish life, and her strong faith, which triumphed over death.

Sister Peteet's Christian life was beautiful. Her devotion to the cause of the Master was constant, conspicuous, and inspiring. We adopt this paper as a tribute to her worth, and as an expression of our sorrow at the great loss we have sustained.

Resolved, That it be spread upon our Minutes, and published in the CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, and that a copy be furnished the family of our ascended sister.

Mrs. T. W. Lewis, Mrs. J. R. Bingham, Mrs. H. M. Bryan, Committee.

HARDIN—JOHN DAVIS, infant son of Rev. Paul D. and Mrs. Mary Hardin, was born at the Shiloh parsonage, Jan. 4, 1900, and lived just fifty-four days. He was baptized by Rev. T. L. Mullen on the eleventh of February, and God took him to heaven on the twenty seventh of the same month.

What a short life was his, and yet the ever delicate baby boy found his way to the tenderest spot in the hearts of his parents.

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh that Contain Mercury

as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is tenfold to the good you can possibly derive from them. RELIGIOUS JOY.

The religion of Jesus is a joyful religion. One of the fruits of the Spirit is joy. Every Christian has this in some degree. It is a supernatural joy, and does not depend upon circumstances, for it comes from within. Worldlings rejoice when everything goes well from a worldly standpoint; some professed Christians rejoice when prospered in worldly things, and sometimes even when in an enthusiastic religious service; but this may be but natural joy. Supernatural joy wells up from an unseen fountain when earthly joy has fled. It gushes out right in the midst of the desert, and if we looked at the desert for its source, we should not discover it. Habakkuk knew about this joy, for he says: "Although the fig tree shall not blossom, neither shall fruit be in the vines; the labor of the olive shall fail, and the fields shall yield no meat: the flock shall be cut off from the fold, and there shall be no herd in the stalls: yet I will rejoice in the Lord, I will joy in the God of my salvation."

Any worldling can rejoice when all goes well. Only a Christian can rejoice when things seem to go wrong. In the darkest days a Christian ever saw, he can rejoice in God when he can not in anything else.

Joy makes a Christian strong in his every-day life. "The joy of the Lord is your strength." He is a weak Christian who has spells of the blues, or carries about a gloomy face. He is a discomfort to himself and repels others. It is the expression of joy that makes a telling impression upon the world. This poor heart-broken world, staggering under its burdens, is attracted only by this kind of a religion. The shouts of redeemed saints and converted sinners have often sent more conviction into the hearts of sinners than tons of paper essays read from polished pulpits. The church of the future that is really to make inroads upon the kingdom of Satan will be the church that has a joyful religion, that buoys up the sinking soul.—Standard.

FOR OVER FIFTY YEARS

MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP has been used for children teething. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, cures wind colic, and is the best remedy for Diarrhœa. Twenty-five cents a bottle.

Loving the unlovable to some men is a privilege, but to love all men is a duty. It is not an uncommon notion that love is only for those who deserve it, and one often meets with people who feel that it is their duty to reserve their love for those who will show themselves lovable. As well might one reserve God's offer of salvation for those who are worthy of it. It is not till the unlovable are loved that they become lovable, just as it is not until the unworthy are saved that they become in any sense worthy. To love the lovable is manlike; to love the unlovable is God like.—Sunday-school Times.

It is only when we come to thank God as earnestly for our trials as for our mercies that we shall have that patience and poise and peace, under all the trying experiences of life, that it is the Christian's privilege to enjoy. We shall be able to do this when we, with Paul, shall come to recognize that all things, trial and mercies, are concentric to the orbit of God's purpose; and that our sorrows, as well as our joys, contribute to our good and his glory. WINE OF CARDUI

THE LINK THAT BINDS.

JACKSON, TENN., Nov. 23.

I was subject to miscarriage for three years, and suffered constantly with backache. I wrote to you for advice, and after using three bottles of Wine of Cardui, according to your directions, I am strong and well, and the mother of a fine girl baby.

Mrs. E. N. JOWERS.

McELREE'S Wine of Cardui

There is no use talking—a baby in the house is the link that binds husband and wife together. Nothing is sadder than fruitless wedlock. The prattling and cooing of the little ones offset a thousand times the occasional worries and trials of life. When a wife is barren, there is a derangement somewhere in the genital organs, caused by one or more of those common disorders known as "female troubles". Wine of Cardui is the remedy. It puts the organs of generation in a strong and healthy condition, fitting the wife for the sacred duty of reproducing her kind. During the period of gestation the entire system of the expectant mother is built up to withstand the ordeal of labor, and when the little one makes its advent it is lusty and strong, well-fitted to grow to maturity in perfect health. The mother, too, passes through the trial with little pain and no dread. Wine of Cardui is truly a wonderful medicine for women.

The "Combination" Bible.

A SUPERB EDITION

of the Holy Scriptures, showing at a glance at the foot of the pages all changes made by the revisers.

New Type. All Proper Names Self-Prononncing. The Most Valuable Collateral Matter.

There is a steady and increasing demand for first-class Bibles. Everybody is anxious to obtain a copy of the best edition of the Holy Scriptures. Old editions are constantly being replaced by Bibles that are in every way more attractive, and there is practically no limit to the demand:

OUR "COMBINATION" FEATURE.

Hitherto the King James and Revised Versions have been printed in parallel columns, but this makes comparisons of texts tedious and unsatisfactory, and makes the book very unwieldy. We have overcome this difficulty by "combining" the two Versions on the same page, showing at a glance in foot-notes all the Changes, Additions and Omissions made by the Revisers.

THE OLD VERSION PRINTED IN FULL.

The King James Version is the basis, and this Version is read straight along from the text, while the Revised Version is read from the text in combination with the foot-notes. Our "Combination" Feature has met with universal approval and is strongly endorsed by leading Divines and Biblical Scholars.

It is only by a comparison of the two Versions that the greatest benefit can be obtained from reading the Holy Scriptures, and this comparison every reader can easily make by our simple arrangement for showing the changes made by the revisers. This is the greatest triumph of Bible Publishing the World has ever known.

OUR OFFER.

To those unprogressive people who do not read and pay for the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE we sell this Bible at the publisher's retail price—$4.25. To our subscribers we sell it at the very low rate of $2. The only condition attached to this offer is that the subscriber must pay his subscription one full year in advance, viz.: to March, 1901. We will send it postpaid to any person who will send us three new cash subscribers at the regular rate. For six new cash subscribers at the regular rate we will send two "Combination" Bibles, postpaid.

For fifty cents additional we will send a Bible with index.

For twenty-five cents additional we will have your name engraved in gilt letters on the outside.

Address REV. W. C. BLACK.

P. S.—We can give no commission on renewals in connection with the above offer.

The chief difference between Numbers 3, 4, and 5 is in the furniture—i. e., the number of drawers. If you do not want to pay for the extra drawers, you need not do so. We sell these machines under a ten years' guarantee, by which we mean that if any part gives out by reason of any defect therein, the manufacturer will replace the same free of charge. Moreover, we allow the purchaser to test the machine ten days. If at the end of ten days you are not satisfied, you have only to drop us a postal card, and your money will be refunded.

OUR OFFER.

We will send any one of the above-described machines at the prices named, and also send the ADVOCATE free for six months. The only condition attached to this offer is that subscribers who are in arrears must first pay up all arrearages to date. It would be well to avail yourself of this offer at once, as we can not promise that it will last very long. Notice that you take no risk whatever. We do all the risking. Address REV. W. C. BLACK,

512 Camp St., New Orleans.

P. S.—The machine will be shipped direct from the factory in the North.

The Senate committee on foreign relations amended the Hay-Pauncefote treaty, asserting the intention of the United States government to defend and close the proposed Nicaragnan Canal against any nation whenever it is deemed necessary to employ snch measures for the purpose of self-defense and protection, and as thus amended reported the treaty to the Senate.

Gen. Kelly-Kenny encounted the Boers Saturday in force under De Wet at Driefontein kopjes, between Popular Grove and Bloemfontein. The battle lasted all day and the Boers retreated at night, leaving 102 dead on the field. The British also lost heavily.

Warrants have been sworn out for the murder of Gov. Goebel of Kentucky against the Republican Secretary of State, his brother, the ex-Secretary of of State, Capt. Davis of the Capitol Square police and others, among them a clerk in Auditor Sweeney's office.

There appears to be no doubt that the South African Republics are tired of the war, and would be willing to end hostilities on any terms short of absolute loss of independence. The United States has, without a doubt, been asked to use its kind offices in asking Lord Salisbury to inform the Presidents of the Transvaal and Orange Free State upon what terms the war can be ended.

Holly Springs District Conference.

MOZLEY'S LEMON ELIXIR.
A Pleasant Lemon Tonic

For biliousness, and constipation and appendicitis.

For indigestion, sick and nervous headache.

For sleeplessness, nervousness and heart failure.

For fever, chills, debility and kidney disease, take Lemon Elixir.

Ladies, for natural and thorough organic regulation take Lemon Elixir.

Dr. Mozley's Lemon Elixir is prepared from the fresh juice of lemons, combined with other vegetable liver tonics, and will not fail you in any of the above named diseases. 50c and $1.00 bottles at druggist. Prepared only by Dr. Mozley, Alauta, Ga.

At the Capitol.

I am in my seventy-third year, and for fifty years I have been a great sufferer from indigestion, constipation and biliousness. I have tried all the remedies advertised for these diseases, and got no permanent relief. About one year ago, the disease assuming a more severe and dangerous forms. I became very weak, and lost flesh rapidly, I commenced using Dr. Mozley's Lemon Elixir. I gained twelve pounds in three months. My strength and health, my appetite and my digestion were perfectly restored, and now I feel as young and vigorous as I ever did in my life.

L. J. ALLDRED,
Door-keeper Ga. State Senate,
State Capitol, Atlanta, Ga.

Mozley's Lemon Elixir

is the very best medicine I ever used for the diseases you recommend it for, and I have used many kinds for woman's troubles.

MRS. S. A GRESHAM,
Salem, N. C.

THE LIFE OF MOODY.

The Rev. J. Wilbur Chapman, D. D., of New York, is engaged in writing the life of D. L. Moody for John C. Winston & Co., Philadelphia. Dr. Chapman was one of Mr. Moody's most intimate friends, and was closely associated with him in his evangelistic work. He is Vice-President of the Bible Institute of Chicago, of which Mr Moody was President, and desires that this Institution shall receive a share of the profits from the sale of this book. The publishers promise that the work shall be profusely illustrated. It will also contain an introduction by the Rev. F. B. Meyer, of Christ Church, London, and personal reminiscences from others who were intimately associated with Mr. Moody in his work.

LITERARY NOTES.

BY W. F. B.

The American Soldier in the Philippines—a notable article, a stirring picture of our boys in the field—has been written exclusively for The Saturday Evening Post (of Philadelphia) by Senator Albert J. Beveridge. This article, the first and only one that Senator Beveridge has written for any magazine or periodical since his return from the Philippines, appears exclusively in the March 17 number of The Saturday Evening Post.

The first article in the March Cosmopolitan treats of The Dramatic Realization of the Novel. It is written by Joseph W. Herbert. Other important features in this number are: The World's Largest Truck-Gardens, by John E. Bennett; The Servant Question, a prize article, by Flora McDonald Thompson; Where English Lawyers Are Made, by Champe S. Andrews, and Great Editors of America, by Thurlow Weed.

In the March Century, Dr. Weir Mitchell and Ernest Seton-Thompson are both contributors. Mr. Seton-Thompson begins a study of The National Zoo at Washington, in which he shows wild animals to be as interesting in captivity as in their natural state of freedom. Dr. Mitchell, in Dr. North and his Friends, presents the opening chapters of the most important serial he has written since Hugh Wynn. It is a novel embodying the result of a long life of observation, reflection, and experience. A study of Robert Herrick, by Thomas Bailey Aldrich, sketches the poet's life, and claims for him a unique position in English literature as "a great little poet." The life of the laboring class is the theme of Richard Whiteing's Paris article this month, the title being, Paris of the Faubourgs. King Charles' ill-starred reliance on the Scots, after Naseby, and his imprisonment by Parliament, are the topics considered by John Morley in his study of Oliver Cromwell.

In Frank Leslie's Popular Monthly, for March, is an elaborate and finely illustrated account of The British Army, at Home and in South Africa, by Major-General Nelson A Miles, commanding the United States Army. General Miles reviews and analyzes the imperial British military organization in all its branches, and with particular reference to the obstinate war now engaging all its energies in South Africa. The Trans-Siberian Railway, one of the great engineering enterprises of the world, and which is being practically built in the United States, is interestingly discussed by Theodore Waters. Famous West Pointers as Draughtsmen, by Fritz Morris, is an art paper of unique interest and value, being accompanied by reproductions of drawings made by James McNeil Whistler, Generals Sherman, Meade, Pleasonton, and others, in their cadet days at the United States Military Academy. Other attractions are: Women in Washington, by Mrs. John A. Logan; The Room on the Roof, a story of the supernatural, by M. E. M. Davis; The Journal of a Prince Consort, a charming little comedy of Virginia history, by Frances Roberts.

What to Read.

Do you read the leading monthly Magazines, are you a lover of books, do you care to be posted on literary matters?

An up-to-date idea is the "Magazine Circle." Members having the privilege of reading eight of their favorite Magazines each month at about the expense of one. This is the 20th Century. The World is moving rapidly. To keep up you must be in touch with Progress. The thoughts of great men are portrayed in the leading monthlies. The "Magazine Circle" supplies just what you require.

Over one hundred thousand ambitious men and women throughout the United States are already enjoying these benefits. The cream of current literature is obtained at so trifling an expense in no other manner.

A "Magazine Circle" should be organized in every church, society, club, community and neighborhood interested in literature and self culture. Some Towns have several "Magazine Circles" running successfully. The plan is endorsed by clergymen, doctors, lawyers, teachers, professional and business people everywhere.

Our booklet "Magazine Circles and How to Organize," will be mailed to any address upon request. Address,

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From Our Regular Correspondent.)

That the tender of the good offices of this government to assist in bringing about peace in South Africa, made this week, was declined by Great Britain, detracted nothing from the sentiment which prompted the offer. It was a good action on the part of this government, and no good action is ever without its moral effect. This one is not likely to prove an exception to the rule. It did not bring about peace, but it will doubtless result in making peace come earlier than it would have come had the offer not been made, and President McKinley must feel a satisfaction in having made the offer, for did not the Master say, "Blessed are the peacemakers"?

President McKinley, Secretary Long, and other prominent residents of Washington, attended the mass meeting held in the interest of the National Junior Republic, which was established last year on a farm between Baltimore and Washington, to provide boys without homes a place where they can be taught to take care of themselves, and which is already cramped for room to properly care for all the boys who wish to join. Senator Depew was the principal speaker. What he thinks of the idea may be judged from his having said: "It is because it teaches self-help and self-reliance that I like the work of the Junior Republic. The problem that confronts us in America is the concentration of population in great cities. There the boy lacks the beneficial environment of good home and good neighbors, and is surrounded by vice and temptation. I came from New York to-day to be present at this meeting to-night, although my business requires me to be in New York again to-morrow. I am interested in the work because I believe it promises the greatest good to our common country. Of all the things that have come to us for the proper education of our youth, I know of nothing that promises so much hope for the future as the Junior Republic." An appeal was made for subscriptions to enable the republic to care for at least 100 boys, instead of the 20 which it now has for citizens. Five thousand dollars is wanted for building, and about $7,500 a year for operating expenses. One lady has undertaken the task of raising $5,000 in small subscriptions from the mothers of boys in Washington who are comfortably housed.

Dr. Samuel H. Greene, pastor of Calvary Baptist Church, who was once before similarly honored, has been elected president pro tempore of Columbian University, to succeed Dr. J. L. Whitman, whose resignation takes effect at the close of the present scholastic year. This action was taken for a double purpose. It is necessary that the university should have a president to arrange for the next scholastic year, and the Board of Trustees do not wish to be hurried in selecting a permanent president.

President McKinley is a firm believer in a proper observance of the Sabbath. He has sent instructions to the U. S. Commissioner-General at the Paris Exposition to see that the Sabbath is observed, so far as may be possible, in the American section during the exposition. The President did not feel that he could make the instructions more definite, because he did not wish to do anything which might offend the French authorities, who will control the entire exposition, but he wished to impress upon the mind of the U. S. Commissioner-General that he should do everything in his power for the proper observance of the Sabbath in the American section.

A special conference of the members of the missionary committees of all the Christian Endeavor Societies of the District of Columbia was held this week at the Church of the Covenant. The devotional exercises were led by Rev. J. J. Muir, pastor of E Street Baptist Church. Rev. F. D. Power, pastor of the Vermont Avenue Christian Church, delivered an interesting address in advocacy of the formation of classes for the study of mission work. An open parliament of a few minutes' duration gave the delegates from the different societies an opportunity to tell of the mission work they were engaged in and had mapped out. Rev. Wheeler Boggess, a missionary to India, spoke on the spirit of giving to missionary work, followed by Dr. J. G. Butler, pastor of the Luther Place Memorial Church, on the same topic. Dr. Butler impressed upon his hearers the idea that home and foreign missions were of equal importance.

The value of inter-denominational work in the Sunday-school has long been recognized in Washington churches, as attested by the flourishing Sunday-school Association, which embraces about all of the evangelical churches. As a sort of prelude to the mass meeting of Sunday-school workers and students, held at Mount Vernon M. E. Church last night, a banquet was given the evening before by the Executive Committee of the association, together with Prof. H. M. Hamill, one of the field secretaries of the International Sunday-school Association, to the superintendents of Washington Sunday-schools. The banquet was given in the Sunday-school house of Calvary Baptist Church, and was attended by seventy superintendents. The principal address at the mass meeting was that of Prof. Hamill on "The International Work."

NORTH MISSISSIPPI NOTES.

We have had quite a siege of measles in the college for some time, but our girls and teachers are all up and well again. I am sorry for any school man that has twenty girls on his hands sick with measles to look after at one time. However, we feel very thankful that nothing serious has so far followed, and that we have not lost, as yet, a single young lady. The young ladies who had had the measles were very kind indeed to help us in looking after the sick. While the measles demoralizes the work in a school somewhat, we have been able to go right along with our work without any loss.

We have had much of the time one hundred in the house (this includes both teachers and boarders), and yet we have not had a case of fever or serious sickness during the year. I doubt whether any school in the land could show such a record.

We are putting forth our utmost to make our school just what a Christian college ought to be, and to do honest, faithful work, equal to any in the State; but the time is near at hand when the church must give attention to the cause of female education, or else this very important interest of the church will suffer. The time is coming when no college can succeed without endowment. The average man that runs a church school has not the money to equip it as it ought to be and should be, in order to do first-class work for the cause of Christian education.

We are having a series of lectures delivered to our different classes, and it is proving to be a great benefit to the young ladies and to the school.

That bright and talented young transfer, Bro. Richard Wilkinson, pastor at Aberdeen, delivered us three magnificent lectures a few days since. His first lecture was to the senior class on psychology, and it was a magnificent effort. His other two were delivered to all of the classes, and were on the subjects of English and American Literature. They were of the very highest order, and showed great research and study on the part of the lecturer. His talk on American literature made us appreciate our American authors as never before. His gifted and talented wife and sweet little girl accompanied him, and their three or four days' visit to the college was appreciated very much by both preachers and pupils.

Bro. Augustus is to lecture for us right soon on "The Life and Epistles of the Apostle Paul," in which he will discuss the characteristics of that chief apostle, and the reasons why he wrote his epistles. His other lecture will be on the "Reformation of Luther," and we are looking forward to his coming with a great deal of interest. There are other men in our Conference who are gifted on certain lines that we hope to utilize later.

The prosperity of the college, for the first year, has exceeded our fondest hopes, and we feel sure that if we could get our new building, that we could double the size of our school next year.

The colleges of the South had hoped that they would receive a great deal from the Twentieth Century Fund, but from what our treasurer tells me, and judging from the manner in which we are scattering our funds all around the world, we can hope for very little. When we started out on this Twentieth Century Movement the main object was the improvement of our institutions of learning, and I think it would be safer and wiser for all concerned if we would stick to the original proposition, especially when it has been recently stated by two great men that there is not a well-equipped female institution in the Southern Methodist Church, and only one university in all the South—Johns Hopkins University.

We can not close without telling our readers that we have recently had another great prohibition victory in Grenada county. The whisky men secured the required number of signers, but we stopped them by an injunction issued by Judge Long-street, and the injunction was granted for the same reasons that the prohibition election was declared null and void in Madison county two years ago. We do not propose to have whisky sold in this county, notwithstanding that the House of Representatives was so crowded with business that Bro. Russell, the speaker, refused to let the 'Five mile Prohibition Law" come before the House, though it had been carried in the Senate by an overwhelming majority. It seemed very much to me like the speaker was afraid to let the House vote on it. The law would have been passed if it had not been crowded out, for we had figured closely, and found that we had at least a majority of twenty among the representatives.

Our church here is enjoying great prosperity. We are perfectly delighted with our new pastor, Bro. Ramsey, though we regretted to give up our former one, Bro. Dye. Bro. Ramsey is drawing large congregations, both day and night, and he is not only a fine preacher, and never fails to interest, but he is a superb pastor. He is getting ready for a great revival. May the Lord grant it! Pray for us.

Yours fraternally,

W. M. McINTOSH.

WOMAN'S HOME MISSION SOCIETY.

The eighth Annual Conference of the Woman's Home Mission Society was held at Shreveport, in the Texas Avenue Church, from March 8 to 11, and it was my privilege to attend as one of the delegates from our auxiliary at Alexandria, Mrs. L. B. Baynard, our president, being the other one.

This Conference was not largely attended, owing to many unfavorable circumstances—sickness, fear of small pox, etc.—but we who were there enjoyed it as a great privilege. Indeed, to meet our dear State president, Mrs. Lyons, and hear words of instruction and love from her, is an inspiration to us that will carry us through our year's work. She was unanimously re-elected to the presidency. Indeed, we hardly wanted her to vacate the chair long enough for the ballot to be cast. I know, of course, that the Lord can raise up some one to wear her mantle when she shall lay it off, but I found myself asking the question, Who could do it? and my faith seemed not great enough to cast out all doubt.

It was a great disappointment that Mrs. Russ and Mrs. Kennedy were both unable to attend; the former on account of sickness in her family, the latter on account of an accident which befell her after she had left her home en route to the Conference. She fell and was hurt, but we pray that her injuries will not be serious. Her vacancy was filled by Mrs. Henderson, from Minden.

Good written reports were sent in from the auxiliaries not represented in person, and showed increase in the work.

The Twentieth Century Fund has been well cared for. It is important that our preachers endeavor to have these auxiliaries organized on all the works where it is possible, and they will find them to be of great help in many ways. Our pastor invites all ladies in the church to join it, and said to them that it was "the livest thing he found in Alexandria."

We had with us Mrs. W. H. Johnson, of Dallas, Texas, who is traveling in the interest of the Home of Refuge there, and eloquently did she plead for those poor, betrayed girls, but few of them beyond their teens. The Home is doing a wonderful work, having saved three hundred and seventy young girls. The institution is now under the control of the Methodist Church, South, and Mrs. Johnson has on her credentials the signatures of four of our Bishops. The inmates of the Home love her with a beautiful devotion as the one who has done all for them. In her life-work is embodied the sentiment that,

"If I can lend
A strong hand to the fallen, or defend
The right against a single envious stain,
My life, though bare,
Perhaps, of much that seemeth dear and fair
To us of earth, will not have been in vain."

To the noble womanhood of our great church she appeals, that we do what we can to help on this rescue work, and save some of these young girls, the dupes of stronger, baser creatures, and leave it to God to adjust matters with their destroyers, for at the judgment bar, unlike it is here, they will be weighed in the same balance, and the "sowing of wild oats" will not be at so great a premium.

Dr. Bowling preached the annual sermon—a most able treatment of the subject of Home Mission work. He showed how impossible it is to do foreign mission work if the church is not in a strong spiritual condition, and doing home mission work where it is just as much needed. There are a number of parishes in our State in which there is not a Protestant Church.

Dr. Bowling is a strong, forcible, and, at the same time, a most eloquent speaker—a combination not often found. We were royally entertained at the home of Mr. McCutchen, the president of the Board of Finance of the Louisiana Conference, and long will we remember their hospitality and many kindnesses.

MRS ROBT. MCGIMSEY.

DR. LAMBUTH'S "OPEN DOOR."

The statement given and the appeal made by Dr. Lambuth, and endorsed by Bishop Wilson and Dr. Hammond, should arrest the attention and receive the thoughtful consideration of our people, and arouse preachers and members to the necessity of prompt and liberal action. Certain important moves are proposed in connection with our China work, every one of which, if the money be furnished to carry them out, will result in lasting benefit to the cause of the Master in that distant field. Our schools and mission in China correlated into one compact system, the central institution of which is to be Soochow University, with the friendly sympathy of the better classes of the Chinese, and their disposition to render substantial aid to the undertaking, causes to exist a condition of things that makes it imperative upon Southern Methodists to enter this door, which God has flung wide open before them.

Dr. Lambuth tells us that $50,000 is needed within ninety days, and $100,000 later, and asks that five per centum of the amounts raised in the Conferences for Twentieth Century Educational Fund be appropriated to this advance movement. Surely there can be no hesitancy upon the part of any to designate that five per centum or ten per centum of their contributions be appropriated to the cause of our educational interests in China.

Dr. Lambuth well says: "We must assume the responsibility God has put upon us. The making of an empire lies within our grasp. Opportunity never offered like this."

Our church can not afford to let this opportunity pass unimproved. "There is a tide in the affairs of men which, taken at the flood, lead on to fortune," etc. That is true of churches as of individuals, and, if we measure up to our duty in this matter and take this tide at the flood, our church and her institutions will be permanently established in China. That will mean the mighty sway of vital Christianity to the saving unto Christ of the Chinese Empire.

Are there not five hundred persons in Southern Methodism who can and will send to Dr. Lambuth for the Soochow University one hundred dollars each, within ninety days? The appeals of Bishop Wilson and Drs. Lambuth and Hammond must not go unheeded. JOHN T. SAWYER.

THE TIME TO ACT.

It was right that American Christianity should feel outraged when the saloon immediately followed American occupation of the Philippines, and began the ripening of its curses under the guardianship of the professed philanthropist nation, and it was natural that this outraged people should speak out their protest. But the way now seems open to remedy the wrong, and men are waiting to see how those who protested then will treat the opportunity they have.

The bill introduced in the House by Representative Gillet, of Massachusetts, "To regulate the sale of intoxicating liquors in the Philippines," by which it is hoped to break up the pernicious business there, is sure to awaken the earnest and active opposition of the whisky constituency of our politicians, and it is now the duty of the Christian constituency of these same legislators to make themselves heard and felt. It may be that legislators ought to know their duty, and do it without fear or favor; but it is certain that the Christian has no right to keep silent, and allow them to receive their impression of the country's will through the voice of godlessness and greed. And if, for the love of blood-cursed gold, men will show such zeal, what shall we not expect of those who claim subjection only to that master motive—the constraining love of Christ? Surely they will not show less zeal in their divine cause than others in the infernal one.

The bill proposed is a long step in the right direction. Let us make sure that the nation take it. Let us write at once to our representatives, briefly, kindly, but urgently, requesting the full weight of their influence, and vote for the protection of the Philippines from the curse of the saloon. We owe it to our representatives, we owe it to ourselves, we owe it to our new-found and lowly fellow-citizens in their far island homes, and, above all, we owe it to the great King at whose throne we have vowed allegiance. Let no one excuse himself either by thinking that, "No one else will write, and my effort will be in vain," or, "Every other Christian will write; so my letter will not be needed."

Don't wait. Now, "at once," for the sake of Christ and humanity, seize your pen and deliver your soul.

H. M. ELLIS,

IT MOVES.

Only a few months ago the Twentieth Century Movement was "such a tide as moving seemed asleep." But now it moves visibly, with prospects of real grandeur when it strikes the full.

The reports which have come into the general office thus far are of an irregular and incomplete kind, but, despite this fact, they are very encouraging. The amounts known to have been subscribed to date give a total of nearly a half million, or about one-third the sum proposed. This result includes chiefly the subscriptions made by Conferences in session and a few large individual gifts. It embraces almost nothing from what may be called the general plan—that is, the subscription book and a response from every member.

It is easy to see that the great strength of the movement lies in this latter feature. As it is in nature, so it is in finance; nothing is so astonishing as the results of aggregation. The difference between the particle or individual and the resultant bulk is such as the mind does not easily take in. The true significance of Methodism's large numbers will be realized only when all the particles are brought into play. The plan which the church has proposed in the Twentieth Century Movement is based on this thought. Of course, we desire and expect large gifts from those who are able to make them, but the thing especially to be desired is that every member of the church, however humble and poor, shall make some contribution. Not only the financial, but the spiritual strength of the movement lies in this direction.

Bishop Hendrix has spoken very wisely on this subject in New Century Education, for December. He says: "Give the people a chance to get out of the ruts. Our church life in some places is on too narrow a scale. The local demands have become the measure of liberality and enterprise until the connectional spirit, with its broadening influence, is largely lacking. 'There is that withholdeth more than is meet, but it tendeth to poverty.' A diminished support of the ministry, a church or parsonage out of repair, and a growing indifference to spiritual things, are usually found together. Let any local church be unmindful of the great campaign in which our Lord's followers are engaged for the conquest of the world, and its spirit becomes poor and its life weak. Now is a splendid opportunity to lift the individual church out of its narrow bed and place it in the great current of a world-wide Christianity. The 'old iron-side' church, of whatever denomination, can not survive the opening years of the new century. Give the people a chance to contribute. And give all the people a chance. That is the significance of this whole movement. It is a movement of the people, by the people, and for the people. It is not the gifts of the rich alone, liberal as many of them are on both sides of the sea. Have the poor nothing to be grateful for? And who, after all, are the poor in Christian lands compared with the poor of pagan or Mohammedan countries? If, as wise pastors are doing, the poor have the first chance, they will often shame the rich by the cheerfulness and largeness of their thank-offerings."—Sunday-School Magazine.

TRUST AND DISTRUST.

BY FRANCES RIDLEY HAVERGAL.

Distrust thyself, but trust His grace;
  It is enough for thee!
In every trial thou shalt trace
  Its all sufficiency.

Distrust thyself, but trust His strength;
  In Him thou shalt be strong;
His weakest ones may learn at length
  A daily triumph song.

Distrust thyself, but trust His love;
  Rest in its changeless glow;
And life or death shall only prove
  Its everlasting flow.

Distrust thyself, but trust alone
  In Him, for all, forever!
And joyously thy heart shall own
  That Jesus faileth never FIRESIDE SERMON BY GEO. G. SMITH.

A WORD TO PREACHERS.

"Take heed thereto to yourselves and to all the flock. . . . For I know that after my departure shall grievous wolves enter in among you, not sparing the flock." (Acts xx, 28, 29.)

It is the height of folly to deny obvious facts because we think they ought not to be, and to refuse to face a state of things because the prospect is disturbing. We have done a vast deal of boasting, and have been very self-confident; we have contended angrily about trifles; we have sought of men glory for our culture and our wealth, and we are reaping, as a Christian people, the results of our sowing. The day of decline has come; no church has escaped. The staid Presbyterian, the lax Congregationalist, the Northern Methodist, the Southern Methodist, the Baptist in all sections open their eyes at last to the fact that the Philistines are upon us. The idiotic cry, "Pessimist! croaker! censor!" has no defender among those who are willing to see. The question before us which must be answered is, What must we do to check this declining tendency?

There are some things we must not do. We must shut our eyes to the condition of things, and say, "Peace! peace!" when there is no peace. We may suspect the real sincerity of any man who now says the church does not need an advance movement, and is in no peril. We must not—we must not, I repeat it—be disheartened or hopeless. There are foes without and traitors within. Never was the church so fiercely assailed by her pitiless enemies; never was there so many defections; but the case is not desperate, and there is no time to talk of yielding. The juniper trees are cut down; the cause is imperiled, but it is not lost. There is life in the old land yet, and the men who croak and whine and fly to the desert are not the men for this hour. The hour is not so dark as it was a hundred years ago, nor so dark as it was when Charles I. and Land ruled England, nor when Wesley and Whitefield were mobbed, nor when Whitefield was denounced by Harvard University, nor when Jonathan Edwards was driven from New England by persecution.

In our Georgia Methodism there is much vigorous, bounding life, and the other evangelical churches never had in them in Georgia as many deeply spiritual people as they have to-day. The church was never so liberal; never were there so many children converted; never were there so many active Christians among our young people, and never was there more intelligent and positive orthodoxy than there is among our preachers. We have had reverses, but the great army is still intact. I am on the outer line. I can merely look through my field-glass and see the battle, but I have no fear of the outcome. All croakers and cowards to the rear! I am sick of their raven notes. The infidels who mock us, and say, "The day of superstition is gone;" the rationalists who say we have outlived the day of evangelicalism, are counting their cause won too soon. We are going into this twentieth century, led by our Captain, to win the battle.

First of all, then, let us take heed to ourselves. The first thing, as Christian ministers, that we ought to do is to see to it that we are as good as we know how to be. Have we faith in Christ? Are we going on to perfection? Are we groaning after it? Have we the inward assurance that we are wholly the Lord's? Does ambition, bad temper, covetousness, pride, rule us? Are we seeking our own, are we making a gain of godliness and living for our lusts, or are we filled with the spirit, and walking in the light?

I wish we preachers could have now and then a retreat, as the Catholics call it, when the one and the only thing is to strive together to improve our ministerial piety. I beg my young brethren to hear me when I say, "Take heed to thyself." I have been for forty-five years in this ministry, and never a year in this forty-five has passed over my head that I was not in a revival during the course of the year, but I never entered one that I did do it as a penitent. I am sure that if I were now, at threescore and beyond, to go to a camp meeting where there was earnest appeal made to those who needed reviving to come forward, I would be among the first to go. I am sure that more than learning, more than eloquence, more than magnetism, we need a pious, devoted, prayerful ministry. I can not conceive of a godless preacher. One never fails that I am not amazed at an event so unexpected by me. The grossest hypocrite is a ministerial hypocrite. A wolf is bad enough, but a wolf in sheep's clothing is the worst of creatures. When inwardly they are ravening wolves, these false prophets are the most dangerous of enemies.

Preach the gospel, the old-time gospel, the gospel which made the Reformation, which made Methodism. Preach regeneration, justification, the vicarious atonement, the Holy Spirit, the inward witness, holiness of heart, holiness of life. Cry aloud and spare not. Show the people their transgressions; seek not theirs, but them. Call on sinners to repent; urge the danger of delay. Preach about hell; talk of the devil. Let modern thought alone; the old-time religion is good enough. Don't be blindly attached to old things, and make an idol of them. There may be plain indications that God has other ways than the one you have known and been attached to. You may use wisely things you never used before; you may find the day of a noisy excitement, such as was once our joy, has passed; that no longer we can use as successfully as our fathers did the altar-place. You may find that the Winter in the South, as in the North, is the best time for a protracted meeting; and the custom among the Wesleyans of preaching a sermon, and then of having an after meeting for prayer, is the best. The truths never change, but the mode of applying them changes. I am sure the use of women in our public work is going to be more common and more profitable. The time has passed for a woman to be in place on the stage, in the choir, in the school room, and out of place in the public service and the pulpit.

The use of instruments in revival services I for a long time condemned, and their use now, as I have seen it, I am sure is harmful in a high degree; but I know the benefit which results from their judicious employment.

Some of my brethren have doubted the wisdom of separate meetings for children, but, judiciously conducted, there is no agency for good so fruitful. You must, while you use new methods, remember the old machinery is not worn out, and you must not fail to use that. Do not suppose an innovation will certainly be valuable, and any novelty is introduced which is brought in because it is a novelty, the effect is only bad. The extraordinary is sometimes the harmful.

Rely upon God, upon yourself, and your people. Rally your church, and don't be in too great a hurry. The best meetings I was ever in were over two months long, and I had no help except from those near me. I found this plan the best: We met early; we had a prayer service before the time for preaching; we had much song, and then a talk of thirty minutes, and then an altar service. One year that plan was wonderfully successful; the next the same plan was a lamentable failure. I never had an evangelist to hold a meeting for me—I never felt my need of one—but I certainly would not have allowed a prejudice to have prevented me from using one. Bro. Jarrell and Bro. Seals both were efficient revivalists, but each of them used Frank Farris to great profit. Uncle Johnnie Knight was my helper in a tune, but my best helpers were my own members. Determine to have a revival, and you will have it.

Dear Bro. Cranmley, the meekest, sweetest-spirited man I ever knew, whose timidity was abnormal, whose education was defective, always aimed at a revival from the first sermon to the last, and he always had one.

But, above all, brethren, look to the Holy Spirit. He is your life, your strength, and in his might you will conquer. Go to the fields. Preach on the streets, in the shops, at the factories—anywhere and everywhere where souls can be won. Talk earnestly with individuals, and especially be tender with the boys, however plain or poor. The Lord be with you.

BOTH GLAD AND SAD.

MR. EDITOR: Some months ago I read the now widely-celebrated book by Dr. Charles H. Sheldon, entitled, "In His Steps," or, "What Would Jesus Do?" Noting by Bishop Vincent's well-written introduction that, by actual observation, he knew that the writer practiced what he was there teaching, and marking the evident simplicity and sincerity of the man's style in thus bringing into right and scriptural shape the thought which has often filled the heart of true Christianity with longing, I was glad in my soul that such a book had been written, published and sold by the million. I regarded it as the most hopeful sign of the almost expiring century. That a thoroughly good man and minister could put old truths into such an attractive form, and that our Christendom was manifesting such a hunger of heart to be and do like Jesus, filled me with gratitude and praise. I felt that here, if ever, fiction has been consecrated. Thousands who will read truth in no other form have been touched and toned to higher aspirations. The world is looking for a lofty ideal of business, social, and church life; and who can deny that such is needed in practice?

When I saw that the idea of a Christian daily newspaper was taking definite shape, and would be accorded at least a little trial, I greatly rejoiced.

A few days since I noted in an obscure corner of the Daily Picayune a press dispatch narrating that the Topeka postoffice was being burdened with the mighty influx of subscriptions to Dr. Sheldon's experimental paper—as many as sixty thousand names in two days. This speaks well for the interest felt in the enterprise. "Therein I rejoice anew; yea, and will rejoice."

Well, what makes me sad in the midst of my joy? 'Tis this: That two doctors of divinity, of our own beloved Conference, have come out of their way to cast slurs upon this Christ-like enterprise—one in our ADVOCATE, the other in our Epworth Era, both of which papers are such molders of religious thought among us.

I implore these brethren, in the name of all they and we hold dear, to think twice or thrice before they again belittle a cause which, in my humble judgment, is approved of God.

I file this plea in abatement of the harm I fear has already been done by such caustic and, to my mind, uncalled-for criticism of the most distinct effort yet made to purify the daily press and elevate the standard of Christian business.

Christ, while on earth, used every passing event to lead men to the light. He strove to reach the multitude by methods most likely to attract notice and rivet attention. Shall his followers fail to imitate? Shall any modern John need anew the kind rebuke, "Forbid him not"? Let us follow in his steps.

Yours in hope, J. P. DRAKE.

IS DR. SHELDON GUILTY OF SINFUL PRESUMPTION?

MR. EDITOR: After spending a delightful hour in the holy sanctuary preaching to a large, appreciative audience, I picked up the dear old ADVOCATE for a chat with you and some of the contributors to its interesting columns. I sat down and listened to Dr. Weems' talk about Dr. Sheldon in a way that shocked and almost dumbfounded me. Having somewhat recovered from my surprise, I concluded to write a few things about Dr. Weems' criticism of Dr. Sheldon.

Dr. Sheldon, as your readers are aware, wrote that wonderful book, "In His Steps," or, "What Jesus Would Do." In this book the author makes it plain that the question, "What would Jesus do?" should be the rule of a Christian's life.

When Dr. Sheldon entered upon the editorial management of the Atchison Globe for one week, he said, in the sublime language that Dr. Weems has so severely criticised, "I purpose to inspect all matter that goes into the paper during the week, and subject it to the general test, 'What would Jesus do?'" Dr. Weems says, "These words express the lofty aim of one Dr. Sheldon, who presumes to teach the church and the world how Jesus would run a daily newspaper," and then adds, "It is difficult for a truly pious soul to imagine that Jesus would condescend to run such a paper for a week, or for any other given length of time; and if he did, what 'matter' he would suffer to 'go into the paper.'"

Pray tell us what impiety there is in imagining Jesus as the editor of a daily newspaper! Was he not, in fact, for many years a carpenter? If it is difficult for a pious soul to imagine Jesus "condescending" to run a daily newspaper, I am at a loss to know how any follower of Jesus can "condescend" to do so. If it would have been a "condescension" for Jesus to run a daily, then it is a "condescension" for any Christian to do it, and is, therefore, wrong. Christ, by following the carpenter's trade, hallowed all work, and it is not a "condescension" to do anything that is not wrong in itself.

Because Jesus did not engage in journalism is no proof that he would have lowered himself by editing a daily paper. He spent thirty years of his life in the home of a carpenter, and many years of his youth in aiding his father. But who thinks any the less of his character for having done so?

Does Dr. Weems think Jesus undignified himself by working at the carpenter's trade? Does he really think he would have to abase himself to run a daily newspaper? The fact is, no work is menial unless wrought in the spirit of a menial. The God-man has sanctified and hallowed all toil.

Again says Dr. Weems, "But now comes Dr. Sheldon . . . to show us the infallible Jesus on the editorial tripod for a week, in the person of himself."

The mildest thing he can say about this attempt of Dr. Sheldon on the tripod trying to illustrate the infallible Jesus is to call it fanaticism. Here are his exact words, "I suppose it would be more generous to call this pretentious attitude of the human toward the divine a spirit of fanaticism." And then adds, "But is it less than desperately presumptuous wickedness?"

We ask again, What is there so "desperately, presumptuously" wicked in trying to run a daily newspaper a week like Dr. Sheldon believes Jesus would do it if he were editor? Because Jesus never run a paper, and never exchanged pulpits, it is, therefore, a great sin for a man to attempt to do these things as he believes Jesus would, even though occasion demanded such of him. So says Dr. Weems.

The Doctor evidently wishes to reduce Dr. Sheldon's proposition to a human standard. He says, "Why did not Dr. Sheldon recognize his fallibility of judgment and conduct, and announce that he was going to run the paper for a week as he thought a Christian man should run a paper?"

I suppose it would not have been wicked for Dr. Sheldon to have said, "I purpose to run The Globe this week by the test, What would John, or Peter, or any other Christian man, do?"

If Dr. Sheldon should have made such announcement as that, he would have given us an imperfect standard of action.

Does Dr. Weems not know that to edit a newspaper like a Christian ought to do it, is to edit it as Jesus would do it if he were editor of a paper, whether religious or otherwise?

Will some one pray tell me how a Christian should run a daily newspaper, if he is not to run it as he thinks Jesus would if he were editor of a daily?

Dr. Weems seems to forget that Jesus was a perfect man as well as perfect God; that he had a created existence as well as an uncreated; that he had a finite as well as an infinite nature, and that his finite nature was under the same limitations as that of any other perfect human being. If the man, Jesus, had run a daily paper, he would have run it only as a perfect man—not as a perfect God.

Every Christian is in duty bound to do all he attempts just as he believes the perfect man, Jesus, would do it if he were on earth to-day.

If it is impossible and unlawful to attempt to do as Jesus would, then how can we be his true followers?

Finally, Dr. Weems says (I shudder to pen his language): "When Dr. Sheldon, or anyone else, presumes to act as Jesus would do if present in person and acting for himself, there is a manifest audacity little short of the devil himself when he demanded the homage of Jesus." "If any man say he abideth in him, he ought himself also so to walk even as he walked." True, Jesus didn't run a store, cultivate a farm, practice medicine, plead law, serve as a pastor, nor conduct a newspaper; but because he did not is no reason why we should not imagine how he would have done these things, and thus attempt to act just as we believe he would have done in such circumstances.

I would to God that every editor in this land of the free would make, "What would Jesus do?" the test of his paper, and that every preacher would make it a test of his preaching. If so, it would not be long ere the shout would go up to heaven, America is saved with an abundant salvation!

L. S. JONES.

CAN ANY PREACHER BE CONTENT WITH A FRUITLESS MINISTRY?

In defense of the meagre results of ministerial effort in many quarters, some have advanced the idea that "we have nothing to do with the result of our preaching." While there is some truth in this statement, it is true only to a limited extent. Many run the argument about thus: "When I have faithfully preached the gospel, I need give myself no concern about results. 'Results are now with God and the hearer.' I should be as content without a single convert as if a hundred were slain, for I have now done my whole duty." Can I be at ease without fruit? My soul becomes alarmed! I remember our Lord said every branch in me that beareth not fruit he taketh away. Without fruit, then, I am to be taken away. Whether I have anything to do with the results of my ministry, the results have much to do with me. My eternal life is dependent upon the results of my labors in the vineyard, not as a source of spiritual life, but it is necessary for the continuity of the branch in the vine.

John Knox had preached in Scotland previous to his memorable prayer, "Give me Scotland, or I die." The time that was given to this prayer could have been employed with the pen in defense of his ineffectual ministry; but this man was not searching in foreign fields for causes. His soul was painfully interested in his endeavors. He continued in this agony of soul till he prevailed with God, and thus the problem was solved. Men who have been a power in the cause of Christ have believed death and unfruitfulness to be inseparable. Every fruitless effort should stir our souls to more prayer and greater anxiety in the cause of Christ. The man who feels he has nothing to do with results, I fear, derives no benefit from his failures. The barrenness of his efforts moves his soul to no greater depths. Every fruitless effort should bring to bear such questions as: Am I abiding in the Lord? Is God uppermost in my heart? Am I sufficiently interested in the salvation of my unsaved brother? "He that abideth in me, and I in him, the same bringeth forth much fruit." This fruit can be known if it exist. "By their fruits ye shall know them." The true vine will lade every branch that abideth in it with "much fruit." I believe the words of Jesus to be greater than those of man. If we are in the right relation to our Savior, the promise, "Ye shall bring forth much fruit," will surely come to pass. According to these words, there can be but one cause of barrenness—improper relation to our Lord. Though there may be many causes of the improper relation, strong reliance upon the Word of God, and increased earnestness of soul in the discharge of every watchful duty, will many times put success where failure has been. Paul was much interested in the results of his labors. "I fear lest I have bestowed labor upon you in vain." Results are what I am after. The Lord is not wanting our failures. To fail in the cause of the Lord is the greatest failure man can possibly make. No true soldier is satisfied with defeat. The vital fluid that runs the veins of the vine is not emptied into fruitless branches.

Brethren, let us pray more, and move forward in the power of Him who has promised to be with us "even unto the end of the world."

A MISSED MEANING.

Few, even among the young, are ignorant of the fact that the charity of which Paul speaks has the meaning of love; and yet very many have missed the recognition of the larger quality for which the word stands.

If the young people among those who enroll themselves as workers for Christ could gain a right and comprehensive view of this attribute, what a wonderful transformation there would be in personal character, and what an influence would go forth from each member of the great army which is now as a whole a power in the world!

There are few who really restrict the sense of charity to alms-giving, or rather, few who understand its meaning to be chiefly that, yet there are many whose practice would imply that such is the limit of its significance. There are generous people, so far as material things are concerned, who yet seem to have no idea of the necessity of offering the greater gifts which are the real charity.

The writer of this is reminded of a woman in a certain neighborhood who is always ready with her help in fulness in the emergency of sickness. She knows just how and when to use certain remedies, and she willingly gives her time and strength to the relief of pain, but, alas! her tongue! Even the most grateful patient who had received an especial kindness felt that there was a drawback to the experience, for she was sure to talk freely and critically of everything seen or heard in the sick-room. There was a hard, cold, unsympathetic character to her expression that caused people to dread them. It was a case of the interpretation of charity in its physical sense.

There is another comprehension of the word that so far as it goes, is correct, but it fails of the farther reach, finding it easy and pleasant to include the desire for the well-being of dear ones, but utterly ignoring the newer command of the Master, "But I say unto you, love your enemies." In a town recently a man had forged, and was obliged to flee from justice. His poor mother was overcome with grief and a sense of disgrace on account of the sin of her son. A Christian woman who had not, of course, learned the whole lesson of the Master, was telling of the affair, and thus expressed herself:

"My principles force me to despise the man. I will not give such a creature a thought; he is too far beneath me. I am only sorry for the mother."

She is not the only woman who thus decides, as she thinks, "for principles," without the help of charity. If she had sat at the feet of the Great Teacher, she would never have coldly consulted the codes of integrity and squared her conclusions without consulting her heart. She would have rather felt that while the sin was a great one, and the wrong doer had lost his honor, there was especial need of pity and of prayer for him. She would also have gained a reverence for the soul created in God's image, so that it would have been impossible for her to despise the man, even though she regarded his act with contempt.—Intelligencer.

Have you ever watched the deteriorating effects of sin even upon personal appearance? Take a young of extreme beauty and let him, little by little, be led into wicked practices; in proportion as he is so will the register of his descent be written upon his face, and upon his whole attitude and manner. Quite imperceptibly, I admit, but with awful exactness and depth. This is part of the man's punishment. It is the spot of leprosy on a forehead once so open and unwrinkled, and will grow and spread and deepen.—Joseph Parker.

Knowledge will not be acquired without pains and application. It is troublesome and deep digging for pure waters; but when once you come to the spring, they rise and meet you.—Feiton, in Greek Thoughts.

JUDGE H. MURRAY QUIN.

In the early morning of Thursday March 1, almost without an intimation, this grand, good man slipped away from us to his eternal home beyond the stars. He was born in the village of Holmesville, Pike county, Miss., on Feb. 22, 1819, and died at his home within a mile of Holmesville, where he had lived almost continously for more than fifty-four years. He was twice married, first to a Miss Bearden, and after her death to Miss Nannie Sumrall, who, with her two children now full-grown, survives him. Children, numerous grandchildren and a few great-grandchildren share with his widow the sorrow of his departure, and a mighty host of friends mourn with them.

Judge Quin was every man's friend. It is almost literally true: "None knew him but to love" him. Although he had outlived his generation, was actively connected with the life of a very large community until almost the last, and was a man of positive convictions, courageous and free to express himself, yet no one dared to be known as other than his friend; because the wisdom, kindness of heart and unselfish interest in others which marked Judge Quin's life was recognized by everybody. The good people all honored and loved him, and the few bad people did not dare face public opinion by finding fault with him: so, absolutely,

"None knew him but to love—
None named him but to praise."

From early manhood until recently he was a public officer almost continually. He began as a clerk of the court; then after a number of years practicing law, he became probate judge, and held office until "turned out" by the notorious "carpet-bag" governor, Adelbert Ames. For several years he was mayor of the town of Summit; and for many years during the latter part of his life he was justice of the peace for the district which includes Holmesville. As justice of the peace, he very often induced parties to suits at law to settle their disputes without a trial in court when a trial would have put fees into his purse: he loved peace more than money, and robbed his own purse to keep his neighbors at peace among themselves. He wrote more land deeds and wills and did more gratuitous legal work, especially for widows and orphans, than any man who ever lived in Pike county. I knew him for sixteen years, and most of that time intimately; hence I feel safe in making this statement. He became so indispensable to the people of that part of the county that his death leaves a vacancy that the going of no other would make.

Judge Quin was a modest man, notwithstanding the prominence which his usefulness forced him into. He was an old-style Southern gentleman, who read the papers regularly, kept abreast of the times, conversed finely and interestingly, was hospitable as Southern chivalry required and broadly helpful in his generosity. When shall we see his like again? The old farm-house where he spent half a century presented a type of that vanishing phase of Southern life, to which distance already lends a peculiar enchantment.

Judge Quin was pre-eminently a Christian. Converted nearly fifty years ago, he joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and remained an active member until his death. As steward and trustee and Sunday-school superintendent and delegate to District and Annual Conferences, he served his church gladly and faithfully. His religion was not demonstrative, and was remarkably free from cant; but it was reserved and quiet and very true. He was always on the right side of every moral question; and his religious life stood for something in every conflict between right and wrong. His death came so suddenly that he had no opportunity to leave parting messages and assurances for his loved ones; but they are not needed: his life stands out before a large circle of friends and loved ones not only as a sublime endorsement of all the high claims that religion makes, but also as a sweet assurance that his going was a translation more than a death.

On Sunday, March 4, after a funeral service in the old church at Holmesville, which was crowded with those that loved him from all over the county, we laid him to rest in the old cemetery on the hill where five generations of Quins await the call of the angel of the resurrection.

He was one of the best friends I ever had. During those six years, when I was in college work at Holmesville, he was "a friend in need," true and close and valuable; and I have never needed a friend as I needed one then. He met the need just as he did everything, quietly, firmly, wisely. His going, though not unexpected, is a personal sorrow to me. I am so glad that I ever knew Judge Quin: the memory of him that I shall carry with me onward till the gates open for me, is radiantly beautiful.

FROM THE WORK.

LETTER FROM GILBERT, LA.

I have just completed my first round on the Vidalia and Gilbert circuit, which is my first charge in the itinerancy. I have three churches, with a membership of 73. Our churches are all new and all completed, except painting the church at Gilbert, which we hope to attend to this year. We found a good parsonage very well furnished. I owe much to my predecessors for the work they have done along these lines.

Our presiding elder was with us three days, giving much wholesome advice, and arranging plans for the year's work. I do not know what my opinion will be later, but just now I do not feel that the presiding eldership is by any means an unnecessary wheel in the itinerancy.

The prospects indicate a prosperous year on this work.

SMALL-POX IN TRYUS, MISS.

On the twenty-sixth of February a family of roving, basket-making Indians came to our community, twelve of them in all. In a short time some of them were sick, or, rather, were sick when they came. Dr. Henington, our resident physician, treated them, and on the fifth instant Dr. Tennison, the Lawrence county health officer, was called in, and the doctors pronounced the disease small-pox, and steps were immediately taken to quarantine and protect the community from the dreadful disease. As Indians are rarely seen here, and as the Indian baskets were in demand, numbers of persons, especially children, visited the camp before they knew of the danger. I suppose I might safely estimate that thirty or forty persons have been exposed. There is quite an excitement, and the people are being vaccinated. There has been no case outside of the camp as yet, but we have scarcely reached the danger-line.

We have suspended the prayer meeting, Sunday-school, and think it not safe to try to hold the Quarterly Conference here on the twenty-sixth instant.

C. McDONALD.

COLUMBIA CIRCUIT.

Our first Quarterly Conference convened with the Columbia church the tenth and eleventh instant. Our old friend and much-beloved presiding elder, Rev. W. W. Simmons, and his wife were with us, to the delight and edification of all. We always feel encouraged when Bro. Simmons comes. This is not the first time he has been our presiding elder. He said this work made a good report, and that he was more encouraged than for years. Here is a copy of the report: Eleven accessions by certificate—six on profession; twelve infants baptized; twenty-five dollars worth of hymn books (Y. P. H., etc.) bought; sixteen new subscribers to the ADVOCATE, with two Bibles; eighty-four dollars collected by the Ladies' Aid Society, and expended on the parsonage. The stewards were all in town and present except one, who was sick. They made the assessment for preacher in charge $600, more than one-quarter of which was paid—Thompson's Chapel paying all its assessment for the year, except fourteen dollars.

This is a good work, and these are good people, and we feel confident that God is going to bless them, and reward their faithfulness, and give us all a gracious revival. We are praying and planning for it.

LETTER FROM J. W. BURTON.

MR. EDITOR: Thinking that a few words from one who was raised in Mississippi, who learned to peruse your columns, perhaps, in the seventies, and who has been almost a constant subscriber for 23 or 24 years, might be of interest to your readers, I take the liberty of writing as follows for the ADVOCATE. I was converted under the ministry of Rev. Jas. M. Gann about 32 years since; had such men as Geo. Bancroft, Thomas, D. G. W. Ellis, Jas. Gann, as pastors. Some, we are informed, have passed over the river; others, we are told, are still lingering near the banks, waiting the call to come up higher.

But recently my oldest brother, mother's first-born, Andrew Jackson Burton, went over to meet those who have gone before. (He, too, was converted under Jas. M. Gann.) Father and mother, though very stricken in years, still linger on side, listening and waiting the Master's call.

I hardly know how I would get along without the weekly visits of the ADVOCATE.

I wish to say to the brethren that I am still in the battle. I enrolled for life, and expect to keep my face Zionward until the battle is won.

The time will soon be on us for protracted meetings, and if you need so weak a vessel as I, don't let distance get in the way. I go wherever I can without price, and when called to a distant place, I only ask for my traveling expenses.

Our new pastor, Rev. J. M. Patton, has commenced in earnest, and, I think, has won the hearts of his people. We expect better times.

Anyone wishing my help will please write me at Ramsey, Ala.

Your brother in Christ,

J. W. BURTON, L. E.

Feb. 28, 1900.

You have been in the power house of some great plant of machinery. Did it occur to you that your body was a more wonderful machine?

In the term of a natural life the heart beats three thousand million times and with a pressure of thirteen pounds to the stroke, lifts in that time, half a million tons of blood. What care are you taking of this wonderful machine?

Shortness of breath, buzzing in the ears, dizziness, palpitation of the heart, sleeplessness, stomach trouble, indigestion are only some of the evidences that the machinery is undergoing a strain which sooner or later will break it down.

What the lubricant is to the machine of iron, Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is to the machine of flesh and blood. It reduces friction to a minimum and keeps the great organs in proper running order. It does this by healing diseases of the stomach and organs of digestion and nutrition, and increasing the flow of pure and healthy blood.

"I used ten bottles of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and several vials of his 'Pleasant Pellets' a year ago this spring, and have had no trouble with indigestion since," writes Mr. W. T. Thompson, of Townsend, Broadwater Co., Montana. "'Words fail to tell how thankful I am for the relief, as I had suffered so much and it seemed that the doctors could do me no good. I got down in weight to 125 pounds, and was not able to work at all. Now I weigh nearly 160 and can do a day's work on the farm. I have recommended your medicine to several, and shall always have a good word to say for Dr. Pierce and his medicines."

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets invigorate the stomach, liver and bowels. Use them with the "Discovery" when a pill is required.

SHALL WE NOT LOOK FOR A GENERAL REVIVAL?

While engaged in prosecuting our great educational campaign, let us not forget to labor diligently and pray fervently for a mighty revival throughout the Connection. Unless such effort accompanies the solicitation of funds, the grand movement we have inaugurated will fail to be productive of one of the splendid results aimed at, namely: the quickening of the spiritual life of the church. There is no reason why our pastors, in their canvass for Twentieth Century offerings, should esteem themselves mere perfunctory collectors, with no end in view save the obtaining of so many dollars and the honor of having succeeded in this work. It ought to be borne in mind, not only that the fund itself will vastly increase the usefulness of our schools and colleges, but also that every member, or person, who makes a real "thank-offering" will receive a spiritual uplift. We must impress the people with the fact that true giving is a religious act, and that the Master's words, "It is more blessed to give than to receive," are as true to-day as when first uttered.

Revival effort is always in order, but especially is it true at a time when so much depends upon the loyalty, zeal, and consecration of our membership. It is neither expected nor desired that, for the time being, Methodist ministers should either relax or cease their efforts to rescue the perishing and build up the waste places of Zion. In laboring for a revival, however, let us not invert the order God has ordained, and then wonder why a great blessing does not come in answer to our prayers. The divine injunction is to bring in the tithes into God's storehouse, and then he will pour us out a blessing that there shall not be room enough to receive it. Unquestionably, the bringing of gifts and offerings to the Lord reacts helpfully upon the spiritual life, and prepares the way for the reception of divine grace. Neither the largest gifts nor the most heroic self-denial can avail to purchase the favor of God, or the power and presence of the Holy Spirit; yet gifts and service are necessary to prove the genuineness of our repentance and the sincerity of our faith. As the editor of the Wesleyan Advocate wisely says:

"The great, potent horse of repentance, with his fruits meet for repentance, must go before the great cart of revival influences. This is God's plan, and we need not hope to have the revival in any other way. A wise old preacher said that 'God sometimes blesses a man on credit,' which may be true; but God knows who to credit, and when and how the fruits of repentance will come in. We must pay our obligations, actually, or with such intent as to amount to a certainty, before any revival blessings can come.

"We fear that there are many people, however, who want revivals without either cart or horse. They want divine affiatus, but they do not want it proceded by any repentance that costs money, or followed by any train of donations to good causes. They want something to sing and shout over, and that they hope will carry them to heaven when they die; but they are not concerned about the power that will make them like the Master—active in giving and 'going about doing good.'"

Generally speaking, the more religion a man has, unless it be of the spurious kind, the more ready and liberal he is with his means, whether large or small. It is hard to wrest thank-offerings from unrevived hearts. One of the best ways, however, of getting a hold on the backslidden and the lukewarm is to induce them to make an offering to the Lord's cause. The more people invest in the church the more they are apt to love it.

While our church made gratifying progress last year, and while the glad notes of victory are now rising from many parts of the field, indications are not wanting that worldliness, selfish indifference and covetousness are far too prevalent among us. Considering the number of workers, the vastness of our church machinery, and the magnitude of the efforts put forth, ought not results to be double or triple—yes, even ten times as great as they are? God has not forgotten to be gracious. We believe he is only waiting for us to get in earnest and fulfill the conditions he has appointed. Souls are still infinitely precious in God's sight. So let our watchword be during the closing year of this century, "A million and a half of converts to Christ, and a million and a half of dollars for Christian education."

"A GREAT 'IN MEMORIAM.'"

The foregoing is the title of a stirring article by Bishop Hendrix in the Nashville Advocate, of Feb 1, in which, after calling attention to the noble work done by Mr. Moody during the last twenty years of his life in founding three great educational institutions, at a cost of $1,500,000, namely: the Chicago Bible Institute, estimated to be worth $250,000, and two schools—one for boys and one for girls—at Northfield, Mass., representing an expenditure of $1,250,000, he draws a most instructive lesson for Southern Methodists from the example of the friends of this departed saint in undertaking to raise, as a monument to his memory, an endowment of $3,000,000 for the perpetual maintenance of these schools. Says Bishop Hendrix:

"It is a movement worthy of the noble man and of his noble friends and of the twentieth century, which it will do so much to bless. There has never been anything like this movement in the history of the race to erect a $3,000,000 monument to one man. It would be folly to put that sum of money in a marble monument which served no useful purpose. It is to be used for the education and training of youth, and so wins for itself the intelligent interest and liberal help of the American and English people. The men who have projected it are merchants and bankers and states men who are accustomed to bring things to pass. And they will succeed.

"Possibly this very movement has been suggested by that other great movement known as the Twentieth Century Thank-offering, which is being successfully pressed on both sides of the sea. What an opportunity it affords for a suitable 'In Memoriam' offering for some of the noble spirits who have passed within the gates! Who has not lost a kinsman or a friend worthy to be remembered at such a time as this? Perhaps it is a pious ancestor who served his own generation by the will of God, and has fallen on sleep. How fitting that his name be remembered in some worthy thank-offering! Some of the world's noblest gifts have been made in the names of children who died without being able to take the part for which they were being fitted in the great world of service. Are there not such tenderly remembered loved ones in whose names gifts shall be made during this closing year of the century?

"Surely, if $3,000,000 can be given in memory of one man, a like amount should be given in the names of countless loved ones who have gone before. 'Father, how much would my education cost you?' said a pale child whose broken health told of an early translation. 'Why do you ask that, my daughter?' said the distressed father. 'Because I wanted to ask you to spend that much in educating some other child when I am gone,' was the reply. The weeping parent said, 'I will do it,' and in keeping that promise over and over again he has found his child again. What nobler wish, what nobler monument! It is worthy of being repeated, and, doubtless, will be."

A WISE MOVEMENT.
